Bill Hayes, whose Cadence disking of "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" is a current hit, is set for a two-week vaude stint on the stage of the Chicago Theatre, B&K flagship, March 25. The pic and vaude bookings are both attempts to cashing in on the record hit's present vogue. Coincidentally, Walt Disney's Disneyland ABC-TV show a few weeks back was devoted to a version of the Davy Crockett story.

Group of 5 Ozoners Bars Widescreen So Long As Distribs Demand Shares

Minneapolis, March 15.

What's regarded as the opening gun of this territory drive-in theatres' fight against percentage for 'Scope pictures on subsequent runs is the declaration of the Minnesota Entertainment Enterprises that there'll be no widescreen installations in any of its five Twin Cities' ozoners the coming season. It'll forgo 'Scope picures and not alter the previous operation.

Only flat deals will be made, say circuit heads who assert they already have sufficient product for this season and perhaps another and have no intention of installing widescreens as long as distributors persist in percentage demands. required for foreign success.

'CINERAMA HOLIDAY'S' $220,000 ADVANCE

"Cinerama Holiday," with a take of $219,857 for its first month at the Warner Theatre, N. Y., has a current advance sale of over $220,000. Stanley Warner Cinerama Corp., the operating company, reports filling orders into Oct., '55. Each day's mail is said to be bringing in an average of 430 requests.

With the opening night, a Tuesday, donated to the Travelers Aid Society, the first Wednesday-Saturday gross showed $30,734. Totals for each of the three following weeks were $55,047, $60,290 and $59,491.

SECOND WARNING

Los Angeles Exploiteers Told That Taste Is Infringed

Hollywood, March 15.

For the second time within a year motion picture exhibitors and studio publicity chiefs have been advised by the Los Angeles Newspaper Publishers Assn. to pay more attention to its "Code of Decency," regarding art and copy used in movie ads.

Calling attention to a "growing tendency" to abandon good taste in plugging pictures, W. R. Powell, LANPA chairman, said in a letter to the industry: "We feel certain you will agree that it is in the best interests of all concerned that good taste be the guiding rule of all amusement advertising."

Cinerama Into Empire, Paris

France will have Cinerama on or about May 15 when the widescreen spectacular will be unveiled at the Empire Theatre in Paris, now being equipped.

In reporting this in N.Y. last week, Lucien Nachbaur and Jean Thevenot, execs of the theatre subsidiary of Societe Pathe Nouvelles de Cinema, said installation costs at the Empire would run to some 60,000,000 fr. ($171,000) and would be split equally by French and U.S interests.

Nachbaur, who books the Pathe circuit's 30 theatres, explained how Pathe got into the French Cinerama act. Basic arrangements are between Reisini International which has the Cinerama foreign rights, and the Empire. However, the theatre was originally leased from Pathe with the understanding that no films would be shown there without the expressed permission of Pathe. When the Cinerama proposition came along, Pathe agreed to the programming switch but in turn became partners in the Cinerama run. The Cinerama lease on the Empire is for two years.

After that, Nachbaur explained, Cinerama may either stay at the Empire, or it could be moved over to a new house, the Pathe Wepler, currently under construction in Paris. Theatre, which will seat 2,000, will be built to accommodate any system of projection, including Cinerama. It's due to open towards the end of this year.

The French theatre execs — Thevenot is commercial director of Pathe Cinema — pointed out that, unlike in the U.S., Cinerama in France was following CinemaScope. The same is true in Britain and Italy where Cinerama has been shown.

New York Execs Grow Weary Of Comparisons With 'Abnormal 1946'

Comparison being made between 1946 attendance figures (about 85,000,000 as the weekly average) and the present rate (some 46,000,000) represents an invalid barometer of film industry business conditions, in some trade opinion. One distribution v.p. did a burn because research analyst Albert Sindlinger offered such statistics at last week's meeting of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

"We know the situation today isn't what it was in 1946," said the v.p. "We know that attendance is far short of what it was. But we also know, one, that 1946 was an abnormal year and, two, that the kind of prosperity we had at that time was unhealthy prosperity."

The exec added: "The figures he (Sindlinger) gave us didn't present an accurate picture, further, in that they didn't take into account the overhauled economy structure that has taken place over the last few years."

The v.p. said his reference to "unhealthy prosperity" was intended to mean that 1946 was a year in which even second-rate pictures made moncy. In this respect it was "abnormal" and such a situation offered minimum inspiration for the production of the top-grade pix as are on the market today.

As for the trade's economy, the distribution official said "this has been streamlined, that is, geared to maximum values on the screen for every dollar spent, in contrast with 1946 when there was so much waste."

He concluded that while common sense dictates the exertion of effort to improve business in any line of endeavor, the 1946-to-1955 attendance figures are a "distortion" in that they're "out of context with the complete industry analysis" and as such could cause undue alarm both within and beyond the trade.

Greek Pix Reopen Avon

Chicago, March 15.

Avon Theatre, North sider shuttered for several years, has been leased by Kosta Lambros for weekend showing of Greek language films.

First picture shown will be "The Barefoot Battalion," a Greek pic with English titles.

CODE AND LEGION AGAIN LOOM HIGH AS FOREIGN PIX SEEK COMMERICAL COIN

Rising eagerness on the part of foreign producers to have their product play U. S. commercial houses is focusing their attention on the importance of both the Production Code seal and the ratings of the National Legion of Decency, Catholic reviewing group.

In the past, when the foreign lingualers were mainly released by the indies and played the "art" houses, neither Code seal nor Legion rating made very much differences. However, things have changed.

Italian Films Export, for instance, which now dubs the vast majority of its releases and is aiming straight at commercial distribution, was relieved last week when the Legion tagged two of its pix—"Wayward Wife" and "Love in the City"— as "B," i.e. morally objectionable in part for all.

While it's generally acknowledged that a Legion nix today is less of a b.o. barrier than it was some years back, it's also true that it can still represent a formidable obstacle in many parts of the country when it comes to bookings in commercial houses. Lack of a Code seal didn't stop a picture like "The Moon Is Blue" from racking up a hefty booking record. However, the film didn't play some of the important key chains.

Since the Code is apt to weed out most of the material that the Legion might find objectionable, the "C" (Condemned) rating is applied for the most part only to foreign imports. In 1954, the Catholic group put nine features into the "C" category, most of them of foreign origin.

Curious situation develops on French or Italian pix dealing with religious subjects. IFE has one coming up, "Maddalena," and is concerned about it. And the French Gaumont company hopes to bring in "Le Defroque," about an unfrocked priest, which was a big hit in France and in Canada.

Difficulty is that Catholic groups in Europe don't take the same strict point-of-view as the Legion of Decency in N. Y. when it comes to religious themes in films. "God Needs Men," for instance, won a Catholic prize in Europe but never even got a rating from the Legion in the U. S.

Looking for It?

Industry generally feels that the Legion is much harder on imports than it's on American product, partly because it's on the lookout for trouble. Same is said of the Code. It's pointed out, for instance, that Universal at one point indicated it wouldn't distribute the British "Young Lovers" (now called "Chance Meeting" in the U. S. because the film wouldn't get a Code seal. In the end, the heroine is pregnant and there is no marriage ceremony. (U took the Rank film for South America).

Yet, in 20th-Fox's "Untamed," Susan Hayward at the end presents Tyrone Power, to whom she isn't married, with a two-year old boy who, she says, is his son. Film ends with Power slipping a ring on her finger. There is no marriage ceremony either.

Favorable Code and Legion ratings take on added importance in the light of the fact that there is now a good deal of coproduction involving American interests all over the world. Furthermore, producers abroad are pouring heavy coin into their pix and they are anxious for maximum returns. Major companies won't take on a foreign film unless it's got Legion and Code okay.

Broidy, Schwartz, Turner Spellbinding W. Pa. Allied

Pittsburgh, March 15.

Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania is holding its annual convention at the Roosevelt Hotel here Monday-Tuesday (21-22).

The agenda includes toll-tv, film rentals, product and print shortage, threat of additional admission taxes, and a discussion of declining theatre attendance.

Set to address the meet are Allied Artists prexy Steve Broidy, DCA topper Fred Schwartz, American Releasing Corp. chief James Nicholson, exploiteer Terry Turner, and Allied regional veepee Horace Adams.

Quote of the Week

Actress Virginia Leith, quoted in a 20th-Fox publicity release on the refusal of Lancaster, Pa., to allow the "Violent Saturday" preem to take place there because of an undue accent on sex and violence in the pic:

"Sex is a natural and inevitable part of all human relationships. And so far as violence is concerned, any drama of action must have violence. You can't be an ostrich about things so fundamental."

GEHRING: STOP HOME-TOLL NOW

Dallas, March 15.

A warning that all exhibitors must unite and fight the threat of home-television toll was sounded by keynote speaker William C. Gehring, exec asst. general sales manager of 20th-Fox, before 175 members of Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners' Assn. at its third annual convention March 10-11, at Hotel Adolphus.

"Television is marvelous. It has made mistakes, but it will correct them and improve. It's a constant menace and will always be a fight for us. Why shouldn't we have competition? We shouldn't sit complacently like we did for 27 years, through 1952," Gehring stated. "But now some brilliant people are submitting to the Federal Communications Commission the proposition that people should pay. If we let the public go for that, we have no one else to blame but ourselves. We must organize into a definite, unified fight. We must defeat in FCC the toll-tv threat. Exhibitors will have to get together and fight. Stop fighting among yourselves and with distributors. Get around a table and arbitrate."

Gehring substituted as keynoter for the ailing Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy.

'Informer' Gets Okay In Germany After 20 Yrs.

Frankfurt, March 15.

"The Informer," political drama of murder and suspense which has almost become a museum piece in the U.S., has just obtained its first permit for showing in West Germany. Although the pic was generally released in Europe 20 years ago, it has always been banned in Germany.

In the postwar days of 1950, RKO plugged for its release here, but the German censors turned it down on the grounds that "it would be dangerous to show political murder in the newly-organized German democracy and could arouse anti-German feelings." So the film, which had been released by that time in several theatres, was immediately withdrawn.

It has now received permission from the German Film Classification Board to open in Germany, with playdates in key cities scheduled to start sometime this month. The board, however, did not term the picture "worthy," which would have meant that theatres playing it would have been eligible for a reduction in the amusement tax.

Tudor Gets U.S. Rights To French 'Heartbreak'

U. S. distribution rights to "Heartbreak Ridge," French film acquired by Loew's International for distribution aboard, has been turned over by Metro to Moe Kerman's Tudor Pictures.

Since Metro's domestic distribution setup is not geared for the handling of lingual product requiring art house dates, company decided to turn the film over to an indie distributor for U. S. selling. Deal was set with Kerman by Seymour Mayer, M-G foreign department executive.

Picture, dealing with the experiences of French forces in Asia, is scheduled for its American preem at the Paris Theatre, N. Y. arty outlet. It's set to follow the current "Wages of Fear." "Ridge" was filmed in Eastman color.

WAR NOVEL INTO FILM

Finns to Make Pix of Russo-Finland Conflict

Helsinki, March 8.

A sensational Finnish war novel, "The Unknown Soldier," by Vaino Linna, telling the story of a machine-gun detachment in the last war between Finland and Russia, has been bought by The Finnish Filmindustry. This will be the most ambitious effort ever by a Finnish film company.

The novel proved a real shocker in its unrestrained realism and naked brutality, at the same time being rated in the class of the best war stories. Leading the best seller lists, the novel is expected to hit the 100,000 mark, which is tremendous for Finland. Swedish, Danish and English translations are on their way.

The picture, which will be directed by Edvin Laine, is to be made in cooperation with the Finnish army. The casting is not yet set but shooting will start shortly because the winter is expected to be short here this year. "Soldier" is scheduled for release next fall.

Hope for Easier Time in France, But Hold Coin

After tightening up for quite some time, the French are now in a mood to allow compensation deals involving accrued U. S. film coin.

At the same time, the Motion Picture Export Assn. is holding up payment of about $170,000 to the French government pending the issuance of 20 dubbing licenses to the American companies. Fact that the French haven't issued those licenses to date is a matter of some concern in N. Y.

Under an agreement last year, the French agreed to issue 110 permits for 1954-55 (June to June). That's 20 more than the basic 90 which the U. S. distribs had coming to them. In return, the MPEA agreed to turn over to the French $430,000 over a two-year period, the coin coming from a reserve fund which the Americans had built up in France under a prior deal.

The first part of these $430,000, amounting to about $260,000, was turned over last year. The second payment is contingent on the French making available the promised 20 licenses. Authorities in Paris have stalled so far, telling MPEA that they'd get around to the permit question after their discussions with Italian industry reps who were in France last week to huddle on details of the Franco-Italian film agreement.

French attitude in allowing compensation deals is said to be the result of a conviction on the part of local officials that the American companies are investing sufficient monies in coproduction and other purposes. Negotiations for deals are being carried on on an individual company basis. Since last June, the French have remitted an official $200,000 monthly to MPEA member companies.

The Paris Angles

Paris, March 15.

Come next June, the Motion Picture Export Assn. will again press for free pix imports into France under the free trade aspects of the Geneva Accord on Trade & Tariffs.

The French are expected to stand on the 13th amendment of GATT, which stipulates that, when internal conditions demand—due to unfavorable financial circumstances—the signatories can impose quota restrictions on imports from other signatories.

As the MPEA sees it, and figures would bear this out, the pic situation in France is fairly stable. Gallic pitch obviously is the opposite.

Survey shows that, within the last few years, there has been a lowering in the production volume of purely French films with a corresponding boost in coproduction.

Number of dubbed foreign pix reaching the French market also has declined. Last year saw 384 new pix compared to 437 in '53 with this probably due to bigger budgeted pix coming in for longer runs, plus the new screen processes. There were 100 French films and coproductions, which is about par for the course, and 180 foreign films, 104 of them American, 39 Italian and 15 British.

Metro's Chicago Sesh

Two-day meeting of Metro's division sales managers will be held in Chicago at the Blackstone Hotel starting March 25. Sales veepee Charles Reagan, who recently returned from a gander at studio product, will preside at the session which will set plans on upcoming releases. This is the first get-together of M-G's top sales echelon in six months.

Attending the session will be Ed Saunders, assistant general sales manager; John Byrne, eastern sales topper; Rudy Berger, southern; John J. Maloney, central; Burtis Bishop, midwestern; John S. Allen, southwestern, and George A. Hickey, western.

Ontario's Tax 'Relief' Plenty On the Stingy

Toronto, March 15.

Only tax reduction incorporated in Ontario's new 1955-56 budget is the shaving of the entertainment tax, but theatre operators are disappointed in that b.o. tax—which goes to hospital maintenance—has only been reduced from 12½ to 10% on face value admissions. Exhibitors had petitioned that the Government tax be removed from all tickets up to 50c admission as in the United States because of acute inroads of television, thus forcing several operators out of business in small towns.

Premier Frost, however, has cancelled the Government tax on admissions up to 25c only, largely meaningless since few houses have so low an admission, except for children's Saturday matinees. On Frost's admonition to exhibitors that the tax reduction must be passed on to filmgoers, rebuttal is that this amounts to 1c on a 75c ticket and 2c on a $1 admission—so what?

Said Frost, on the floor of the House; "The benefits of this $1,500,000 tax reduction should be passed on to the people in lower admission prices and, in this way, increase attendance and theatre revenue." But exhibitors' beef is that this would entail more change making and bookkeeping. General opinion among the major operators is that the public wouldn't be bothered with a one-or-two-cent reduction on 75c-$1 or more admissions, but Frost insisting that the Ontario houses are getting a new kick-back of $1,500,000—and who's benefiting?

TEXAS DRIVE-INS CITE THEIR GRIPES

Dallas, March 15.

Jack Farr, outgoing prexy of the Texas Drive-In Assn., revealed that in an eight-year period, 1946-1954, indoor theatres' count fell from 18.719 to 15.030—a drop of 3,689—while drive-ins leaped from 300 in 1946 to 4.302 nationally in 1954. Farr said that ozoners had paid one-third of their revenues to distribs in those eight years, "but the past two years have been in the black."

He cited old gripes: shortage of pix ("which should never have been permitted"), unreasonable film rentals, unfair availabilities and clearances, demands for lengthy playing time, rising costs of operation, and added the newest hazard, toll tv.

CinemaScope, Farr stated, has saved the outdoor exhibs.

Charles W. Weisenburg, head of Weisenburg Theatres, Dallas, was chosen new prez. New veeps are Eddie Joseph, Austin; H. L. Durst, Fredericksburg, and G. S. Hill, Abilene. Don Douglas, Dallas, was named secretary and Tim Ferguson held over as treasurer.

Parliament Told U. S. Films Cut Native Profit

London, March 8.

A new parliamentary offensive against the one-way traffic in films across the Atlantic, started in the House of Commons from the government benches a fortnight back, was continued last week with a demand for reciprocity when the Anglo-American Film Agreement comes up for renewal later in th year.

Taking the lead in the new question-time barrages, F. M. Bennett, Tory M.P., started his campaign by asking Board of Trade prez Peter Thorneycroft for info on British film earnings in the U. S. No details were available, but the questioner went on to ask for the amounts involved in British remittances to Hollywood.

The answer proved his point that business was too one-sided. He returned to his subject in the House of Commons last Tuesday (22) to be told by the BOT topper that he was not unsympathetic with what had been said.

Entering the debate on that cueline, Labor M.P. Marcus Lipton, asked how the Minister could justify increasing expenditure on American pix while Britain's gold and dollar reserves were on the decline and imports were excessive.

Thorneycroft had a simple answer: "Largely because the public likes to see American films."

All Legal Papers In 16m Suit Open For Attorneys

Hollywood, March 15.

Homer I. Mitchell, attorney for four of the 12 defendants in the Government's pending 16m antitrust suit against distributors, has received between 2,500 and 3,000 photostats of legal documents which will be used by the Department of Justice.

Federal Judge Harry Westover ordered the Government to turn over the documents for use by all the defense attorneys in preparing their case. At the same time the defendants have been ordered to turn over to the Government all the documents they will introduce in the trial, set for Sept. 6.

UA's Schedule

ning, said Krim, explaining that some pacts provide for delivery of pix to the distrib as far off as three to five years. Another contributing factor behind the tieups is that UA has reached the point where it can participate in financing preproduction development of properties. Company has, perhaps, as much as $1,300,000 now invested in such development, according to Krim. Overall financing of new product amounts to $40,000,000, he said.

The UA officials raised the point that while the accent is to be on a higher level of quality in new production, films in the $300,000 (negative costs) category are not being abandoned. Theatremen have demonstrated that they still want this type product, in addition to the costlier pix, said Heineman.

Incidentally, "Moon Is Blue" and "Suddenly," two of UA's bigger grossers, were in the 300G bracket.

Krim leaves Friday (18) on a trek to Europe, with his agenda including a prowl of possible deals in Germany.

Count Small Exhibs In on Future

New Rivals for Amusement Dollar—Including Travel On Credit—Says Feldman

Minneapolis, March 15.

As newer and more formidable competitors for the entertainment dollar continuously appear, the film on the theatre screen must be increasingly "better than ever." So said Charles J. Feldman, Universal vice president in charge of sales, while here for the opening of his company's new exchange building.

The film industry has proved its mettle by meeting and licking the television challenge. The industry possesses the brains, ability and ingenuity to continue to make pictures that'll always be the best entertainment buy. He has no doubts regarding exhibition's future.

As one of the new competitors for the family entertainment dollars, Feldman cites travel on credit. Because they can take it now, even to Europe, and pay for them later, more people than ever have started traveling, he points out. Such travel leaves less funds for theatregoing.

"Ridiculous" is how Feldman labels some independent exhibitor leaders' claims that film companies don't need the small exhibitor, that such business is only slightly or not at all profitable and therefore not desirable and that deals are being framed designedly to kill off such theatreowners.

"There isn't a customer, including the smallest, that Universal doesn't feel it needs, and I'm sure this holds true with other companies," declares Feldman. "We're always on the quest for new customers and trying to sell more film to our old ones.

"This business always has been based on quantity sales. Companies have many prints of every picture and must keep them working.

"If, in some instances, terms are hard on small exhibitors, I'm confident ways will be found to correct the injustices. As far as Universal is concerned, it will have no national sales policy. There'll be local autonomy in our branches so that deals can be decided individually and hardships prevented."

nick came to be aligned with M-G to produce independently or how Goldwyn's "Guys and Dolls" was added to the distribution roster. Schenck feels the results of both tieups — the finished product as compared with M-G's own studio lineup and the distribution playoff —might well provide inklings as to why M-G's preeminent position industry is slipping.

Metro will also distribute the CinemaScope version of "Oklahoma!" and has package deals cooking with Sol C. Siegel and Stanley Kramer.

Actually, there's not a company in the business that hasn't had its doldrum periods and in every instance, as vets in other organizations point out, distribution is inclined to blame the studio and the production end finger-points at distribution.

inducing the film company to become part owner of the sound process. He has pushed hard for its introduction overseas although the domestic acceptance of Perspecta has lagged.

Loew has been heretofore been offered the presidency of the parent company (with Schenck stepping up as chairman of the board), but has declined the post, preferring to operate under his present arrangement.

East credits Loew for snaring Samuel Goldwyn's "Guys and Dolls" for Metro release. Another factor leading to his appointment is the studio's need for additional top manpower because of the illness of Louis K. Sidney and the need for someone to spell Eddie Mannix, also ailing recently, and Ben Thau.

'Jusice' to Cleffers

plorably move individuals and groups in positions of economic power to take advantage of weaker and less privileged individuals and groups.

"The advent of films, radio and television have made great changes in the production, marketing and use of popular music. Control over popular music over a period of time has come into the hands of a relatively few individuals in this country, who represent large financial interests. Although song writing is a creative activity that requires great talent and even genius, because of the practice of these powerful groups, in one sense, it has been converted into a coldly materialistic mass-production business.

No Mass-Production

"Good songs cannot be mass-produced like automobiles, but that is what is often now happening in this country. A few powerful individuals who can decide whether or not a song is to be exploited and publicized are in a position to block the creative efforts of many worthy, talented composers . . . It will never be possible to create good music by the mere decree of so-called song dictators or moguls who sit in ivory towers in Tin Pan Alley or in Hollywood and send out orders to play only the songs of chosen favorite composers and to omit all others.

"Yet there is evidence to the casual observer that this is just what is often happening and, of course, it accounts for the present relatively inferior quality of many current American popular songs because, under this system, worthwhile compositions possessing real merit are arbitrarily blocked while prosaic, commonplace offerings are circulated under forced draft by arbitrary edict throughout the media of musical reproduction.

"As a result, true, creative art is stultified and mediocrity and banality are artificially cultivated and forced upon the American public.

"There are even worse features. Highly successful, prominent songwriters and composers are daily being dprived of the fruits of their work.

"Some unbelievable results flow from operation of the present copyright law. If a public restaurant, ice cream parlor, or tavern uses an ordinary phonograph played without inserting a coin, this is considered a public performance for profit. The composers may share in it. But if anyone in the same establishment puts a coin in a jukebox, this is not considered a public performance for profit and the composers are excluded from sharing in such receipts.

"Such conditions constitute gross discrimination against composers, authors, and publishers, against the men and women whose great talents and abilities furnish so much pleasure and relaxation to the American public.

"I am not in any sense opposed to the jukebox business or jukebox operators. But in fairness, justice and equity, this and every other branch of the music industry, and other industries which utilize the products of creative art should be prepared and willing to aid those who, above all, have made their great business enterprises and great financial success possible.

"The jukebox operators, like every other group in the music industry, should be willing to enter into conferences and negotiations designed to agree upon their share accruing to various segments of the music world upon some equitable basis. If this cannot be done speedily and effectively, the Congress will have to take appropriate action to revise the present law. In fact, it is my opinion that this should be done in any event."

Citation for Downing said "he has helped to make the fabulous Music Hall, with its staff of 700, a model showcase for the best film entertainment—he stays abreast of new movie technology and projection techniques."

Kids' Library

companies in many cases haven't seen fit to replace them with acetate versions. Also, there has been a sharp drop in the number of new films made available to the library.

Television Competition

(3) Some of the films, such as "The Swiss Family Robinson" and others, have been pulled due to their sale to tv. Latter has also affected the Disney features which, however, were never properly a part of the library.

(4) There have been comparatively few features suitable for specific children's enjoyment since the industry switched to the wide screen.

The MPAA's children's film library doesn't in itself "rent" pix to exhibs. Its function primarily is to draw up lists of recommended films on the basis of screenings by a committee of the various national organizations and the Green Sheet group. The companies then make one or two prints of these recommended features available in their exchanges for booking by interested exhibs.

Only 30 Titles

The number of films now available via the library recommendations runs to only about 30, less than half of what it used to be. Most of the pix are by now very old.

Some of the best-loved film classics considered of never-ending appeal for youngsters, can no longer be booked. These titles include "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," "Wizard of Oz," "Alice in Wonderland," "The Biscuit Eaters," "Dog of Flanders," "Mother Carry's Chickens," "Prince and the Pauper," "Black Beauty," "National Velvet," etc.

Spokesman at the MPAA said this week that every effort was being made to get the companies to recognize the importance of the library's service. He added, however, that a high level decision would be needed to correct the situation. It's pointed out that, while many theatremen have shown interest in creating kid shows, they've also been greatly disappointed by the unavailability of the proper features advocated by the library.

Blame Distribs

Exhib spokesman concerned with the situation castigated the companies for their shortsightedness this week. "It's a shame they can't see beyond the immediate dollar just this once," he commented, adding that he was fully aware that neither theatres nor the distribs would or could make much money on these children's shows. "Yet, they're as important as anything else we can do to widen our audience," he said.

The majority of the pix in the library are now three to four years old. Paramount, which used to have four in the list, has none now. Metro, down for 1, now has 11. 20th-Fox, which once had 10, now has six. Columbia, which had eight, now has four. The only one which actually shows an improvement is Republic.

Companies that have shown the greatest willingness to cooperate have been Metro, 20th and Republic. Latter wanted to make new prints available on "Bill and Coo," for instance, but was stalled when the indie producer withdrew the pic from circulation.

Exeter (Indie) (1,300; 60-$1)—"Detective" (Col) (5th wk). Still good at $7,500 following $8,600 in fourth.

Fenway (NE) (1,373; 60-$1)—"New York Confidential" (WB) and "Black Pirates" (Lip). Fairish $5,000. Last week, "Crashout" (FM) and "Race for Life" (FM), $4,500.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 60-$1)—"Far Country" (U) and "A&C Meet Keystone Kops" (U). Okay $14,000. Last week, "Leagues Under Sea" (BV) (4th wk), same.

Metropolitan (NET) (4,367; 75-$1.25)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (4th wk). This week starts today (15). Third week, big $23,000.

Orpheum (Loew's) (3,000; 74-$1.25)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (4th wk). Neat $12,500 following $17,500 in third.

Paramount (NET) (1,700; 60-$1)—"New York Confidential" (WB) and "The Black Pirates" (Lip). Good $11,500. Last week, "Crashout" (FM) and "Race for Life" (FM), $10,000.

State (Loew's) (3,500; 60-$1)—"Athena" (M-G) and "Crest of Waves" (M-G) will wind 10-day run with fair $12,500.

D.C. Down; Russell Oke 14G, 'Darling' Mild 15G

Washington, March 15.

Main stem is suffering from a seasonal slump plus lack of big, new product. Unseasonably warm weather is driving the natives into home gardens. Neither of the two newcomers, "Jupiter's Darling" at Loew's Capitol and "Underwater!" day-dating at Ambassador and Metropolitan, promises much b.o. excitement. Former is mild and Jane Russell starrer looms barely okay. In holdover class, things are generally steady, with "Country Girl," in sixth session at the Trans-Lux, still out front. "Cinerama" is sock in 70th round.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (SW) (1,490; 70-95)—"Underwater!" (RKO). Slim $5,000. Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (6th wk), $4,500.

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 70-95)—"Jupiter's Darling" (M-G). Mild $15,000 in 8 days or less. Last week, "Long John Silver" (Indie), $9,000.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,174; 70-95)—"Black Tuesday" (UA) (2d-final wk). Fine $5,500 after $9,000 opener.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 65-$1)—"Gate of Hell" (Indie) (3d wk). Firm $4.500 after $5,000 last week. Stays on.

Keith's (RKO) (1,939; 90-$1.25)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (5th wk). Stout $14,000 after $16,000 last week. Stays.

Metropolitan (SW) (1,200; 70-95)—"Underwater!" (RKO). Okay $9,000. Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (5th wk), $8,500.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 70-95)—"White Feather" (20th) (2d wk). Slim $6,000 in final 4 days after $13.000 last week.

Playhouse (Lopert) (435; 70-$1)—"Aida" (IFE) (4th wk). So-so $4,000 after $5,000 last week. Stays.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (600; 70-$1)—"Country Girl" (Par) (6th wk). Husky $12,000 after $14,000. Holds on.

Warner (SW) (1,300; $1.20-$2.40)—"Cinerama" (Indie) (70th wk). With everything else on downbeat, this is on upbeat. Sock $15,000 after $14,000 last week. Holds over.

BALTIMORE

Little (Rappaport) (310; 50-$1)—"Camille" (M-G) (2d wk). Brisk $3,000 following $4,800 opener.

Mayfair (Hicks) (980; 25-70)—"Timberjack" (Rep). Mild $3,300. Last week, "Smoke Signal" (U), $3,500.

New (Fruchtman) (1,800; 35-$1)—"Untamed" (20th). Rousing $12,000. Last week, "Women's Prison" (Col), $6,000.

Playhouse (Schwaber) (320; 50-$1)—"Little Kidnappers" (Indie) (4th wk). Okay $3,500. Last week, $3,800.

Stanley (WB) (3,200; 35-$1)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (6th wk). Ebbing to $5,500. Last week, $7,000.

Town (Rappaport) (1,600; 35-$1)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Still tall at $11,000 after $17,500 opener.

'GIRL' GREAT $18,000, SEATTLE; 'LINE' 11G

Seattle, March 15.

"Country Girl" is standout here this session with a mighty total at Fifth Avenue. "Underwater!" shapes fairly good at Orpheum but "Long Gray Line" is disappointing with lesser take at Paramount. "Americano" looks nice at Coliseum.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (800; 75-$1)—"Far Country" (U) and "West Zanzibar" (U) (4th wk). Good $3,000. Last week, $4,200.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,830; 75-$1)—"Americano" (RKO) and "Outlaw's Daughter" (20th). Perky $8,500. Last week, "White Feather" (20th) and "Target Earth" (AA), $8,200.

Fifth Avenue (Evergreen) (2,500; $1-$1.25)—"Country Girl" (Par). Immense $18,000. Last week, "Bridges of Toko-ri" (Par) (3d wk), $6,700.

Music Box (Hamrick) (850; 90-$1.25)—"Violated" (Lip) and "Twilight Money" (Lip) (2d wk). Good $3,000. Last week, $4,800.

Music Hall (Hamrick) (2,300; 90-$1.25)—"Hit Deck" (M-G) and "Twist of Fate" (UA) (2d wk). Oke $7,000 or near. Last week, $11,700.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,700; 90-$1.25)—"Underwater!" (RKO) and "Thunder Pass" (Lip). Fairly good $10,000 or near for Russell pic. Last week, "Many Rivers" (M-G) and "Carolina Cannonball" (Rep), $6,300.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,039; $1-$1.25)—"Long Gray Line" (Col). Passably good $11,000 or close. Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (4th wk-5 days), $5,700.

Kaufman's Australian Plan

Producer Joseph Kaufman returned from England over the weekend where he discussed deals for the foreign distribution of "Long John Silver," (being handled in the U. S. by DCA) and also checked locations for his next production.

Following his Gotham stay, Kaufman will return to the Coast for a month's vacation before resuming his production activities, which includes more filmmaking in Australia.

Salesmen-Distribs Deadlocked Over 'Penurious' $100 Salary Top

Talks between the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesman, independent union representing some 775 film salesmen, and the major distribution companies relating to a new contract have reached a stalemate. Negotiations which started in Chicago Feb. 7 and adjourned to Cincinnati on March 7, resumed in New York Monday (14). The present two-year pact expired Feb. 17, but has been extended to April 17 pending the outcome of the talks. The Monday session broke up with a report of "no progress" and the committees representing the salesmen and the distribs hoped to resume conversations yesterday (Tues.).

The salesmen are asking for a pay hike, an increase in expense allowance, and certain fringe benefits, all of which the distribs have nixed, according to the Colosseum's general counsel, David Bartell.

Noting that the negotiations had moved into a third and crucial stage, Bartell charged the film companies with adopting the theme of "strangulation of a salesman." On the basis of the offers made by the film companies, which are seeking an extension of the present contract, Bartell said it was the "thinking of top management to limit the salaries of the film salesmen to $100 per week." He termed this offer as "niggardly, stultifying and insulting," and lashed out at the distribs' "penuriousness in the name of economy."

"We have here," Bartell said, "a spectacle of the film industry, enjoying the highest profits in its history, belittling the efforts of its salesmen, and destroying their efficiency by failing and refusing to accord to them the consideration commensurate with their importance to the industry."

Placing of a $100 limit on the salary of a salesman, Bartell said, would mean the "decimation" of sales forces, and the exodus of high-calibre salesmen from the industry.

During the Cincy talks last week, James A. Mackraz, Federal mediator, sat in on the meetings. Bartell said that it was possible that a Federal official may be called to take part in the New York sessions if the stalemate is not broken.

Antitrust

the House Judiciary Committee unanimously approved such legislation last week. In addition, a special committee created by the Attorney General to study the antitrust laws is about ready to release its report, which also contains a recommendation for a uniform statute.

Film industry producers and distributors have been pressing for a bill because of the wave of treble damage suits which has followed the Supreme Court decision in the Paramount case. Distributors sought a statute of no more than three years, while exhibitors said that if there must be one it should be for at least five or six years.

Four years is recommended by the House subcommittee and also by the Attorney General's study committee.

At present the Federal courts accept the statute of limitations in whatever state the suit is brought. This has resulted in exhibitors "shopping" for states with long statutes so that they can sue on very old claims.

The House bill does not include a provision, urged by the distributors, that trial judges be given discretion to set awards at less than full treble damages, where circumstances warrant the lesser penalty. The present law makes treble damages mandatory. However, the Attorney General's committee is understood to favor the discretionary power for the judges, in its report. Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, claims the discretionary feature was not considered because the motion picture industry people previously in favor of it failed to go to bat for it this time.

Filmakers

Loew, head of a large New England chain, in which Loew said that he had been able to make more money on Filmakers and similar type releases in many situations than on major company product.

Both Levin and Mandell expressed satisfaction with FRO's exhibitor guarantee plan by which theatres, on the basis of the story, cast, and director, sign up for an FRO film prior to actual production. The exhibitor pays a flat minimum guarantee against a percentage. The contracts are noncancellable and require exhibs to play or pay for the picture within 120 days after the national release date. If the theatre cannot work the film in its schedule within the 120-day period, it must pay the minimum guarantee and can play the picture at a later date.

According to Levin and Mandell, FRO snared 800 guaranteed dates for the initial films offered under the scheme and is now aiming to double that total on its new output. "Private Hell—36," one of the guarantee pictures, is expected to gross $600,000 in the domestic market, according to Mandell.

In addition to releasing pictures made by Filmakers Productions, the FRO production company headed by Collier Young, FRO will also finance and distribute pictures of indies "as long as the package looks commercial and the price fits the budget we operate on." In this category is FRO's current "Crashout," a Hal E. Chester production starring William Bendix and Arthur Kennedy. Picture hit the market last week with dates in the New England and New Jersey area.

Completed and set for release in April is a Filmakers Production, "Mad at the World," a film dealing with juve delinquency with a prolog by Sen. Estes Kefauver. Also on FRO's slate is another Chester entry, "Battle Hell" (title may be changed because of Warners "Battle Cry"), which goes into production in April with a July release in mind. Mickey Rooney, Robert Cummings, and Tab Hunter are being eyed for this film. "The Smoldering Sea," based on the novel by U. S. Anderson, rolls in May under the Filmakers banner for September release. Cast will include Paul Douglas, Lee J. Cobb, and Keefe Brassele. From September to the first of next year, FRO hopes to have three more pictures ready. It has two properties lined up—"The Weapon," an original by Fred Freiburger, and "The Firebug," an original by Collier Young.

All the upcoming FRO pictures, according to Levin, will be filmed in the Tushinsky Superscope process although they'll be in black and white. Levin said he had seen test footage of Superscope in b&w and that the results were excellent.

While in N. Y., Levin and Mandell conferred with eastern exhibitors relating to contracts under the guarantee plan for FRO's upcoming slate.

the setbacks, is not too discouraged. He feels the company will get underway solidly shortly, pointing to the planned May release, for example, of "I Am a Camera." This is the Remus Production, made in London with Julie Harris, Shelly Winters and Laurence Harvey in the leads.

Beyond this, DCA has a few properties in "pre-production" status, including "Lelia," which is to star Olivia de Havilland.

Schwartz Feted

Fred J. Schwartz, who's bowing out as chairman of the fund-raising and finance committee of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, was tendered a luncheon by members of the committee at "21" in N. Y. last Wednesday (9).

Abe Montague, president of the hospital, cited Schwartz for his superb leadership and consecrated service."

tax structure we have a chance at financial security only with our own companies and only if these do well."

Corporate-stock organizations, of course, give the owners (the stars) a crack at capital gains taxation of 26% as against the straight income impost that scales upward with the amount of income, going as high as 90%.

Douglas, emphasizing he was speaking only for himself, pointed up other advantages. "Obviously," he said, "it's wonderful to be able to develop certain stories. On the stage, the actor's job often is as important as the director's and some times on par with the writer's. In a film, you feel your contribution is less, you want to do more such as in finding properties and developing them creatively. A lot of us are going to die for one reason or another. I hope it isn't going to be me."

Talent Always on Own

Douglas wants no part of the pros and cons anent independent production vis-a-vis major studio operations. "Actually, any good picture ever made was an independent. William Wyler and Billy Wilder, for example, have worked at Paramount but they developed their own pictures. Such films as these usually are better than those going through the studio mill. The good pictures result from the work of a few men, perhaps only one or two, regardless or whether there's a major studio or not. In this sense, the pictures are independent."

In setting up shop on their own, the stars hire the producer, director, other players, etc. Douglas' company, Bryna Productions, has "The Indian Fighter" as the first under its UA deal and William Schorr is set to produce.

It's to be a western and Douglas has some novel ideas about such product. In effect, he's departing from the conventional. "Why must the hero be strong and silent?" he askes. "Why can't he be strong and a little noisy, too, and saying more than 'yep' and 'nope?' And why must the cavalry always arrive on time?"

Douglas has been toying with the idea of his own company for some time and has several story properties in mind to lens. One of these, he added, is on the life of Van Gogh but Metro has now decided to do the same kind of property. "Rather than buck a company like Metro, maybe we'll do it together," concluded the actor-corporation.

stay outdoors as much as possible and take part, to a greater extent, in recreational activities."

The television people feel the extension will play havoc with the program scheduling, since shows would be seen at a different time in New York city than in the suburbs and other areas outside the city limits.

Under the existing state law, the daylight savings period starts at 2 a. m. on the last Sunday in April and ends at 2 a. m. the last Sunday in September. However, the statute provides that municipalities may extend the stanza beyond the stipulated date.

leged acting in a "confidential capacity for the plaintiff" with regard to its projected film of "Waterfront." Monticello also sought to have Schulberg's "unlawful appropriation" of the property tried before a jury.

Schulberg is a defendant in the action along with Columbia Pictures, Elia Kazah, Horizon American Pictures, Sam Spiegel and Malcolm Johnson. Monticello charges that under separate pacts with Johnson and Schulberg it gained rights to "Waterfront." Horizon American, in answering the suit, claims that the plaintiff forfeited its rights by failing to exercise them within the period stipulated in the Johnson and Schulberg pacts.

Suit also asserts that Schulberg breached a confidential relationship by turning over the script based on Johnson's "Crime on the Waterfront" to Spiegel's Horizon American firm. It's contended that Horizon had full knowledge of Monticello's ownership when it made the film and assigned distribution rights to Columbia.

Bruce Odlum

Independent Artists distributed through RKO.

Visiting the actual locales is part of a growing pattern which Elia Kazan first capitalized on with "The Stamford Story" (actual residents from that Connecticut town) and which he did again in a film with a New Orleans locale some time ago. Joe Mankiewicz did it with "Barefoot Contessa." When Englund researched "Girl Rush" he and young Odlum visited the Nevada goldmining country, and when he (Englund) wrote "Never Wave at a WAC" (again a Rosalind Russell starrer), some time ago, he first researched the Pentagon and the Fort Lee (Va.) WAC Training Centre. Then he wrote the script.

George Seaton did that with the Berlin Airlift story, first locating there to get the feel of the Yank job in breaking through the Berlin corridor. Bryant was production manager on that film, too, and knows the European locale, hence the exploratory trip first by Bruce Odlum with his writer and production aide.

French Exhibs

Nachbaur maintained. This despite the fact that in France, as in Hollywood, there is now a tendency towards fewer but bigger pix. Duncan McGregor, Pathe's U. S. topper (outfit runs the Paris Theatre, N. Y., and the Fifth Ave. Cinema) interpolated that French houses of all sizes must, by law, play each attraction a minimum of one week. Since there's also no such thing as a double bill, the annual film requirement is much less than in the U. S.

Thevenot said that, at the moment, there is a French screen quota providing that nine out of every 13 weeks of playing time must be devoted to domestic product. He noted that this restriction was "theoretical" rather than practical. He also said French attendance was up due to good pix and no tv competition.

Most of Pathe's 30 houses have CinemaScope, Nachbaur said, but only the first runs are equipped for magnetic stereophonic sound. "French audiences generally aren't too interested in the type of sound they hear," he observed. "In the first runs it's worthwhile putting in stereophonic sound, but it means nothing elsewhere." All of Pathe's pix now are coproductions with Italy. The company has just released its first CinemaScoper, "Fortune Carre." According to Lillian Gerard, v.p. of Pathe's U. S. subsid and managing director of the Paris, the house may eventually switch to widescreen.

Foreign Sales

tential abroad is Loew's which has assigned Arthur M. Loew of Loew's International not only to study Metro studio activities but also "the planning of production for worldwide consumption."

It's considered of more than passing significance that the global sales jobs at least three companies has been taken on by men whose experience has been largely in the foreign field and who could be expected to keep international requirements in sharp focus. At Paramount recently, George Weltner took over as worldwide sales topper. He had headed up Par International. At Universal, Alfred E. Daff assumed the mantle of global sales head after a long career in the foreign field. Daff today, apart from his sales responsibilities, also has a strong voice in production planning. At Republic, Richard Altschuler succeeded to the global sales job via the international department.

The renewed accent on the foreign market, which today brings the companies up to 45%—and in some cases up to 50%—of their overall take, is seen as part of the "increased risk" pattern of production. Fewer pix are being made, and they cost more. Therefore, the companies want to insure for themselves the largest possible return. Keeping foreign tastes in mind is seen as one way of reducing the loss risk.

Still another aspect involves the opinion that, whereas the "ceiling" on the domestic b.o. take of any given picture is pretty well known, foreign earnings are still flexible and the market is capable of expansion in many areas. In the cases of most companies, the percentage of the foreign billings increase last year over the year before exceeded that of the domestic billings. Main problem, of course, is getting the money out.

have made four-wall deals with 38 theatres. Boxoffice sales, via local CARE and ANTA units, have already started. Actual sales at theatres, following ads in weekend newspapers, started Monday (21). Only one theatre in New York, the RKO Fordham in the Bronx, will carry the telecast. Originally, the Fabian Fox Theatre in Brooklyn was also listed, but it has been dropped.

The live show will originate from Dumont's Adelphi Theatre studio. House is reported to be sold out already. Rental of the Adelphi Theatre for three days plus use of a Dumont crew for the pickup stands to cost the sponsoring groups $10,000.

Twin Cities' Set

Minneapolis, March 15.

Closed circuit theatre telecast of the American National Theatre & Academy show from New York March 28 will come into two United Paramount Theatres' houses, the Minneapolis Radio City and St. Paul Paramount. The only other local theatre equipped for big screen tv, the Minneapolis Gopher, will not have it.

This will be only the second time that any Twin Cities' theatre will have carried the exclusive telecast of any attraction other than boxing.

Previous occasion was the Metropolitan Opera's "Carmen" which the local Gopher brought in. It left the theatre in the red.

as the first major tv-to-screen test. It opens at N. Y.'s Sutton Theatre, an art outlet, April 1. Film was made on an unelaborate budget (about $300,000), and boxoffice reaction of the entry, along with the success of the theatrical "Patterns," undoubtedly will influence future trade decisions on tv material seguing to the screen.

Somewhat akin to this is the upcoming Walt Disney release of "Davy Crockett." A feature pic taken from three half-hour segments on the Disneyland ABC-TV show, with some untelevised footage also incorporated, goes into theatrical distribution in the next couple of months.

Deep in TV

sale, Par doubtless will go along with it, its' said.

Rackmil, who was reelected along with all the other officers and directors, said U had no tv-film production plans at the moment but added: "We propose to go into the making of pictures for television." He said the company was currently surveying the field and might enter it in 1955 "if we feel we can make money out of it." U turned out a telepix series once before but was unable to sell it.

Stockholder representation at the meet, which was enlivened by but few interchanges, ran to 961,762 shares, a record. Following the meet, the board voted the regular quarter 25c a share dividend payable on March 30, 1955 to stockholders of record March 21, 1955.

Main points brought out at the meet were the following:

(1.) Universal's first quarter which ended Jan. 31, 1955, showed a slight drop in billings from 1953-54, but was ahead in actual earnings. The second quarter, Rackmil predicted, wouldn't be as good as the comparable period in 1954 when "The Glenn Miller Story" went into release.

Holding Own

(2.) After a record year in 1954, the U management expects the company to hold its own in 1955 but not to exceed the prior year. "After all," said Rackmil, "we had two very big grossers last year. It was a great year for us. We'll do fine if we equal it." He predicted that 1955 dividends wouldn't be less than in 1954 and he defended the 1954 payments of $1.25 as "reasonable."

In reply to repeated queries, Rackmil pointed out that U had, only in recent years, been pulling out of a hole and had been anxious to reduce its bank indebtedness, etc. "When we're as well fortified as Loew's, we may decide to pay out most of our earnings as dividends," he stated.

No Merger Now

(3.) Merger plans between Decca and Universal have been considered and discussed within recent months but, said Rackmil, "I have found no feasible plan for it yet. There is nothing definite yet.

(4.) Universal is considering opening a Houston exchange since the territory being serviced out of the Dallas branch is getting to be too big.

(5.) Universal doesn't intend to follow the high budget trend. "We never made a picture that cost $4,000,000 and we never will," declared Rackmil. "Our pictures aren't going to exceed $2,500,000 if I can help it." The U prez said tax payments had been such that the company may have to borrow money "to keep pace with production."

(6). Pointing to the success of "On the Waterfront" and "From Here to Eternity," Rackmil stressed U wasn't in the business to sell systems but entertainment. "No one here is particularly concerned about systems," he said. "We'll use them if and when we believe they can be helpful to put across a certain story."

There was comment from several stockholders re the lack of U stock held by U's directors (they all hold Decca shares). Also, Rackmil brushed aside as "silly" a letter from a Houston exhib, advocating that U exec salaries be based on the number of pix made and released by the company in any given year. Under this scheme, Rackmil's compensation as president would be reduced to $2,000 per film released. The same exhib also wanted U to guarantee a 10% net profit on each playdate.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Intra-mural frictions in the film business are resulting in a downbeat score on the trade's public relations front. This is the complaint of Paul Raibourn, Paramount v.p. The exec said in N.Y. he was perturbed by two recent press size-ups of the industry, one in Fortune and the other in a Sunday edition of the N.Y. Times. Both commented on improved economy in films and the stepped-up quality of product but also accented were strictly trade matters.

"The two articles," beefed Raibourn, "were too much concerned with processes and problems. The public is not interested in the technicalities of these things. They just want good pictures well presented." His references were to exhibitor complaints about a product shortage and conflicts over photographic and projection systems. Both subjects were given prominent mention in the Times and Fortune.

French film censorship, including that exercised by the Catholic Film Centre, is very liberal and, if anything, is becoming more so, according to two French theatre execs. Lucien Nachbaur and Jean Thevenot of France's Pathe Cinema said in N. Y. last week that there were occasionally pictures to which Catholics objected. Asked what French reaction would be to developments such as have taken place in the U. S., where Catholic church authorities have threatened boycotts of theatres for a full year unless a certain film were pulled, Thevenot summed it up very simply: "I think there'd be a revolution," he said.

Walt Disney has influenced a change in the ads for a Paramount picture. This developed as the Disneyland ABC-TV show gave a full hour last Wednesday (9) to the probability of space travel within the next few years. Guest on the show was Dr. Wernher Von Braun, reputed authority on inter-planetary getting about. Aware of Disney's high tv audience rating, Par decided to put Von Braun's quotes to use in selling "Conquest of Space." The homeoffice dispatched word to field men to revise the "Conquest" ads to spotlight the "This Can Happen in Your Lifetime" angles in Von Braun's comments on the Disney airer.

In a recent talk to St. Louis Tent No. 4, George C. Hoover of Miami, Chief Barker of the Variety Clubs International, explained why he declined a job with Paramount Pictures to devote his time to charity work through the Variety clubs. Hoover said, "Back in 1925 I suffered a broken neck, six broken ribs and a broken leg in an accident. The doctors told me I would never walk again. I told the Lord that if He helped me I would do my utmost to repay him. And He let me walk again, let me prosper."

As part of the memorial celebration for Jerome Kern, commemorating the 10th anni of the death of the noted songwriter, efforts are being made for the presentation of a festival showing of Kern films. Under the plan being pitched by Norman Rosemont, who is representing the Kern estate, the films would be reissued for a week's showing in art houses during the week of Nov. 11. In all, there are six films in which Kern's music is an essential part. They include "Roberta" (RKO), "Cover Girl" and "You Were Never Lovelier" (Col), and "Show Boat," "Lovely to Look At," and "Till the Clouds Roll By" (Metro).

Sol Krim, owner of Detroit artie bearing his name, says he installed a tv set in his theatre because "a lot of miserable husbands are dragged to the movies." They appreciate it, especially on fight nights, when they can get in front of a tv set while their wives watch the movie, he said. Besides, tv in a theatre also is a boon to youngsters. Their favorites, by a wide margin, are Disneyland and Amos 'n' Andy. Krim and his manager, Gwen Griffiths, have noticed that patrons play the two media against each other. They desert tv when commercials come on, and the movies when short subjects appear.

"12 Angry Men," the Studio One offering for which Reginald Rose won an Emmy for best dramatic writer, is being eyed as film fare by a couple of major studios and an indie group. The indie group, which has been discussing the project with United Artists, has the inside track. Under the deal UA would partially finance and release the picture. In addition to Rose's award, "12 Angry Men" copped Emmys for Robert Cummings as best dramatic actor and for Franklin Schaffner as best director.

"Gone With the Wind," released for the first time last summer in Yugoslavia, is racking up hefty returns, according to reports received by Metro. A newspaper clipping obtained by the film company disclosed that two peasants in the mountainous interior of Yugoslavia hiked 130 kilometers (about 80 miles) to see the picture. The event was recorded in "Politika," leading daily paper of Belgrade. Item was headed "Strange But True."

University of California at Los Angeles won the Screen Producers Guild's second annual Intercollegiate Gold Medallion Film Award over 104 entrants. Winning film was "A Time Out of War," a 20-minute drama of the Civil War. Silver Medallion was won by "One Victory," entered by Minnesota, and Bronze Medallion by "Books Alive," submitted by Miami U.

by The Associates & Aldrich Co., is scheduled to roll either April 7 or the 14th at the John Sutherland Studios on the Coast depending upon the availability of Palance. Screenplay has already been completed by James Poe. UA deal, incidentally, is a one picture pact and was finalized last week by Aldrich and UA prexy Arthur Krim.

Aldrich, who returned to the Coast over the weekend, recently delivered to UA a completed print of Mickey Spillane's "Kiss Me Deadly" which he produced and directed for Park Lane Productions. Also on his production agenda besides "Knife" is "The Way We Are." A Joan Crawford starrer, it's slated to roll early in July with no release set as yet.

Nothing succeeds like CINERAMA

On Sept. 30, 1952 when "This Is Cinerama" pioneered the motion picture revolution and gave the screen a new dimension inspiring the many technical improvements that have contributed to the re-birth of prosperity at the nation's box-offices, Cinerama assumed the well-known penalty of leadership. When a motion picture grosses $20,000,000 in only 14 theatres (9 runs continue) . . . when one engagement in New York plays to a gross of $4,500,000—what can you do for an encore!

Now that critics reports (see opposite column) and the early S.R.O. box office returns are in . . . this second Cinerama presentation: Louis deRochemont's "Cinerama Holiday"—provides proof it will be even more fabulous than the first.

With Cinerama's unique power to "put you in the picture"—to impart extraordinary emotional impact and the sense of actual physical participation by the audience—it is a writer's, director's, producer's dream.

Standard motion pictures in all aspect ratios come and go . . . but month after month in the great cities of our land . . . and in every world metropolis where we have opened . . . Cinerama defies all box-office experience; creating new patrons and reviving the interest in motion pictures of the "lost" audience. Thus Cinerama is not in competition with the established industry . . . but a new entertainment power . . . a once or twice a year deluxe show for the entertainment-loving millions of the globe.

Reveal 'Insider' Share Sales

Washington, March 15.

Two officials of Columbia Pictures disposed of blocks of their Col common stock in January, Securities & Exchange Commission reports in its latest summary of "insider" transactions for the month from Jan. 11 to Feb. 10.

Abraham Montague cut his holding by 1,300 shares, but still retains 13,661. Abraham Schneider disposed of 1,000 shares but still owns 18,569.

Sam Wolf, of Allied Artists, sold 1,100 shares of the studio's common, keeping only 150. Owen D. Young, of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, has 1,500 shares of the common after selling 474. Loew's, Inc. continues to buy up all offered blocks of stock in Loew's Boston Theatres. The parent company added 130 shares last January, giving it a total of 132,966.

Harold E. Newcomb, of RKO Theatres, increased his common stock in the circuit by 100 shares to a total of 1,100. Harry Brandt, top man in Trans Lux Corp., purchased another 400 shares, so that he now holds 124,515 in his own name. Through a holding company he has 200 more, plus 1,100 shares in the Brandt Foundation. His wife owns 17,700. Aquila Giles upped Trans Lux common holdings to 1,000 shares.

Milton R. Rackmil advised the SEC that he now holds two blocks of stock in Decca Records, aggregating 75,200 shares, as a voting trustee under a voting trust agreement reached last November. In addition, he owns 11,713 shares of Decca which controls Universal Pictures.

Market Shakeout Skids Amusements; Zenith, Precision, RCA Values Drop

By MIKE WEAR

Wall Street hit the skids last week in a long overdue reaction. The selling of blue-chip shares late Tuesday (8) started the ball rolling, with further excited dumping of stocks Wednesday shaking the industrials down more than 10 points in the three-day period (including March 7). The sharp rally on Thursday was followed by another abrupt drop Friday (11) when there was no follow-thru on the rally. Friday's vigorous selling finally took its toll in the Amusement Group which had more or less resisted the downbeat up to then.

Selling of shares Wednesday and Friday reached jittery proportions, with the week's shakeout the most drastic in 15 years. Aside from the fact that many in the Street felt the stock market was bound to hit an air pocket soon despite soaring prices, the testimony of a Harvard professor before the Senate committee probing the market rise (he saw a resemblance between the present market and 1929 and advocated no margin trading) rather obviously touched off the selling late Tuesday, which carried through much of the next day. Also the touch-and-go situation in the Far East was blamed.

However, weakness in the commodity market, especially the grains and cotton, more or less forecast a reaction in stock prices, the theorizing of the Harvard man and the Formosa setup apparently only adding momentum to the slump in stock values.

Hardest hit among the amusements were Zenith Radio, down 5¾, and General Precision Equipment, off 4½. Latter dipped to 59¾, lowest it has been in nearly a month. RCA also slumped 3¼ points to 40⅞. CBS "B" stock was unchanged at 86¼ while Class A shares were only off 25c at the same quotation.

Other casualties in the Amusement Group included ABC-Paramount Theatres, off 2 points; Decca, down 1⅛, selling ex-divvy; Columbia Pic, off 1¼; Loew's, down 1⅜; Paramount, off 1⅛; Stanley-Warner, down 1¼; 20th-Fox, off 1⅝; Eastman Kodak common, lower by 2¼; Universal and Warner Bros., off 1¼ each. Technicolor lost 75c to 15⅜.

EMI dipped 50c to 41¼. Others were off fractionally, not a single stock winding up with a plus sign.

Trading fraternity will watch closely this week to see how far the current decline will be extended and attempt to decide whether this downbeat in Wall Street will mark the end of the current bull market. There are many who feel that, unless further bad news develops, it is simply a healthy reaction and one to be expected after an almost continuous climb since the last fall election.

Some in the Street are now watching to see if there will be a government probe of what made the market sell off so sharply. Also if steps will be taken to prevent a further decline. The most favorable development as far as the amusements are concerned is that film and cinema shares did not retreat any more than they did, especially with the spotty condition of grosses over the country.

LONG HASSLE ENDS

Minneapolis Exhibs Sign With Projectionists Union

Minneapolis, March 15.

After failure of an announced projectionists' strike to materialize and following more than six months of negotiations which recently were broken off and then resumed at the eleventh hour, an agreement has finally been reached between local independent exhibitors and AFL union projectionists. A new three-year pact was signed to replace the one that expired Nov. 30.

Under the new contract's terms the boothmen receive no pay boost for the first year, but 8c. an hour raise for each of the two latter. They had sought 9c. an hour for the second and third years and 30 minutes overtime for every picture, the same as United Paramount Theatres and RKO Theatres recently granted in a separate contract.

The committee representing two loop firstrun and 42 independent theatres was headed by Ted Mann.

ENTERS MORELAND CASE

Salesmen's Colosseum Filing Brief With U.S. Court

Milwaukee, May 15.

Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen has instructed its general counsel, David Bartell, to file a brief in the U. S. Supreme Court in the case of Moreland vs. Regent Theatre of Cleveland.

Bartell said that if permission to file the brief is granted, it will be confined to the Colosseum's position that the activities of a buying and booking combine are subject to monopoly charges.

Rollerskating Amendment Slows Vt. Sabbath Law

Montpelier, Vt., March 15.

The Vermont Legislature has given final approval of the Sunday matinee bill, but an amendment providing for roller skating on the Sabbath has resulted in confusion as to how soon the theatres can take advantage of the new legislation.

Shaking off a last-minute attempt to ditch the measure, the lawmakers approved Sunday matinees by a vote of 127 to 108, but the roller skating amendment sent the bill back to the Senate, which had already approved the film measure. If that body concurs on the amendment, the measure goes to Gov. Joseph Johnson for his signature.

Meanwhile, theatre men are wondering whether they can automatically begin Sunday matinees once the governor signs the bill into law.

Dallas' Baseball Stunt

Dallas, March 15.

Texas showmen, via the Variety Club of Dallas, Tent 17, are arranging a tribute to the World Series baseball clubs—the Cleveland Indians and the N. Y. Giants—on April 1 with a banquet at the Adolphus Hotel here. A special salute will be given Eddie Brannick, marking his golden anni as the Giants' secretary.

Idea originated with James Gillespie, 20th-Fox's public relations representative in this area and a boyhood friend of Brannick's in the N. Y. Hell's Kitchen area. In addition to Gillespie, Interstate Circuit's Bob O'Donnell and Julius Scheppe, past Chief Barker of the local Variety unit, are handling the arrangements.

Five From Barska Street

plank on which to rest so much of the plot.

Ultimately the boys turn on the gang, save the newly completed roadway and bridge, and apparently all ends well. But the director is undecided whether to let the hero die or live. The audience is just as confused. Per usual, with a Russian-controlled country, there is the customary hammering home about the worth of the collective state. Only here somebody slipped once and permitted some of the workers to get drunk.

Aleksandra Slaska, a rather attractive blonde, really steals this pic despite the uneven role that's been handed her. She is the teacher in a school, and part of the Worker's Party, naturally. But her moments with Tadeusz Janczar, the film's hero and delinquent who reforms, are about the most interesting part of the vehicle. Support is unusually good for such a thankless story.

Ford directs unevenly, going from a maximum of detail to hurried and uncomprehensive movement. He drags the youths of the cast through what are supposed to be the sewers of the city in one episode and then brings them back for another sequence which is even more confused than the first. Lensing of Jaroslaw Tuzar and Karol Chodura is topflight most of the time. It is not their fault that they had to use the Russian color process. Wear.

Le Pain Vivant

(FRENCH)

Paris, March 8.

Corona release of Films D'Ariel production. Directed by Jean Mousselle. Screenplay, Francois Mauriac; adaptation, Mauriac, Mousselle; camera, Pierre Aneranz; editor, H. Scmitt; music, Michel Magne. With Francoise Golea, Jean-Francois Calve, At Madeleine, Paris. Running time, 110 MINS.

Father	Lucien Nat

Francois Mauriac, leading militant Catholic writer here, makes his first incursion into film ranks with this pic. Naturally film has a religious theme. It revolves around a love that grows between a devout young girl and a young atheist of integrity and character who tries to understand the strange rival he has for the girl's love in God. She carries the cross of a bitter father and erring brother. Offbeat and sombre with a tendency towards preachiness, this is primarilly for socializbed spots. It primarily for specialized spots. It is too downbeat in theme and Mauriac has given this a literary turn in writing, and dialog is stilted and unreal in delving into the meaning and living of Catholicism. Director Jean Mousselle has tried to compensate for this by his treatment, but his excessive camera movements, lingering shots, plus giving bystanders an ethereal onlooking aspect, does little to get the proper feel.

Jean-Francois Calve emerges a sensitive young actor as the atheist, with a probable future. Francoise Golea has the proper mystic and ethereal qualities. Others in the small cast are good. Lensing and editing are firstrate though treatment by eternally languid camera movements is overdone.

This will have some appeal to the intellectual set here and will have to be played that way in the U.S. chances. "The Living Bread," of course, is the wafer used during the Communion in the Mass. Mosk.

(GERMAN)

Berlin, March 8.

Gloria release of Ariston production. Stars Ingrid Bergman and Mathias Wiemann. Directed by Roberto Rossellini. Screenplay, Sergio Amidei and Franz Graf Treuberg after novel of same name by Stefan Zweig; camera, Peter Haller; music, Renzo Rossellini. At Cinema Paris, Berlin. Running time, 91 MINS.

Irene Wagner	Ingrid Bergman
Prof. Albert Wagner	Mathias Wiemann
Joana Schultze	Renate Mannhardt
Heinz Baumann	Kurt Kreuger
Housekeepeer	Elise Aulinger

The first German Ingrid Bergman film after 16 years turns out to be slightly disappointing. Except the outstanding performance given by Miss Bergman, there is nothing new or particularly exciting about this one. In transferring Stefan Zweig's novel to the modern era, plot loses its conviction and dramatic grip. As a result, "Fear" lacks the necessary suspense. Name of Miss Bergman may lure many patrons here and probably also outside this country. The Swedish actress has not lost her natural charm and beauty.

Screenplay, by Sergio Amidei and Franz Graf Treuberg, sees Ingrid Bergman as the wife of a wealthy factory owner. Despite Miss Bergman's affection for her husband she has a lover and latter's ex-girl takes advantage to blackmail her. Fearing a scandal and the end of her marriage, La Bergman pays any demanded sum until she finds out that her own husband is behind the blackmailing. Miss Bergman feels herself driven to suicide but it's her husband who saves her from this. They realize they both have made mistakes and the couple is reconciled again.

Had it not been Miss Bergman in the femme lead, pic might have become a total flop. The few other players are considerably overshadowed by her. That also applies to Mathias Wiemann who portrays Ingrid Bergman's husband with noblesse. Renate Mannhardt, used by Wiemann as blackmailer, is okay in her few scenes, while Kurt Kreuger, Miss Bergman's lover, doesn't do too well.

"Fear" gives evidence of the artistic decline of one of wellknown postwar directors, Roberto Rossellini. In this German opus, he lacks style and roundness, and there are comparatively few scenes which have the Rossellini touch. Technically, "Fear" represents a good standard. That is especially true of the camerawork by Peter Haller, his outdoor shots being very impressive. Hans.

Raising a Riot
(British-Color)

So-so British comedy exploiting Kenneth More's personality; only limited b.o. prospects.

London, March 8.

British Lion release of London Films-Wessex Film production. Stars Kenneth More; features Ronald Squire, Mandy Miller. Directed by Wendy Toye. Screenplay by Ian Dalrymple, Hugh Perceval, James Matthews, from novel by Alfred Toombs; camera, Christopher Challis, editor, Albert Rule; music, Bruce Montgomery. At Plaza, London, Feb. 21, Running time, 91 MINS.

Tony	Kenneth More
Mary	Shelagh Fraser
Anne	Mandy Miller
Peter	Gary Billings
Fusty	Fusty Bentine
Grampy	Ronald Squire
Aunt Maud	Olga Lindo
Harry	Lionel Murton
Jacqueline	Mary Laura Wood
Sue	Jan Miller

The main purpose of "Raising a Riot" appears to be to exploit the personality of Kenneth More. This British star, with two major comedy hits ("Genevieve" and "Doctor in the House") to his credit, has become a major b.o. name here and this pic is nothing more than a frank admit to cash in on that. The trouble with the film is that it lacks anything like a story. It is just a single situation, moderately amusing in parts, but totally inadequate to sustain a feature pic. It has only mild b.o. outlook in th U. S.

More manages to cope with his three children while his wife goes to Canada is the basis of the yarn. They move into his father's converted windmill and from that point onwards the action illustrates the way in which the mischievous trio are constantly in and out of trouble. As completely irrelevant side issues, there is some feuding with American neighbors and a kids' tea party.

Within the strict limitations imposed by the script, the star does remarkably well. More's timing is flawless and his keen sense of humor is never allowed to flag. The three youngsters are nicely played by Mandy Miller, Gary Billings and Fusty Bentine. Ronald Squire gives some polish to his role of Gramp while Olga Lindo is admirable in a bit role as a maided aunt. Wendy Toye's direction keeps the fable rolling but she cannot disguise the fact that there is basically no plot. Other technical credits are standard. Myro.

Reade's Suggestion Box

Oakhurst, N. J., March 15.

Walter Reade Theatres, which has its headquarters here, has instituted an employee suggestion box for the circuit.

According to proxy Walter Reade Jr., cash awards up to $250 will be given employees for their ideas which will increase revenue, encourage savings, promote safety, increase attendance or better the operation of the theatres. All employees, including managers, will be eligible to participate.

Limit COMPO to Public Relations

Allied Cites Letter of Pat McGee of Denver as Going Beyond Assigned Sphere of Organization

Allied States Assn.'s resolution condemning the use of the name of COMPO by regional units has been misunderstood according to Allied general counsel, Abram F. Myers. According to Myers in a bulletin outlining in detail the Allied action, Allied's only intention was to prevent use of the name of COMPO by groups functioning "outside the public relations field to which National COMPO is restricted."

Myers points out that Allied's move was prompted by a letter sent out by Pat McGee in the Rocky Mountain area soliciting membership in Rocky Mountain COMPO. In the letter, Myers quotes McGee as saying: "We have been in contact with film company sales managers who express confidence in me personally to the point that they promise to review any unhappy sales contract for any exhibitor if I think he needs aid. This is your avenue to go beyond branch and division if you are not happy with your present treatment."

Myers charges that this project "is at war with the principles on which COMPO was founded. He says the founders of COMPO "were careful to provide that that organization should not invade the field or usurp the functions of the established exhibitor organizations."

Allied's resolution also brought a response from Texas COMPO, of which Col. H. A. Cole, an Allied leader, is a member. Kyle Rorex, executive director of Texas COMPO, issued a statement in which Cole defended Texas COMPO. The statement surprised Allied inasmuch as Col. Cole was present when the Allied resolution was discussed and it was pointed out at the time that Texas COMPO was not the group under discussion.

According to Myers, Rorex did not reply to a letter of explanation and did not alter his release. "As a result," Myers notes, "Allied has been embarrassed by trade paper stories indicating a split between it and one of its most distinguished leaders. Except for this, and the fact that Rorex dragged in Texas COMPO when the resolution did not apply to it, the Rorex incident is unimportant."

LOTS' WAGE AVERAGE FOR JAN. $129.81

Sacramento, March 15.

Hourly workers on Hollywood's film lots drew average weekly wages amounting to $129.81 during the month of January, a slight drop from December's $130.99 but a healthy increase over the $116.84 recorded in January of the preceding year.

According to the California Labor Statistics Bulletin the men worked an average of 43.4 hours per week at $2.99 an hour.

450 Attend 3d Texas Drive-In Owners Meet

Dallas, March 15.

More than 450 drive-in owners and managers attended the third annual convention of Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners Assn. here last week. Jack Farr, prez of group, opened the confab. Keynote address was given by Spyros Skouras, head of 20th-Fox. Others spoke at the session on "Problems of Toll TV," "Widescreen, Enlarging and Construction." "Technical Advancements in Projection and Sound for Drive-In Theatres," "New Research Developments on Drive-Ins," and "Latest innovations in Concession Merchandising and Equipment."

One day was devoted to a clinic for small drive-in operators, with J. B. Beeson as moderator, and the other for large city owners, by Ed Green.

St. Louis, March 15.

Colonial Theatre in Manchester, Mo., was damaged $8,000 by fire of undetermined origin last week. Fire apparatus from three nearby communities was summoned to battle the blaze. The theatre has been shuttered for months. Two adjoining store buildings also were damaged.

Elderly Ticket Men

Minneapolis, March 15.

Elderly men, whom commerce is prone to ignore, are finding theatres here an employment haven.

United Paramount's "A" firstrun State, for example, believes it may have the world's two oldest doormen ticket takers.

They're John Hickey, 83, and Andrew Murdock, 81, and neither has missed a day during their two and more years service.

Except for a half-hour mealtime relief, they're on their feet taking tickets for five and a half hour stretches.

Another such theatre doorman, at the independent loop firstrun Gopher, died recently at the age of 85.

Iowa Accident Alerts Drive-Ins On Auto Fumes

Des Moines, March 15.

A statement by the Polk County sheriff that carbon monoxide gas inhaled while watching a drive-in film with the car engine running "may have been a factor" in a bad car-bus accident here, was discounted by the Polk county coroner.

A couple with their four children in the car had just left the season's opening night at a drive-in theatre on the edge of town and the accident occurred about a half-mile from the theatre exit. One of the investigating deputies said, "The kids in that car were painfully hurt — yet all they wanted to do was to sleep and anyone knows kids would be upset and crying at a time like that." The investigating officers were inclined to believe the statement of the father after the crash that he "didn't remember a thing" between the time he drove from the theatre until after the accident. An investigation revealed the car windows were tightly closed during the showing and the motor running to help keep the occupants warm, and in a letter to the state safety commissioner the county sheriff said that cars at a drive-in are close enough it would be possible for the heater fan of one to draw in exhaust fumes from a car in front. He suggested that highway patrolmen throughout the state alert drive-in theatre operators to the dangers of permitting patrons to view features in closed cars with engines running.

In his later statement the county coroner said his examination of the occupants revealed no symptoms attributable to carbon monoxide gas poisoning but he said, "I do agree that the sheriff's point is well taken concerning the danger of sitting for long periods of time in a closed car with the engine running."

GUESSING THE OSCARS, CIRCUIT—DAILY TIE

Asbury Park, March 15.

Walter Reade Theatres in Monmouth and Ocean Counties in New Jersey have tied in with the Asbury Park Press, daily newspaper with a 30,000 circulation in the Jersey shore area, to conduct a contest in which the public has been invited to guess the winners of the upcoming Academy Awards.

Circuit prexy Walter Reade Jr. said that the nine theatres currently operating in the two counties will post a total of $500 in cash prizes to be split among the winners. Contest is the same one Texas COMPO has conducted for several years and now has made available to theatres throughout the country.

Hail Hersholt's 50th

Hollywood, March 15.

Execs, screen personalities and the press joined in a testimonial luncheon on the Paramount lot today (Tues.) for Jean Hersholt on the occasion of his 50th anniversary as an actor. He started in his native Denmark in 1905, and 10 years later began work for the Thomas H. Ince Company in the U. S.

Hersholt has a featured spot in Par's "Run for Cover," recently completed. It's his 453d film and the first in 17 years in which he doesn't play a medic role.

Norman E. Sprowl, former Army colonel, has been appointed advertising manager of Durwood circuit headquartering in Kansas City.

Who'll Get Escrowed 'Breakage' Funds? N. Y. Challenge Is Legally Tricky

Albany, March 15.

New York City theatres are probably hoping for a "windfall" if the Court of Appeals upholds the Appellate Division, Second Department, in invalidating that part of the 1954 local ordinance providing for collection of "breakage"—any fraction of one-half or more—in the five percent admission amusement tax. So Stanley Buchsbaum, assistant corporation counsel, indicated outside the court, before arguments recently on New York's appeal.

Buchsbaum did not make the assertion in court, although he did discuss—in answer to a question by Judge Charles W. Froessel—the disposition of the money now held in escrow by theatres, should the State's highest tribunal rule out the controversial breakage. Buchsbaum replied that if patrons kept their stubs, they could obtain refunds. He appeared to believe there would not be too many persons retaining the half-tickets.

It would then be for the courts to decide what disposition should be made of the overage. In the past, Buchsbaum continued, the courts usually had held that where a tax had been illegally or improperly collected, and the money could not be returned to individuals or companies, it should go to the tax collecting authority. This would be New York City, in this instance.

Litigation would be necessary to determine the point. Court attaches were under the impression that the matter in relation to a penny tax had not been presented to tribunals for decision; that cases on record cover larger taxes, such as on meat processing and breweries (under the A.A.A.).

Attorneys representing New York City exhibitors, Edward C. Raftery, of O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery, for RKO-Keith-Orpheum Theatres, Inc., and Thomas Bress, for Loew's, stressed to the Court of Appeals that the disputed breakage money is being held by theatres in separate funds. Bress pointed out that the amount for the Loew circuit, which he described as one of the largest in the metropolis, had reached about $25,000 six months.

Confliction of Authority

The two attorneys attacked not only the legality of New York's collecting the major fractions but also the constitutionality of the admission levy statute. They insisted it conflicted with the city licensing law; underlined the peril to which it exposed theatres—possible loss of license. This, because theatres are now collecting not only the admission price and the federal tax but likewise the city levy. Buchsbaum scoffed at "danger" to theatres, citing, among other reasons, the fact the license commissioner had specifically stated no action would be taken by him against any theatre collecting the municipal impost.

In the arguments ranging over a wide area—whether retention by th City of New York of major fractions was in line with general tax procedure, banking and business customs, what was the intent of the Legislature in passing the 1947 enabling act, what would be the exact maximum percentage the metropolis could collect if it did not take the major fractions, whether tokens were practical for fractions—the contending attorneys considered the new bill, sponsored by the Assembly Rules committee, to authorize collection of breakage by cities and to make it retroactive to July 1, 1954, in the case of the New York admission tax.

Buchsbaum said that the measure came not only from New York City but also from the Conference of Mayors, the latter being fearful of an adverse ruling by the Court of Appeals on upstate cities with amusement and sales taxes. Binghamton and Elmira have 5 per cent admission levies, he said.

Dept. of Coincidence

Columbus, March 15.

There was a momentary nonplusses situation at the registration desk of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio convention last week when Frank J. Slavik, owner of the Capital in Mount Gilead, and Frank J. Slavik, owner of the Mu-Mac Theatre in Middlefield, turned up to register at nearly the same time.

They are not related and had never met each other.

Woo Conservative Church Folk To Patronize 'Peter'

Impressed with the response to "Martin Luther" last year, 20th-Fox is currently engaged in a major effort to rally Protestant groups behind its "A Man Called Peter," the story of Peter Marshall, former chaplain of the U. S. Senate. Pic preems at the Roxy, N. Y., March 31 as a Red Cross benefit.

Company's aim is to attract the churchgoing crowd that doesn't usually attend theatres. In line with this, advance screenings of pic are being arranged in some 60 cities for religious and civic leaders and other opinion moulders. It's expected that they'll spread the word about the spiritual and entertainment qualities of the film on which 20th has set a basic ad budget of $500,000.

Included in this are the religious mags and religious radio and tv programs whose readers and audience might not ordinarily read about "Peter" in the amusement pages of the regular newspapers.

"Man Called Peter" is slotted for the Roxy Theatre, N. Y., two weeks before Easter. It'll open in another 300 spots all over the country during the holiday. 20th had another Protestant pic some years ago in "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain." It told about a circuit-riding preacher in the south.

Final experience 20th has with "Peter" is expected to constitute an important guide to other producers on whether or not Protestant themes can be made to pay off via support of religious groups interested in this type pix. Protestant leaders from time to time have complained about Hollywood's inclination towards Catholic themes. However, it's pointed out, the Catholics are a well organized group that gladly and effcctively supports films with themes of which the Church strongly approves.

MANDATORY MONDAY HOLIDAY EXPIRES

Montpelier, Vt., March 15.

A bill which would have an indirect and possibly adverse effect on theatre attendance by providing four long weekends each year has been allowed to die in the State Senate here.

The controversial measure would have made four non-religious holidays fall on Monday every year. It had been vigorously supported by various business groups.

Does Mrs. Binford Influence Papa?

Memphis, March 15.

More about Lloyd T. Binford, the town's 88-year old censor. This time a bunch of the press boys wanted to get Binford on a tv interview over WHBQ. Binford's "health" became very uncertain as he got advance intimations of some of the off-the-cuff questions the journalists had in mind.

When Leo Soroko of the UP in a "pre-trial run" with Binford asked "Do you ever consult Mrs. Binford on pictures you ban?", the censor got real sick fast and called whole thing off. But when Soroko withdrew from the panel, Binford's health snapped back and he went on the air, reading prepared formal answers to many of the questions.

Switch to NBC Hinges on Whether WW and RCA Can 'Live Together'

Walter Winchell may meet with the NBC echelon on a possible shiftover to that network, following his breakaway from the American Broadcasting Co. after 23 years, but RCA spokesmen "on the 53d floor" (parent company's ivory tower) would first have to be "sold." It is no secret that RCA's vast business with the Government doesn't brook any commentator on its affiliated NBC possibly offending somebody in Washington. This is said to be the major hurdle.

Winchell, of course, wants an untrammeled mike, as he has a free typewriter with the Hearst Corp. (N. Y. Daily Mirror and King Features Syndicate).

The columnist-commentator recalls that when CBS was flirting with him back in the old Blue Network (WJZ) days, prexy Mark Woods and veepee Robert E. Kintner countered with the same $520,000-per-annum offer. Winchell says they told him "I was the only asset they have" and met the same $10,000 a week, 52 weeks, for 47 weeks' work.

When the Hearst Corp. wanted the N. Y. Post libel suit settled (see herewith story), ABC went along. Both the publisher, the network and Gruen Watch Co. (a previous sponsor) made public apology this past Monday (14) in the press and over the air. Some $30,000 in court costs and legal fees are to be paid by Winchell, Hearst, ABC, & Co., as part of the settlement.

This is when Winchell discovered he was not indemnified as to "punitive damages," and complained to Leonard H. Goldenson, president of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., that "I could have bought $2,000,000 worth of that kind of insurance and written it off as a legitimate expense but nobody told me."

Still on Tap For Sponsors

While Winchell asked for immediate release from ABC, it was clarified by the network and the newscaster that this didn't play to his sponsors and/or ad agencies (D'Arcy for Philly and Webster cigars and McCann-Erickson for Gem Razor). Winchell added that if both wanted him for additional semesters after June 19, when the cycle renewal is due, he'll certain stay on because "I've never walked out on a contract in my life." He added that this also applies to ABC because it doesn't mean he'd "never work over ABC," since obviously a sponsor's time commitment is paramount. However, he was reminded by the network that "we (ABC) do not buy commentators unless we control them." (This, of course, falls within the orbit of all program controls, intra-network censorship standards, legal, etc.).

Down for The Count

ABC-TV's acquisition of the Pabst "Blue-Ribbon Bouts" has brought with it a major clearance headache in New York. The network hasn't any of its own preemption problems in the Wednesday at 10 time, since it goes dark at that time. Locally, however flagship, WABC-TV in New York airs "Eddie Cantor Comedy Theatre" at 10:30 on Wednesdays.

Problem lies in the fact that "Cantor" is sponsored under a firm 52-week deal—by Ballantine's, one of Pabst's hottest competitors. Pabst will insist on a Gotham preemption, and Ballantine's will do all it can to keep the time.

Pabst Switch May KO Monday Bouts, ABC Boxing Center

Moveover of the "Pabst Blue Ribbon Bouts" from CBS-TV to ABC-TV may cause the demise of the Eastern Parkway Arena as a television boxing center. If it doesn't, ABC will get the Eastern Parkway Monday night bouts at probably the lowest package price ever. Web had started renegotiation of the Parkway contract, which expires May 10, a couple of weeks ago with the demand that the web get the fights free of charge. With the Pabst Wednesday bouts in tow, the web will either be able to press the demand successfully or will drop the fights altogether and suffer no loss in terms of having boxing on the network.

Pabst moveover, which must have surprised even ABC-TV, came on the heels of a conflict over time with CBS. Pabst was annoyed at its once-a-month preemption by Westinghouse and "The Best of Broadway," and when CBS wanted to cut into the time even further, Pabst and Warwick & Legler flew the coop over to ABC. CBS had demanded that Pabst television fights two weeks out of three next season, and also sponsor the full 10-11 hour instead of 45 minutes or to-conclusion as previously. ABC-TV is giving Pabst every-week exposure on a 45-minutes or to-conclusion basis. Switch, after five years on CBS, takes place on June 1, with the Chicago branch of the International Boxing Club, which promotes the multi-originating bouts, planning a championship match for the date.

Feather in ABC's cap puts it into a top bargaining position with Joe Arata, Eastern Parkway promoter. Though Arata said last week that he can have his ABC-TV renewal "at any time," fact is that the web came close to dropping the fights a week ago, when it made its no-program-payment demand. Negotiations continued, however, with the network presumably willing to compromise. Now that it's got the Wednesday fights, it can press for-free demand on Arata, under the argument that without tv Eastern Parkway would have tough b.o. sledding. Web has carried the fights on a co-op basis, so no single big sponsorship coin would be involved in a cancellation.

Lehn & Fink To Axe Bolger Show

Ray Bolger is the latest casualty in the tv programming sweepstakes. His half-hour ABC-TV vidpix series is being cancelled by Lehn & Fink at the end of its 39-week cycle in June. Client has bought the "I Love Lucy" Sunday at 6 p. m. reruns on CBS-TV, which start April 17, and plans additional tv coin investitures for next season.

Bolger show, a costly one ($40,000 gross per installment, exclusive of time) never got off the ground, in the opinion of the client, and suffered in the competitive rating story. Whether Bolger will continue in vidpix beyond this season is problematical.

14 CP TELETHONS FETCH $2,000,000

United Cerebral Palsy has chalked up an approximated $2,000,000 from 14 telethons since last October, when the last major count was made. The last CP telethon, over KGEO-TV, Enid, Okla., netted the charity $50,000.

UCP telethon department is currently handled by Jeanne A. Anderson, with Mary Lee Morse in charge of talent.

GARRY MOORE'S RADIO SHOW—IF SPONSORED

Some client interest is reportedly being displayed in a prospective cross-the-board radio show headed by Garry Moore on CBS. The network is anxious to put its tv daytime comic into a digest type of series similar to Arthur Godfrey's which would slot him in a 7:30 p.m. quarter-hour during the summer. It might get a showcase earlier, depending on when Longines takes it hiatus from the slot with its "Choraliers" show.

Format would draw highlights from Moore's video series. If a sponsor doesn't show up, it's no go for Garry.

Winchell Retractions Settle N.Y. Post's Suits

Walter Winchell and the N. Y. Post patched up their differences over the weekend in a settlement of the newspaper's and editor James A. Wechsler's $1,525,000 libel suits against the columnist-commentator. Terms of the settlement were a public apology by Winchell, in print and on the air, for his remarks linking the Post and Wechsler with Communism, and payment to the plaintiffs of $30,000 in attorneys' fees.

Statement of apology, which Winchell aired on his Sunday night ABC simulcast and which was printed in the New York Daily Mirror and other Hearst papers, was as follows:

"Walter Winchell has authorized the editor to state that he never said or meant to say in the Mirror and over the air that the N. Y. Post, or its publisher, or Mr. James A. Wechsler, its editor, are Communists or sympathetic to communism. If anything which Mr. Winchell said was so construed, he regrets and withdraws it. The Mirror, too, wishes to retract any statement which was subject to such construction.

"Diverse litigation now pending between the Post and its editor, and the Hearst Corp., ABC and Mr. Winchell has been discontinued by all parties, thus ending a lengthy controversy."

Other terms of the settlement were the discontinuation of Winchell's countersuit against the Post, publisher Dorothy Schiff and editor Wechsler; and a request by King Features, which syndicates Winchell's column, for newspapers which carry the column to publish the retraction. The Post's suit, which charged Winchell with defaming the Post and its editor in a malicious effort to make it lose

Chrysler May Get CBS-TV Pabst Slot

CBS-TV is angling to have the Chrysler Corp. take over the Pabst Wednesday 10 to 11 p.m. fitecast. Time in the beer outfit's switch to "same day, same slot" on ABC-TV. This would open up automaker's 8:30-9:30 "Climax"-"Shower of Stars" Thursday nighter. Chrysler would get a major dramatic showcaser of name talent values under web preparation. Columbia brass look longingly on ABC's "U. S. Steel Hour" to fill the opened-up Thursday spot, with bids known to be going on.

CBS-TV was taking no chance last week on its position being lost in the shuffle. With News Alliance, serving Pabst, going to bat pronto with information to the press, web prexy J. L. Van Volkenburg followed with a memorandum stating the case for CBS, but this was cir-

ROEBURT: MAN OF ACTION

'Barrie Craig' Scripter Breaks Out In Rash of Telepix Stints

John Roeburt, whose principal activity over the past four years has been his head writer post on the William Gargan "Barrie Craig, Confidential Investigator" NBC Radio series, has broken out in a rash of telepix scripts. He's been pacted to turn out 13 half-hours for "The Vise," being shot by the Danzigers in Britain for telecasting on ABC-TV, and his "The Long Count" is currently in production by Four Star Productions for its CBS-TV "Stage 7." George Brandt and Alan Neuman have optioned the New York cabdriver of Roeburt's "Jigger Moran" novels for an upcoming telepix series, and to top it all off, he's contracted with Simon & Schuster for publication of a new novel, "The Cold Space," and has had his last book, "The Hollow Man," published in England by Jarrold's.

"Craig" radio series, incidentally, has just been repacted for another 13 weeks.

VINCE FRANCIS' NEW POST

ABC-TV has tapped Vince Francis, sales manager of KGO-TV, its o&o in San Francisco, for the new post of western division sales manager. Post was created because of the growth of the agency business on the Coast.

Seven Up on AFTRA Carpet

New York local of the American Federation of TV-Radio Artists will be asked to vote on a resolution next Tuesday (22) condemning seven members. Latter are Jean Hayworth, Vinton Hayworth, William Keene, Richard Keith, William Neil, Ned Wever and Leigh Whipper. They are listed as board members of Aware, Inc., which last December "publicly and scandalously attacked an entire (independent) slate of candidates for AFTRA office," accusing them of association with "'the Communist-front apparatus" by the now familiar smear methods of inference and innuendo from alleged 'public records.'"

Petition makes a number of other accusations against the seven and urges that Aware, Inc. "be condemned for interfering in the internal affairs of our union" and that the septet be required to "disavow the inflammatory attacks" that appear in the Aware publication as "dangerous practice and precedent."

The Aware "blacklist" was circulated last Dec. 27 by an organization whose stated aim is "to combat the Communist conspiracy in entertainment communications" and listed 26 independent candidates of which "at least 13 have what are considered significant public records in connection with the Communist-front apparatus" and "still others of the 26 have what may be less significant records." This slate was defeated.

A bulletin sent out March 2 by Alex McKee, N.Y. AFTRA executive secretary, referred to the then proposed resolution as a violation of the union's constitution. It suggested certain revisions to conform to the local's constitutional requirement, and apparently these were made to enable the document to be presented next Tuesday (22) at the Astor Hotel at 8 p.m.

(Of the seven AFTRA members involved in Aware, Inc., Vinton Hayworth is first v.p. of the national AFTRA, member of the national board, and N.Y. board member; Ned Wever, national boardsman; William Keene, N.Y. board; the others are lay AFTRAns with Richard Keith the treasurer of Aware.)

The Gangup on 'Our Gang'

What Happens When Rival Syndicators Have Split Control of Successful Shorts

Gertie & Marilyn Pix

One of the few films the late Gertrude Lawrence ever made is included in the WCBS-TV acquisition of "top product" for "first N. Y. telecast." It's "Mimi" (Alliance), produced in 1935 and costarring Douglas Fairbanks Jr.

The distrib is Standard TV, which also has turned over "Love Happy," United Artists 1950 film starring the Marx Bros., Vera-Ellen and Ilona Massey and with Marilyn Monroe doing a bit. Both will kick off in July.

There are now two separate syndicators selling Hal Roach's old "Our Gang" theatrical shorts to video. Interstate Television controls 92 and Onyx Pictures another 52. This has benefitted at least four television stations in the country and created a hotly competitive programming situation among at least twice that number elsewhere. Furthermore, the split control seems to have put the two distribs at each other's throats in efforts to collect new accounts.

Interstate has been selling its 92 for the better part of a year, and the package—dubbed "Little Rascals"—has pulled phenomenal ratings in nearly every one of the 35 or 40 markets in which it has been playing. Onyx started selling about four months ago, shortly after purchasing 52 others of the Roach comedy shorts. In San Francisco, Detroit, Cleveland and New York the same stations bought both packages, enabling them to add more variety to the already highly regarded Interstate pix. This way viewers wouldn't so easily tire from excessive repeats.

However, matters were not so pleasantly resolved in five other markets to date. In these areas,

Feature Pix-Happy WCBS Grabs New Batch (6½G Per)

WCBS-TV has leased one large package and several smaller bundles of feature films representing the largest per-pic outlay to date for the CBS flagship in New York. Group of a dozen films distributed by Hygo tv date from 1942 forward and include strong title and player values—in some ways comparable to General Teleradio's "Million Dollar Movie" big click seen in N. Y. over WOR-TV.

It's understood the average price per title is well over the $6,500 mark. Included in the array are seven original Universal strongies now on the homescreen market — "Smashup" ('47), with Susan Hayward and Lee Bowman; "Salome, Where She Danced" ('45), Yvonne de Carlo; "Gung Ho" ('44), Randolph Scott; "Ladies Courageous" ('44), Loretta Young, Geraldine Fitzgerald; "Night in Paradise" ('46), Merle Oberon, Turhan Bey; "We've Never Been Licked" ('43), Richard Quinn, Noah Beery; and "Eagle Squadron" ('42), Robert Stack, Eddie Albert, Diana Barrymore.

The others from Hygo are "Outpost Morocco" (United Artists,

BETTY CLOONEY TO ROBERT Q. TV'ER

Robert Q. Lewis has negotiated a deal whereby he acquires Betty Clooney as a permanent member of his cross-the-board CBS-TV show. Miss Clooney was formerly on the Jack Paar "Morning Show" but is being displaced on that stanza by Edith Adams.

Checkout of Jaye P. Morgan from the Robert Q. crossboarder left him without a femme singer, hence the nod to Miss Clooney.

DuMont to Axe 'Captain Video'

"Captain Video," the oldest commercial video stanza on the DuMont network, comes to an end, at least in its present live condition, on April 1. Juve adventure strip, which for so long was one of the surest coin collectors on the web, is currently down to its last one-day-a-week bankroller.

For the record, DuMont was asking somewhere in the vicinity of $2,400 per 15-minute show, but as time went on and billings decreased the figure dropped. The entire strip was costing an estimated $5,000 a week to the network. Though the DuMont network was forced to axe the show in order to minimize operating expenses, it's understood that the science-for-juves airer is among the programs being mulled for the new—and as yet undefined—film camera setup the web is preparing.

Learned last week was that Miles Labs was also making its DuMont defection on April 1. The drug firm is dropping the four-station Morgan Beatty news cross-the-boarder on that date after a short ride this season.

WABD, the DuMont N. Y. key, is losing a major account just one day earlier. On March 31, Coca Cola Bottling drops "Finders Keepers," an audience participation stanza.

CBS' TV CITY FOR PARK AVE.?

No Whimsy in This Barrie Story

Not all is fairly dust and sunshine for NBC in the aftermath glow of last week's "Peter Pan" tv performance. For if the network hopes to do a repeat performance on a live basis (and that's the only way it can do it, since Walt Disney holds the film rights which automatically rules out a kinescope rerun), it will cost NBC a neat $50,000 for the privilege, over and above the costs of putting on the show itself. So rules the Sir James Barrie estate.

On the day of the tv performance, NBC had an opportunity of picking up an option for the repeat at $12,500. NBC did nothing about it and allowed the option to lapse. Came the critical "best thing ever" plaudits and by Wednesday, when NBC decided to do something about it, the Barrie estate had jacked up the repeat rights to 50G. Jaffe & Jaffe, the theatrical lawyers representing NBC and who are prominently identified with NBC-TV programming, stepped in, but the best whittling-down they could accomplish was "three repeats for $100,000."

NBC meanwhile, is storing scenery, costumes, script, score and flying gear in the hopes of a revival. There is talk, also, of a possible stage revival of the show for a few weeks annually, a la the London tradition of Christmas pantomimes.

Miss Martin, producer-husband Richard Halliday and actress-daughter Heller Halliday sail in a day or two for a 60-day cruise to South America, on the maiden voyage of the new Norwegian freighter, Montevideo. They will be the only passengers

Noxzema Just a Big 'PP' Itch

Those 'Pimply Gal' Comm'ls Rub 'Person to Person' Wrong Way

Noxzema has become a thorn in the side of "Person to Person"—or "itch" as one of the show's executives put it. The sunburn and complexion sponsor came aboard the CBS-TV Friday nighter toward the end of last season as a skip-weeker (staying on past the summer) and there's been friction ever since. Once there was an objection to a "pimply gal" on the commercial; another time there was a clash on request to use three of the program's cameras for a live plug innovation.

There's been a series of irritants—major and minor—but what it amounts to is that "P to P" is not too enthusiastic about the sponsor as a type, since quite a few prospective personalities who are working the same or similar side of the street (heads of beauty culture and cosmetic houses, etc.) would naturally nix an appearance (which is on the cuff to begin with). Curiously, the "PP" staff works up the guest attractions without regard to whether Noxzema is skedded on a given Friday.

The show would, of course, prefer to have Amoco take over week-to-week (as in the beginning, with Hamm Beer cut in as the midwest sponsor), but the oil outfit had to pull in its horns and hence the split sponsorship. Even the beer setup poses an occasional problem of "sensitivity" with guests though up to this point there apparently

Lotsa Schnoz For Texaco (30 Shows)

Hollywood, March 15.

Jimmy Durante will telecast 30 programs for Texaco next season, 15 live and 15 on film. Deal closed by the William Morris office with Myron Kirk of the Kudner agency, calls for three weeks out of every four with an NBC tinted spectacular once a month. Oil company will pay $52,500 for every half-hour program.

Reason for Durante's solo agreement was that Texaco dropped Donald O'Connor and failed to negotiate an alternating deal with Bob Hope.

'Pix & Video Too Much'

Hollywood, March 15.

Donald O'Connor, whose tv deal with Texaco has ended, says he may skip next year except for an occasional guest spot, and that "I may not do any tv at all."

O'Connor, whose refusal to film 19 shows next season for Texaco resulted in the sponsor and star parting, explained: "I found doing pictures and television both is just too much. You can't concentrate on both fully, it's too difficult."

P&G Shares 'Lineup'

Procter & Gamble continues on its "I Love Rotation" upbeat by joining Brown & Williamson Cigs as the alternating sponsor on CBS-TV's "The Lineup." Soap outfit will plug its Cheer on the Friday vidpix series when it comes aboard April 1.

Young & Rubicam made deal.

CBS-TV to P&G: No Soap on Full 'Lucy' Sponsorship

Decision of CBS and Desilu Productions (which is an adjunct of the CBS family) to permit General Foods to pick up the alternate-week sponsorship of "I Love Lucy" being vacated by Philip Morris, isn't resting too well with Procter & Gamble, which bankrolls the other half of the show. When P & G got wind of the fact that the ciggie company was pulling out at the termination of the season, the soap outfit had fully expected that it would be in a position to step in and take over full sponsorship of the toprated show.

CBS, however, was under an obligation. A few years back when the network pacted GF to a commitment on the 9:30 to 10 Monday night period (even before "Lucy" moved into the preceding 9-9:30 segment), it was with the understanding that GF would have first option on the 9 o'clock time when it opened up. A few months back P & G negotiated a deal with Philip Morris and Desilu whereby it would move in on a co-sponsorship basis. (About the same time it made a similar deal on "This Is Your Life" and "My Favorite Husband.") With PM pulling out, P & G felt that it was entitled to first crack at full 30-minute sponsorship of "Lucy." On the other hand, GF pointed to its original

LORRE & SULLIVAN TO ROLL ON PILOT

Pilot will get rolling early in April on the new comedy drama tv film series for Peter Lorre, in which the latter will team up with Francis L. Sullivan, currently in the "Witness for the Prosecution" legiter. This is the Jonas Silverstone-Lorre package designed for network slotting next season with NBC already manifesting interest.

Pilot will be shot on the Coast when Sullivan takes a week off from the legiter first week in April.

'DREAM HOUSE' TO OUTBUILD NBC

By GEORGE ROSEN

From all indications the race is on between NBC and CBS for the bestest with the mostest TV City in the east, with the hot and heavy rivalry between the two networks apparently seeping down into the blueprints for their projected "headquarters of tomorrow."

It's been learned that CBS is currently in process of negotiating for property acquisition which may result in the Columbia operation moving lock, stock and barrel out of 485 Madison Ave. to the more exclusive precincts of Park Ave., N. Y. Both CBS board chairman William S. Paley and prexy Frank Stanton, it's reported, are envisioning a "dream building" to top David Sarnoff's NBC-RCA plans.

Stanton, it's been learned, has been negotiating for an entire Park Ave. block across from Lever House (54th St.). The plans call for a dozen studios on the first two floor, with office entrance on Park Ave., and all the web's tv shops (set design, props, etc.) on the Lexington Ave. end of the building. No architect has been assigned as yet, but it's understood that Pereira & Luckman (who were the architects on the CBS TV City project on the Coast) have the inside track. Lease involves over $30,000,000.

It's no secret that both NBC and CBS for some time have been giving serious thought to building for the future and to the pressing problem of alleviating present cramped conditions, not only insofar as studio facilities are concerned but on administrative personnel as well. Studios of the two networks are scattered over the length and breadth of Manhattan, extending even into Brooklyn, where NBC has taken over the ex-Warners studios for its major color originations.

For some time now there's been talk of NBC acquiring the entire block from 50th to 51st St., fronting on Sixth Ave. (diagonally opposite the RCA Bldg.) and extending back to the Roxy theatre on Seventh Ave., as the most likely choice for its TV City. While it's supposedly a hush-hush project, it's understood the blueprints for the project are now getting serious attention.

Who!

Although his identity is strictly a matter for speculation, it's reported that when the CBS stockholders convene for their annual meeting April 20, a prominent member of the CBS Board will submit his resignation.

Meanwhile, it's understood that veepee stripes are scheduled for three CBS-TV execs.

. . . But No 'Lucy'

NBC-TV's "Peter Pan" production March 7 dumped "I Love Lucy" out of the Trendex Top 10 for the first time in years. "Lucy's" 26.1 wasn't nearly enough to make the grade. Top 10, based on the one live telecast during the period March 1-7, follows:

1.	Peter Pan (NBC)	48.0
2.	Jackie Gleason (CBS)	45.0
3.	Toast of the Town (CBS)	38.9
4.	Jack Benny (CBS)	36.1
5.	This Is Your Life (NBC)	34.6
6.	You Bet Your Life (NBC)	33.1
7.	Disneyland (ABC)	33.1
8.	Two for the Money (CBS)	32.6
9.	Bob Hope (NBC)	32.4
10.	Dragnet (NBC)	32.0

'Peter Pan's' 700G Budget Still A Cheap Cost-Per-Thousand Buy; All Show Biz Felt TVer's Impact

NBC-TV program veep Tom McAvity is of the opinion that "after all the returns are in 'Peter Pan,' despite its extraordinary $700,000 (and possibly more) cost, will add up to one of the cheapest shows per dollar expenditure in the history of the medium. Not the cheapest, mind you, but taking an arbitrary 3.5 lookership per set in 20,000,000 television homes we figure we had a conservative 65,000,000 audience." (Parenthetically, McAvity cited a 3.2 audience that some "Disneyland" telecasts have had, because of the juvenile appeal, coming of course at the earlier 7:30 p.m. slot. Naturally, the ABC-TVer doesn't have the saturation that a one-shotter like "Peter Pan" enjoyed, with its progressive buildup campaign.)

Ford and RCA Victor split the costs of the March 7 "Pan" spectacular 50-50 down the middle. Instead of the usual $200,000 budget per "Producer's Showcase," McAvity says the sponsors telescoped the costs of two shows. (Actually show cost came to $422,000; two-hour time another $160,000). The September show, which marks the 13th of the series, was added to the March budget. (If Ford-RCA return in September, then that will be the first of a new cycle, and not the finale of the original concept of once-a-monthers. However, this was a technical contractual detail which was readily resolved.)

Among the hidden but realistic charges were the two preemptions (a $25,000 rebate) for the two 15-minute segments from 7:30-8 p.m. which were added by Ford-RCA to the usual 8-9:30 running time with an eye to the juvenile trade. The first quarter hour Mondays is held down by Toni (Tony Martin) and the 7:45-8 p.m. slot is normally under Camels (news) sponsorship.

28 Cuffo Stations

Over 100 NBC stations were payrolled to carry "Peter Pan" and when the network went out for added facilities it found 28 extra outlets which carried "Pan" as a public service gratis. Normal time facilities, for the basic 100-odd stations, costs $80,000 an hour or 160G for the two-hour stretch.

McAvity and program aide Mike Dann admit there were certain under-the-line costs (extra line costs for color, technical overhead, etc.) which have yet to be totalized.

The costs of both the RCA and

de la Osso's WRCA Exit

Ernest de la Ossa has put in his resignation papers with WRCA (AM & TV), the NBC owned and operated in New York, ankling the post of manager of sales development. Latter berth followed his shift a couple of months ago as manager of the stations which has been absorbed under the veepeeship of Hamilton Shea.

Understood de la Ossa is considering some offers in the broadcasting and related fields.

Bristol-Myers' Nix on Godfrey A Y&R Sore Spot

Decision of the CBS brass to utilize alternate weeks on Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts" for plugging CBS-Columbia sets, starting in the fall, as result of Lipton Tea going every-other-week on the show, isn't sitting too well with Young & Rubicam, which is doing a burn over its failure to land the vacating segments.

Y & R, agency on the Lipton account, tried to move in on the Godfrey show and nab the alternate slots on behalf of another client, Bristol-Myers. Agency feels it rated that kind of consideration since its Lipton client was Godfrey's first major nighttime sponsor dating back to his bigtime emergence in tv.

CBS, however, has other plans. After all, Godfrey's their star salesman; CBS-Columbia sets need a push, and who would be more of a natural to turn the trick than Godfrey? Further, it's understood CBS plans a major color sets campaign in the fall, tieing in with the decision to let Godfrey carry the on-the-air-torch.

'ETHEL & ALBERT' AS 'DEC. BRIDE' TV SUB

"Ethel and Albert" is returning to tv through the hot weather spectrum, with the Peg Lynch-Alan Bunce situationer primed as 15-week summer replacement for the Monday night "December Bride" on CBS. This also switches networks, since "E & A" was halted midway this season as a Saturday 7:30 p. m'er on NBC for Sunbeam.

Series will be on for Maxwell House, via Benton & Bowles, with Procter & Gamble (in the same agency house) putting in an option for the fall. Deal was set by Herb Gottlieb of Ashley-Steiner office.

TV Gets Jackpot-Happy

The giant jackpot teleshows seem to be growing. After the announcement of the $64,000 topper, a new show offering the person answering correct questions an income of $100 weekly for the rest of the contestants' life is now being packaged. Sumner Rosenthal, formerly of the Walt Kramer office is setting up "The Big Moment" which offers this kind of social security. It's being peddled by General Artists Corp.

GAC salesmen are citing the fact that hitting it right on this show is considerably better than winning a lump sum of $1,000,000 since the tax bite would decimate the pot to $110,000. Naturally, since they pay the $100 for the rest of a winner's life, they'd like them to be very old people with weak hearts and an allergy to digitalis.

Buttons Mulling '55-'56 Status

With the status of his Friday night at 8 show for Pontiac still up in the air (and seven weeks to go until option time), Red Buttons, who is under contract to NBC, may join the "rotating comic" pattern next season to get off the "overexposure hook." This is the projected plan whereby major network comics, personalities and even sponsor would shuttle between different time periods (where the competition from other webs is particularly rough) for a succession of one-shots through the season. Plan is to utilize such performers as Milton Berle, Bob Hope, Martha Raye, etc.

Under Buttons' contract with the network, NBC is committed to underwrite a pilot (to the tune of $30,000) on a proposed comedy series for next season, when Buttons feels he's got the right format. In the past four weeks his live entry has undergone a complete transformation into a situation comedy series depicting the trials and tribulations of a tv comic). NBC and the client feel it's a much better property today.

Buttons may originate out of Hollywood next season.

As N. Y. Grows in TV Film Production So Do Problems Besetting Unions

Th N. Y. trade unions in tv filming are beset by a paradox. They are anxious to draw more vidfilm production away from Hollywood, and one of the chief reasons they may be able to do just that is because they come so much more cheaply than Coast laborers. However, Gotham union officials seem just as anxious to stabilize prices by eliminating bidding and undercutting—two factors essential to producer savings in N. Y.

For example, unions like the International Assn. of Theatrical Stage Employees, which controls cameramen in N. Y., diminish the importance of groups which lie outside their province, who, because they are unregulated, are in a position to underbid before tv film producers. IATSE reports that it is slowly cutting away the number of "independent producers"; the vast majority have joined union ranks. Those that haven't are proper fodder for budget-minded producers. Unions find this odious; they want the "only competition to be on the basis of ability."

Some people are inclined to go a step beyond using non-union personnel in their productions. Although none will put it on paper, some producers seem of the opinion that there are unionized craftsmen as well, who will make salary concessions in order to gain steady employment in the East.

For the moment entirely removed from this situation is a second factor, which, it is felt, will ultimately create another kind of headache—for unions on both coasts. Recently, a growing trend has been noted. Several non-affiliated industries (railroads, manufacturers of one kind or another, etc.) have been entering industrial vidfilming. While it is not true of all or even a majority of them according to present reports, there are some industrial firms which are utilizing cameramen, originally hired to lense technological tests and the like, to shoot also for telefilms.

Many of these companies are getting around theatrical union regulations. Also, they've inadvertently taken coin away from producers who are solely in the business of making vidfilm, since the industrial companies are drawing for telepix series on a large library accumulated incidentally over the years via normal industrial endeavor. Some examples of the latter might be: a r.r. which has shot footage as a precaution against false accident lawsuits; an oil firm which has shot films to educate its own employees on latest techniques; an engine manufacturer who has lensed durability tests, etc.

D. C.: Detour Comm'ls.

The "get out of town" fever that has hit a number of NBC-TV programs received a slight commercial jolt in the case of the "Home" show. Cross-boarder femceed by Arlene Francis will be in Washington, D. C., the full week of April 18-22 (thus day and dating "Today" which is invading Detroit during that span).

There'll be no hitch on "Home's" travel pitch, but one little detail has come up to plague the behind-the-scenes masterminds. While the show is in the capital, the participating plugs will have to come from a studio—there's a rule against commercials being blurbed on Government property.

Molly Goldberg Leaves The Bronx for Smalltown Life in Telefilm Series

After a 25-year residence in the East Bronx, "The Goldbergs" is going small-town America. Format of the new "Goldberg" series being filmed for national sale of syndication by Guild Films has Gertrude Berg & Co. as residents of Haverville, a small American town. Instead of the legendary Mrs. Bloom, the next-door neighbor to whom Miss Berg shouts a weekly greeting will be either a Mrs. Murphy or a Mrs. Murray (hasn't been decided yet). Jake Goldberg will still be in the clothing business, running a small wedding dress factory, while Molly will become a clubwoman.

Change has been written into the first script of the series, which went before the cameras Friday (11) at the Biltmore Studios in New York, with Marc Daniels directing and Guild production supervisor Bill Berke in from the Coast on the production end. Cast of the series remains the same, but the switch in locale (after 25 years; "The Goldbergs" started in their E. Tremont Ave. tenement on radio in 1929) is in part prompted by the feeling that giving it a broader Americana base via the smalltown device will enhance its sales and audience prospects.

'Templeton's Alecdotes' As Quarter-Hour Strip

Alec Templeton is being packaged by Allied Productions for a 15-minute radio strip intended for syndication. Blind pianist, who's been away from the sound medium except for guesters, (he had his own show years ago), will pitch music, chatter and interviews under the "Templeton's Alecdotes" tag.

Show is being recorded "on location" at the 88'ers home in Greenwich, Conn., where he was "Person to Personned" by Ed Murrow several months ago on CBS-TV.

'Press' Bags Sen. George

"Meet the Press" has bagged "the No. 3 foreign relations statesman" in the U. S., with Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) to appear on the NBC-TV paneler Sunday (20). Senator George, 77-year-old dean of the Upper House (with 30 years of service), chairs the Foreign Relations Committee.

It's expected that one of the hot subjects will be the senator's refusal this week to accept a copy of the secret Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin Yalta agreement, with the Democrats demanding "publication or secrecy."

Four Star Shoots For Name Writers; Pacts Wodehouse

Hollywood, March 15.

Four Star Productions, seeking to grab a lion's share of the new and expanding international tv film markets, is pacting top-name novelists and short story writers as sales bait.

Initial deal has been made with P. G. Wodehouse, British humorist, who up to now has brushed off all offers for tv film rights to his properties. Deal is for "Uncle Fred Flits By," which already has appeared in 20 leading short story onthologies.

Reason for this all-out drive to procure the rights to famous name scribes, according to Gordon Oliver, company exec, is to gear outfit's product for international sales.

"We are learning, just as major film studios and distributors discovered years ago, that our product must contain a universal appeal if we are to milk it for every bit of potential revenue," Oliver reported.

"Expanding foreign television offers a brand new and rich source of revenue to tv film producers, provided their product is aimed to attract this type of buyer and viewer."

Oliver pointed out that the British, European and Latin filmgoers, who increasingly are now looking to tv for a larger share of their entertainment, have always been as equally impressed with topdrawer authors and playwrights as they are with important castings.

"However," Oliver declared, "the cream of the world's literary contributors have been steering clear of filmed television because they were inclined to believe that the product wasn't equal to their writing. Four Star Productions is baiting big-name authors with quality production.

"No important writer will turn his back on important money for his wares if he can be assured that the medium through which it will be presesnted is equal to his own literary standards. I think Four Star has proven we can fulfill such demands. That is why the barrier is now down and we are succeeding in making deals with writers of Wodehouse's status."

Second outstanding literary name to be converted to telepix via Four Star is Kathleen Norris, whose story, "The Lie," was on "The Star and the Story" series telecast

CBS-TV Films Goes to War

CBS Television Film Sales has been having more than its share of production troubles with its upcoming "Navy Log" series, pilot of which is currently in the works. Producer-packager Sam Gallou planed to the Coast over the weekend to start filming interiors of the pilot, after a nightmarish two-Coast location job that saw (1) crash-landing of the Navy plane bearing the pilot's negatives from the flattop U.S.S. Hancock to San Diego and (2) an extreme case of "bends" that almost proved fatal to a diver in shooting of underwater scenes off Key West.

Pilot script in the series, being produced in cooperation with the Navy, is about frogmen working off an aircraft carrier. Carrier used, in the Pacific, was the Hancock, which when sequences where completed used a catapult-type plane to send the negatives back to Hollywood. Director Bud Andrews, who's also unit manager for Joel Malone, physical producer of the show, was in the plane, and when it developed landing gear trouble, he hugged the negatives for dear life. When a belly-landing in the water was proposed, he nixed it, asking the pilot to first fly over the beaches so he could safely dump the film. This was done, but caused a loss of fuel that made the water landing impossible. The Navy pilot brought the plane into San Diego on one wheel, practically wrecking the ship, but Andrews, the crew and the film were fortunately uninjured.

In the Key West shooting, done jointly by the Navy (which contributed a Snorkel sub) and the Malone production outfit, divers were employed to portray the frogmen extricating equipment from a sunken wreck. One of the divers got his gear caught in the wreck and couldn't extricate it, so he had to cut it loose and shoot up to the surface without benefit of his equipment, from a depth of 100 feet. Acute case of bends was near-fatal, but he pulled through okay.

If this is just the pilot, what's going to happen when the series really gets under way?

TV Distribs Vexed As H'wood Studios Jack Up Their Prices for Features

Success stories about feature films turned over to video (a la General Teleradio and the Bank of America 30 features) is just what the vidfilm distributors, who are in the market for new features for tv, don't want to hear. They say this "propaganda" is causing the Hollywood majors and those indie producers still controlling theatrical pix to go "hog wild" in the prices they're asking. Prices set are disproportionate to expected returns from video distribution.

Agony over prohibitive asking prices is becoming as much a factor the anticipated theatre-to-tv celluloid switch as the recently apparent feeling that "tv is our well-heeled friend," which overcame Hollywood's studios. A look at the $1,350,000 received by the Bank of America from GT has others asking "why can't we get even more?"

Take for instance, the reported $1,400,000 being asked for the 37 or so Pine-Thomas pix. What has most potential buyers angry, it seems, is the fact that few if any of these pix are of the same vintage or star appeal as the Bank 30. Therefore, distribs say that the $1,400,000 is way out of line with the coin that tv stations are willing to supply.

Some of the vidfilm distribs are wagering that it's only a matter of time before the Hollywoodites come to realize the necessity of cutting price demands. The extra-high prices are believed to be the major factor in stopping further deals with Hollywood.

CBS Radio's New Credo: 'Keep Industry Happy'; Strategy on Powwows

CBS Radio is slanting its station and web exec powwows toward the country's industrial centres. This is in line with a newly-ordained policy under which the network's strategic get-togethers are rotated among cities with a strong hold as major manufacturing markets. For instance, the annual meeting of station and network executives will be held this year in Detroit, Sept. 12-14.

New policy and selection of the motor city were announced jointly by network prexy Adrian Murphy and John F. Patt Jr., head of WJR in autotown. Latter chairs the board of the web's affiliates association. The action stemmed from recommendation of a convention panel headed by Charles Caley, prexy of WMBD, Peoria.

Murphy and Patt said that station and network toppers have a two-sided job, programming and business management. Hence, they will be going to Detroit both as "editors" interested in the automobile "as a vital force in American life" and as "sales managers" eager to learn more about an industry that is one of radio's best customers.

Philco's '54 Net Halved By Strike

Philadelphia, March 15.

Net income of Philco Corp. dropped over half in 1954 as the result of the 45-day strike which closed the company's plants during May and June last year, according to the annual report to the stockholders issued jointly by James H. Carmine, president, and William Balderston, chairman of the board.

Sales in 1954 amounted to $349,277,000 as compared with $430,420,000 the previous year, the report stated. The decline was due in part also to the general lag in business during the early months of the year. The reduced level of activity was particularly noticeable in the appliance and consumer durable goods industries.

Net income from operations was $6,769,000 or $1.69 per share of common stock, the major portion of which resulted from operations in the fourth quarter. In 1953, net income was $13,068,000 or $3.43 per common share, in addition to which there was income from the sale of television station WPTZ which amounted to $5,283,000 or $1.43 per common share.

Baptists' $800,000 Splurge on Vidpix

The Southern Baptist Convention, the same religioso group that's building a "radio and television city" in Fort Worth, now plans spending roughly $800,000 yearly on a vidfilm skein. Series, called "This Is the Answer" is based on modern adaptations of biblical parables, first of which was already filmed in tint by Family Films on the Coast.

Rev. Paul M. Stevens, director of radio-tv for the Southern Baptist Convention, was in N. Y. yesterday (Tues.) to make further broadcast plans. He disclosed that the Sabbath "Baptist Hour," heard for a number of years exclusively in the south, will now be heard above the Mason-Dixon line in five NBC stations. The 14-year-old southern show has been and shall remain strictly a sustainer, he explained. However, a group of laymen, who felt it was essential that the radio show hit the northern population, have laid out cash for the NBC sponsorship. This additional radio hookup begins on Sunday (20).

All of the "Answer" half-hours (26 the first year) will be multichromed, with the first one being preemed shortly over the color facilities of WBAP-TV, Fort Worth.

The Forth Worth video plant will cost the Baptist church org an initial $200,000 or more, according to Rev. Stevens. Further outlay will be made when magnetic tape and other new video machinery are marketed.

FCC May Vote Deintermixture

Washington, March 15.

The FCC will inform the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee this week when it files comments on the Plotkin and Jones reports that it is considering possibilities of deintermixture in certain markets to protect UHF stations from VHF competition.

Commissioners have been meeting daily this week to prepare their preliminary report which is due Friday (18). They have been discussing deintermixture possibilities in three types of situations where UHF might be helped by shifting VHF channels.

Most likely of acceptance is deintermixture in certain cities where the only VHF channel assigned has not been granted. By removing VHF channels in these cities from commercial use and substituting UHF all stations would be on an equal competitive footing. There are seven cities where this could be accomplished.

Commission has had deintermixture proposals from UHF applicants in these cities and several are now being considered. Particular attention is centered on a proposal to deintermix in Madison, Wis., where one V and one U are assigned for commercial stations and a second U is earmarked for education. Deintermixture would be achieved here by assigning UHF channels for commercial operations and giving VHF channel to education.

Second type of situation in which deintermixture possibilities are being weighed is in a group of 15 cities allocated two VHF channels but with one still to be granted. Plan here would be to hold these markets to one VHF station each, minimizing effect of VHF competition on UHF stations.

A third situation under study involves a group of cities assigned three VHF channels, one of which is reserved for education. Deintermixture would be accomplished in these markets by providing a third commercial VHF station, shifting education to UHF.

It is likely that deintermixture would be handled on a case to case basis. Possibilities of freezing all channels involved in the three situations is considered remote, however, if the agency decides to institute proceedings to change the status of a VHF channel in a particular community it would be necessary to maintain the status quo until the case is decided.

Regarding recommendations to require nets or to spread affiliations among UHF stations, the Commission is likely to advise congress that an intensive inquiry into network operations would be necessary to establish a basis for such action. Agency may request that financial backing for such a probe, which congress has repeatedly refused, should now be provided.

TV BREEDS A NEW SPECIE

'Lucy' Loves Terry

Neatest trick of the tv year is how "I Love Lucy" has come home to roost in the Terry Clyne camp. Prior to his checkout at the Biow agency (where he controlled the $5,000,000 Bulova billings, which he subsequently took with him to McCann-Erickson), Clyne, as a major officer of the Biow company, doubled into a liaison role between Desilu Productions, Philip Morris and the agency, keeping everybody happy. After Clyne left (1) Philip Morris gave up half of "Lucy" to Procter & Gamble; (2) Biow and PM eventually blew the whole show.

Came the topper when, as a McCann-Erickson factotum, Clyne still had a "Lucy" gleam in his eye. In one fell swoop, Lehn & Fink (Lysol and Dorothy Gray), with $4,000,000 in billings as the payoff, was romanced over from Lennen & Newell on March 1— to sponsor the Sunday afternoon reruns of "Lucy" on CBS-TV starting April 17. It's still Clyne's "baby."

Clyne this week assumed a new status at McC-E, becoming chairman of the Plans Review Board of the New York office. That's the agency's top planning board, which comprises, in addition to Clyne, agency prexy Marion Harper Jr.; exec veepee Emerson Foote; Bob Healy, general manager of the N. Y. office, and Chet Posep, management supervisor.

With about $20,000,000 additional billings brought into the house since the first of the year (Mennen, Bulova, Lehn & Fink, and Esso through the absorption of Marchalk & Pratt agency, McC-E is headed toward $150,000,000 overall billings, about $120,000,000 of which is in domestic biz. Upwards of 50% represents tv billings.

AFL Protests Miami VHF Grant To Cox-Knight-Trammell Combine

Washington, March 15.

American Federation of Labor opposition to grant of Channel 7 in Miami to Cox-Knight-Trammell Biscayne Television Corp, was registered yesterday (Mon.) with the FCC, Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Pointing out that majority of stock in Biscayne is held by James M. Cox's Miami News and John S. Knight's Miami Herald, which also own radio station in Miami, Federation prexy George Meany urged the congressional committees to investigate the danger of monopoly in giving Biscayne the channel.

Meany said his organization "has been concerned for some time over the tendency in the newspaper and radio field towards combinations of large interests which would result in this most important phase of American life—dissemination of news—being in complete control of a few individuals in any given area."

AFL head warned that unless recent trends toward "monopolistic control of news dissemination" are checked, "it is inevitable that there will be an eventual public demand for Government control of news dissemination media, if not for Government ownership."

Biscayne was favored by Examiner Herbert Sharfman in the four-way contest for the channel. A final decision by the Commission is expected soon.

Senate Confirms McConnaughey

Washington, March 15.

As anticipated, President Eisenhower's nomination of George C. McConnaughey as Chairman of the FCC was confirmed yesterday (Mon.) by the Senate. Appointment is for unexpired term of Former Comr. George E. Sterling which ends June 30, 1957.

Despite indicated opposition by some Democrats when he appeared before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, no objection was raised to the confirmation when the nomination came to the floor and it was approved in routine fashion.

Committee Chairman Warren Magnuson said in a tv interview Sunday (13) he thought McConnaughey will be "a fairly good commissioner."

LINDA WATKINS' AM ROLE

Linda Watkins, ex-legit and film star now doing radio exclusively, is cast in role of accomplice of a real estate racketeer on CBS' "FBI in Peace and War" next Wednesday (23).

In private life Miss Watkins is a licensed saleswoman for Pease & Elliman, large N. Y. realty firm.

U-I Succumbs

Hollywood, March 15.

In a move marking departure from previous policy, Universal-International is for the first time loaning one of its pactees to a vidfilm series. Rock Hudson has been loaned to Desilu for an "I Love Lucy" guesting.

Studio has loaned pactees to live tv but this is first for telefilm. Hudson works in a "Lucy" telefilm this week, playing himself, with UI to get a plug in the episode.

OF's 'Juliet Jones' Telefilm Soaper Justa Big Bubble

Status of the syndicated soap-opera is up in the air again, following the blowup this week of Official Films' plans to put "The Heart of Juliet Jones" in production in early May and distribute it thereafter. Official is dropping the show, after having picked up the option and setting a verbal agreement, due to "complications and other commitments." In a word, the deal fell through.

This leaves stations and local-regional sponsors no closer to getting syndicated soaps than they were a year ago. Present status is an indifferent one: there are three series in pilot form which no distributor wants to touch. Feeling among the distribs appears to be that they're not ready for soaps yet —cost is too high, sponsorship opportunities limited, and selling's too tough.

Here's what's happened to the

GORDON BAKING BUYS 'KUKLA' EASTER SHOW

Chicago, March 15.

Just as ABC-TV was prepping full-web sales plans for Burr Tillstrom's "Kukla, Fran & Ollie" Easter Sunday special, Gordon Baking, who bankrolls the daily KFO show on four outlets, exercised its option to sponsor the holiday half-hour on the same quartet of stations. Network will offer the show, airing April 10 in the 5:30 to 6 p. m. slot, as a co-op to the balance of its affiliation string.

Gordon, which picked up the four-station tab, on Tillstrom's Xmas Day tele adaptation of James Thurber's "Many Moons," will sponsor the Easter show in Chicago, New York, Detroit and Elkhart.

LEGAL EAGLES SPREAD WINGS

A strange new specie has emerged in tv. He used to go under the name of "theatrical attorney;" but today he operates on a number of show biz fronts (notably in tv) that projects him into a new position of prominence. There's no precise way of labelling his exact profession or pinning down his shingle except to say that he's scattered strategically around midtown Manhattan, invariably in plush surroundings, enjoying an octopus-like hold on multiple facets of video.

Today it's difficult to determine where their functions as theatrical lawyers begin and their new status as tv impresario-producer-agent-consultant-packager-personal manager ends. They're all so intertwined that some of them today have emerged as valuable (and well-heeled) components in the business.

Perhaps the most notable example, insofar as tv is concerned, is the firm of Jaffe & Jaffe (Henry and Saul), whose operation today amounts to practically an adjunct of the NBC executive floor. Their identity with the Monday night "Producers Showcase," for example, is said to be not only absolute but even on a level corresponding with the top echelon within the NBC programming department. Hardly a contract is negotiated or any talent deal signed for the spec that doesn't require sanction of the J & J office. Nor does their identity with NBC programming end with this particular showcase.

Another instance of a theatrical attorney with a multiple toehold in the show biz (and notably tv) sweepstages is Jonas Silverstone, who only a few months back stepped out of his longtime berth as counsel for the American Guild of Variety Artists because of the expanding facets of his business in repping major personalities on a variety of fronts. With such diverse personalities as Red Buttons, Imogene Coca, Paul Tripp, Margo Jones (for whom he's currently in process of negotiating a tv deal); Victor Borge, Peter Lorre, etc., "In the house," Silverstone's activities today transcend those of a lawyer. His personal mangement-consultancy-parttime packager-operational sphere gives him a major stake in the overall video picture.

These, however, are but two illustrations of an expanding roster.

Whelan Sets Sights On 'Paul Gregory Theatre' In Launching TV Org

David F. Whelan Associates has been formed by the name in the title to rep tv properties, personalities and creative talent. Whelan is the prexy; David Gordon, v.p., and Thomas R. Gordon, secretary.

Whelan, who formerly handled the Dorsey Bros. in tv (summer replacement for Jackie Gleason last year and headed for a back-to-back with the comic next season), has pacted for the rights to "The Paul Gregory Theatre" for a video showcasing. Gregory is the legit and film producer. New outfit is also working on a kid series in association with Simon & Schuster, the book publishers, and is repping Martha Rountree's "Nation's Press Conference."

More Doc Stuff

Hollywood, March 15.

Another telepix series twirling about the medical profession, following in the wake of "Medic," is in the planning stage, with the pilot film just completed by Caduceus Productions. New company is prexied by Dr. William House.

Plottage is fashioned around a general practitioner, with Alex Nicol in role and Dorothy Green his co-star. Working also in pilot are William Talman, Timmy Considine and Ruth Lee, with Arnold Leven directing a teleplay by Tony Barrett.

NBC Shuffles Off to Buffalo For 2d U, But Where Does That Leave WGR-TV? Stanton Dickering Atlanta?

Plotkin Vs. Plotkin

Harry Plotkin, author of the now-famous Plotkin Report which has the tv networks in a tizzy, finds himself in a peculiar position as regards NBC's stake in the UHF o&o picture. How he'll wrestle with this one is one of the Ripleys of the year.

In the case of NBC acquiring its New Britain, Conn., UHF'er, Plotkin is counsel for the NBC New Haven affiliate fighting the network. On the Buffalo front, Plotkin is the pro-NBC counsel representing Sherwin Grossman's WBUF-TV operation being acquired by NBC as its second U.

The tv networks' owned & operated up-for-grabs picture was stepped up to a new and somewhat feverish pitch over the past few days with the webs anxious once and for all to put their V and U houses in order before the FCC clamps down on license transfer okays.

In the CBS front, prexy Frank Stanton, now that his Steubenville, O., V deal is cold, has been putting in a hectic week trying to patch up the Columbia U and V ownership quilt. It's reported that the Annenberg-owned WFIL-TV in Philadelphia (the ABC affiliate) had made some overtures to CBS (Annenberg) bought a Binghamton, N. Y., station last week), but it's known that Stanton and Paley have no inclination to disturb the present WCAU-Evening Bulletin ties in Philly.

Speculation was rife on Stanton negotiating for acquisition of WLW-A in Atlanta, now owned by Crosley. Stanton's looksee at KOVR in Frisco is reported to have hit some engineering snags, making Atlanta the more likely choice.

NBC resolved its UHF o & o conquests by moving into Buffalo and buying WBUF-TV. It was a move that took everyone by surprise, particularly the owners of WGR-TV (among them Myron Kirk, of the Kudner agency), with whom NBC only a few months back had negotiated for their Channel 2 affiliation as Buffalo's newest V operation. Just where that leaves WGR-TV is something that may CBS' St. Louis Buy?

Now that NBC-TV has resolved its UHF status with its Buffalo move-in, CBS prexy Frank Stanton is reported winding up negotiations for acquisition of Channel 36 in St. Louis. Previously CBS acquired a U in Milwaukee.

Stanton had original ambitions for a V in St. Loo in a hotly-contested competitive battle but was forced to back out.

Vote Compromise TV 'Grid Package' As NCAA Solution

Chicago, March 15.

After wrestling for weeks with the college football tv problem, the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. tv committee has come up with a compromise package that looms as a major headache for the telecasting industry and prospective bankrollers. The complicated plan, hedged with a flock of alternatives, limits nationally televised games-of-the-week to eight dates next fall and permits regional telecasts in seven NCAA districts on five other Saturdays. National games will be packaged and sold by the NCAA while regional video deals will be set by individual conferences.

The regional proviso is a partial victory for the Big 10 Conference, which along with the Pacific Coast Conference, has been plugging for the right to package and peddle its own games. The Midwest Conference voted yesterday (Mon.) to accept the NCAA plan which was mailed last week for membership approval.

The National game of the week sked may have to play second fiddle to the various regional hookups since it obviously would be to the advantage of a given conference to offer its most attractive games as a regional bundle which will sell itself, splitting coin among its own member schools. That's why the Big 10 held out for and won the two-appearance clause, permitting a team one national showcasing and one intra-district telecast or two intra-district showings.

The national program is further

PITT STORM RAISES HAVOC WITH STATIONS

Pittsburgh, March 15.

Worst storm in Pittsburgh's history last week, when wind reached velocity of 100 mph, completely destroyed antenna of WENS, UHF Channel 16, with a loss approximating $200,000; damaged that of KDKA-TV and knocked radio station WLOA's out of commission.

KDKA-TV was off the air the following morning (12) for about 15 minutes when operations were resumed, but transmitter conked out again later in the afternoon, and it was nearly six hours before Channel 2 finally got going.

Everybody, competitors and all, offered to give WENS a helping hand, but it was finally through an appeal to the FCC and an immediate approval that permitted WENS to stay in business by using the facilities of WQED, Pitt's educational Channel 13.

NBC on Longterm TV Contract Binge

NBC-TV is on a longterm contract spree to give the web a strong hold on some of its foremost producer-director-actor components. Already reported last week was a five-year deal for spectacularist Max Liebman worked out by tv chieftain Tom McAvity. Out on the Coast, a hot shot pair is being brought into line, with Jack Webb down for 10 more years and Ralph Edwards for five.

Pact with Webb includes not only his services in connection with "Dragnet" (as actor-director) but whatever other properties he hatches or figures in. For instance, the web would get first refusal on translating his "Pete Kelly's Blues" theatrical film into a vidpix series. Edwards' pact includes his "This Is Your Life," "Truth or Consequences" and other packages under his aegis.

'B'fast Club's' Sat. Digest

Chicago, March 15.

Don McNeill's ABC "Breakfast Club" gets a sixth day of exposure as of June 18 with a half-hour Saturday morning taped digest of the highlights of weekday hour show. The weekended "Review" will bow under the auspices of Ball Bros., makers of canning lids and containers.

Douglass-Caputo Sales & Dubbing Setup for International Telepix

Growth of the international telepix sales field is pointed up by the emergence of a second major sales outfit operating in overseas tele. New company, International Radio & TV Programs, intends to go one step further than its sole competitor in the field (Fremantle Overseas Radio & TV)—it's planning to set up dubbing plants for its American clients as well as repping them saleswise in overseas markets.

Principals in the new firm are Adrienne Moore Douglass, who for several years headed the Far and Middle East for Editors Press Service, and George Caputo, motion picture distribution veteran who handled Latin America for many majors and who has his own distribution operation in Cuba, and his own American export-import operation. Firm, formed six months ago, has agents in Latin America, Japan, Australia, France, Switzerland and other key potential tele points. Dubbing setup, still being worked out, would involve the running of plants in Buenos Aires, Mexico City and New York.

Company has made a quick start in the sales field, having peddled "The Chimps" for Bing Crosby Enterprises and the entire Studio Films telescription library in South America, "Madison Square Garden" for Les Winik in Japan, much of Official Films' library in Japan and in Europe and Louis Weiss' "Jim & Judy in Teleland" for Puerto Rico. It's made deals direct with stations and sponsors, as well as turning over entire packages for subdistribution to foreign agents. Latter method, according to Mrs. Douglass, is the best mode of operation for France and the Continent, since the return from selling to individual stations there doesn't justify the expense.

Discussing the development of international tv, Mrs. Douglass points out that estimates of growth have been generally overoptimistic. Japan, she says, has developed quickly, but there's a hitch in the form of a Government decree which provides that for every foot of film imported, an equivalent amount of Japanese film must be exported. Thus, every deal must be a barter deal, under which the exporter must guarantee to place domestic production. International is currently repping four Japanese producers in the U. S. in order to maintain its balance. One of these is the animation firm of Michido Eiga, which turns out animation at about one-third the American cost, about $15 a foot for 16m black and white. Others generally operate in the documentary field.

Australia should be important, Mrs. Douglass declared, but not nearly so much as some American observers have estimated. Budgets for programs will be considerably smaller than forecast, and at present the prospective licensees are powerless to do any buying until they get their licenses. Thailand appears to be the only other Far East prospect, with the exception of the Philippines, where the Manila station is deadlocked in a political hassle. South America represents a fairly strong market, but the total of five sales outlets at this point can provide only about $1,500 per dubbed film for the first time around. European television represents an unpromising prospect, with little in the way of hopes of increasing set circulation.

Firm was formed by way of Editors Press Service. Several of its clients had expressed interest in television, and Mrs. Douglass two years ago started a television export department within the firm, which sells American syndicated columns and news services abroad.

'Husband' for 'Jenny'

"Aunt Jenny," longrunner, cancelled out by Lever, got a week's extension to March 18 on CBS Radio. Soap house used the breather to realign its radio budget in hopes of an indefinite continuance on "Jenny," which it owns, but latter is finally axed.

The network will put "Second Husband" into the 11:45 slot (that's the old Helen Menken-starring series but upcoming skein will be with new components) and replace "Jenny" at 12:15 with Procter & Gamble's "Rosemary."

CBS' BETSY BUILDUP

Web Hot on Legit Actress after AM Debut In '21st Precinct'

On the basis of her work in "21st Precinct" on CBS last week, the radio web may groove Betsy Von Furstenberg in other dramatic stanzas. Actress was making her radio debut in a straight drama, being known heretofore as a legit player who's appeared on the aural medium only in scenes from her Broadway shows.

"Precinct" fronted a prime legit-tv cast last week since in addition to Miss Von Furstenberg the Wednesday nighter had regular Everett Sloane in his Capt. Kennelly role and Joan Lorring, who's in the "Norby" vidpix series and was live last week as the femme lead on the CBS-TV "Studio One."

HILTON 'P TO P' LIKE DOING A SPACE SHOW

"Person to Person" will be up against its most imposing electronic razzle-dazzle to date this Friday (18) when hotelier Conrad Hilton is up for the CBS-TV remote interview by Edward R. Murrow. Hilton's Bel Air estate on the Coast has a mere 61 rooms with 35,000 square feet of living space. Jesse Zousmer, co-producer, and Bob Sammon, remote director, planed out of New York Monday to handle the technical and on-the-air details of "Operation Mansion."

Compared to that, the Red Buttons couple-up on the N.Y. end figures to be a cinch in his apartment. John Horn and Chuck Hill are handling that one for "P. to P."

WWBZ's Nag Rap

Philadelphia, March 15.

Charges that WWBZ, Vineland, N. J., has been going allout on horserace information has led FCC Examiner James Cunningham to recommend that the station be refused a license. WWBZ has just completed building new studios and offices and planned to move in.

Cunningham said "there is clear and uncontested evidence that horse racing information, with particular reference to the results and mutuels as presently broadcast over WWBZ has been used systematically by bookmakers." The examiner charged the station broadcasts a program every weekday afternoon giving results of races run at an average of four tracks in different sections of the country and the racing program represents "for all practical purposes" the station's entire afternoon programming.

'Our Gang'

video stations utilizing the Interstate-distribbed group were outbid by competing outlets, many of which scooped up the pix jusut to keep them out of the opposition's hands. At best both stations can benefit from high ratings, but — opinion favored by some observers —is that the closeness of the competition will take the edge off the package for both stations in each market.

The syndication competition is too, and apparently below belt at times. Reports are circulating that letters are going out stating something to the effect that "ours are better than theirs"—a deliberate singling out of the competitor's product. Incidentally, Interstate has 82 sound pix and 10 silents; the Onyx group, the earliest "Our Gangs" produced by Roach, are all silents.

The stations using both Interstate and Onyx pix are WPIX, N. Y.; KRON, San Francisco; WXYZ, Detroit, and WEWS, Cleveland. Competing stations are: WRC (Interstate) and WTOP (Onyx), Washington; WBKB (I) and WGN (O), Chicago; WLAC (I) and WSM (O), Nashville; WPTZ (I) and WCAU (O), Philadelphia, and the two firms are understood to be competing in another market, though this is not verified.

Barrett Vice Joan Walker As Newsweek Radio-TV Ed

Joan Walker has quit as radio-tv editor of Newsweek and Marvin Barrett succeeds her.

There's a "daughter" angle on both counts. The Newsweek resignee's sire is Stanley Walker, ex-N.Y. Herald Tribune city editor now functioning in Texas. Barrett's wife is Mary Ellin Berlin, eldest daughter of songwriter Irving Berli and an ex-Time staffer.

Teeners 'Worst' Market to Reach In TV; Radio Up

Teenagers lack substantial interest in television and are perhaps the worst specific market to reach through the medium. Radio still gets a sizable number of youngsters listening in this classification. The amount of time the teens expend watching video is lower than any other group in the youth field by a considerable margin.

These and other conclusions are formed from continuing surveys made by Gilbert Youth Research, headed by Eugene Gilbert, regarded as No. 1 in scope in teenage research and merchandising. Outfit says the below-20 groups "take command" of family tv tuning to a potential of 9,000,000 sets at the maximum. (Last week's VARIETY had given a teenage audience of 17,000,000 controlling 25,000,000 sets—a neat arithmetical trick which also slipped through in processing. These and other figures were supplied by Teenage Survey Service, which states that it inadvertently omitted the word radio from the total AM-TV circulation control in the groups from 13-19 years).

Gilbert said his company's statistics on the youth group break down as follows:

1. There are 16,000,000 youngsters between 13 and 19, but they do not have 16,000,000 tv sets in their families. These youngsters are broken down into family groups between 8,000,0000 and 9,000,000, as nearly as can be estimated. At maximum, they would control 9,000,000 sets, if each family with teenager had a tv set.

2. In several major national studies, it has been found that between 75% and 80% of the families with teenagers have a tv set. This does not take into account those teenagers who are already married or who are living away from their families. Nevertheless, these are maximum potentials. For all practical purposes, there are 7,000,000 possible family sets dominated by teenagers.

3. Because of teenagers' lack of enthusiasm for tv, except for very specific programs, and because of the great enthusiasm which other youngsters in the same family may have for tv, the real control is maintained by the child and preteen where there is either group living in the household.

(Teenage Survey Service, amending its original information, states that its 25,000,000 breakdown of teenage control of receivers shows 15,500,000 radio sets and 9,500,000 telesets).

Pact Judith Anderson, Van Doren for Recitals

Judith Anderson and Mark Van Doren have been pacted to do a quarter-hour series of recitals from the Bible, with Miss Anderson doing a solo dramatization stint and Van Doren making his tv bow in the role of script editor on the series. Show is being packaged by a new company, B-F Productions, headed by former ABC-TV staffer Dick Kandell and off-Broadway producer Peter Kerr Buchan.

Series will comprise 26 quarter-hour dramatizations of Bible stories, with Miss Anderson doing them solo with special lighting and musical effects. Donald Oenslager will design the sets and Jerome Moross is composing the score. Filming starts June 1, after Miss Anderson finishes commitments in Europe.

WB's ABC Deal

comparatively safe, slotting "Disneyland" in a Wednesday-at-7:30 position with only half of Arthur Godfrey's show as major competition. But with the Warner's show, it is putting its best squarely on the line with an attempt to smash the most firmly established time franchise in television's history.

Nonetheless, the addition of the Warner's show, in a time in which ABC has heretofore feared to tread, gives the network one of the most impressive lineups of any television network on any night. Tuesday lineup leads with "Cavalcade of America" at 7:30, then segues into the Warner segment. Danny Thomas' "Make Room for Daddy" follows, with the alternating "U. S. Steel Hour" and "Elgin Hour" dramatics occupying the 9:30-10:30 slots. "Stop the Music" winds it up.

Deal for the show is the outcome of meetings between American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres prexy Leonard H. Goldenson, ABC prexy Robert E. Kintner, Ben Kalmenson, WB sales v.p., and Jack L. Warner, production head of WB now east. The ABC project would mark WB's first telepix activity, although latter is talking about some of its old picture properties into telepix for independent sale.

culated to stations and key staffers preliminary to a public announcement on the manner in which the 10 p.m. time will be filled after May 25, when Pabst will have to put on its finale fracas on the web (with June 1 incepting the fight series on the rival network).

Pabst had declared that during the current season — October through January—the bouts rated 17th in the Top 20 Nielsens. Van Volkenburg was not so enthusiastic. He is understood to have expressed himself as "disturbed" by the decline in the fightcasts as based on "conclusive research." Nielsen's nationals show a 28% drop over the last four seasons, according to the CBS television topper, though the figures are inflated by the addition of new markets. It's held that the ratings dip after the novelty factor wears off. Trendex shows a drop to half their popularity, Van Volkenburg reportedly declared.

Keyed to the issue is the web's recognition of the "limited appeal" that fights have for an important buying segment—the femme public. On this basis, CBS had proposed a reduction in the number of bouts that would permit improvement in quality of the competitors and insertion of high budget shows in the non-bout weeks.

This season, Pabst is three-for-four, with the fourth being the "Best of Broadway" series, which will apparently be scrapped after April. Pabst wouldn't go for the reduction. As a result, the 10 to 11 slot is being kept under "continuous contract" for an hour's show fronting "the greatest names in the entertainment business." This may suggest that CBS is on the verge of coming through with a super "baby spec" as distinct from the "Best of Broadway" skein which average tv home watched tv six hours per day in January of 1955.

Newspapers aren't getting the young readers today as they once did, he said, while tv has alreay attracted 80% of the 15,000,000 young postwar families. The medium's great impact is on this group, he said.

It is because these young people have never developed the department store habit, Treyz asserted, that the percentage of retail business done by the department outlets has been going down. Wanamaker's probably closed in New York because of "the aging of its customers," he said. If the founder of the store, John Wanamaker, were alive today, he suggested, he'd probably pioneer with tv advertising to attract customers as he did with newspaper ads in his day.

Kevin B. Sweeney, prexy of the Radio Advertising Bureau, told the seminar that two-thirds of the radio listening today in tv cities takes place in bedrooms and kitchens.

More TV Awards; This Time WGA

Hollywood, March 15.

Writers Guild of America West is planning tv awards, first ones to be on a semi-annual basis and covering the period from last Jan. 1 to June 30. Next awards period starts July 1 and runs through June 30, 1956, with awards presentation date to be set later.

Members were sent so-called "nomination reminder forms," and asked to nominate shows which they considered outstanding for their writing. At the end of the first awards period ballots will be mailed and writers will be asked to nominate five shows in each category in order of preference. Five shows receiving the highest vote in each class will be submitted on a second ballot as final nominees.

Categories of awards are: Best situation comedy, best variety comedy, best dramatic anthology and best dramatic episode. Award in each category will be given for the actual script as telecast. Where two or more writers are involved the award will be shared. Both filmed live shows are eligible i all categories.

True Boardman heads the awards committee, with Joel Kane as vice-chairman, and other members being Al Duffy, Devery Freeman, Morris Friedman, Adrian Gendot, Howard Green and David Victor.

LINKROUM, ROGERS NEW 'HOME' STATUS

Dick Linkroum and Ted Rogers have been named exec producer and producer of NBC-TV's "Home" show. Linkroum was formerly associated reiner upped to full status nearly a year ago. Only a couple of months ago the whole participating programs setup of the web was altered, with Mort Werner moving in as director of that division and Richard Pinkham attaining the status of network program chief with Tom McAvity rising to head of the tv sphere.

Rogers comes to NBC from BBD&O where he was account exec on U. S. Steel. Preciously he was assistant manager for Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample on the Coast and director of CBS' program sector there.

In another change, John H. Dodge is tapped as eastern administrative sales manager under Walter D. Scott.

KNBC Appointments

Hollywood, March 15.

Appointment of a new account exec and the promotion of two KNBC staff members were announced by George Greaves, general manager of KNBC, San Francisco. Richard S. Calender has been appointed account exec. He was formerly a sales executive with KJBS.

Dave Engles, formerly merchandising supervisor of KNBC, has been promoted to director of advertising, merchandising, and promotion. Jane Morrison of the KNBC promotion department has been named supervisor of promotion.

Four Star

March 4. This series, produced by FS, uses the works of Somerset Maugham in approximately 50% of its output.

In keeping with the policy to dress its product for international marketing, Four Star also is reviewing the importance of star values as cast topliners for their three series. Firm is convinced that international sponsors, channels and viewers are more easily baited by a celebrated film name on tv than by a television-created performer.

Agenda also calls for the production of further true-life incidents from the lives of celebs. This has been prompted by the response to FS Playhouse's telepix blog of Robert Louis Stevenson, based on his narrative, "My Eight Years in Samoa."

TV'S 'IT PAYS TO SUMMORTIZE'

For Sale—Awards & Citations

Television awards or citations can now be bought, and not for too much coin. So admit a couple of television pressagents who've actually gone out and done it. These aren't the awards of established organizations dedicated to surveying the field on a regular basis but rather professional, civic or pressure groups who give out those citations hailing "Joe Doakes and His Little Delinquents" as the show contributing most toward strengthening family ties or what-have-you.

One telepix outfit, smarting under a slap at one of its kidshows from the National Assn. for Better Radio & Television (NABRAT), hired a publicist to buy an award from a professional group citing the very same show as a great contributor toward the betterment of youth (NABRAT had slapped the show for its scenes of violence). It's not the groups themselves, apparently, which are at fault, but some of their officers who serve as the contact man. For a consideration, they put the show up for a citation, and this is awarded as a matter of course and as a publicity gimmick for the group too, without anyone having seen the show to begin with.

Ed Lamb Case Nearing Climactic Stage; Charges to Be Dropped?

Washington, March 15.

Examiner Herbert Sharfman will have to decide tomorrow (Wed.) or shortly thereafter whether he has the authority to call off the FCC Commie proceedings against broadcaster-publisher Edward O. Lamb and, if so, whether he should do so. Arguments pro and con Lamb's motion to drop the whole thing and to issue an immediate decision clearing the license status of WICU (TV) in Erie, Pa., will be made before the Examiner.

Whatever his ruling, it's not likely to be accepted by either side without an appeal to the Commission. The FCC attorneys who are prosecuting the case for the Government challenged the Examiner's authority to dismiss in vigorously opposing the motion last week. But even if he had the authority, they said, the motion is "premature" because they have at least one more witness to call: Edward Lamb himself.

Lamb's attorneys have indicated they don't like the idea of the Commission calling Lamb. When FCC counsel Joseph Kittner suggested the possibility just before the hearings were recessed three weeks ago, Russell Brown, counsel for Lamb, called it a "revolting" procedure. His client, he said, "begged" many times for an opportunity to tell his story before the Commission set the case down for hearings.

The FCC opposition to the Lamb motion said that "it is necessary" that Lamb be called to testify of his "personal knowledge" regarding testimony given at the hearings by Government witnesses. The FCC contended that "substantial question" has been raised respecting the Commie issue.

"It may well be," FCC said, "that the testimony by Mr. Lamb will serve to dispel presently outstanding questions but whether this will be the case can be determined only in the light of such testimony itself."

Husing Ankles As WMGM Disk Jock

Ted Husing, sportscaster turned disk jockey, quits N. Y. radio indie WMGM this Saturday (19), after eight years of platter spinning. Departure of Husing, who was the first of the nationally-known personalities to enter the d.j. field, is believed largely due to ill health.

Husing ankled CBS as network sports chief just before joining the Gotham outlet eight years ago. His switch to records preceded that of any other country-wide figure.

In the meantime, WMGM has hired another offbeat-for-local-(or even network)-radio character. Tennis star Gertrude (Gorgeous Gussie) Moran pencilled as a daily gabber in the multi-voiced "Warm Up Time," before each Dodger broadcast. She'll cross words with Marty Glickman, Ward Wilson and Jim Gordon.

Sponsor Soaper Swaps

Two ABC Radio morning clients are swapping shows in a move that will give both of them more commercial time. Clients are Carnation Milk, which up to now has bankrolled "When a Girl Marries" five days weekly and which will take over cross-the-board sponsorship on "Whispering Streets," a 20-minute morning soaper. Seaman Bros., which has bankrolled two segments weekly of "Streets," switches to "When a Girl Marries" on a three-times-weekly basis. Swap takes place April 4.

Since Erwin, Wasey of Los Angeles reps Carnation, "When a Girl Marries" had been originating from the Coast, but will move to New York with the switchover. Wm. H. Weintraub is the Seamen agency.

Pillsbury's Major 'Opry' Vidpix Buy In 1st Spot Deal

Pillsbury Mills is the latest national sponsor to latch onto syndicated vidpix as a means of bolstering pinpointed sales areas. Flour outfit has bought Flamingo Films' "Stars of the Grand Ole Opry" in a large regional deal blanketing midwestern and southern key markets for a fall start. Understood it's in for a firm 52-week deal, with 39 originals and 13 repeats. Deal was set via the Campbell-Mithun agency.

For Flamingo, the deal is the keynoter on "Opry" sales. Flamingo has been holding off on selling the show, which it started filming in November in Nashville, until a key regional was set around which others could be sold. Pillsbury deal enables the firm to go ahead on its other pending deals, said to involve at least 18 markets immediately. Sy Weintraub, Flamingo topper, wouldn't say how many markets Pillsbury had bought, nor would he admit that Pillsbury was the bankroller, but confirmed that the show had been

WNOE EXITS MUTUAL AFTER 14-YEAR RUN

New Orleans, March 15.

Mutual Broadcasting System affiliation has been relinquished by WNOE here after 14 years and will be shifted to WTPS, effective March 19, it was announced Sat. (12) in a joint statement by officials of the two stations.

Former Gov. James A. Noe, owner of WNOE, said the station will operate independently as a 24 hour-a-day music and news station on that date. He said the station's contract with MBS had nine months to run but was terminated by mutual agreement.

WTPS has operated as an indie.

LITTLE FALLOFF IN SALES TEMPO

By BOB CHANDLER

Tele's efforts to make the medium a year-round proposition with a "no summer hiatus" drive, which met with moderate success last year, is once again under way. First in with a strong pitch on the benefits of summer network advertising is ABC-TV, with a general research study plus some special discount benefits, all of which come under the general sales pitch of "it pays to summortize."

Specifically, ABC-TV is offering a summer discount amounting to 10% of the time charges or 20% of program charges, whichever is greater. This is above and beyond the 12½% discount for 52-week contracts, the annual rebate which the web terms the "key cost advantage in summer continuation." The special discount applies only to the eight weeks in July and August.

Generally, the web makes these points in favor of summer continuation:

1. Though summer sets-in-use do fall off, this is compensated in part by the increase in overall set circulation during the period from fall to summer. Add to this lower costs via discounts, and the cost-per-thousand balance is nearly restored.

2. Viewing falloff is most marked in early hours, much less so (and less than is commonly believed) in late (after 9:30 p.m.) hours.

3. Summer costs are lower, not only from the viewpoint of putting the annual rebate at all networks into effect, but the special summer incentive discount plans such as the one at ABC-TV and variations, current or in the works, at other nets.

4. Summer continuation is "good insurance" for the fall by maintaining the show's steady audience, whereas going off for the hot months makes the job of restoring and rebuilding a show's audience tougher.

5. Clearance protection is achieved while clearance improvements may be made during the summer. "Some stations will protect an advertiser's time for his fall return if he takes a hiatus; some will not," the study maintains.

6. Continuation of the same program either on a regular new-show-weekly basis or with reruns gives the sponsor less loss in ratings and only minor loss in share of audience than the substitution of a summer replacement show.

7. Key fallacy in the hiatus philosophy is the theory that sales fall off during the hot months. 'Tain't true, the ABC study says; business activity (retail sales, factory payrolls, disposable summer incomes, etc.) maintain and "in some instances exceed the tempo of other months."

Points made in the study are

Program Contractors to Pay Annual Fee of $6,300,000 to Brit. Com'l TV

By HAROLD MYERS

London, March 15.

General agreement has been reached between the four program contractors and the Independent Television Authority on the terms for operating the new commercial network, and contracts are expected to be inked by the end of the month. And although it is still regarded as a closely-guarded secret, it is now possible to give the economic and financial background to the new setup.

The main point of dispute between the ITA and the contractors was the amount the programmers would have to pay the Authority for transmission rights and facilities. The original proposal was regarded as uneconomic and an acceptable compromise has now been negotiated. This provides for a round figure payment of approximately $300,000 per year for each allotted day. The Associated-Rediffusion group, which has been voted the London web from Monday to Friday of each week, will have to pay an annual toll to the ITA of approximately $1,500,000; Associated Broadcasting Development Co. (The Norman Collins group), which has weekend time in London and weekdays in Birmingham, will have to pay on the basis of seven days, with an annual fee of about $2,100,000.

The Kemsley-Winnick group, with weekend time in Birmingham and Manchester, has only four days on the air and its toll to the ITA will be the lowest of the four at $1,200,000. The Granada group will have to pay around $1,500,000 for their five days at Manchester.

Minute Spots At $2,650

With agreement on these figures, the webs are now able to estimate the cost of buying time on the commercial stations. Under the Television Act they are allowed to sell six single minutes in any one hour; and it is now reckoned that for a peak viewing time the cost of booking one of these minute spots will be around $2,650. That, at any rate, is the figure forecast for the London station, which will have the biggest potential audience; and provincial rates will presumably be adjusted accordingly. The advertiser, of course, has no say in the programming and

Who Did That?

Chicago, March 15.

Believe it or not, one agency has gone out and hired the v.p. of a competing outfit on a weekly retainer basis to produce, direct and write the commercials for one of its shows. Agency in question is Russell M. Seeds, the v.p. is Michael Levin, who heads up the tv department at Erwin, Wasey & Co., and the show is "Who Said That?" on ABC-TV.

Deal is okay with the Wasey outfit since it's for Admiral, which sponsors the show on alternate week. Wasey and Seeds share billings on Admiral, Seeds in print and Wasey in radio-tv. However, Seeds has Admiral in tv for "Who Said That?" under a set of circumstances stemming from the fact that they ordered the show on an every-week basis and then convinced Admiral to share sponsorship with Sheaffer Pens. Admiral went along with Seeds on that score, but insisted that Levin, who does all their tv commercials, be hired to handle the blurbs. Seeds was forced to do so, paying Levin a regular weekly stipend.

CBS-TV: 'Gotta Be Creative'; Dicker Sammy Cahn Deal

With Jule Styne under contract to CBS-TV, being integrated into the web's "baby spec" pattern ("Best of Broadway," "Shower of Stars"), the network is currently negotiating a deal with Sammy Cahn in a bid to effect a reuniting of the music-lyricist team for tv. However, the plan is to utilize Cahn, much in the same manner as Styne, in a much broader sphere whereby he'll fit into different facets of creative programming.

Move is part of a whole new stepped up program tempo at CBS-TV, induced by a recognition that "we gotta get creative and make excitement" as the inevitable aftermath of NBC-TV's smashing success with Mary Martin's "Peter Pan" (in which Styne, incidentally, figured prominently as one of the writers).

It wasn't likely that CBS would just sit by and let the rival NBC boys be carried along indefinitely by the momentum of the "Peter Pan" click. Thus it's anticipated that the Columbia program brain-trusters will move into action pronto to counter the stunning NBC-TV victory.

Kinsey Taking No Chances

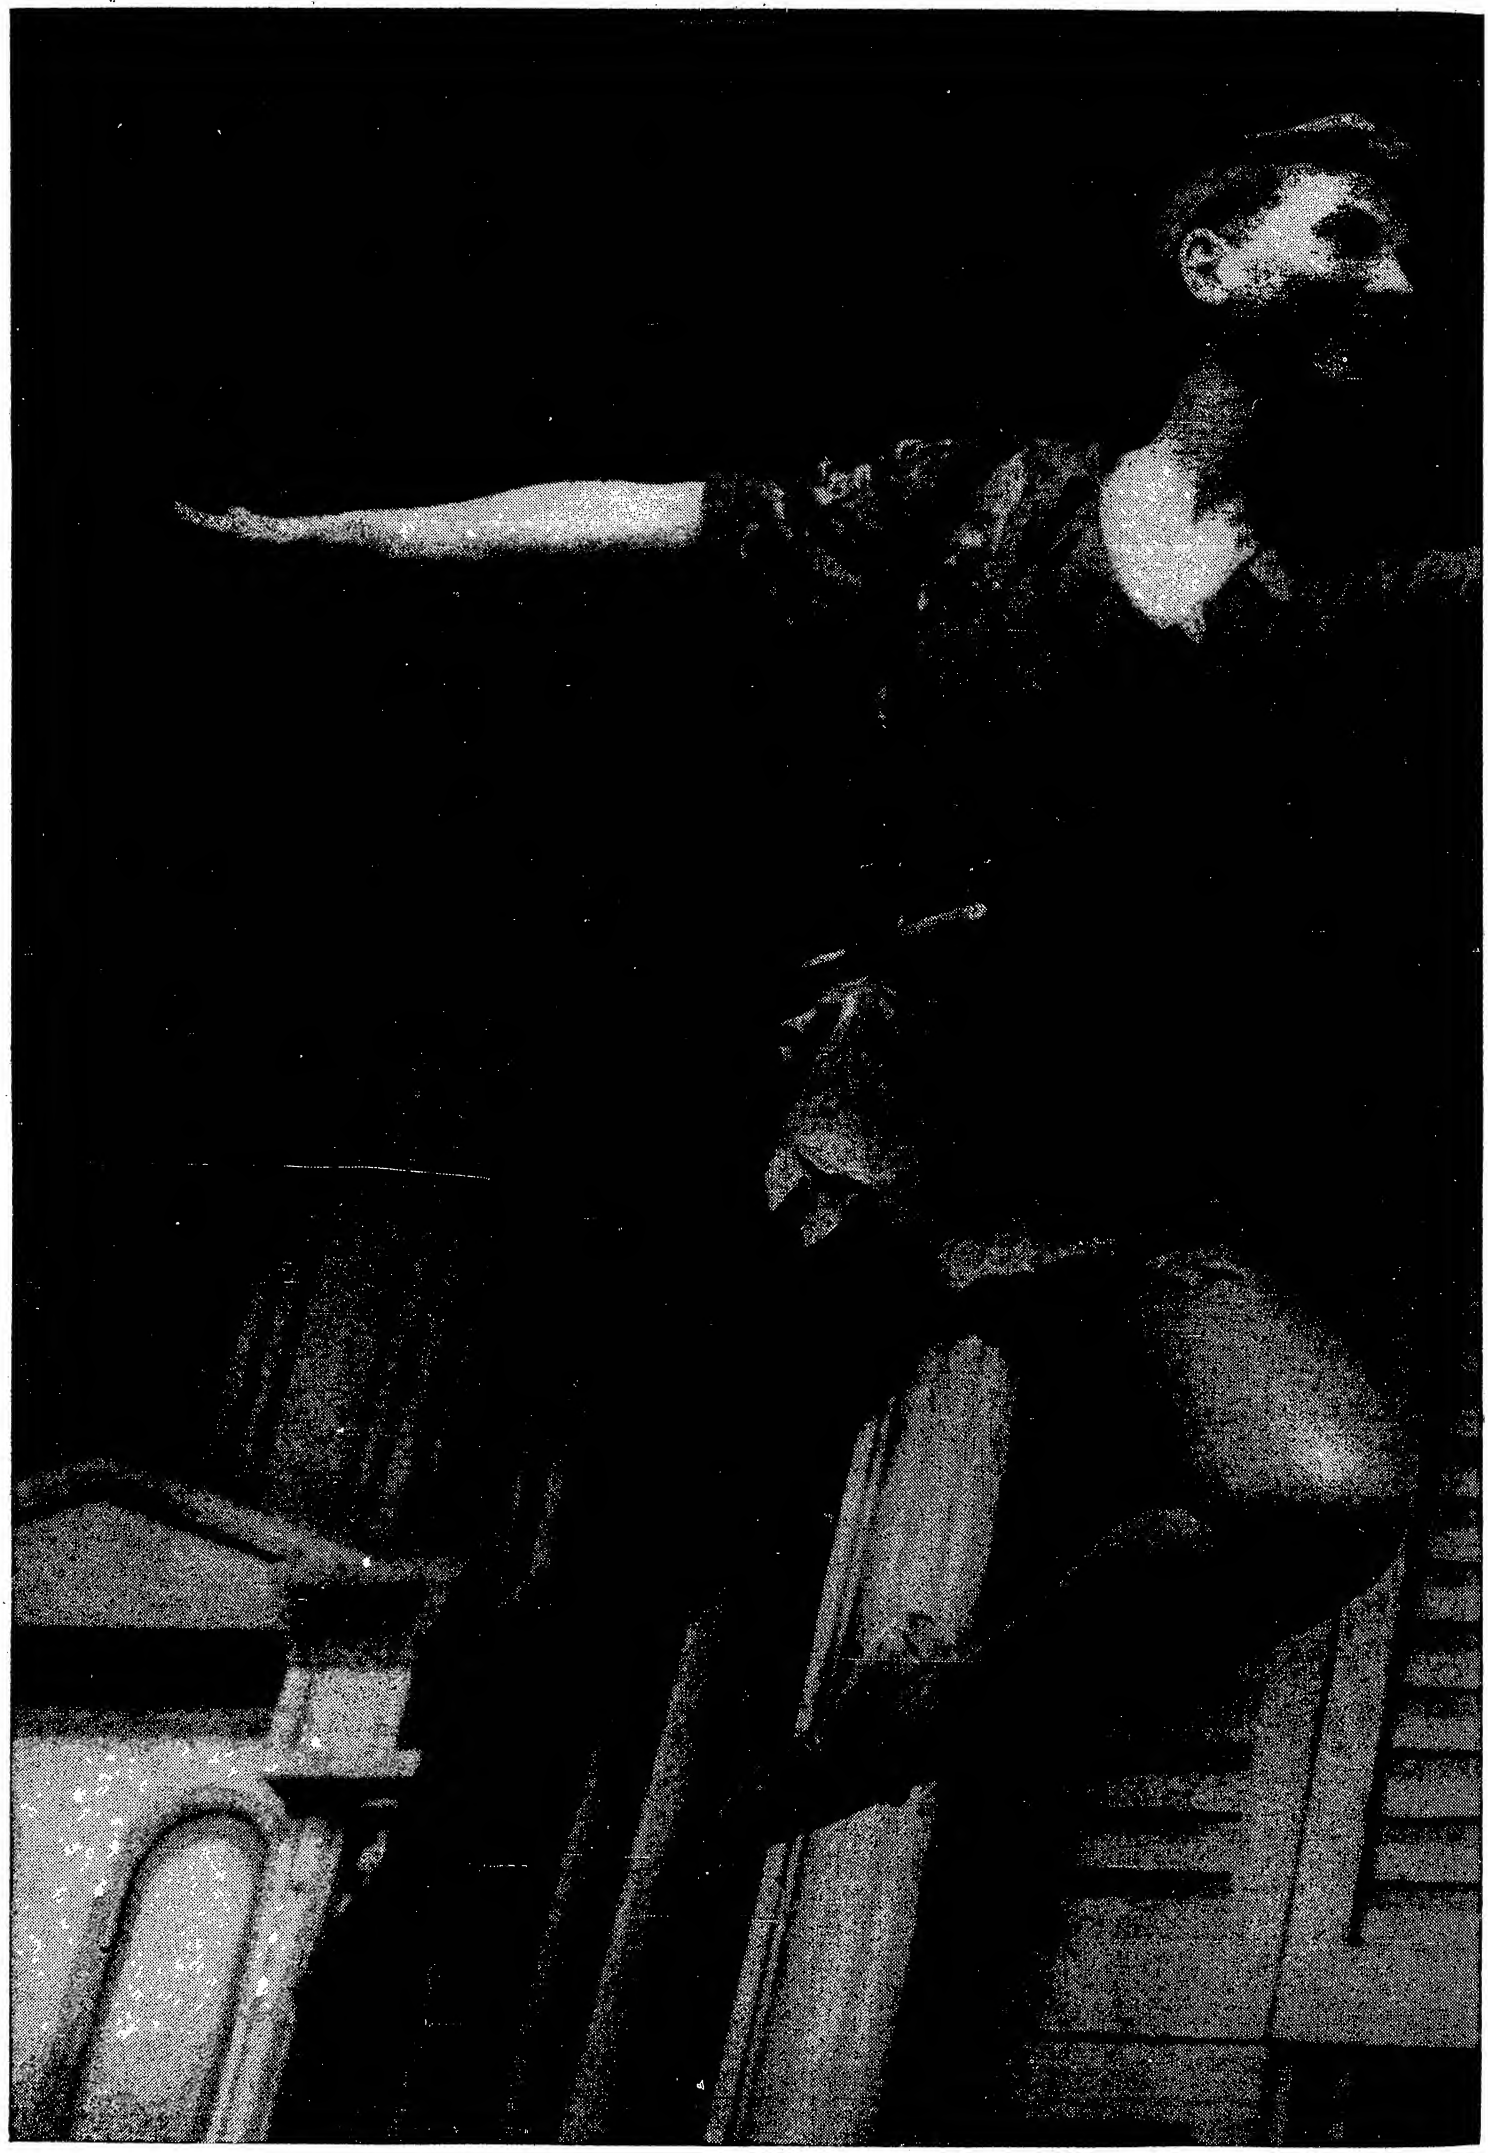
Bloomington, Ind., March 15.

Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey, Indiana U. sex researcher who recently refused to permit Vern Paule, news director of WJPS, Evansville, to make a tape recording of his speech to the Evansville Junior Chamber of Commerce, said that he does not believe in putting on the record a spontaneous and off-the-cuff talk.

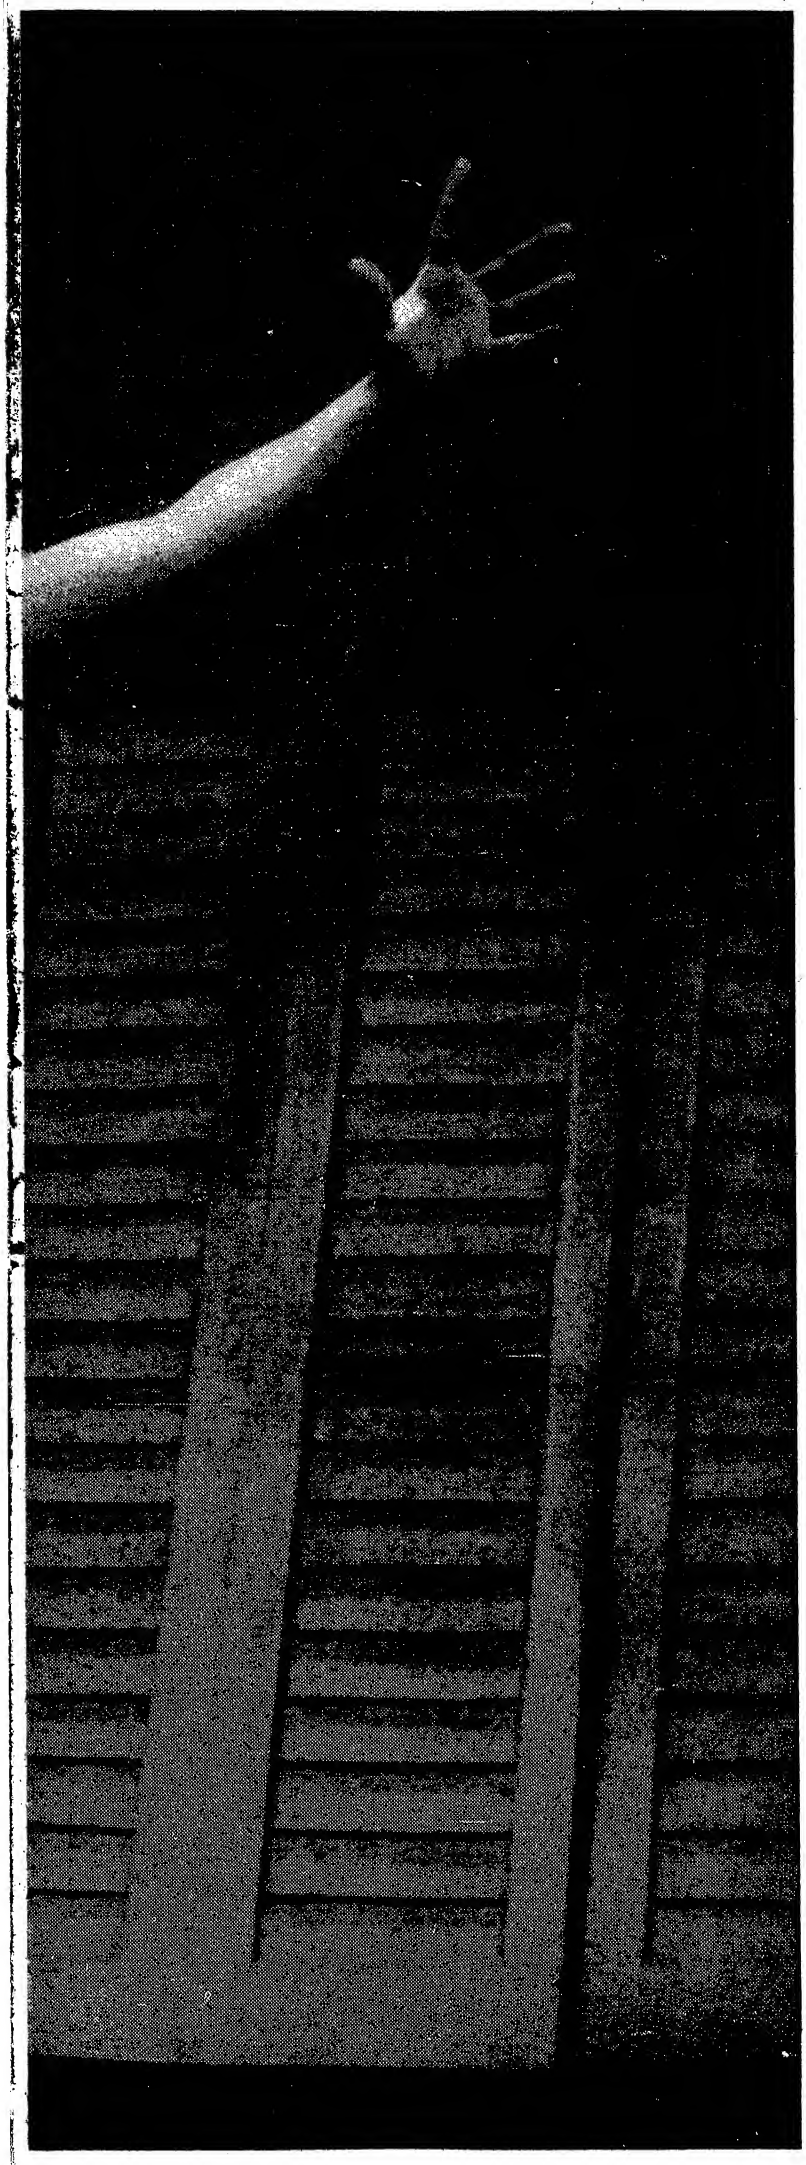
"When they catch you on a recording, you have no chance to edit it nor to select the audience that will hear it, and the radio station has no responsibility for it. This is a basic fight all over the United States."

Kinsey said that radio and television stations can send reporters to cover his speeches, the same as newspapers do, and report the speeches at their own responsibility, as newspapers do. He charged that radio and tv personnel are "too lazy" to do that, preferring tape recordings. "They haven't learned to write!" he added.

"Any time a radio station wants to pay for a special interview—for the time it takes to prepare one—I'll be willing to appear for them," Kinsey said.



His retort was touched off by an announcement that the Indiana Radio and Television Newsmen's Assn. was going to protest to Indiana U. President Herman B. Wells.



Scott Sets 'Father' As 'Margie' Sub

Scott Paper has bought the "Father Knows Best" series, axed a few weeks back by Kent cigarets, as a replacement for "My Little Margie," which it's dropping after the spring cycle and the 13 summer repeats. Paper company, via J. Walter Thompson, is still dickering with NBC-TV over a new time period for the show, however, since it deems "Margie's" present position unsatisfactory.

Deal was set Monday (14) with Screen Gems, producer of the show, via General Artists Corp., which reps Screen Gems nationally. Kent lopped the show because of a cost-per-thousand disparity between "Father" and its previous entry in the Sunday at 10 CBS-TV slot, with "Father's ratings not justifying, according to Kent, the $30,000 a week budget on the show. Scott deal, said to involve $4,500,000 if all options are exercised, involves a switchover from CBS to NBC. Screen Gems meanwhile has put another 13 of the Robert Young-Jane Wyatt starrers into production.

Ironic twist in the entire business is the fact that the decline in cigaret sales has affected both shows, with Kent having cancelled "Father" and Philip Morris, which launched "Margie" three years ago and still sponsoring it on radio, having dropped it on tv after only a year. Scott then moved in.

she flew into 65,000,000 hearts!

It happened on March 7th. More than 65,000,000 viewers sat enchanted for two hours while Mary Martin and company brought to life "Peter Pan," an NBC Spectacular. It was the greatest audience for a single network show in the history of television. And the critics raved!

JOHN CROSBY, N. Y. HERALD TRIBUNE
"Conceivably the most polished, finished and delightful show that has ever been on television."

JACK GOULD, N. Y. TIMES
"An unforgettable evening of video theatre... captivating fun for eye and ear alike."

HARRIET VAN HORNE, N. Y. WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
"Something the inward eye will treasure for a lifetime."

LARRY WOLTERS, CHICAGO TRIBUNE
"Through this children's classic, TV came of age."

GEORGE ROSEN, VARIETY
"Sheer delight... Stunning success... Unadulterated charm."

On March 9th, the N. Y. Herald Tribune commented editorially:
..."shows of this type set a high standard for the future..."

NBC, having set this season's high standards with its Spectaculars, will continue to maintain them. Plans for next season are beginning to emerge. For instance, starting October 23rd, NBC plans to present once a month the Maurice Evans distinguished series of 90-minute dramatic programs—"Sunday Matinee." Mr. Evans will produce and, on occasion, star in dramas from the finest pages of the theatre.

The Evans series is only one example of how NBC Television will maintain its program leadership . . . pursue further the course of originality and excitement that leads to television's biggest audiences... keep on delivering to sponsors the greatest new advertising values they have ever enjoyed.

A SERVICE OF RCA

Television Followup Comment

"Caesar's Hour," which started off the season as a somewhat dubious entry, has come to be one of the comedy highlights on the Monday night tv spectrum. Having resolved its format (something of a variety show with a permanent stock company), it has settled down to the business of dishing out some qualitative entertainment, with head man Sid Caesar just about at his peak.

Last Monday's (14) "Hour" was a good case in point, parlaying a lot of slick elements into a strictly pro and solid session, with the writing particularly good. The opera bouffe in the closing 20 minutes, with the inevitable fast-talking Gibberish Italiano by Caesar, was one of the high comedy spots of the season, with Nanette Fabray, Carl Reiner and Howard Morris contributing some standout support. The Mr. & Mrs. opening bit, involving a Caesar-Reiner scrabble feud, had some hilarious moments, as did Caesar's Brando-accented truck driver capsule comedics. Miss Fabray has emerged as a distinct asset to the hour, having captured a fine feel for the comedy aspects of the show, revealing herself as something of a song stylist and otherwise carrying off her femme assignment as the Mrs. half with the same sureness that Reiner and Morris display. "Caesar's Hour" is solid.

Ralph Edwards touched on a rich and colorful show biz vein last week when he profiled Carl J. Sedlmayr, operator of the Royal American Shows, the largest carnival in the country. It's certainly one of the major fields of the entertainment industry, which brings live fare to cities which ordinarily would rely on mechanical media.

The Sedlmayr segment on NBC-TV's "This is Your Life" could give only a small insight into the operation of a show as large as the RAS outfit. And yet there's a fairly complex set of human relationships built into the show. For example, it's virtually axiomatic that the sons of most carnies flee this kind of show business as soon as they've completed high school or an equivalent thereof. Yet Carl J. Sedlmayr II is extremely active in the business, and his son, Carl J. Sedlmayr III, is also being groomed to carry on with RAS.

Edwards featured a couple of Bavarian midgets who were brought to America for adoption. However, their foster parents ran out on them and they would have been deported but for Sedlmayr taking them in with his show.

Sedlmayr was brought on by Sam Shayon, general manager of "Dancing Waters," with whom he had been discussing an equipment deal. In the course of the show came Frank Duffield, head of a large fireworks concern, who has been dealing with Sedlmayr for a long time and who have had an affectionate type relationship; Lottie Mayer, of the disappearing water ballet; and others. One great credit to Sedlmayr was his attempt to give carnivals a bigtime show biz aura. He was the first to pay gigantic salaries to Gypsy Rose Lee and Sally Rand. Latter, sans fans or bubbles, made an appearance. The set of a sideshow with a carny talker was impressive. Film clips and stills provided some excellent background for the Sedlmayr tribute. Jose.

"Life of Emile Zola, voted the best picture (WB) in 1937, retained most of its original impact and vigor in the Lux Video presentation Thursday night. It was socko entertainment, with Lee J. Cobb outstanding in the role of Zola, portrayed on the screen by Paul Muni.

This was one vidversion of a film which didn't suffer by way of comparison. Cutting was necessary, of course, to pack the story of Zola into 50 minutes, but the trimming was judiciously accomplished by adapter S. H. Barnett, as he took the best from the Oscar-winning screenplay of Norman Reilly Raine and Heinz and Geza Herczeg.

Cobb was magnificent as the writer at first reluctant to enter the controversial Alfred Dreyfus case, wherein the French Army brass have sent an innocent man to Devil's Island as a traitor. Once Zola is convinced of Dreyfus' innocence, he wages a furious battle against the frame-uppers, but goes to England in exile after losing the first round. His fight is victorious eventually as Dreyfus is proved innocent in the case which rocked a nation. Lux version does not overlook the fact that Dreyfus was picked as a scapegoat because he was a Jew.

Main trimming was exercised on the role of Dreyfus, who is seen only once and briefly, in the televersion. Strong support to Cobb is given by Joy Paige, as Mme. Dreyfus, Gloria Holden, Robert Warwick, Paul Richards, Dayton Lummis, Booth Colman, Shepard Menken, Edgar Barrier, and Lawrence Nyle.

Buzz Kulik's direction was excellent, and he wrung the maximum in emotional conflict from the Barnett adaptation. William Craig Smith's art and set direction was a strong assist to the fine production, as was the music by Rudolph Schrager.

Clips from Warners' "East of Eden" were shown at the end, an effective trailer for the upcoming release. Daku.

"Elgin Hour" projected itself into the top of the class among the hour tv drama shows with a notable production of "Crime in the Streets," an eloquent treatise on juvenile delinquency by Reginald Rose. The Tuesday night ABC-TV'er, which alternates with the "U. S. Steel Hour," has been somewhat overshadowed by the Theatre Guild-produced "Steel" show, but last week's "Crime" segment will certainly enhance its prestige to the point of putting it at least on a par with "Steel," and for that matter, any other of the competing hour dramatics.

A tightly-written, rawly powerful script by Rose was backed with one of the finest productions of the year. A topflight cast headed by John Cassavetes, Preston Foster, Glenda Farrell and Mark Rydell carried the story across with force and conviction, and Sidney Lumet's superb direction gave the drama pace, realism and pictorial sweep. All the other production elements, particularly Fred Stover's sets, were tied into a neat bundle by producer Herb Brodkin, who's been guiding "Elgin's" destinies upwards ever since the series started.

"Crime in the Streets" itself will certainly end up as one of the year's most provocative dramas, and Rose, who's achieved major stature as a tv playwright during the past year, will carve another notch in his climb to the top by virtue of the play. Briefly, it's the story of a tough but intelligent delinquent who sets out to kill a man with the aid of two friends. In the course of the drama, Rose tries, through the central character, to pin down some of the factors that make the kids turn delinquent.

As a character study, it was subtle and intense; as a dramatic tour de force, it had action and suspense; and as a social document it had conviction and vigor. Perhaps it didn't give any of the answers to those searching for the cure for delinquency, but it did give an insight into the causes and the problems. As to the almost brutal treatment given some of the scenes, particularly the knife-wielding scenes, well, juvenile delinquency is a brutal and vicious thing.

Cassavetes did a memorable job as Frankie, the key figure, giving the role a wonderful characterization. He managed to combine anger, bitterness, loneliness, hauteur and violence in a manner that made the boy a completely real and comprehensible person. Though only in a featured role, Mark Rydell nearly stole the show with his conception of a brainless young muscleman with a deep streak of sadism. Foster's characterization of a social worker was forceful and straightforward; Miss Farrell got across the frustration and bitterness of Cassavetes' mother in solid fashion; Ivan Cury was good as the third boy in the gang; Van Dyke Parks was convincing as Cassavetes' younger brother; and Will Kuluva scored in a couple of strong scenes as Cury's immigrant father. Remainder of the cast, comprising mostly street-corner kids, was well-chosen.

Lumet and his technical director, John Broderick, turned in a beautiful job of camera direction, catching the action in tight and yet giving the production sweep and scope. And every other production facet was pinned down to the last crossed-t and dotted-i in thoroughly professional fashion. Chan.

Last Sunday (13) Ed Sullivan slipped on ice. The size of Chicago Stadium, from which he televised much of John Harris' Icecapades of 1955 as well as the less extravagant "dry land" portions of his weekly show, militated against satisfactory or intimate home entertainment. The fault was often technological—with sound, lighting and camerawork imperfect.

Use of the Stadium by Sullivan was an all around error, since the Icecapades' escapades were simply not made for the home screen. In the one instance that they were designed for video specifically (Donna Atwood in "a medley of St. Patrick's Day tunes") they by no means displayed the full talents of the entertainer. It seemed a hastily constructed job so that "Toast of the Town" could push the wearing of the green. The larger Harris' ice productions were vague and unimpressive to the televiewer, where they might have imparted some of their presumed dazzle to the Stadium pewster.

Proper testimony in behalf of Victor Borge's talents was that the comedian adapted himself cleverly to his expansive surroundings, and, when he couldn't his solid delivery made viewers forget them. After an entry on iceskates, he pattered humorously for a few minutes, closing with a shining lesson in "phonetic punctuation."

Unicycling juggler Rudy Horn and tumblers Vernon and Bumpy neither suffered nor benefitted from the size of the rink or from the depressing grayness around them. The Irish Festival Singers from Dublin did suffer; their folk music fit Chi Stadium like "Rockabye Baby" would the '56 national political conventions. Normally great, Ray Bloch's music was tinny in this new emanation spot. And, as with at least a couple of shows in past months which tried to capitalize on such unusual shooting space, studio-to-arena timing was bad; the only ones to suffer here, though, were bankrollers Lincoln and Mercury. Both of the two rather good commercials were miscued, one being clipped at the beginning and the other one jumping in on the middle of a Sullivan sentence. Art.

Abbott & Costello were back on NBC-TV's "Colgate Comedy Hour" last Sunday (13) and managed to pull a few laughs from some generally disappointing material. Assisting the comedy team in carrying the 60-minute stanza were songster Gordon MacRae, show's host, and film actress Debra Paget. Also on tap were Carl "Bobo" Olsen, world's middleweight boxing champ, and the Dassis; male acro team. Show had its entertaining moments, but overall didn't impress as being strong enough to keep viewers from scouting competitive programs.

Comedy team worked the show in a string of sketches relating to an upcoming bout between Costello and Olsen. Individual skits occasionally paved the way for Costello to get in some okay clowning, but generally wound up on the mediocre level. Show's wrapup, with Costello, Olsen and practically everybody else on the program having a free-for-all in a fight ring was strictly old-school slapstick.

Giving show a strong visual boost were the rapid-fire gymnastics executed by The Dassis. Vocalling by MacRae was pleasant, with singer soloing on "It's Almost Like Being in Love" and "You Go to My Head." Miss Paget, who moved into the nitery field recently, took the spotlight in an unexciting terp bit. However, she fared much better on a "Tweedle Dee" vocal and in a "Something Good Will Come From That" duet with MacRae.

"Stop the Music" on ABC-TV has made some revisions in its format but the show stays in the same basic musical quiz-giveaway groove that has made this series one of the oldest of its type. The modifications, if anything, have stepped up the pace of the show at the expense of the music. As now operating, the show gives the studio contestants a chance to run up big cash prizes by correctly guessing the song titles until the telephone operator contacts a home viewer. The latter is then given a crack at the big jackpot, valued at $10,000 in cash and merchandise. Even if the home viewer fails to name the "mystery melody," he still shares half the prize won by the previous studio contestant. Formerly the contestants and the home viewers operated independently of each other.

While this switch was designed to give greater accent to the home viewer, the latter still remains invisible and inaudible and hence of minor importance to the average dialer. The studio contestants, as before, supply the excitement in hitting or missing on the song titles. Bert Parks continues as the ebullient emcee, although minimizing the introductory horseplay to allow more scope for the quiz. Songstress Jaye P. Morgan shows enough talent to be something more than a shill for a guessing game and she makes the most of her abbreviated vocal assignments. Herm.

Since the lack of experimentation in tv programming is a matter of record, the attempt by "Omnibus" to present something different in the dramatics line must be commended even though the outcome was of doubtful merits.

Play, which was part of the "Omnibus" show Sunday (13) over CBS-TV, was called "A Different Drummer" and was transplanted to tv from Baylor U. in Waco, Texas, where it had its premiere last month with an all-student cast. It was written by Gene McKinney and acted on tv by Martha Scott and two Baylor students —Clu and Miriam Gulager. It also had a walkon for Jack Dempsey.

There was no question that "A Different Drummer" was different all right, but it was hardly as novel as advertised. Involved were three choruses, abstract scenery consisting mostly of gym ladders and the story of a boy rebelling against smalltown respectability and a life forced on him by his dead father's standards.

Billed as a comedy, "A Different Drummer" wasn't exactly of the laugh-getting variety. Emphasis was so much on the impressionist scenery and tricks of lighting and of movement that the play itself suffered. Still, it was billed as an experiment, and while "Omnibus" devoted a rather considerable time segment to it, the presentation, directed by Seymour Robbie and staged by Paul Baker of the Baylor U. Theatre, had a style that was distinctly its own.

Most interesting performance came from Clu Gulager who brought a lot of understanding to the lead character of the boy. Miss Scott was fine as the mother, and Miriam Gulager did extremely well as the smalltown girl in love with Clu. The Gulagers (husband and wife in real life) shape as a potential "find" for producers in search of warm but offbeat characters.

Oddly enough, the man who stole the "Omnibus" show Sunday was Joseph N. Welch, Boston attorney, who as the Army's legal counsel managed to do quite a bit of scene stealing during the Army-McCarthy hassle. Welch told Alistaire Cook about his Iowa boyhood with affecting simplicity. It was the kind of living Americana that can't be staged, and it was the more impressive since it was so spontaneous. Welch is a master of the English language and when he tells a story, he makes it fairly vibrate with color and emotion without ever losing his proper Bostonian composeur.

To start its Sunday show, "Omnibus" presented its second study in a series on the human anatomy. This one dealt with the heart and had a running commentary by Dr. J. Scott Butterworth. It's doubtful that the Sunday afternoon audiences require this kind of enlightenment when they can have it in much more dramatic form on "Medic" and the like, but at least give "Omnibus" credit for being thorough.

Viewers were spared nothing, including films of an actual operation on a heart. Since few of them will ever be put in a position of having to perform such an operation, the practical value of such a bit might be questioned, as might its taste. However, "Omnibus" did graphically explain the meaning of the term "heart disease." And that in itself might be a service. Hift.

Sen. Magnuson Sparks A Lively TV Session On B'caster Problems

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D.-Wash.), who chairs the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, currently studying legislation and regulations governing radio-tv including the reports of Harry M. Plotkin and Robert Jones (special counsel to the committee on broadcasting industry problems), had an earful from three panelists on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" Sunday (13). Lively session must certainly have been lucid enough to excite the public's interest as the threesome fired the questions without letup. The senator's interrogators were Sol Taishoff, editor-publisher of Broadcasting-Telecasting; Rowland Evans Jr., AP correspondent in D. C., and Joseph Gambatese, associate of Nation's Business, with the web's Ted Koop moderating.

These statements stood out:

The committee will look long and hard at UHF versus VHF (divided receiverwise, 28,000,000 Verys and 5,000,000 Ultras), along with the structure of network options and the Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) proposals.

Magnuson pushed personally for the manufacture of all-channel sets, serving both frequencies, and is inviting manufacturers next week to hear their views. Some antitrust and constitutional questions will have to be resolved, along with a possible cut in the 10% excise tax on receivers to encourage production.

There's a study progressing on U and V cities, plus non-tv areas and the "obsolete" factor in the case of families moving to "other frequencies."

The senator expressed himself as not in agreement with the Jones Report to treat the broadcasting industry as a common carrier.

Inquiry is being made as to the disadvantageous economic position of tv stations without network affiliation, with recommendations for more equitable distribution of web-controlled programs, with possible monopolistic practices under study.

Magnuson favors draining off some of the profits made by the networks in big markets to pay for the smaller markets. And he is opposed to the FCC's pending proposal to freeze tv allocations, saying that the "long freeze" postwar (three years) was a mistake that should not be repeated.

While he upholds the right of limitation, the chairman does not feel that newspaper ownership should necessarily apply adversely on tv licenses, or held against the publishers "except where there is an undue concentration (of such ownership) in a given area."

On the Bricker Bill in general: "Not quite in agreement."

On confirmation of FCC chairman George McConnaughey: Expect to confirm; "he will be a good commissioner." (Confirmed Monday.)

On political time and "equal time" for candidates and others: Recommendations will be made; tv becoming "a rich man's" medium for candidates. Trau.

Soaps Can Be Beautiful

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

For the first time in my life I have been angered by an article in your paper. The article (Watch Your Telep's and Q's) in the March 9 issue states that socalled "Big-time Personalities" cannot be put on a par with "Cross The Board Boys and Gals," pertaining to those actors and actresses on the daytime soap operas, because those "Big-time Personalities," at least, know how to ad lib their way out of a transgression.

I, being an actor on a soap opera, regard this article as a "slap in the face" to those actors, as well as myself, who perform on "The Secret Storm," CBS-TV. Having no benefit of teleprompters we maintain the highest quality of entertainment available in the field of soap operas.

For too long, people in the television medium as well as those people in the theatre, have been disregarding the talent, work, and cooperation of each and every actress and actor as well as people connected with the actual production.

I have tried to be truthful and vehement in my convictions. I would appreciate an explanation of this unwarranted article.

Warren Berlinger.

PARTY-GO-ROUND
With Hazel Markel
Producers: Hazel Markel, Ted Granik
5 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 11:25 p.m.
WRC-TV, Washington

This newcomer to field of capital-flavored teleshows is frankly tailored for the carriage trade, but should appeal to the bus crowd as well. Featuring a nightly example of that Capital phenomenon, big-name parties, show is a fast five minutes of pictures and chatter revolving around the glamor and glitter of Washington official and diplomatic life.

Mrs. Markel, who recently joined the Ted Granik staff as assistant producer and commentator on his two Sunday afternoon forum tv shows, immediately branched out on her own with one of the most hep ideas to hit local tv screens in many a month. Local society columns are daily crammed with the goings-and-comings of Capital brass, and local hausfraus and Government workers read these with much of the fervor and hero-worship traditionally associated with Hollywood and Broadway. This is first full-dress effort to translate this interest in terms of the tv screen.

Mrs. Markel overcomes the obvious handicaps of still pictures via, first, her choice of a lenser, and, secondly her own skill in giving life to these inanimate studies. Photographer Carl Magi has developed a technique whereby his stills appear to have both depth and animation. Mrs. Markel, a veteran of the Capital social scene via her broadcasting and writing chores, keep things moving with a fast, colorful, and slickly sophisticated commentary. Wedged into the slot immediately preceding the Steve Allen show, newcomer is in a natural spot for town's party-goers and other late viewers.

REASON TO ANSWER THE CALL
With Bud Kraehling, Dale Woodly, others Producer: Fred Morgan
Director: Clarence Anderson
Writer: Gene Kohner
30 Mins.: Sun. (27), 5:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WCCO-TV, Minneapolis-St. Paul

A good production job must be credited to WCCO-TV for this public service contribution to the Red Cross fund raising campaign here.

Through film clips and gab, the manner in which the Red Cross responds when disaster strikes was vividly and strikingly depicted. The unfoldment undoubtedly left viewers convinced of the worthiness of the cause, aware of its financial needs and with a desire to contribute to it. In every way, the show stacked up as a well put together job, attesting to the skill of producer, director, writer and narrators Bud Kraehling and Dale Woodly.

How during the past year the Red Cross came to the help of this area's people in trouble hit home as projected by film and verbal description. There were movies of such specific instances of Red Cross assistance when fire routed a family, Red Cross workers helping to ease the burdens for cerebral palsy victims and hospital patients, the organization's activities resulting in a rescue from drowning, and its first aid teaching that led to a life's saving. Some who have been helped appeared before the camera and told their stories. Also, several Red Cross workers were interviewed interestingly about their activities and the campaign's local director made a brief plea for support.

A firstrate musical background enhanced the message's effectiveness. The final urging was to be there with a gift as big as your heart when the solicitor calls.

FROMKESS PLANS TO RESUME ON 'RAMAR'

Hollywood, March 15.

Leon Fromkess, who produces the "Ramar of the Jungle" vidfilm series, plans going back into production latter part of the year, but by then, his star, Jon Hall, expects to be in the jungles of New Guinea working on his own series.

"Ramar" production has been suspended for over a year, and when Hall was apprised of Fromkess' statement re resuming the series, he said that was the first he'd heard of it. In fact, added the star, Fromkess failed to pick up his option four months ago, and that's one of the reasons Hall plans a series of his own.

Fromkess explained his Arrow Productions has 52 "Ramars" making the rerun rounds and that he wants to recoup his investment before making additional firstruns.

CARTOONLAND
With Kenny Bowers
Producer-director: Bob Dressler
Writers: Bowers, Dressler
15 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 12:30 p.m.
Participating
WNBQ, Chicago

With the exception of WBBM-TV which rides with the CBS-TV network shows, the other Chi tele stations have given over their noon hours to the kids. WNBQ is now partaying this Kenny Bowers moppet twist with the preceding Johnny Coons "Noontime Comics" which first struck the lunchtime moppet bonanza several years back. Like with most of the others, the new entry is a variation of live-plus-celluloid theme but the switcheroo this time has Bowers doing his on-camera bits strictly in pantomime. Since the tykes obviously eat up the slapstick in the film cartoons it's to be guessed they'll likewise dig "Cousin Kenny's" silent routines woven through the reel.

Each day Bowers runs through a single sight gag with the typical "shambles" climax. On this installment (11) comic worked a broken pencil bit with the payoff coming in the form of a deluge of pencils from overhead. Sketch was spiced by some adroit sound effects. Another regular feature is a quickie drawing built around a different letter of the alphabet. This, of course, is the "educational" sequence. It's all harmless fun and certainly much quieter than the usual kiddie fare. Dave.

YOUR MORNING MALE
With Tom Moorehead, Eddie Roecker, Nancy Lewis, Larry Ferrari and Dick Strome Puppets Producer-Writer: Strome
Director: Ed Moore
90-Mins., Mon.-Fri. 8:30 a.m.
Participating
WFIL-TV, Philadelphia

After a two-week shakedown run of an hour daily, another half-hour has been added to the new Tom Moorehead variety session. The extra time allows for more of the same, repeats of weather reports and the news, another song and another organ solo. Excepting Larry Ferrari, the organist, the cast sits panelwise throughout the session. A man dressed as a gorilla wanders about. Only resemblance to usual panel setup is that the members break each other up, with vocalist Eddie Roecker the most hearty. Panelists only leave deck to perform and then get right back.

An informality, stemming from long association with sessions of similar content, is tailored for this early morning segment. An excessively cheery bunch, their quips range from mutual admiration to the humor of insult. Young chirper Nancy Lewis, (former hostess on Paul Whiteman's TV Teen Club) has a pleasant freshness coupled with sureness of approach. Roecker, a resonant baritone in the "Chocolate Soldier" style, delivers an excellent ballad.

A showy organist, Larry Ferrari has plenty of flourish at the console with a repertory that includes both schmaltz and jazz. Tom Moorehead, vet station gabber and sportscaster, comes through stronger than when spotted solo, works well with his panel associates and also does a bit for the kiddies with Dick Strome's puppets. Brand products are given as prizes for letters relating odds facts or stories. From those heard on program caught it's a cinch to be chosen. A grand weekly prize goes to viewer who identifies a celebrity from an old photo. If viewer wanders far from set during busy morning hours, there are still plenty audio values with weather, news and pop songs. Gagh.

ON CALL
With Frankie Laine, Johnnie Ray, William Holden
Producer: C. R. Pope Jr.
Directors: Dar Reed, Hal Lewis
120 Mins.; Sun. (27), 4 p.m.
KGMB-TV, Honolulu

It's not every day you can get Frankie Laine, Johnnie Ray and William Holden to headline a local tv show—and for free, at that. But this home town spectacular managed to do just that.

Live show, a salute to the Red Cross, got socko cooperation right down the line, with top local entertainers and radio-tv personalities joining the guest stars to produce a bangup extravaganza.

Disk jocks Hal Lewis, Lucky Luck, Ed Sheehan, Hank Sims, Gene Taylor and Ernest Kurlanski worked effortlessly. Singers Gene Roland, Lei Becker, Alfred Apaka, Phyllis Inez, Verle Henry, Peggy Hayama, The Four Jokers, Gabriel Sisters and Community Theatre's "South Pacific" stars scored.

For variety, the fast-paced spec introduced Tommy Fujiwara, impressionist; Howard and Wanda Bell, hand balancers, and chimpanzees from the Ward-Bell Circus; Jo Flanders' Dancers; Tokyo Can-Can Girls; Chuck Miller trio; Rollie Wray, organist; Clay Wheeler, pianist; Anna Bograit, Tahitian dancer; Bachran & Thomas, dancers; Sam the Gadget Man, a well known local tv pitchman.

William H. Ewing, news commentator and managing editor of The Star-Bulletin, did the narration.

With that amount of talent available, it would be easy to adlib a benefit show, but a detailed script gave solid continuity to the cooperative sustainer.

One of its internationally-known guest stars said the stanza would compare favorably with any network "spectacular," and he "wasn't being charitable." Walt.

MAHALIA JACKSON SINGS
With Jack Halloran Quartet, Mildred Falls, Jim Conway, Jack Callahan
Exec Producer: Les Weinrott
Producer: Chuck Strothers
Director: Dick Liesendahl
Writer: Studs Terkel
30 Mins.; Sunday, 10:15 p.m.
M. J. KELLY
WBBM-TV, Chicago

After the CBS radio web dropped Mahalia Jackson's Sunday night airer, the web's Chi tele o&o lost no time in projecting the gospel singer into the local commercial sweepstakes with two weekly half-hour sponsored shows. Aside from the fast bankroller wrapup, WBBM-TV's "Showmanship Station" banner takes on added luster with this top-drawer showcasing of a new tv personality. Already well established along the concert circuit and via her Columbia recordings, Miss Jackson is a cinch to win additional attention through the video exposure.

Thrush's Sunday night (13) curtainraiser came off smooth as silk and caught the full flavor of her devout yet happy-go-lucky outlook on life, which is as much a part of her bag of wares as her mellow pipes. Simple, yet dignified format, has her limmed by a spotlight on stage center with background lighting effects supplying discreet visual trimmings. Between tunes back by Mildred Falls' piano, she carries on a conversation with Jim Conway who works off camera, using a script by Studs Terkel whom she's adopted as her radio-tv mentor. It's an effective device.

Miss Jackson spun off four of her specialties, leading with "Rusty Old Halo" and closing with "The Lord's Prayer." As an example of her "gospel with a bounce," she zipped through "Didn't It Rain." It was a fine feast for the regular Mahalia fans and an exciting first bite for the new ones. Backing singer during a couple of her numbers and dishing out two of its own was the Jack Halloran Quartet. The four nice looking lads fit into the affair perfectly, providing an added dimension.

Even the car dealer blurbs voiced by Jack Callahan were properly dignified and restrained. Dave.

TEEN TWIRL
With Johnny Andrews, Jackie Lynn, Henry Levine and His "Dixielanders"; Teddi King, Tommy Mara, guests
Producer: George Cyr
Director: Charles Dargan
60 Mins.; Sat., 2 p.m.
WNBK, Cleveland

If this city's juvenile delinquency rate drops to nil at 2 p.m. on Saturday, "Teen Twirl" can take a vast share of credit. For one hour each Saturday, the WNBK musical aggregation takes over the Marine Room of the Hotel Olmstead for a teenage dance. Each week a different high school is invited and students not only have a chance to hear some of the slickest music around, but to show off their own talent and enjoy a session of rug cutting, and win jitterbugging honors.

Dance music is provided by Henry Levine and his Dixielanders, who not only bring back a refreshing touch of "Lower Basin Street" but provide a nifty bit of showmanship in such selections as "Bugle Call Rag" and "Muskrat Ramble." Thrush Jackie Lynn adds both beauty and charm with her vocals that included "Danger, Heartbreak Ahead," and "Count Your Blessing.'

As emcee, Johnny Andrews sparks the entire stanza and sets the tempo for the delightful hour-long dance. He also joins with a song or two, and participated with Andrews and Levine in a bit of singing tomfoolery. As special guests, Teddi King and Tommy Mara offered an additional flair of professional know-how.

Kudoes for the direction and coordination that make for the excellent local live offerings.
Mark.

THE KEY TO THE AGES
With Dr. Theodore Low, James Dickson, others Producer: Theodore Low
Director: Ed Sarrow
30 Mins., Sun., 8 p.m.
Sustaining
ABC-TV, from Baltimore

This Baltimore-originating show is another semi-educational offering by ABC and carried by 24 stations and is designed to show the relationship of the development of man and his culture to literature and visual materials. Dr. Theodore Low of Baltimore's Walters Art Gallery and Richard Hart of Baltimore's Enoch Pratt Library formatted the series. Each week a cultural book as a biog, historical novel, etc. is discussed with the gallery showing and discussing visual materials (vases, furniture, tapestries, etc.) of the period under discussion in the book. The show is in no sense a book review or critical discussion but rather an attempt to make a period of history or a man of historical significance live through tv.

On show reviewed, the book was "Rembrandt" by Jacob Rosenberg. Through an extremely apt use of a rear view projector, selected illustrations of Rembrandt's paintings were flashed into the set as pictured on a wall of a gallery. Then Dr. Low showed and discussed articles of artistic and historical value connected with the life, mores and metier of the artist.

Most outstanding part of the program was the excellent planning and execution of sets by WAAM-TV's Barry Mansfield. He succeeded in creating a realistic illusion of a spacious gallery with interesting stone and shadow effects. Camera work was excellent, though the program could use one additional camera for heightened effects. The show seemed to hold closeups of faces too long and closeups of Rembrandt's pictures being discussed not long enough. A better balance needs to be achieved between closeup shots.

The most obvious need of the program is continuity. No reference is made to previous or future shows, and the onetime or first-time viewer is never informed of the purpose of the series as a whole. Rather than a feeling of the development of man's culture, one feels that this is just a program on Rembrandt, which is not the case at all. It needs an "Omnibus" treatment.

"Key To the Ages" is a sustainer but lends itself to institutional type sponsorship by a major manufacturer. The show will never gather high ratings (especially at its present time segment) but it can do a job for a company "wishing to be identified with the public good." Marsh.

SUNSET VALLEY BARN DANCE
With David Stone, Sunset Valley musicians-singers, others Producer-director: Stone
95 Mins.; Sat., 10:45 p.m.
Participating
KSTP-TV, Mpls.-St. Paul

David Stone is an old and expert hand at this sort of cornball stuff, the hillbilly variety, that's surefire with the rural and smaller town element at which it's principally aimed. He has found the enlistment of a large audience in this agricultural belt a cinch and there can be no doubt he peddles a lot of sponsors' products.

Stone, convincingly ruralite himself in the character he portrays, produces and emcees to the barn dance manner born. Little wonder, then, at the show's high rating and popularity.

In show caught homespun music, clowning and verbal sallies and guest contributions were very much in the agricultural groove and evidently caught the full fancy of the large studio audience and undoubtedly clicked similarly over the air.

Six cowboy and farmhand attired men and one girl, comprising the band, sing and play in the barn setting, selling their lively hick, western and yodeling tunes to a fare-ye-well. Ensemble and solo numbers and serenades to various communities are sold with relish and skill. The group isn't slow in its leg-shaking, either. As a result, the flavorsome performance hit a pleasant entertainment level.

A singing group of 12 young women from nearby St. Cloud, Minn., calling itself the Variety Singers, came through well with several vocal selection, including a costumed Gay 90s bit.

Projected in an amiable, neighborly, intimate, pleastn and cheerful tone, the proceedings also received added zest from Stone's conversations with some of the older studio audience members.

A CONNECTICUT YANKEE
With Eddie Albert, Janet Blair, Boris Karloff, Leonard Elliott, Gale Sherwood, John Conte, others; Charles Sanford orch
Director-Producer: Max Liebman
Associate Producer-Director: Bill Hobin
TV Adaptation: William Friedberg, Neal Simon, Will Glickman, Al Schwartz
90 Mins., Sat. (12), 9 p.m.
OLDSMOBILE
NBC-TV, from New York (color)

(D. P. Brother)

A lot of talent, effort, extravaganza and especially money went into last Saturday night's (12) 90-minute colorspectacular, when Max Liebman resurrected Rodgers & Hart's "Connecticut Yankee" as tv's newest contribution to its musicomedy folio. There's no denying it had its pleasurable moments, but try as they might, all of King Arthur's horses and men couldn't pump freshness into what essentially has become an anti-quated relic of another era.

Back in '27 when William Gaxton and Constance Carpenter were heading up the frolic, the Herbert Fields musicalization of the Mark Twain story was, indeed, an innovation as Broadway musicals went. But today, "Yankee," after countless revivals (including a non-musical one only a season back on "Kraft Television Theatre"), has literally worn itself out.

There is, of course, much in the Rodgers-Hart song-and-dance version to commend it—notably such tunes as "My Heart Stood Still," "Thou Swell," "I Feel At Home With You" and "To Keep My Love Alive." Lorenz Hart's lyrics today, even as 28 years ago, are unbeatable. Liebman assembled some gifted performers, including Eddie Albert and Janet Blair, to take over the lead roles, with such reliables as Boris Karloff, John Conte, Gale Sherwood and Leonard Elliott in support.

Liebman vested the production with the usual topicalities that numbered, for example, a "Camelot Samba," with some distinctive choreography as Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander translated their court jestering into a pleasant dance turn. The compatible tint hues, particularly in the costuming, were of an appropriate brilliance to match the colorful 530 A.D. background of King Arthur's court.

Yet overall it came off as a listless production. It cried out for a verve and a spirit that seemed woefully missing. The comedy potentials of beltline operation in Camelot and the other extravagant satirical items were present, but somehow never fully realized.

Liebman invariably can be credited with shows that cling to all the niceties in production detail, but this time up there seemed an excessive amount of carelessness. Some of the dissolves were awkward (the Hartford-to Lancelot and back again transformations could have been handled far more adroitly and professionally), and much of the good musicomedy aspects of the show, particularly the dancing, suffered through ineffective camera treatment and the use of long shots when closeups were desirable.

Albert and Miss Blair made a fetching couple as the leads, with the latter in particular a major plus as she warmed up to her song and dance assignments. Gale Sherwood as the spurned Morgan LeFay made such a striking villainess that one could only figure Albert for a sucker.

KNOW YOUR NEIGHBORS
With Donald Ely, others
30 Mins.; Fri., 10:30 a.m.
Producer: Angela McDermott
Sustaining
WRGB-TV, Schenectady

Give the State U. Teachers College at New Paltz a B-plus for imagination, planning and projection on 13-week series designed to foster better world understanding by highlighting the life, customs, dress and cultures of various countries.

The college, which showed resourcefulness in another series on "TV Schooltime" last year, covered nations from Pakistan to Switzerland, England to Japan, Holland to Thailand, as well as several in Central and South America. It did so via commentaries and descriptions by faculty members who had visited them, with displays of articles purchased; guest appearances of exchange and other college professors, as well as foreign students.

Slides and other visual material were likewise used. A playlet was included on the final "America-Crosswords of the World," where a Prof. Hogan, author of a book on the United Nations, spoke authoritatively and perceptively about that organization. Jaco.

VARIETY - ARB City-By-City Syndicated and National Spot Film Chart

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 top-rated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This* VARIETY *chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time — day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv.), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quiz; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors rep the national spot sponsor for whom the film is aired.

Chi ABC Cookin' On TV 'Cookery'

Chicago, March 15.

On the assumption the network next fall will parlay additional afternoon programming atop the upcoming Walt Disney "Mickey Mouse Club" daytimer, Chi ABC-TV is plugging for a regular web berth for "Creative Cookery," currently a co-op offering. Belief is that the culinary show will be expecially valuable in the color era.

One of the reasons for the big push behind "Cookery" for national exposure is the revenue potential in the sidebar royalties. In the past six months WBKB, the originating station, has netted nearly $11,000 from the sale of the various cook books and gadgets incidentally touted on the show. Major domo of the display, Francois Polpe, has netted a like amount. Coin is over and above the regular sponsorship income.

Because of the royalty potential, it's argued the web next fall could feed the hour-long show for free to the affiliates on at least a trial basis with the incidental coin acting as a sort of a "subsidy."

With the show carried on only five stations, 10,332 copies of the Popes' cook book were sold direct at $3.95 each. Tome also is retailed at regular book stores. Over 3,000 cake decorating sets were ordered at $4.50 per.

SG Revamps Sales Staff; Brahm, Adler Are Named

Screen Gems has revamped its telepix sales setup via the creation of a staff of "senior account executives" who will concentrate on national sales, as delineated from its regular syndication force. First two "seniors" are Robert Brahm, who's functioned as eastern sales manager for the past two years, and S. L. (Stretch) Adler, who's moved over from the William Morris agency, where he was head of the Chicago radio-tv office.

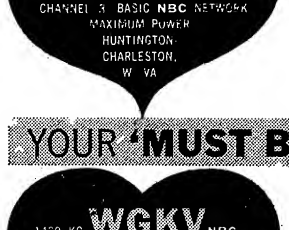
Succeeding Brahm as eastern sales chief on the syndication side is another newcomer, Ben Colman, who resigned as an account exec at Ziv Television Programs to take the post. Prior to his Ziv association, Colman was eastern sales chief for the Liberty network. Adler came to the Morris office from the sales staff of WLW-T in Cincinnatti. All the newly appointed execs report to sales v.p. John Mitchell.

New Orleans—Appointment of Dennis V. Donegan as local sales manager of WSMB, Gulf-Paramount Theatres station here, was announced Thursday (10) by John R. O'Meallie, veep and gen. mgr.

MULLEN RESIGNS AS VITAPIX-GUILD PREXY

Frank Mullen resigned last week as president of Vitapix-Guild Programs, Inc., one of the corporate offshoots of the agreement between Guild Films and Vitapix. He'll continue as a consultant to Vitapix, of which he formerly was president. Kenyon Brown, Vitapix prexy, and Ed Hall, v.p.-general manager, will also become prez and exec. v.p. of Vitapix-Guild. Latter is a holding company, exact nature of which has never been defined but which is believed to handle financial arrangements between Guild and Vitapix.

The former NBC veep's resignation wasn't exactly a surpise, in light of the fact that his post left him little in the way of duties. Mullen was Vitapix prexy for two and one-half years when the company was actually in the distribution field.



Ralston Buys 'Bandstand' For National TV Spread

Hollywood, March 15.

Ralston Purina is picking up the tab for a national spread of KTLA's "Bandstand Revue," buying video transcriptions of the hour-long show and telecasting half-hour versions in various markets around the country.

Sponsor bought show for national markets from Paramount Television Productions, via KTLA v.p.-general manager Klaus Landsberg.

First showings elsewhere of "Revue" will be in Frisco, Portland, Seattle, Providence, Cincinnati and St. Louis, with the company planning eventual expansion to about a dozen markets. Vicki Marlowe and the DeCastro Sisters are in the first transcriptions. They join regular cast headed by Leighton Noble and his orch, Anita Gordon, Rush Adams, Mercer Bros. and the McDonald sisters. Noble emcees the show.

have long and protracted repercussions, depending on commitments, promises, etc. Original NBC-WGR-TV pact was for two years. However, it's anticipated WGR will settle for ABC and dissolve the NBC affiliation within a year.

Situation may parallel NBC's initial foray into the U spectrum, with its New Britain, Conn., acquisition (designed to give the web Hartford-New Haven coverage) having invited a barrage of charges, counter-charges, litigation, etc.

The Buffalo UHF'er, incidentally, had been closed down, having suffered economic reverses.

The NBC-Westinghouse swap still awaits finalization. That's the deal whereby NBC acquires WPTZ (TV) and KYW (AM) in Philly, from Westinghouse, with the latter taking possession of NBC's brace of AM-TV operations in Cleveland. To boot, Westinghouse is reported to be getting $3,000,000 in cash.

WW Wall St. Blast Simmering Down

L'Affaire Winchell (Walter, that is) and his stock market tips is taking on all aspects of lots of bluster that will end in a whisper. The simmering-down process on Winchell's effect on the market came from three directions this week: (1) Sen. William J. Fulbright (Dem., Ark.), chairman of the Senate committee conducting a "friendly" investigation of the stock market, said that Winchell is "not an important man at the moment" in the investigation; (2) Frank Purcell, New York regional director of the Securities & Exchange Commission, said there was nothing illegal about Winchell's tips; and (3) the matter is academic for the future, since Winchell ends his ABC radio and tv show in June with no deal in sight on another network.

Columnist's on-the-air tips, culled (by his admission) largely from the financial pages of the N. Y. Times and the Wall Street Journal, brought on the biggest newspaper play of the committee hearings. His tip an Pantapec Oil, according to American Stock Exchange officials, brought on one of the biggest buying sprees in the Exchange's history. Officials of the Exchange had criticized the public tipping as unhealthy for the market, but saw no way of doing anything about it, since Winchell had no more than repeated what was common knowledge in financial circles and there was no question as to the accuracy of his tips.

Winchell had Sen. Homer Capehart (Rep., Ind.) on his Sunday (13) night ABC simulcast, and in response to what appeared to be written questions, declared that he had never recommended that listeners purchase or sell any particular stock. He said he never implied a specific stock would rise in price, and added that he had received no payment for mentioning the stocks nor had he engaged in speculation. (Earlier, he issued a statement saying he bought only U. S. Treasury Bonds). He also reiterated a request to Sen. Fulbright that he be allowed to testify.

Latest word from Sen. Fulbright was that since Winchell's name was "only incidentally mentioned," he hadn't be considered "sufficiently important" to be called. After the hearings run their course, he added, Winchell might be called, along with other witnesses, "if it then appears to be useful."

WW Retractions

advertisers and readers and making it "difficult or impossible" for Wechsler to continue working in his profession, was filed Feb. 17, 1952, in N. Y. Supreme Court. Co-defendants with Winchell and Hearst were ABC, Gruen Watch Co., and King Features. The simulcast retraction substituted ABC and Gruen for Hearst and the Mirror.

The Post, commenting on the retraction editorially Monday (14), posed its "vindication" as a larger issue, terming it "a dramatic setback for what has become known in mid-century America as the practice of mccarthyism . . . We felt the Winchell attack was a classic case-history in the McCarthy method and that in resisting it we were fighting one battle in an infinitely larger national conflict." Newspaper expressed the hope that the retractions will be "a new and effective deterrent to this kind of attack in America."

Billingsley's extended 45-minute semester which debuted over ABC this past Sunday (13), directly following WW. He wanted to do his regular newscast as part of the "Stork Club" show, since Winchell's own segment was dominantly a Q. & A. with Senator Homer Capehart of the Senate Banking Committee on the Wall St. situation. At first, ABC's prexy Kintner had said OK but later had to reverse field due to other split-network, and cooperative commercial commitments which, he said, wouldn't make this "stunt" feasible.

Time-Life Gettogether

(Winchell was planning to keep a luncheon date today (Wed.) with the Time-Life people at Time Inc.'s headquarters for a face-to-face powwow. He had been invited over the years before and nixed it. He and Time haven't been on friendliest footing.

(Winchell was amused by Fred Allen's crack on "What's My Line" that night to the effect "Winchell is a bigger man than Godfrey—he fired a whole network."

(Columnist states that he is looking for scripts to produce via his Broadway Stars Inc. which he formed two years ago, with an eye some day to become a legit entrepreneur.

(Winchell's crack about the Wall St. break, although it started to recover yesterday (Tues.) "too many piggies went to market" has been widely picked up as one factor in the break since the "friendly" Senatorial probe of Wall St. situation.)

Stock-Option Buy An Issue

Winchell is vehement about Kintner also in connection with an alleged stock-option buy but ABC avers that if ever stock options were offered to talent he (WW) would certainly be recommended for a large block. But unless a general talent offer was made, this was not feasible as a corporate proposition.

ABC did have a $1,000,000 special policy on both the network and Winchell but not on the "punitive damages" phase about which he complains. That "punitive damages" thing only came up when Westbrook Pegler lost the Quentin Reynolds suit and "maliciousness" became an issue.

Winchell says he only met Goldenson twice, once when the latter introduced himself at a theatre opening and the columnist said, "Hello boss"; and the second time he (Goldenson) was at an opening and Winchell went over to the AB-PT prexy and again said, "Hello boss." Winchell phoned Goldenson to tell him that "from what I know you're a nice man but unless I can get that protection I want out on my contract." The board met and acquiesced. Winchell's contract expires Dec. 25 this year.

Winchell of course may wind up on any network, ABC included, for that matter, should whatever sponsor who arises buy him and the time facilities.

Winchell's 10G a week rose to $16,000 when he did his radio-tv simulcast. He objected to the video thing tieing him down in New York whereas he could hibernate in Florida or on the Coast with only the radio medium. A recent desire to visit his family in Phoenix, Ariz., "meant it would cost me $5,000 out of pocket for the line facilities if I did so," says he.

When Winchell signed with ABC at 10G guarantee, he was payrolled at $12,500 almost immediately by the William H. Weintraub agency which bought him for Kaiser-Frazier. This was about the time, says he, when "I signed with Kintner and ABC on the back of a Stork Club menu." He explains this covenant was necessary because "in a couple of hours Jergens would have had the automatic privilege to retain me for another year."

Winchell says "I'm the only poor millionaire I know." He details that only recently he sold his Warner Hudnut stock and netted $63,000, being given stock options in lieu of a radio salary cut. He thought he had a stock deal with the old ABC and felt that with the United Paramount Theatres merger it might come to pass. Tommy Vellata, ABC news exec, periodically told him that the brass couldn't make an exception.

Winchell says that on one deal Kintner payrolled Sonny Werblin (MCA yeepee) at the sponsor's expense. When he protested to ABC that he "never had an agent," the company prez allegedly said that if the news commentator has no objection they'll pass that 10% "commission" onto the sponsor.

Winchell says he also thought he had a $1,000-a-week "lifetime" deal with ABC "even if I didn't phone in to say hello," and cites that as another "accumulative harrassment."

When Winchell got his 10,000 shares of Warner Hudnut it was priced at $17. Incidentally he turned over the $63,000 capital gain to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. (Understood that Winchell personally has given $450,000 to a half million personally to his pet charity).

May Sign With WM

Winchell may for the first time add the William Morris office as his agents. George Wood and Abe Lastfogel have been talking to the columnist on his future broadcasting plans.

They may segue back to NBC, where the Morris office is potent, but Manie Sacks, RCA veepee with whom Winchell has been talking things over, is putting it up to NBC prez and veepee Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver and Robert W. Sarnoff respectively.

One immediate problem is that of "time," since Sunday-at-9, Winchell's time-honored slot, is a choice Philco-Goodyear Playhouse commitment over NBC. Winchell says he's "not married to Sunday or any other day."

One intra-NBC showmanship idea advanced, even though discussions are in embryo, was slotting WW as a roving reporter into any of the spectaculars.

On the RCA level, 20% of the Camden plant's production last year was for Uncle Sam. Much of it is "classified" material. Brigadier General David Sarnoff still holds a commanding consultative position with the U.S. Defense Department, and that alone would make any brusque criticism of Governmental procedure or behavior, under any captious commentator's discussions, a highly sensitive problem.

"First of all," said one RCA topper, "it strikes me that the first consideration on anything like a Winchell deal would have to be with our company's attorneys." He went on that RCA is already embroiled with a flock of antitrust and other litigations. "And besides which, we're still operating under a consent decree; don't let us forget that either."

WHOM to Sombrero Web

WHOM, N. Y. radio indie in the Latino market, has signed on as the ninth member of the Sombrero Network. This is the first tie by the station with any kind of a national spot representation.

WHOM has been buying at least three Spanish soap operas a day from the Sombrero key, KCOR in San Antonio, for some time. With the addition of some 800,000 Spanish-speaking New Yorkers, the Sombrero web boasts nearly a total of 3,000,000 Latinos from its (six Texan, one Mexican, one Californian) stations.

'Peter Pan'

Ford commercials were pretty fancy ($30,000 each) considering their talent investments with people like Ernie Kovacs and Edith Adams "dramatizing" the Ford spiel and Vaughn Monroe, with an assist from Ernest Truex, dittoing on behalf of RCA Victor.

There was also an additional promotion budget of some $100,000 (divided 50-50 between both sponsors) which would bring "Pan" cost up nearer the $800,000 gross total. Manie Sacks, for Victor, says he doesn't know yet what the 40,000-odd Victor dealers cost the company for placards, window cards, valances, fly-leafs, etc., to shill for the "Pan" album which, however, was given extraordinary sales impetus by the show.

The "Peter Pan" legit production company got $225,000 for the package. It was figured Mary Martin would net around $40,000 and maybe up to $50,000 for her share of this but it is now reported she volunteered to cut to 35G, in order to expedite a $15,000 differential she wants the Peter Pan Producing Corp. to get. The legit show is still $85,000 in the red of a basic production investment of $125,000. It was figured there would be just enough margin from the telespectacular to make the legit investment even, but apparently unexpected charges cut it down so that it fell some $15,000 short. Hence her voluntary gesture.

It was stated that unexpected proprietary rights cropped up from Jerome Robbins for the choreography, for example; from producer Edwin Lester (he's the associate of Miss Martin's husband, Richard Halliday); from the songsmiths—Jule Styne, Adolph Green, Betty Comden, Mark Charlop and Carolyn Leigh. NBC also had to make a $25,000 separate deal with the Sir James M. Barrie estate for the tv rights. This goes to the Barrie Hospital, London, via Peter Laurence, who owns stage and tv rights as result of producing the Jean Arthur "Pan" version.

On the subject of "Disneyland," Walt Disney produced "Peter Pan," so there's no such thing as a permanent residual right from this Mary Martin "Pan" teleshow, because a kinescope is the same as a film right.

However, RCA-NBC, when it engages in legit bankrolling, does these things with an eye to sundry other residual values. Sacks, who is a staff veepee of RCA and also v.p. and g.m. of the RCA Victor Records division, reported "the telecast has made a standard of our 'Peter Pan' album. Up to now it sold only 30,000; the next day Liberty Music Shops in N. Y. sold 500 albums, and we're on the road now.

NBC looks to "Pan" as a regular seasonal repeat—"live," of course—just as Gian-Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" at Xmas. Miss Martin has indicated she will reprise her role.

Theatre B.O. Dip Up to 50%

Stanley Warner eastern zone theatres reported up to 50% boxoffice inroads by the "Peter Pan" tv "opposition." Earlier estimates placed the b.o. dent at 10-30%.

Danny Thomas cashed in quick on "Pan" with his filmed show, based on the Barrie whimsy, breaking the next night (Tues.), over ABC-TV, and riding the crest of the Mary Martin telespec.

On the subject of "Pan" album sales, disk jockeys took up plugging the show's excerpts like pops, with likelihood that some of the tunes may break through.

can only assume responsibility for his own commercial.

Meantime, there have been adjustments in the setup of two of the four contractors. The Norman Collins group is merging with the Incorporated Television Program Co., the outfit headed by Prince Littler and Val Parnell, which failed in its application to be a contractor in its own right. This move has now received the sanction of ITA.

sold. However, Pillsbury has already undertaken clearance of key markets.

Practice of national bankrollers buying syndicated shows on a regional basis, either to push regional products or to take advantage of regional conditions, is a growing one. One example is Lipton Tea, which bought "The Whistler" on the Coast in order to push iced-tea on a year-round basis in the warm California climes. Case of Pillsbury, however, is even more important in that the mill's network commitments are even more extensive, what with Arthur Godfrey mornings and Wednesdays and Art Linkletter in the afternoon. Firm recently checked out of its "Mickey Rooney" show sponsorship.

NBC-TV'S 'SIPLAN' GOING TO THE DOGS

First taker under NBC-TV's "Summer Incentive Plan" is Sergeant Dog Care Products. "SIP" is the sales gimmick under which savings up to 34.6% are provided participating sponsors on any combination of the web's "TNT" ("Today"-"Home"-"Tonight") programs. It's designed as a lure for hot weather exposure from May 30 to Sept. 2, with a bonus based on number of participations bought. For instance, Sergeant has pacted for 20 spots and gets four on the cuff.

SI Plan ranges from 1 gratis spot for 7 to 11 bought to 18 free-for-alls when 52 to 54 are bought, and for paid participations above 52, stockholders are allowed a one-timer bonus for every three paid. The Sergeant buy is for "Home." A regular participator, Star-Kist Tuna, will stay on during the summer to latch on to the plan with one-a-week on the threesome. Others who followed the dogs into the kennel are Maybelline (39 on "THT"), Lou Blower (13 on "Tonight") and Glass Container Corp. (12 on "Home").

New Orleans—WBRZ, new tv station at Baton Rouge, is expected to begin operating on Channel 2 early in April, Roy Dabasie is general manager.

'Pays To Summortize'

backed by lotsa research, some impressive, some less so. On the increase in set circulation, comparative fall, 1953 and summer, 1954 delivered homes figures show only an 8% decrease, due to a 19% increase in set circulation offsetting a 27% decrease in average ratings. The comparison of early-evening and late-night sets-in-use falloff, using Nielsen Monday-Friday averages, shows a 50% summer decline in the 7:30-8 p.m. time but only a 22% drop at 9:30-10 (all figures New York time).

Comparison of replacements vs. same show repeats indicate that Nielsen average for 19 shows in the replacement category suffered a 22% decline in share of audience, while the repeat shows, of which there were 12, dropped only 4% in share. Re summer sales, Dept. of Commerce data quoted shows that summer months (June, July and August) constitute 25.2% of total volume of all retail stores, slightly above an average for any three-month period. Additionally, it's pointed out that many products not purely seasonal enjoy peak sales in those months: shampoo, home permanents, deodorants, tea, toilet soap, ready-to-eat cereals, fruit juices, spiced meat, canned fish, packed detergents and razor blades.

Finally, the study attacks what it calls the "hiatus psychology" which "equated summer with 'nobody home' or 'nobody listening or watching.'" Stating this psychology has been altered by the facts of summer leisure time activity, the study cites an Advertest survey in New York made last August and showing that in 93% of homes, someone is home on the average summer day for an average of 10½ hours between 7 a.m. and midnight, and also that televiewing accounted for as much of the respondents' leisure time as all other media combined — radio, newspapers and magazines.

BIOGRAPHY IN SOUND
(The Kenton Era)
With Stan Kenton, Frank Sinatra, Leith Stevens, Don Gills, others
Producer-director: Bob Wogan
55 Mins., Sun. (13), 7 p.m.
NBC, from N.Y. (transcribed)

NBC, which is a first cousin to the RCA Victor label, went to a rival disk company Sunday (13) for another chapter in its "Biography In Sound" series. By putting Stan Kenton on the pedestal for the biographical salute, Capitol Records came in for a solid 55-minute plug for its deluxe package, "The Kenton Era." Stanza should do plenty to get the $25 set moving on the retail level.

Producer-director Bob Wogan had plenty of material to choose from for a wax rundown of "The Kenton Era." The package contains four 12-inch LP's and offers a solid sampling of the band's works as well as a slick patter spiel on what the orch is trying to do by the maestro. All Wogan really had to do was edit the material at hand and leave room for emcee Frank Sinatra and verbal tributes by Don Gillis and Leith Stevens.

Sinatra, also a Capitol Records pactee, did a workmanlike job in keeping the whole thing flowing. His easy manner excellently complemented the drive of the band and the intensity of the maestro, especially when latter talked of his mission in the jazz field.

The stanza was an interesting flight into the jazz world, Kenton style, and the kind of plug that's hard to buy. Gros.

CLOCK WATCHERS
With Wink Martindale, Paul Dorman
Producer-Director: Dick Covington
4 hrs., Mon.-thru-Sat., 5 a.m.
Participating
WHBQ, Memphis

Wink Martindale's early ayem stint blurbed across the board over WHBQ, Mutual outlet here, is a topper in this area for this type of a show. It isn't the run-of-the-mill morning stanzas which usually spotlights one category of music as hillbilly, rhythm and blues, pop, etc.,—but along with the astute platter selecting of program director Dick Covington, he has one of the most variety-type morning stints in the Memphis sector. And what's more Martindale knows what to do with a morning show and gives his listeners not a beaucoup of yak-yak and fill-in material to take up time—but just handles the show in a stellar manner which makes for good listening.

Martindale, who also does a daily stint over WHBQ-TV as "Mars Patrol," is a youngster of 21, and should hit higher heights in AM and TV circles—if this "Clock Watchers" program is any criterion. He segues into his records with a winsome and terrif voice delivery. He really scores in the voice department and knows what to do with his announcing tonsils. And another marker in his corner is fact that he isn't trying to sell his monicker throughout the four-hour stanza but does a selling job for his load of sponsors and a sales plus stint in spieling about the platters.

Style and program delivery for the morning show is not monotonous and becomes contagious. The boy's got it. In addition to his wisely spaced chatter on weather, time, etc., Paul Dorman is socko daily with a five-minute news roundup on the hour during the four-hour parade. Matt.

Radio Followup

It's amazing what tight program supervision by a network program department can do for a show. Take the case of "Music Tent," which preemed on ABC Radio a couple of weeks ago. Initial show, brought in by the Associated Music Tents of America as their own package, was a mess, with poor talent, poorer continuity and a rash of giveaways that made a seem like bargain day at Klein's.

Since the preem, the ABC program department has clamped down on the show, but hard, since it had apparently let the first one go by without any careful supervision. Result is considerable tightening, better talent and a minimum play on the free prizes. As it now stands, "Music Tent" is a fairly entertaining 25 minutes (Thursday nights) of show music, sung by hopefuls with passable talent backed by the thoroughly pro Glenn Osser orch. As a sidelight, there's some background on the progress of the music tent per se in the U.S.

Contestants on the show caught, Marie Martell, Ed Powell, Juliene Marie and Richard Towers, were all better than average. Towers won on his "When You're Away." Emcee Dirk Fredericks, in much more informative style than on the preem, got in some to-the-point interviews with the judges, tent operators Ben Goodman and Walter Davis and producer-director Bill Ross. Bernard Dougall's script made sense. All in all, a pleasant show, though somewhat on the lightweight side. Chan.

STANDOUT
With Fahey Flynn, Hugh Hill
Producer: Al Bland
Writers: Gene Dalley, Erv Lewis
15 Min.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 5:30 p.m.
WBBM, Chicago

CBS' WBBM continues to buck the deejay trend, sticking with live or at least specially taped programming material most of the broadcast day. "Standout" is a potpourri of offbeat feature material culled from the day's news and narrated by Fahey Flynn. Per the station's usual standards, it's a neatly put-together bundle that makes for pleasant if not particularly exciting listening.

Chapter dialed (11) featured a taped interview by special events chief Hugh Hill with Gloria Swanson which held interest as the articulate actress reminisced about the silent pic era. Unusual recording of old music boxes added further spice as did Flynn's rundown of strange laws taken with credit from the "Nonsense, USA" tome. Flynn turned in his usual competent job at the mike. Dave.

four shows that have been in the works:

1. Bernard Prockter's pilot strip of "Family Next Door," which Television Programs of America attempted to put into syndication, has reverted to Prockter. He's trying to sell it, but without success thus far.

2. "Heart of Juliet Jones" was produced last summer by Charles Irving for Motion Pictures for Television. MPTV met with little success, and turned the pilots back to Irving. William Morris agency tried to peddle the show sans success to a distributor. Official deal came up, then fell through, and Morris presumably has the audtions out again along Madison Ave.

3. ABC Film Syndication has okayed filming of three quarter-hours of "Life Can Be Beautiful," with Transamerican's John Clark filming the property. Pilots should be ready in a couple of weeks, after which they go out to the agencies for perusal.

4. The Mona Kent series to be lensed in Jamaica is still in the script stages, with no indication as to when production will start there. Last word was that architects were laying plans for construction of studios on the island, but that's about the extent of this operation.

Distribs feel that filmed soapers for syndication are inevitable, since daytime is the only virgin sales territory where clearance is no problem. It's all a matter of timing, however, and the majors admit they're not ready yet. NBC Film Division says it's a year off; CBS Television Film Sales is surveying the field but won't move until it's compiled its findings and then only if it finds them positive. Otherwise, daytime remains frustration time for the syndicators, except as a spot for rerun sales on a strip and multiple-run basis.

'Lucy'

deal made with CBS and its option on the 9 o'clock period. CBS voted in General Foods' favor—permitting the alternate-week sponsorship with P & G.

'Lucy's' Canada Sponsors

"I Love Lucy," though television's toprated entry in the U. S. for the past three years, makes a belated bow on the 21-station Canadian Broadcasting Corp. network March 23. Show will be sponsored in Canada on alternate weeks by Sylvania Electric and H. J. Heinz. Buy for both companies marks an upbeat in their tele activities, since each bankroll only one network show apiece in the U. S.

Sale of "Lucy" to the CBC was handled by CBS Television Film Sales, the syndication arm of the network, which also sold the "Lucy" reruns for Sunday afternoons on CBS to Lehn & Fink. CBC, however, set the sponsorship deals.

Set Coast Huddles On 'Mickey Mouse' TV'er

Group of ABC-TV execs, along with all the sponsors signed thus far for Walt Disney's upcoming daytime "Mickey Mouse Club," plane for the Coast next Monday (21) for a series of conferences on commercial format for the series. They'll meet with Disney and his staff, and get the fullscale tour treatment of the Burbank installation. Meeting is similar to the one held last summer for "Disneyland" clients, and next week's session will be followed by another come mid-April.

For some reason, though, the network is still keeping the wraps on all sponsor information concerning "Mickey Mouse." Web won't say who the sponsors are, nor will it say which of its execs will sit in on the huddles next week. It is known definitely, though, that General Mills will be one of the bankrollers,- the biggest, in fact, with three half-hours a week, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

has been no refusal by a personality on that count.

SSC&B, the Noxzema agency, is meeting with the sponsor on Friday (18) and will recommend renewal, to bring the issue to a head for the time being.

Not generally known is that "PP" has become a quasi-cooperative show, with dozens of sponsors picking it up in various regions. Thus the "PP" guests don't know what's going on commercially "behind their backs" except in the case of national sponsors.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

Columnist showman Ed Sullivan admittedly long cool to the so-called Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, led off his N.Y. Daily News column on March 10:

"Broadway tv colony really steamed at the 'Emmy' awards. The shabby deal given Jackie Gleason, underscored by the fact that his two supporting players, Art Carney and Audrey Meadows, were honored while Gleason was ignored, is particularly griping. Best reflection on the awards is this: of the 10-top programs in the February Nielsen ratings, only one, 'Disneyland,' was honored. 'I Love Lucy,' the public's No. 1 favorite, got nothing. The Coasters picked Loretta Young over Lucille Ball and Eve Arden. A year ago, Ben Gross and this reporter warned the eastern tv moguls that if they didn't step in, the West Coast 'Emmy' sponsors would take control, make up daffy classifications for balloting, give the easterners a bad deal. It has come to pass."

The Alfred I. duPont Awards in Radio-TV go to WHAS in Louisville, KGAK in Gallup, N. M., and CBS commentator Eric Sevareid for "meritorious service to the American people" in 1954. The 12th annual awards will be made at a dinner in the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, March 25. Chairman is Dr. Francis P. Gaines, prexy of Washington & Lee U. Each award consists of a plaque and a check for $1,000.

WHAS, associated with the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Times, is cited for "programming which consistently shows a lively sense of public responsibility and an awareness of public and community interests." KGAK, 250-watter, draws the palm for "initiative shown in establishing and maintaining radio service to the Navajo and Zuni Indians in their own languages, thereby bringing radio communication for the first time to these Indian peoples." Sevareid is wreathed for "thoughtful and lucid analysis of the current scene, for penetrating knowledge of men and events combined with tolerance, reasonableness, and a leavening of friendly or caustic humor," among other attributes.

CBS-TV's "Person to Person" will add WPRO-Providence on April 1 and on April 29 three more, WTVJ-Miami, KOTV-Tulsa and WOI-Ames-Des Moines, to total 92 outlets. With advent of daylight time, it's figured that more stations will latch on in view of the better break on the clock for the 10:30 p.m. show.

Since the Aussie radio setup is so much like that in the U. S. commercially, it came as no surprise last week when the largest broadcast interest from "down under" pencilled as a member of Radio Advertising Bureau. Macquarie Broadcasting Service became the first Anzac group to join an American sales and promotion outfit.

Incidentally, Macquarie is behind many of the half-hour transcribed radio packages being distributed in the U. S. The group is also understood to be an integral part of planned vidfilm ventures for American consumption.

WABC Jock Sees Quick Cool-Off For R&B; Doesn't Influence Kids

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

In the past few weeks, much has been said about rhythm & blues, rock & roll, etc., in VARIETY with warnings to publishers, statements by disk jockeys to the effect that they are not going to play "rhythm & blues" because of some vague connection between this type of record and juvenile delinquency. It is my opinion that kids who are spending their time listening and taking an interest in records are not going to be involved in juvenile delinquency. It is the ones out on the street I worry about. Teenagers aren't buying records for the sex angle. If they were, then Marilyn Monroe's record of "After You Get What You Want" would be the No. 1 record in American. Instead, "Davey Crockett," "Open Up Your Heart" and others are big sellers.

My program, "The Boy Next Door," offers quite a variety of music, live and recorded. I play some r&b records for one reason, and that is because my listeners like to hear them.

At the present writing, the top three r&b records are as follows: "Pledging My Love," "Sincerely," and "Earth Angel"—none of which contains any objectionable lyrics. Naturally, certain records that are sent to the disk jockeys are in poor taste, but this applies to c&w and pop, as well as r&b. As of the moment, the pop and r&b favorites are about the same. They are love

The Crew-Cuts are letting their success go to everybody else's head. Mercury Records vocal combo is branching out into the manufacturing biz to produce Crew-Cuts Cream Oil and Crew-Cuts Shampoo.

Company recently was formed by the combo's manager, Fred Strauss. The products are expected to be on the market by May 1.

Jolson Estate Sues Decca For More Royalties

The estate of Al Jolson, repped by the Irving Trust Co. and attorney Charles Schwartz (& Frohlich), filed suit against Decca Records in N. Y. Supreme Court last week to get an accounting of royalties allegedly due the late mammy singer from the sale of his disks.

Suit is based on Jolson's last five-year deal with the diskery signed in 1948, two years before his death. Deal called for Decca to pay Jolson, or his estate, a minimum of $1,000 per week for the five years, plus whatever royalties accumulated over this guarantee. Decca had the option of paying the surplus royalties over a 24-month period after 1953 when the five-year deal expired.

Decca offered to pay the Jolson estate $237,000 in royalties earned over the minimum guarantee at the rate of $10,650 for the first two months and $9,800 for the next 22 months. The complainants, however, have rejected this figure, claiming the diskery has underestimated Jolson's earnings by making "improper" deductions. The complainants are asking the court to authorize an accounting of the diskery's books to determine the "true amount."

Late in his career, Jolson zoomed into the bestseller disk lists via his soundtrack vocalizing in Columbia Pictures' biopics, "The Jolson Story" and "Jolson Sings Again." The Jolson albums from the pic went over the 1,000,000 marker.

JOHN SCHULMAN SETS OWN LEGAL OFFICE

John Schulman, vet music industry legalite, has exited the law firm of Hays, St. John, Abramson & Schulman with which he had been associated as partner for many years. Latter firm has dropped Schulman's name from its stationery.

Schulman now is hanging his shingle at the 711 Fifth Avenue headquarters in N.Y. which he set up to handle the antitrust suit of the 33 songwriters against Broadcast Music Inc. and the broadcasting industry. Schulman will also continue to represent the Songwriters Protective Assn.

San Francisco, March 15.

At the San Francisco Press & Union League Club dinner honoring L. Wolfe Gilbert last Thursday (10), the vet ASCAP writer added his rap to the rhythm & blues "leer-ic" vogue in his regular commentary.

After a three-day tour of the Frisco deejays, Gilbert reports that the platter spinners have curtailed the spinning of r&b platters and that its popularity has fallen off in this area.

Shaw Taking Over Link Post as Professional Chief at Marks Music

Arnold Shaw has been set as the new professional chief at E. B. Marks Music. He's taking over the post vacated by Harry Link, who had been Marks' professional topper for the past four years. Link ankled the spot when his pact expired last week (12).

Currently veepee and general manager at Hill & Range, Shaw will move into the Marks setup around May 1. Meantime, the firm's professional activities will be handled by the pubbery's prexy, Herbert E. Marks.

Shaw has been with H&R for the past two years. Before that he was general professional manager of Lou Levy's Duchess Music. He has been in the music biz for close to 20 years and has penned such tomes as "The Lingo of Tin Pan Alley" and "The Money Song." He's also co-editor of "The Schillinger System of Musical Composition."

Link is expected to announce his future plans by the first of April. It's reported that he's going into his own publishing setup.

'Romeo and Juliet' Pic Score on Epic Platter

The British pic version of "Romeo and Juliet" will hit the disk market via Epic Records, Columbia subsid. Label has latched on to the soundtrack rights from the film and will release excerpts in a 12-inch LP package.

Album will feature Laurence Harvey, Susan Shentall, Flora Robson and Mervyn Johns. C. Lambert Williamson conducts the orch. Pic was produced by Sandro Ghenzi in association with Joseph Janni.

Cooke on Wax

Alistair Cooke has caught the waxing bug. Conferencier of CBS-TV's "Omnibus" series has cut a 12-inch longplay album for Columbia Records tagged "An Evening With Alistair Cooke."

Package features Cooke's narration and whistling as he self-accomps on the keyboard with workovers of pops, blues and folk items.

HAS EVERYTHING EXCEPT NO. 1

Broadcast Music Inc., riding the crest of the rhythm & blues tide, is dominating the hit lists to an extent never before achieved by affiliates of the licensing organization. The last time BMI was riding high was a couple of years ago when the cycle of country & western tunes was going full blast. But even at that time, BMI did not have the superiority it has at present.

The only thing that BMI doesn't have at the present time is the No. 1 tune. That happens to be "Melody of Love," a Shapiro-Bernstein copyright that's licensed through the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers." But after that, it's all BMI.

According to the lineup on the "Hit Parade" show over last weekend, "Melody of Love" topped the list with the next six tunes in BMI's corner. In order of their standing, they were "Ko Ko Mo," "Sincerely," "Tweedle Dee," "Hearts of Stone," "That's All I Want From You" and "Open Up Your Heart." BMI is also going strong with "The Ballad of Davey Crockett" and "Earth Angel."

Out of the top 10 tunes, BMI actually accounts for eight since the Crazzy Otto disk medley is made up of ASCAP standards. The rhythm & blues tunes, all BMI-licensed, account for five of the top 10, thus giving BMI the overwhelming edge on the current hit lists.

Hill & Range Sues Sesac for $100,000, Charging Monopoly

Affiliated Music Enterprises, a subsid of Jean & Julian Aberbach's Hill & Range publishing outfit, has filed a $100,000 suit against the licensing society, Sesac Inc., for allegedly violating the Sherman-Clayton antitrust act. Affiliated charges Sesac with attempting to gain a monopolistic control of classical music with a religious character, of fixing prices of performances and of imposing tie-ins on the users of its music.

Affiliated, in its complaint, stated that last year it attempted to negotiate deals with several publishers in the gospel field. The defendant, it was charged, coerced the gospel publishers to sever negotiations with Affiliated. Latter charged that Sesac was attempting to destroy it as a competitor.

Sesac, formerly the Society of European Stage Authors & Composers, is a private licensing society formed in 1930. It licenses music mostly in the standard field.

Decca's 1954 Net Up to $1,384,410; Disk Sale Gross at $18,870,000

Monicker Mystery

Who is Crazy Otto? That's the poser currently troubling the music biz.

After Decca started the ball rolling with the release of a German-made platter by Der Schrage Otto, Dot followed with a Crazy Otto disk cut by Johnny Maddox. Now, it's Bill Rowland, pianist for Perry Como, who is said to have done the barrelhouse keyboarding on the Dot slice, instead of Maddox. RCA Victor is going along with Rowland and has pacted him for similar-styled keyboard cuts.

When Decca's Der Schrage Otto took off, label anglicized it to The Crazy Otto. His mccoy monicker is Fritz Schulz-Riechel.

Decca Records solidified its financial operations during 1954 as a result of its heavy investment in Universal Pictures and upped sales of its disks. Net income for 1954, including dividends received from Universal but not including any share of the undistributed earnings of U, amounted to $1,384,410. This compares with the 1953 net of $1,240,438, computed on the same basis.

If the undistributed net earnings of U are taken into account, Decca's 1954 take appears to have zoomed sharply. On this basis, Decca's net was $3,070,205, equivalent to $1.92 a share on the 1,602,501 outstanding shares. This compares with the 1953 net on the same basis of $1,862,266, or $1.38 per share on the 1,354,158 shares of outstanding common stock at that time. Decca has been expanding its stock issue while taking over more shares of Universal Pictures. At the present time, Decca owns 72% of U's common stock, having started to acquire the picture company holdings in 1951 as part of the diskery's diversification plan.

The company's disk sales also reflected the general upbeat. In 1954, the gross totalled $18,870,000, as compared with $17,990,000 for 1953. Decca rode with a considerable number of hits last year. Kitty Kallen's "Little Things Mean a

EMI Finalizes Capitol Records' $8,000,000 Buy

The long pending deal for the EMI (Electric & Musical Industries) takeover of Capitol Records was finalized last week concurrent with the return of Cap prez Glenn E. Wallichs from parleys in London. Wallichs continues as firm's prexy and will also be a director of the company.

Since the deal was announced in January, EMI has acquired 96.4% of Cap stock via purchase of 459,147 shares from 1,057 stockholders. Shares were bought at $17.50 each. Deal comes to $8,000,000.

A board of directors appointed by Wallichs includes J. F. Lockwood, chairman of EMI's board of directors; L. J. Brown, EMI's managing director; J. M. MacLeod, of EMI-International, Paris; Roger Smith, general counsel for Lockheed Aircraft, Burbank, Cal.; John A. Wells, partner in law firm of Dwight, Royall, Harris, Koegel & Caskey.

Wallichs also announced that no changes in the present management of Cap are being contemplated.

At the time the stock sale was announced, Cap shares were selling at $13. Wallichs, Johnny Mercer and the estate of Buddy DeSylva contracted to sell their combined holding of 248,435 shares.

'No Making of Double-Entendre R&B Disks'—King Records V.P.'s Pledge

Cincinnati.

Editor, VARIETY:

We have read with great interest and complete approval your editorial in the Feb. 23 issue of VARIETY.

Several months ago we took definite steps to eliminate the possibility of objectionable material being recorded by our a&r men on our three labels, King, Federal and Deluxe, by writing them as follows:

"We do not need dirt or smut to write a song. Imagination, newness of ideas, hard work to get original new sounds, lyrics and tunes will do the job all the time. This is just a reminder that we will never relent again and allow off-color lyrics. If any of you record such material you, yourself, will have to pay for that part of the session that will be thrown out because of improper lyrics."

We know we are not without guilt in having the past allowed some double-entendre tunes to reach the public, but I can assure you there will be no repetition.

Our policy is definitely established and that policy is, in all cases, to reject a tune if, in our opinion, it is unsuitable for the teen-age group, who are today heavy buyers of r&b, as well as pop releases.

We know that at times there will be a difference of opinion as to whether a given word or phrase measures up to our good intentions, but I believe you will agree we, in this company, are sincerely trying to abolish the objectionable songs.

Harry Fox Gets 10G From Coast Diskery In Royalty Hassle

Aladdin Records, Coast diskery, has moved to settle its royalty dispute with a group of publishers, represented by agent and trustee Harry Fox, by offering to shell out $10,000 plus $1,500 for legal expenses incurred by Fox. Latter has indicated that Aladdin's offer will be okayed.

Fox, who collects mechanical royalties for most of the top publishers and some lesser ones as well, has been stepping up his policing activities. His auditors have been checking the books of licensed diskers to get a right count on royalties due. In addition, Fox, together with attorney Julian T. Abeles (& Bernstein), has been cracking down on disk pirates who have been issuing unauthorized platters without bothering to pay for the music at all.

Video Boosts 'Peter Pan' Album Sales to 50,000

The viedeocast of "Peter Pan" on the NBC-TV network March 7, which played to about 65,000,000 viewers, is pushing the RCA Victor original cast album version of the musical above the 50,000 marker. Album, which was released last October, was a moderate seller until the video show, having just edged up to the 30,000 marker.

The impact of the tv show accounted for another 7,000 sales in the New York area alone the first week after the show. Curiously, action on the album was extremely uneven in various keys. While N. Y. was hot for the set, the Philadelphia market showed little gain as a result of the video show.

MGM's Pacting Binge

MGM Records went on a pacting binge last week, adding new disk names to its pop, country & western and rhythm & blues divisions.

Added to the pop roster were the Marion Sisters, Danny Costello and The Mascots. Inked for c&w release were Dot & Smokey, Jack Valentine, Raney Atcher and Bud Deckelman. Joining the label's r&b contingent are The Ramblers and Ray Reid.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By MIKE GROSS

Eddie Fisher: "Just One More Time"-"Take My Love" (Victor). Chalk up another winner for Eddie Fisher, and it could be a two-sided click, too. "Just One More Time" is a shoo-in while "Take My Love" will take a little longer but is sure to hit the big payoff brackets. "Time" is in Fisher's previous "I Need You Now" groove and the crooner takes full advantage of the tune's zingy quality by belting with a zestfull enthusiasm. "Love," from the Metro pic, "The Glass Slipper," has a standout melodic line and an okay lyric, but Fisher's reading will give it the push it needs. David Rose's orch tackles "Love" for the MGM label but it comes out a little too schmaltzy.

Billy Vaughn: "Silver Moon"-"Baby O'Mine" (Dot). A lot of vet ASCAPers will owe plenty to Billy Vaughn if he keeps digging into the morgue and coming out with sock shellac workovers. He started it a couple of months ago with "Melody of Love" and he's due for a repeat click with "Silver Moon" out of the Sigmund Romberg files. Vaughn's orch gives it the old-fashioned treatment that's easy on the ear and a refreshing change of pace from the predominant r&b vogue. "Baby O' Mine" is a tidy little item that's not hard to take.

Frank Sinatra & The Nuggets: "Two Hearts"-"From The Bottom To The Top" (Capitol). Now it's Sinatra who's gone r&b—and not bad, either. "Two Hearts" is the side that will grab the big play. Tune was kicked off originally by The Charms on the indie De Luxe label but it'll be Sinatra's slice all the way. His style can be tagged as a modified r&b but it takes plenty of power and gets the song across with proper effect. The Nuggets supply a typical r&b vocal group assist. The Doodlers take off on "Two Hearts" for RCA Victor with a neat rhythmic beat. It's no contest, however, as far as the battle with Sinatra is concerned. On the Capitol flip, Sinatra and The Nuggets have a frisky item tagged "From The Bottom to the Top" to play with, but it doesn't add up to much.

The Ames Bros.: "Sweet Brown-Eyed Baby"-"Sympathetic Eyes" (Victor). There's no stopping a tune that has the lilting beat and snappy lyric of "Sweet Brown-Eyed Baby," especially when it's worked over by the Ames Bros. Headed for hefty spinning time on all levels. "Sympathetic Eyes" is the kind of ballad that always manages to get heard. Competish from its mate will be rough but "Eyes" rates and is sure to get its share of spins.

Steve Clayton: "Aladdin's Lamp"-"Where You Go, Go I" (Columbia). Steve Clayton is a newcomer to the wax market and this coupling gets him off to a strong start. He's a legitimate stylist who can get his point across without any vocal trickery. He's bound to develop into a potent wax name. The best effort on his initialer is "Aladdin's Lamp," a smoothly knit ballad that could mean something if the jocks get behind it. Bottom deck is par for the course.

Denise Lor: "Butterfingers"-"The Man I've Been Looking For" (Mercury). "Butterfingers" is a definite coin-grabber. Running time of just under two minutes makes it a natural for the coin machines and its zippy quality will make it a programming special for the deejays. Tune is a bright and rhythmic entry and Denise Lor brings it home with a lighthearted attack. Her vocalistics are much warmer on the reverse side where she approaches "The Man I've Been Looking For." It's a well-constructed ballad with a neat melding of melody and lyric. It's the kind of side that needs plenty of spinning help before it takes off.

The Stargazers: "Somebody"-"No More" (London). There's enough musical fun on this coupling to rack up a good spinning score with the deejays and the coinbox clientele. Both sides are done in the idiom of the 1920s and even if it doesn't bring back any memories to the coke-set, it should give 'em plenty of kicks. "Somebody," a breezy, free-wheeling item, has the best takeoff chance and The Stargazers give it an imaginative tongue-in-cheek reading. If the DeJohn Sisters hadn't worked "No More" to death on the Epic label, The Stargazers' slice would have a better chance. The group is excellently backed by Sonny Farrar and His Banjo Orchestra, which should give an idea of the kind of music one's in for.

Betty Madigan: "Wheels of Love"-"A Salute" (MGM). Ever since her "Joey" click last year, Betty Madigan has been on the brink of a repeat hit. "Wheels of Love" gives her one of the best chances she's had since "Joey" to ride back to the top again. It's a spirited entry which she delivers with an enthusiastic bounce. "A Salute" is okay platter fare but with slim breakout chances.

Lorry Raine: "Talk It Over With Your Heart"-"Show Me the Way to Forget You" (Dot). This coupling could do the trick for Lorry Raine. Thrush consistently has been turning out hit-potential shellac and she's due for a break through. Either side on this release could do it for her. Both are substantial ballad entries, but "Show Me" shapes as one of her best efforts and is sure to get the deejay attention. Don't discount the possibilities of the reverse side, however.

Best Bets

Album Reviews

Robert Farnon Orch: "Flirtation Walk" (London). For those who like their evergreens tastefully arranged and charmingly rendered, Robert Farnon's 12-inch LP will be a stickout set. His style is soft and romantic and the package easily could be subtitled "music to do anything by"—it's that universal. Among the choice items are Rodgers & Hart's "Easy To Remember," Jerome Kern's "Can I Forget You" and such other faves as "I Love A Lassie" and "Two Little Girls In Blue." There are 14 other numbers that will caress the ear.

Louise Carlyle-Warren Galjour: "Gershwin Rarities, Vol. 2" (Walden). There's plenty of obscure Gershwin around and Walden has done a workmanlike job in getting 'em on wax. In this second edition of "Gershwin Rarities," label produced another slick compilation. Although there's nothing rare anymore about "Nice Work If You Can Get It" or "A Foggy Day," the bulk of the material seldom has been waxed before. For digging into Gershwiniana and coming up with tunes from such oldie legit shows as "Tip Toes," "Funny Face," "Treasure Girl" and "Strike Up The Band," the 12-inch LP platter becomes a must-get for collectors. Louise Carlyle and Warren Galjour (backed by the John Morris Trio) supply standout vocal readings. Edith Garson and Edward Jablonski put plenty of info into the liner notes.

Tony Bennett: "Cloud 7" (Columbia). Tony Bennett seems to be leading a double vocal life. On his pop releases he's brash and rhythmic, while on this 12-inch LP he's soft and mellow. His juve fans will undoubtedly stick with him through this new waxing mood and he's bound to pick up plenty of fans among the oldsters. Bennett is slow and solid as he works his way through such fave items as "Darn That Dream," "My Reverie," "My Baby Just Cares For Me" and "I Fall In Love Too Easily." The unbilled gal on the cover should hypo sales.

"Hit The Deck' (MGM). Best thing about a soundtrack is that you get the score without being burdened by the film's scenario. And if the score is culled from the Vincent Youmans files, it's bound to be a treat. This 12-inch soundtracker from the Metro pic features such able song-sellers as Jane Powell, Debbie Reynolds, Tony Martin, Vic Damone, Ann Miller and Kay Armen. Among the Youmans' efforts are "Sometimes I'm Happy," "I Know That You Know," "More Than You Know" and "Hallelujah." In all, a gay and lively wax offering.

Benny Goodman Orch: "B. G. In Hi-Fi" (Capitol). Over the years, Benny Goodman has managed to maintain a top spot in the jazz firmament just by swinging. In this package, Goodman again demonstrates that swing still has plenty of vitality when conceived and executed by experts. The band sidemen in this set are all topnotch and the repertoire for the full orch and small combos includes such Goodman standards as "Let's Dance," "Jumping At The Woodside," "Stompin At The Savoy," "Big John Special," "Air Mail Special" and others. The technical aspects of this disk, as the title indicates, are firstrate.

RCA Biz Up 80% Since Price Cut; London Perks, Others Still Wait

RCA Victor, which surprised the industry at the outset of this year with a one-third reduction on its LP prices, has been racking up solid business since the cuts. During February, the diskery racked up a 168% increase in unit volume over the last comparable month, with an 80% increase in dollar volume. London Records, which proceeded to cut prices along the same lines as Victor, has also been cooking very strongly for the past couple of months.

Since Victor staged a special sale last February, with dealers ordering six months in advance, the comparison is based on the sales of February, 1953. Victor, however, has even topped the 1954 February pace by 11% for one of the best months in its history.

While Victor and London have been rolling steadily with their packaged merchandise under the lower price tags, some of the other majors have not been too happy over the situation. Some of the disk execs have been predicting that the price cuts would be short-lived, but Victor execs categorically deny this. Victor, in fact, has already guaranteed its price structure for a minimum of six months.

Decca Pushes Low-Price Radio-Phono Package

Expanding its phonograph machine division, Decca Records has begun to market a radio-phonograph combination selling for just under $30. Machine, which contains a three-speed phono, is being given a special sales push in view of its low price.

Machine has been packaged in a washable two-tone case.

RCA Marketing New Low-Priced 45 Player

In a move to give an additional hypo to the 45 rpm field, RCA Victor has put a new lowpriced attachment on the market, called the Slide-O-Matic. Machine, which can be plugged into radio or tv sets, plays one disk at a time by merely sliding the platter through a slot on front of the machine. The needle then locates itself automatically on the first groove. Retail price for the attachment is $12.95.

Victor's automatic 45 rpm attachment now sells for close to $20 with several EPs as part of the package.

Kaye's 'Impossible'

Sammy Kaye has gone to the 1955 edition of the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus for his upcoming platter release on Columbia, Orchseter has cut a ballad from the circus score tagged "Impossible."

Score was penned by circus topper John Ringling North (music) and Irving Caesar (lyrics). Both are vet ASCAPers.

Bostic Racks Up 'Firsts' On Southern Tour; Hits 17G Weekly Average

Earl Bostic's rhythm & blues combo, which began a tour of the south in late January, has been racking up an average $17,000 weekly gross. Booked on guarantee vs. percentage, Bostic now takes off on the second leg of the trek, which will cover Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas. He then swings to the Coast for a series of one-nighters that will bring him up to Anchorage, Alaska, for a two-week location date.

During the initial part of the tour, Bostic chalked up a couple of "firsts." He was the first r&b tootler to be booked by the U. of North Carolina and his combo was the first Negro group to play the Celtic Room, Nashville nitery.

Springfield, Mo., Now Big Key In Tin Pan Valley Music Axis

By BOB CHANDLER

Biggest network origination point for country music on radio and television is—not Nashville, but the up-and-coming country music centre of Springfield, Mo. Latter is now responsible for a half-hour-weekly radio stanza on ABC, along with a full hour of television (which may be extended by an additional half-hour weekly), also on ABC. While Springfield still doesn't approach Nashville as the country music capital of the nation in terms of publishing, talent, booking and recording, the story of its growth as a major contender offers a revealing insight into the hillbilly field in general and the mechanics of attaining national standing in particular.

While the story begins in 1932, with the establishment of radio station KWTO as a specialist in live country music, it doesn't start to take shape until 1947, when the open-end transcription firm of RadiOzark Enterprises was founded. It then began to achieve some national prominence with the services of such veterans as Tennessee Ernie and Smiley Burnette. But Springfield's real impetus came in the last couple of years, when KYTV went on the air as the city's television outlet, a booking office and a publishing firm were set up the local radio "Ozark Jubilee" went network and finally, ABC-TV put the show on television.

Driving forces behind the rapid-scale expansion are two young men,

Decca Signs Wayne King To Longterm Contract

Vet maestro Wayne King has joined Decca Records under a longterm pact. A longtime fave for his waltz tempos, King recently came to the fore again with RCA Victor's reissue of his "Melody of Love" version, cut in the early 1940s.

Under his Decca pact, King will continue to cut waltz and mood music material.

3 Woody Herman Tooters - In Texas Reefer Rap

Corpus Christi, March 15.

Charges of possessing marijuana were filed against three members of the Woody Herman band arrested here Friday (11) by the city narcotics squad. They were Jerry LaFurn, Jack Nimitz and John P. Beal. A fourth member of the band was held under $500 bond as a material witness.

Police said that four tobacco cans and four small bottles filled with marijuana were confiscated. Other members of the band, which played an engagement here on Thursday (10), left Friday for Austin.

Hub Jukeboxes Going to Dime

Boston, March 15.

The opening salvo in the jukebox operators' campaign to soften the public toward acceptance of the jump to the 10c, three for 25c play was fired here last week with the news of the impending increase hitting the front page of the Traveler.

Quoting James Geracos, prez of the Massachusetts Music Operator Assn., the article pointed out that whereas all living costs have risen anywhere from 200% to 300% since the jukebox was introed in 1927, the 5c price has prevailed. However, he claims the operators are now fighting a losing battle with rising costs. Geracos also revealed that Massachusetts is one of the last areas to make the transition to the upped scale, "which is absolutely necessary in order that we may offer the public the kind of service it is entitled to."

Many stations have already quietly upped the price and it's expected that the entire area will be converted within three months.

Deutch Ankles Peer Spot To Be Gen'l Prof. Manager For Paul-Ford Pubberies

Irving Deutch has ankled his professional manager's spot at Peer International to join the Les Paul-Mary Ford pubbery operations. Deutsch takes over as general professional manager of Dearborn Music (ASCAP) and Iris-Trojan Music (BMI).

Shift came on the heels of the move-in of Herbert Lutz into the Peer orbit. Latter came in last week to take over the professional manager duties for Peer's ASCAP firm, Southern Music. Deutch was to have handled Peer's other firm.s Latter had been managing the complete Peer setup for the past couple of years. He took over when Ben Selvin switched to RCA Victor's custom record division.

Murray Deutch, Irving's brother, will take over the professional manager's slot. He was contactman for the firm for the past 18 months. The Paul-Ford publishing activities will continue to be helmed by veepee Gray Gordon.

MGM Signs Encores

The diskery prowl for new vocal groups continues in high gear. Latest group to get tapped for a wax showcasing is The Encores, who signed to a longterm pact by MGM Records.

Combo's initial release is set for March 11. It'll be a coupling of "Chloe" and "Wa Da Ga Dot."

Decca Reviving 2 Music Pubberies

Decca Records is planning a full-scale reactivation of its two music publishing companies, Northern Music (ASCAP) and Champion Music (BMI), under the aegis of Bill Downer. Downer, who has been with Decca for 14 years, headed the two firms until six years ago, when they became inactive. Since then, he has operated within Decca's artists & repertoire department.

Larry Shayne has been named general professional manager of the two companies. Shayne, who has been associated with Paramount Pictures' publishing firm, Famous Music, will headquarter in Los Angeles. Downer will run the companies from the New York homeoffice.

Nat Bergman, who has been with Decca's subsid, Coral Records, as office manager, moves into Downer's a&r slot with Decca. Len Levy moves into Bergman's spot with Coral.

Goody Seeks New Fields To Cutrate Since Disk Price Slash by Majors

Sam Goody, leading discount operator in the disk field, is expanding into a different field. Goody is currently looking for other products to market via his mail order setup which he has built through heavy advertising in dailies throughout the country. The new product does not necessarily have to be related to disks or music.

Goody, who has done over $1,500,000 a year in mail order disk business, has reportedly been hurt somewhat in his mail order sales since the major companies made their price cuts on LPs at the outset of this year. Since the differential between Goody's price and the list price is not so drastic, more trade has been shifted to neighborhood stores. Goody, moreover, has not been offering some of his extra-large discounts, ranging up to 50%, to his mail order clientele, but has been reserving these sales for over-the-counter trade.

Blum Joins Valando

Dave Blum, vet music man, has joined publisher Tommy Valando as an associate. Blum, who operated his own music firm, dropped out of the biz six months ago when he was felled by a heart attack.

He'll be back in action when he returns from a Florida vacation.

VARIETY DISK JOCKEY POLL

This compilation is designed to indicate those records rising in popularity as well as those on top. Ratings are computed on the basis of ten points for a No. 1 mention, nine for a No. 2, and so on down to one point. Wherever possible, only records with two or more mentions are listed, even though their total points are less in some cases than those which receive only one mention. Cities and jockeys will vary from week to week to present a comprehensive picture of all sectors of the country regionally.

Merrill Seeking To Merge Pubberies

Publishing and cleffing are getting to be more than Bob Merrill can handle. Tunesmith, who began doubling as a publisher about seven months ago, doesn't want to give up the publishing end of the biz entirely but he is looking to merge with a larger firm. Merrill discovered that there's a lot of detail that goes with publishing and figures that a merger would take a lot of work off his hands.

Merrill already has had preliminary talks with Gene Aberbach, of Hill & Range, but nothing definite has been set. Aberbach currently is on a European junket and Merrill expects to resume discussions when he gets back.

Merrill now operates three firms, Goldenbell, Valyr and Ryland. He's aided by Murray Kaufman, and the duo recently pacted Al Hoffman and Dick Manning to exclusive writing pacts. Before launching his own publishing operation, Merrill had an exclusive cleffing pact with Santly-Joy and subsequently Joy Music.

The Merrill-operated firms got off to a fast start with such hot copyrights as "Mambo Italiano" and "Make Yourself Comfortable, Baby." He penned both tunes.

1ST BRIT. R&B COMBO CLAIMS 'BIGGEST' TITLE

London, March 15.

First band to adopt an out-and-out rhythm & blues policy in Britain is the Squadronaires, who have announced a complete change in their musical style. Leader-pianist Ronnie Aldrich is rewriting the entire library for the new idiom and the first appearance of the combo in its new guise will be on April 9 at Folkestone.

The Squadronaires are a 17-piece orchestra and claim to be the largest band in the world to go in for the hitherto small-group rhythm & blues style. Their Decca records are now to be exclusively in the new policy.

The band, which was originally started in the Royal Air Force in 1940 and has been going continuously ever since, is to lose one of its remaining founder members on March 20 when saxist Monty Levy departs to freelance.

'BIRDLAND' BASH BIG $11,000 IN PITT NITER

Pittsburgh, March 15.

Biggest take rolled up around here in years for a single jazz concert was turned in by "Birdland Stars of 1955" at the 3,800-seat Syria Mosque on a one-nighter last week when more than 4,100 people paid a gross just over $11,000 to hear Sarah Vaughan, Count Basie, George Shearing and Errol Garner. An extra b.o. push was provided by Garner, a local boy, who was returning to the old home town for the first time since he struck gold in the big city.

Show, of course, was a complete sellout and management had seats up on the stage and in Mosque space which serves as the orchestra pit. Lots of standing room also sold and hundreds were turned away at the boxoffice right before curtain time.

Bethlehem Tags Derise

Bethlehem Records tagged crooner Joe Derise to a three-year pact last week. His first release will be an album of standards.

Derise will self-accomp on piano and will be backed by Milt Hinton on bass and Osie Johnson on drums. Album is set for release early in May. Derise is managed by Mort Hillman.

Diskers Still Counting on TV Plug For Platter Hypo; MacRae Up Next

The disk industry is continuing to bank on tv to get a record across. Latest waxing set for tele exposure is Gordon MacRae's "You Forgot To Tell Me That Lou Love Me" on the Capitol label. Side is due for a concentrated plug on CBS-TV's "Shower of Stars" tomorrow night (Thurs.) and MacRae will give it an added push when he plugs it on the "Colgate Comedy Hour" (NBC-TV) Sunday (20).

Since the runway click of Joan Weber's "Let Me Go, Lover" on Columbia after a showcasing on CBS-TV's "Studio One" last November, several diskeries have tried the same stunt but without the same results. Cap tried it with "My Love Song To You," a Bob Manning slice which was kicked off on Jackie Gleason's CBS-TV stanza; Col went to bat again with Johnnie Ray's "Paths of Paradise," showcased on CBS-TV's "General Electric Theatre," and with Peggy King's "Any Questions," plugged on NBC-TV's "Dragnet" show.

Last week Coral got into the act with Johnny Desmond's "Play Me Hearts and Flowers" via NBC-TV's "Philco Playhouse." Although these tv-plugged disks stirred up some noise on the record-retail level, none came close to the "Let Me Go, Lover" rackup. Sidelight to the tele kickoff vogue is that rival diskers jumped in only once to cover and that was with "Lover." After the "Studio One" exposure, Mercury, Decca, Coral and Victor rushed out versions of the tune.

The Desmond slice has been climbing steadily since the tele plug. Close to 250,000 were shipped in the first three days.

"You Forgot" was penned by Nelson Barclift and Stephen Sanders. It's being published by Ardmore Music, Capitol's ASCAP pubbery operation.

Decca Records meantime is prepping for a video sendoff of the new release by Caterina Valente, Italian songstress who will make her U. S. debut on the "Colgate Comedy Hour" Sunday night (20).

Miss Valente earned the tv guest shot via her click on "Malaguena," which she will do on the show in addition to her newest sides, "The Breeze and I" and "Jalousie." Dealers have been ordering the latter disk heavily in advance of the video shot.

NO NOVA SCOTIA LAWS ON DE-SEGREGATION

Truro, N. S., March 15.

Town council was told by solicitor F. H. Patterson that it cannot force dance-hall lessees to admit Negroes. Two Negroes had told council that citizens of their race had been barred from a recent public dance, and that one had been kept out by a policeman stationed in the doorway.

Canada has no federal laws against racial or religious discrimination, but Ontario province has fairly recently enacted such legislation, now covering admittance to public places as well as sale of property. Recently two restaurants in Dresden, Ont., where there's a fairly large Negro population, were fined for refusing to serve Negroes. Nova Scotia has no such legislation, although there is a considerable Negro population, along with the predominant Scots-descended population. Some of the Negroes sing old Scottish songs in Gaelic.

Majors Out As Omaha Local's Sec'y; Union Okays Agents' Fees

Omaha, March 15.

Two more moves rocked the Omaha musicians front last week: the resignation of Dave Maiors as secretary of Local 70, AFM, and the union's vote favoring the paying of commissions to booking agents.

Majors, a controversial figure in Local 70, said he quit effective April 1 because of his job as Omaha AFL prexy. However, he also held that post previously and the action followed an alleged demand by Local 70 that he either give full time to his secretarial duties or quit.

By a vote of 48-39, the union okayed the commissions. The resolution now will be submitted to the entire membership for vote March 20 and, if passed, will become a local law.

Vote indicated dissatisfaction with the recent AFM revocation of the booking licenses of Paul Moorhead, Dick Brown and Howard McArdle agencies here. Ernie Lewis, AFM rep in this district, who revoked the licenses without cause, was present and spoke at the meeting.

Lewis said Local 70's vote will not affect the AFM revocations and that Moorhead, Brown and McArdle will only be able to book in Local 70's territory if they are given the greenlight by the org.

Remington Ups Ascue

Robert Ascue has been promoted to the post of national sales manager for Remington Records. Ascue was formerly wesstern and midwestern sales manager.

Don Gabor heads Remington, which is active in the low-priced longplay disk field.

Senate Gets Bill To Ease Postage On Sheet Music

A bill to reclassify sheet music as educational postage was introduced in the Senate last week. Bill, which would lighten the financial burden of the music publishing biz, was brought to the floor by Sen. Olin Johnston (D., S. C.), chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. It was co-sponsored by Frank Carlson (R., Kans.).

Postage reclassification has been one of the main objectives of the Music Publishers Assn. Org, under the aegis of Len Feist, has been campaigning for the bill since July, 1953. Feist, ex-MPA prexy, is now veepee and chairman of the legal committee. MPA's new prexy is Don Mailen.

Reclassification bill would put sheet music in the same category as books. Heretofore, sheet copies were mailed as regular parcel post, with the tab for one pound running between 18c. and 32c. depending upon the area of the country to which the package was sent. Tab for a two-pound package of sheet copies ran between 20c. and 51c. Under the reclassification setup, the postage for a one-pound package would be 8c. and 4c. for each additional pound.

The bill was sponsored by educational standard pubs, church organizations and musicians.

Gray Takes Santly Post With Burke-Van Heusen

Dick Gray moves into Simon House and the Johnny Burke-Jimmy Van Heusen firms this week as professional manager. Post previously had been held by Harry Santly, who died a couple of weeks ago.

Gray had been associated with Frank Music, Frank Loesser's publishing firm. He's the brother of warbler Dolores Gray.

Charlie Parker, Founder Of Modern Jazz School, Dies of Heart Attack

Charlie (Yardbird) Parker, considered by musicians to be the single most important influence in the bebop modern jazz movement and one of the great tenor saxmen of the past 20 years, died of a heart attack Saturday night (12) in the N.Y. apartment of a friend, the Baroness de Koenigswarter, wife of the head of the French Tourist Bureau in New York. Parker's precise age is a matter of controversy. Jazz encyclopedias list his age as 35, while the doctors at the Morgue, where the body was taken, said he was 53.

The Baroness Nica Rothschild de Koenigswarter detailed that the Negro jazz virtuoso had called to discusss a charity concert before going to Boston. She is a sister of the British head of the international banking family.

Parker's starting date in the band biz is somewhat obscure, but it's believed that among his first jobs was working as a sideman with the Lawrence Keyes band in Kansas City in 1936. In 1938-39, he turned up with the Harlan Leonard band, another Kansas City outfit which also toured. During this period, he was still relatively unknown and was heard sporadically around New York.

After playing with the Jay McShann band, with which he made his first disks, Parker made a long stand in Harlem at the Clark Monroe spot, a club similar to Minton's, famed colored jazz joint. It was during this time that musicians began to take notice of him and his influence began to climb.

In 1943, Parker joined Earl Hines' band, which was another important incubator of the modern jazz school, and in 1944, he was a member of the Billy Eckstine band. For the next three years, he was heard regularly in the 52d Street, N.Y., jazz spots and in 1945 he joined Dizzy Gillespie's band on a tour to the Coast. Although a financial flop, this band was to have a permanent impact on the flock on young jazzmen growing up in the west.

Parker was a member of Norman Granz's "Jazz at the Philharmonic" troupe during the late 1940s and played at the Paris Jazz Festival in 1950. For the past few years, Parker played mostly as a single. He was slated to open at the Storyville in Boston Monday night (14).

Parker's dominant position in the jazz world probably reached a peak six years ago when the Broadway jazz spot, Birdland, was named after him — a contraction of his "Yardbird" nickname. Parker had been ill frequently in the past few years.

He's survived by his wife, the former Chan Richardson, ex-dancer and p.a., and two children.

'SURPRISING' SIDE BY SINATRA HIT BY JOCK

Ray Carroll, WMCA (N. Y.) early a.m. disk jockey, has slapped a ban on Frank Sinatra's latest Capitol release, "From The Bottom To The Top," because of the lyric content. Tune, which is coupled with "Two Hearts," is Sinatra's first crack at the rhythm & blues groove. He cut both sides with The Nuggets.

On his show Monday (14), Carroll said that he was "surprised at both Sinatra and Capitol" for selecting the tune. He added, however, that he'd spin "Two Hearts."

Dori Brooks to Label X

Warbler Dori Brooks has been tagged to a Label X pact by Jimmy Hilliard, diskery's artists and repertoire chief. Thrush already has cut four sides for X, with the first release slated for March 28.

She's currently headlining at the Elegante, Brooklyn nitery.

Official Miami Beach Song

Miami Beach, March 15.

"I Found a Peach on Miami Beach," clefted by Duke Leonard and Ray Walker, has been adopted as the official song for Miami Beach.

A couple of N. Y. publishers are currently dickering for the song which was published in 1951 by Charles Abel of this city.

Big Key In Tin Pan Valley

John B. Mahaffey and E. S. (Si) Siman Jr., who own RadiOzark Enterprises, Earl Barton Music Co., Top Talent Inc. (the booking office) and finally Crossroads Television Productions, Inc., the latter set up just a couple of weeks ago to handle the ABC-TV'er, which is tied to the network under a five-year pact. Their key stroke was the acquisition a year ago of Red Foley under a deal whereby he stars on radio and television and does a transcribed show. Acquisition of Foley opened the door for network radio and television, as well as other artists and what Springfield expects to become a thriving tourist business.

Mahaffey and Siman in New York last week to discuss the possible expansion of "Jubilee" to 90 minutes weekly on television with ABC officials, explained that building a top talent stable is all a matter of "exposure and exploitation." "In order to get top names," they said, "we had to be able to offer lots of exposure. That's why it's taken so long. KWTO has a strong daytime signal, but at night it becomes a directional station. We couldn't get the real big names for that reason. RadiOzark helped a little. But with a network radio show, the stars could get all the exposure they wanted. That's what did it."

By a fortunate coincidence, the acquisition of Foley was tied to the network kickoff. Foley had cut loose from "Grand Ole Opry" in Nashville. Mahaffey and Siman had discussed a network segment with ABC previously. They got Foley to come over (with a fat guarantee) on the basis of the exposure offered by the network stanza. And they got the network stanza on the basis of having Foley available. That was last July. In January, the televersion started on the basis of the radio show's success.

On radio, Springfield boast such names as Burnette, Tennessee Ernie (transcriptions), Foley, Bill Ring, George Morgan (transcriptions), the Jordanaires, the Carter Sisters, Chet Atkins, Mother Maybelle, Shorty Thompson and the Saddle, Rock & Rhythm combo. On tele, there's Foley, Porter Wagoner, Huckshaw Hawkins, Tommy Sosebee, Bud Isaacs, Grady Martin, Chuck Bowers and the Foggy River Boys. Talent is represented on disks by such companies as RCA Victor, Decca, Capitol and Coral.

Currently, there's something of a communications problem, resulting in the fact that the television show is produced in Columbia, Mo., 150 miles away. As soon as cable is built permitting the show to move back to Springfield (about April 18), the show will move back into its 1,200-seat reconverted picture house, the Jewell, currently being again reconverted for tv. Crossroads Television meanwhile has had the problem of splitting the cast, half staying in Springfield for the local two-and-one-half-hour radio show, the other piling into busses Friday night for the trip to Columbia. Meanwhile, after only six weeks on the air, the tele stanza is prospering, with a co-op lineup of 64 Saturday night (9 p.m.) stations, 19 of them already commercial.

Entire setup is a cooperative venture among Mahafee and Siman along with Ralph D. Foster and interlocking ownership in the six corporations involved, and the kind of close cooperation that enables them to provide virtually every type of service and exposure for their artists. Booking operation, handled by Lou Black, sends out not only "Jubilee" units to fairs, concert stands and motor shows, but handles booking for individual artists. Music company publishes the talent's songs. And the radio-tv operation not only gives the talent its basic earnings but the exposure and exploitation they consider vital.

COL TAPS TWO SINGERS

A crooner and warbler were added to the Columbia Records roster last week. Tapped to long-term disk deals were Cathy Johnson and Steve Clayton.

Their initial Col platters will hit the market within the next few weeks.

Cleve. Harmonica Team's 51-Hr. Marathon Mark Lands Them Nitery Job

Cleveland, March 15.

A new way to land a nitery job in Cleveland, as well as gobs of newspaper space, is to blow harmonicas for at least two days around the clock. That's how the team of Mel Hummell, Dale and Ken Robinson won a two-week engagement at the Alpine Village Club while setting some sort of new world record by playing mouth organs for 51 hours and 34 minutes.

Twenty-four-year-old Hummell collapsed after 49 hours and 25 minutes of tooting at Biscayne Club, but his two partners went on to smash a previous non-stop record. It had been held by their father, Paul Robinson, who started the crazy business 21 years ago by blowing a harmonica 51 hours and 15 minutes.

His sons hoped to hit the 60-hour mark in marathon, cosponsored by Jack Silverthorne, head of the local Variety Club, to raise money for the Cleveland cerebral Palsy School Foundation. Blistered lips forced Dale and Ken Robinson to stop, but they raised over $1,000 for the fund and were signed by Alpine. Marathon was given radio coverage by Bob Ancell, WDOK disk jockey, who lost sleep two nights supervising it in Biscayne's window showcase.

Groove Label Corrals Chris Powell & Flames

Groove Records, RCA Victor's rhythm & blues division, has inked Chris Powell and His Blue Flames to a term pact. Groove, which is being run by H. Ray Clark with Bob Rolontz as artists & repertoire head, issued its first two disks last week since its reactivation. John Greer and Piano Red were the kickoff artists.

Groove, meantime, has set 27 distribs for the label. In the northern area, indie distribs will handle the disks. In the south and southwest, regular RCA distribs will carry Groove.

Inside Stuff—Music

Capitol Records has begun to gear itself for its springtime merchandising sales program with plans for an extensive selling setup. During the two-month period, diskery is planning to release 13 new packages in all three categories of pop, classical and children's albums. Program will include introduction of the new albums, the T-Series campaign ($3.98 line), tele-story-promotion (slides displaying new albums) and the new accounts drive in an effort to obtain an increase in its dealer outlets. Because the T-Series line is the most popular, Cap has increased the line from 15 to over 100 albums, due to the continued demand in that $3.98 price bracket.

Three of the six best-selling Capitol records in England are his, Dean Martin reports. Crooner, whose last completed film at Paramount is "You're Never Too Young" and who is now doing "Artists and Models" for Hal Wallis, was notified by the diskery that his recordings of "Naughty Lady of Shady Lane," "Let Me Go, Lover" and "Mambo Italiano" are included in Cap's topselling sextet in the Isles. This marks the first time any artist has so dominated the company's output in this area.

In a move to hypo its catalog of Spanish disks, Decca Records is launching a spanish fiesta contest for dealers with the cooperation of the Spanish government. Top winner of the contest will get an all-expense paid two-week trip to Spain. In addition, Decca has lined up several other big giveaways for the runnersup, including a motor scooter, guitars, gowns and hi-fi sets Dealers will compete in a window-dressing contest framed around a Spanish theme.

Vet ASCAP writer Ray Walker, now residing in Miami Beach, will aid ex-baseball pitcher Rube Marquard on latter's upcoming memoirs. Walker penned "The Marquard Glide" when the diamond star moved into vaude. This was about the time when he married Blossom Seeley (now Mrs. Benny Fields). Walker also has cleffed "I Found A Peach On Miami Beach," which is set for a Mutual net showcasing March 26 as an "official" M.B. song.

Red Foley marked his 15th anni with Decca Records last week, having been one of the company's topsellers since he joined the diskery in 1940. Although basically a country singer headquartering in the Kentucky-Tennessee belt, Foley has come up with several hits in the general pop market, notably "Chattanoogie Shoe Shine Boy," which went over the 1,000,000 marker several years ago.

Value of concentrated tele plugging to the disk business is reflected in the steady sales pace of the Columbia album, "Joanne Sings." Set was cut by Mary Stuart, star of the CBS-TV soaper, "Search For Tomorrow," and she sings the songs from the album regularly on the show. Package has been on the market three weeks and has racked up an average of 10,000 sales a week.

LeRoy Holmes, MGM Records musical director, has prepped a wax carbon of eight of the all-time great Negro bands. In the 10-inch LP album, Holmes takes off on the styles of Duke Ellington, Jimmy Lunceford, Chick Webb, Count Basie, Fletcher Henderson, Lionel Hampton, Earl Hines and Andy Kirk.

Horizon Press has set a late spring publication for Leonard Feather's "The Encyclopedia of Jazz," which contains biographies of over 1,000 jazzmen from oldtimers like Bunk Johnson to modernists such as Dave Brubeck. Book will have an intro by Duke Ellington and will sell for between $5 to $10.

Betty White, author of her "Teen-Age Dance Book" and "Betty White's Dancing Made Easy," has turned out a $1 "How to Mambo" book (David McKay; illustrated by Robert Burns), including stuff on the cha-cha-cha, the cha-cha hop and the penguin walk. Bandleader-composer Tito Puente gets a nod for checking the musical rhythms, as detailed in the book.

7½G Federal Tax Lien Slapped Vs. Ted Weems

Houston, March 15.

Tax liens totaling $7,566.07 were filed against bandleader Ted Weems here last week. Federal officials, in filing the documents with Harris County Clerk W. D. Miller, said the liens cover withholding taxes from June, 1953 to May, 1954.

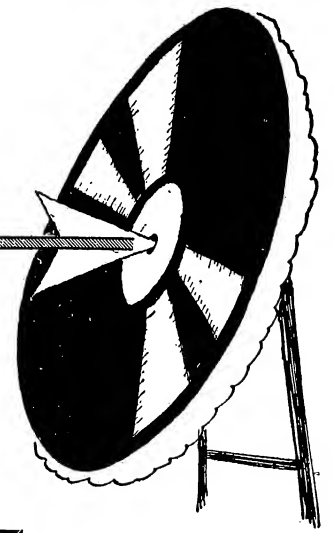
Weems, currently here at the Empire Room of the Rice Hotel, blamed the matter on an accountant "who gummed up the book." Weems said that he had conferred with Joe Jamar, district Internal Revenue Bureau supervisor, and arranged to make monthly payments. Weems said that an auditor was going over the books to straighten them out.

The liens were filed against Wilfred Weems, "doing business as Ted Weems Orchestra."

CAP'S DANKWORTH DOUBLE

Hollywood, March 15.

Capitol Records is releasing "Waterloo Walk" and "Singing in the Rain" the end of the month.



Both tunes were waxed in London by the Johnny Dankworth band, recently pacted by the diskery.

Kid Book As Disk Newest Wrinkle

A new wrinkle in kidisks is being prepped for release this month by the John C. Winston Co., book publishers. Tagged "Magic Talking Books," the platter makes up the cover of the juve tome. A hole through the book permits the entire tome to be played on the phonograph.

"Talking Books" were originated by Bernard Geis, former ed-in-chief of Grosset & Dunlap, and his wife, Darlene, children's book author. Disks include lyrics by Mrs. Geis, with arrangements of old standards and original music by Jimmy Carroll.

Initial release includes four "Talking Books." They are "The Singing Mother Goose Book," with a platter presenting three Mother Goose Songs; "The Singing Happy Birthday Book," with a story by Grace Stern and a waxing of "Happy Birthday To You"; "The Speedy Little Taxi," with story by Darlene Geis and an etching of "The Busy-Busy Traffic Song," and "Noah's Ark," with a recording "All Aboard the Ark."

The books have washable covers and rounded safety corners.

Lot" was the biggest for the label.

In his annual report to Decca stockholders, Milton R. Rackmil, who is also prez of Universal, reported that U's consolidated net earnings for the fiscal year, ending Oc. 30, 1954, amounted to $3,797,688 on film rentals and sales of $77,887,688, the largest in the picture company's history. For the preceding year, U's net earnings were $2,616,356. Last year's earnings were equivalent to $3.58 a share on the 995,289 shares of U common stock outstanding.

Rackmil's report indicated that the average cost to Decca of its Universal stock was $17.50 a share. In the last few weeks, the stock has been selling at slightly under 30.

Sacks to O.O. Victor's Distrib in Midwest

RCA's Manie Sacks breaks his jump to the Coast with a Chicago stopover this weekend to o.o. RCA Victor's midwest distribution operation.

He joins NBC exec veepee Robert W. Sarnoff in Hollywood for the opening of the new NBC color studios, and will stay on for the Academy Awards to spectrumcast March 24.

Prado Follows No One

Hollywood.

Editor, Variety:

I would like to clarify a story that was printed in your March 9 issue of VARIETY, based on remarks by Herman Diaz, RCA Victor international division chief. According to the story, I, Perez Prado, have switched to the Cha-Cha-Cha kick. That is not true, and I emphatically deny it.

To begin with, my new rhythm, La Culeta, is derived from the mambo. La Culeta is a milder rhythm of the mambo, which is affected by use of four violins that I have added to the orch. What I'm trying to emphasize is that although the Cha-Cha-Cha may also achieve a milder melody of the mambo, which I originally established, it in no way is connected to my La Culeta rhythm.

Your story was confusing, it made it seem that I was following someone else's pattern in music. I follow no one's patterns; I create my own. Perez Prado.

songs, simply and not too elaborately stated, but nevertheless with popular appeal. Certainly, the titles of the top c&w's, namely "In The Jailhouse Now" and "Loose Talk," are far more suspect if one is looking to be a censor.

And, by the same token, an "All Of You" or "Baby It's Cold Outside" could be called to task long before a "KoKoMo."

R&b, rock & roll, or whatever name you choose, is to my way of thinking nothing more than another title for what was called jazz, or swing in the past. It simply means music with a beat and is certainly not new. It is filled with cliches, repeated musical phrases, imperfect rhymes. However, what seems to get across to the teenagers, as well as to their older brothers and sisters, is it's simplicity and familiar ring and believe it or not, its sincerity.

Nevertheless, I believe it is a fad and will eventually drive itself into the ground.

A&r men have been called to task for covering the original r&b records, but you can't blame the a&r men for that. The buying public is insistent on getting the original arrangement, and in many cases, a superior "cover" recording may seem like a superior recording to everyone except the guy or gal who goes out and purchases the original record. There's a reason for this too. Very often, the original record has a sincerity to it that the "cover record" (usually by an established artist, who may have a disdain for what he is doing) lacks.

It seems a crime to me that a song like "KoKoMo," which is far from original, and could conceivably have been written in half an hour, should sell as many records as "Secret Love" or "Young At Heart." Here is the area where the publisher can help the situation. The public will buy a good song, but must first be offered that good song. Publishers and a&r men, acting on their own behalf, and using their better judgment, can bring us those better songs.

Disk jockeys shouldn't, but sometimes do make hits. We can bring good records to the attention to the public. However, let's allow the public to make the choice instead of a self-appointed oracle in Detroit, Cleveland or Boston who tells "Hugo," "Mitch," or "Bob" which way the 45 rpm wind is blowing.

Why don't we just let r&b run its course without acting as censors and philosophers and get on with the job of giving the public some better songs and better records, and we might find that quality can pay off again.

Cats Dig the Cool Stuff Again at Carnegie Hall As Brubeck Sends Them

The pulling power of modern jazz was demonstrated in a big way at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., last Saturday night (12) when the large auditorium was packed to capacity with cats digging stuff that was the coolest. Grossing $18,000 at two performances, at 8:30 p.m. and at midnight, were the Dave Brubeck Quartet, Gerry Mulligan, Chet Baker's combo and songstress Carmen McRae. NBC disk jockey Al (Jazzbo) Collins emceed the show, but his usual glib line of chatter was missing as Collins seemed to be stagestruck by the historic surroundings.

The jazzmen, however, took the Carnegie Hall setting in stride as well they could in view of the fact that jazz is no longer a novelty in this longhair auditorium. A unique feature of the audience at this cool concert was their attentiveness. Here were fans who came to listen rather than to stomp, as has been the case of most of other jazz bashes staged before large crowds.

This was a well-planned concert in which all the instrumentalists spoke the same language. Topping the bill was the Brubeck group which, with Paul Desmond featured on the alto sax, again dispensed its richly textured brand of jazz counterpoint. Brubeck's unit closed the show strongly, leaving them wanting more but unable to do any encores because of the time schedule between the two performances.

The Chet Baker quintet, with Phil Urso on tenor, opened the program with some pleasant, but not particularly original, jazz conceptions. Baker himself, however, is an excellent trumpeter and also satisfied with his easy vocals. Baker's group also played with Mulligan, who sparked this group with some of the tunes associated with the Mulligan quartet. Mulligan, incidentally, is a suave gabber and handled the introes with humor and style.

Miss McRae, who has worked the jazz nitery circuit, was given the vocalist spot and she handled a brace of standards effectively. Miss McRae, however, has the tendency to intro her tunes with either cliche sentiments or plugs for her various disk labels. She would do well to scissor the gab in favor of her fine singing talent.

It's the Flock of New Cleffers & Pubs That's Making It So Tough

If the so-called oldline professional songsmiths and music publishers want to know what minimizes their chances for landing "those records," the following is a sampling refresher course as to the state of the business. The VARIETY reviewers, receiving the sample disks, are struck, as must be the disk jockeys, who too are inundated with every new pressing, by (a), the many newcomer songsmiths and (2), ditto publishing houses.

The writers' names are as unfamiliar as some of the copyright owners' corporate names, who are listed as "publishers." In many instances that's an ephemeral term since the lead sheet may be the extent of publication, with the disk the ultimate objective. Most of these firms are BMI affiliates.

Among the writers there seems to be an unusual plenitude of femme names, some of whom are destined to take their place with such distinguished sisters-of-the-keyboard as Dorothy Donnelly, Rida Johnson Young, Dorothy Fields, Anne Caldwell, Clare Kummer, Elsie Janis, Maria Grever and the like.

Without further comment this cross-section of the current cleffer crop speaks for itself, in the writer division: Rose Marie McCoy, Charles Singleton, Frank Kreisel, Henry Glover, Don D. Robey, Bert Kriechman, Jerry Luoma, Carl Barefoot, Lee Ross, Ivory Joe Hunter, Forest Wilson, Curtis Williams, Harvey Fuqua, Lawrence Coleman, Eugene Cohen, Eunice Levy, George Allen Freed, Rudy Jackson, Jake Porter, Winfield Scott, Bruns, Johnny Grande, Bill Haley, Mildred Phillips, Billy Williamson, Anita Kerr, Katherine Estes, Earl Burrows, C. A. Rossi, Bob McAvoy, Matty Martin, Roy Gould, Johnny Lehmann, Bob Cochrane, George Brown, M. Rotha, Julie Mandel, Albert Hague (newcomer with Arnold Horwitt on the "Plain and Fancy" musical), Al (sic!) Tennyson, Jimmy Blade, Martha Carson, Norma Grim, B. Bryant, Tom Lancaster, Lyle Gaston, Mike Pedicin, Jack Hoffman.

Newcomers, in the main, are linked with newcomer indie firms.

It's by no means a comprehensive list, merely a sampling of the contenders for "that record" from all corners of the U.S. Songs are divided among r&b, c&w and conventional pop stuff.

New Frontier Rushes April Bow; Ownership Tangle Clouds Picture

By BOB CLEMENS

Las Vegas, March 15.

The New Frontier Hotel, seeking to replace the Last Frontier by April 4 and eradicate most of the last vestiges of the hostelry that was the second to be built on the now fabulous Strip in Las Vegas (El Rancho Vegas was the first), is in its last stages of rebuilding and refurbishing.

Taking over from Last Frontier majority stockholders Jake Kozloff and Murray Randolph, two corporations are involved in the New Frontier setup. The Frontier Corp. is the holding company of the physical property. Officers are Maurice H. Friedman and Irving Leff, real estate developers and investors in Beverly Hills and Vegas; Stanley S. Leeds, Cal. insurance broker, and B. Frank Williams, a former state senator of Arkansas and the sole owner of several banks in that state.

This corporation leases the property to the New Frontier Corp., which is the operating company. "On the license for the operating company," says Friedman, "are Leff, Leeds and myself." But other sources have claimed in print that Williams is also on the license. Friedman states that the $4,000,000 transaction is now in escrow and anticipates no trouble with it.

Katleman Angle

Beldon Katleman, El Rancho Vegas owner, holds 20% interest in the Last Frontier, however, and claims he is not a party in the sale of the Last Frontier nor has he ever sat down to talk with the prospective buyers.

Friedman declared that for want of a title and capacity he, Leeds and Leff are dubbing themselves "general managers" of the new operation. They have no casino executive selected as yet.

The new supper room to be opened by Mario Lanza April 4 will be called the Venus Room and will seat 700 for dinner and 900 for the

Hub Op Settles for $1,000 On Miss Jorgensen Ban

Settlement was concluded last week on a claim filed by Christine Jorgensen against Rocky Palladino, operator of the Latin Quarter, Boston. Palladino agreed to pay Miss Jorgensen $1,000 to settle.

Dispute arose over a threatened ban in Boston against Miss Jorgensen. Feeling that his cabaret and liquor license would be endangered if he went through with the deal, Palladino cancelled the contract. Miss Jorgensen brought charges against the nitery op, claiming that she had refused other dates in order to go through with the Hub engagement, and had incurred certain personal expenses. The $1,000 settlement represents a compromise against Miss Jorgensen's bid for two weeks' salary.

Milw. Vaude Claims 18G Loss on Vic Damone's Last Minute Vamp

Chicago, March 15.

James Coston, owner of the Riverside Theatre, Milwaukee, claims he lost over $18,000 last week with the stageshow there. Vic Damone was set to top the bill, which marked the house's temporary return to a vaude-film policy after a year-long absence of stageshows. Damone cancelled out at the last minute and Joni James filled in as the headliner.

Coston spent $3,800 in advance publicity for Damone and attributes the fiasco to absence of bally for Miss James. Coston also says he spent some $500 on phone calls to plug the hole in the bill, and is mulling some action against Damone.

Jaye P. Morgan Resuming Theatre, Nitery Dates

Jaye P. Morgan, who leaves the Robert Q. Lewis tv show on April 30, will resume theatre and nitery dates. She's been pacted for the Town Casino, Buffalo, May 9; the Seville Theatre, Montreal, May 26, and the Gay Haven, Detroit, June 3.

Other dates are being lined up by the Mercury Artists Corp.

Burley Union Wins On Philly Carman

Jurisdiction of the Carman Theatre, Philadelphia, has been awarded to the Burlesque Artists Assn. The award was made this week by a committee from the Associated Actors & Artistes of America, which went to Philly to view the show. Committee unanimously awarded the house to BAA, which will now seek to negotiate a minimum basic agreement. Tom Phillips, executive secretary of BAA, said that he'll first seek to obtain a bond to cover salaries.

The theatre was originally a vaude house, but later adopted a burley policy. However, AGVA continued to service the house, despite Phillips' protests that AGVA was invading his jurisdiction. He recently filed a protest with the 4A's on the matter. Committee which ruled on the issue comprised Ben Irving, of Chorus Equity; Harold Hoffman, of Screen Actors Guild, and Manny Tyler, of AGVA.

Bond is now an integral part of BAA regulations, according to Phillips. He pointed out that the cast of the Colony Theatre, Union City, N. J., was paid out of the bond when it closed a couple of weeks ago.

Top Negro Names Put Agents on Spot; Demand Bookings Beyond Cafe Circuit

By JOE COHEN

U. S. Negro talent gets a wonderful break in and from niteclubs but mostly their money-making chances begin and end there. The recent all-Negro "Carmen Jones" film has been a boost recently, but it's one feature in years. The mass media, films and television, simply are not giving colored talent a tumble. This situation has white agents for Negro performers on a spot. They collect plenty of commissions but cannot satisfy the ambitions of their clients to get beyond cafe dates.

The stance taken by the Negro acts is that after they have played the entire round of cafes—what next? All they can do, at this time, is start out all over again in the niteries and pray that their welcome won't be worn out.

Talent offices have given this problem considerable thought, and nothing in the way of a solution is seen presently. The agencies say that they have to devise specialized situations to take care of performers who feel uncertain of their future. Even if they do, one spokesman declared, it would be difficult to get a network or a sponsor to shell out somewhere in the neighborhood of a $500,000 to try out an idea that is unproven. Fear of the Dixiecrats looms large.

"It would be easier," according to one agent, "to slot the act in an all-Negro cast, but that again, is not meeting the issue. It's not progress. Similarly in all-white shows its insulting to cast a Negro as a menial which has been the practice in most instances."

The legit field is the most likely solution for these difficulties. Specialties in revues, or a role such as played by Eartha Kitt in "Mrs. Patterson" or the Ethel Waters role of some seasons back holds out the greatest promise.

The Negro performers have several instances to support their contention that the public may be

Jock Idea Fades For Pitt Copa's 7th Anni; Four Stars for Week

Pittsburgh, March 15.

Lenny Litman's plan to give his 7th anniversary show at the Copa an extra push last week by using a different local deejay every night as emcee didn't work out, when the platter-spinners discovered they'd have to join AGVA in order to play the date. As a result, Litman dropped the idea and brought in a regular m.c.

Disk jocks figured out initiation fee and dues in AGVA would come to a lot more than Litman intended to pay them, so they declined the offer with thanks. There were some other complications, too. Jocks were supposed to be on with their favorite performers, and one of them didn't want to be spotted on the night assigned to him because he couldn't deliver the singer of his choice. At first, Litman planned to pay the AGVA charge himself, but when little other matters began to crop up, he decided to abandon the whole thing.

Copa used four different stars during the week, Billy Williams Quartet on Monday, Sarah Vaughan Tuesday and Wednesday, Four Lads Thursday and Friday and Bill Hayes on Saturday.

Tucker, Martin and Kannon Are Genuine 3-Star Caliber

By George Bourke
THE MIAMI HERALD

Jackie Kannon was next on the bill. He admitted that this spot wasn't to his liking nor of his personal selection. He didn't want to follow Sophie Tucker, but fate decreed it, and he took over.

And will you believe me when I tell you that for more than one-half of his entire act, Jackie Kannon has absolutely and positively, new and unheard in these parts, sock material that had the audience laughing all over again. Where he gets his stuff I haven't had an opportunity to learn, but he is sure the contradiction to the rule. You CAN have new material of a nature that has the audience applauding in the middle of numbers.

It is a temptation to print some of his stuff but I won't, for there are too many comics who would steal it from here. At least let them go there and purchase a drink to get his stuff.

I kept waiting for him to tell a story that had been told here and he continued to surprise by having complete new material in the story telling department . . .

I enjoyed Jackie so much I am inclined to ask Norman Schuyler, "What took you so long to bring Jackie Kannon to town this season?"

Folies Bergere's Over $3,000,000 B.O. in Western Hemisphere Tour

By JAY MALLIN

Havana, March 7.

Havana has long been known as "the Paris of the Americas." Sidewalk cafes, irresponsible traffic and the "Esquire"-bestowed enconium "sexiest city in the world" have all added to the Parisian aura of Havana. With the Folies Bergere now playing the town, a tourist might be excused for believing his plane had crossed the Atlantic by mistake.

The Folies, most famed of all revues, have long been known for their 1) sets and 2) girls. Habaneros find that 1) lives up to expectations, but 2) is somewhat disappointing. The sets are unquestionably the best ever seen in Cuba (or almost anywhere else). It is apparent that no expense, technical skill and imagination have been spared in designing the sets. Flickering lights and realistic sound effects create the impression of a subway train speeding through Montmartre. A slanting drawing room looks remarkably like a 3-D painting on a wall.

The costumes are as eye-catching as the sets. Colorfully extravagant, they lend themselves perfectly to the air of gaiety of the show. Outstanding are the costumes and masks in a Chinese number. The coloring of these, emphasized by good use of spotlights, make the dancers look precisely like animated ivory figures.

Second only to its name, the Folies' sets and costumes are undoubtedly its most valuable asset.

This is true in a literal sense: the 600 costumes and 20 tons of sets are valued at $250,000.

The 52 Folies girls do not stack up to the backdrops, which are far more beautiful. Their faces, figures and dancing are about par for a run-of-the-circuit burlesque, but certainly far less than what might be expected of the Folies Bergere.

In general, the show alternates nude and non-nude scenes (there are 20 scenes in two acts). Once the girls have appeared naked a few times, male interest begins to subside. Any stripper knows the value of prolonged suspense. (Curiously, there isn't a single strip act in this most renown of burlesques). One of the most interesting things about the chorus line is a girl whose resemblance to Leslie Caron is startling.

Some individual performances are notable: Claude Daltys does some creditable singing. Colette Fleuriot rouses the spirit of the ensemble and the audience with singing and dancing reminiscent of the red hot mammas. She is ably seconded by Dolly Pick, whose metier is a walk reminiscent of Marilyn Monroe.

Claude Bernard & Jean Lamou literally bring the audience to their feet. Bernard, as a Tarzan figure, and Lamou, in an ape's outfit, do some acrobatics on stage, then Lamou runs off, climbs a rope, and precariously dashes along the rim of the balconies. He comes back to earth and runs on the seats in the pit.

Esther & Johnson deserve and get billing as the top dancers of the show. Theirs is competent terping, and it gets a gasp from the audience when he tosses her, and she lands on the floor in a perfect split.

One number of the show is in questionable taste. It takes place in a church, and the ensemble is strikingly dressed and masked to resemble stained glass windows. The effect is visually terrific, but "Ave Maria" sung in a burlesque seems a bit inappropriate.

The Folies is winding up its first tour in the Western Hemisphere. It opened in April of last year in Buenos Aires. Since then it has played in six other cities in five

Army As Booker On Jones Junket

Hollywood, March 15.

The Army has tried everything else, so now it's setting up shop as a booking agent.

Prior to leaving on his Australian junket, Spike Jones received an offer from the Special Section Service of the 8th Army, U.S. Armed Forces Far East, to let the Army units under that command set up commercial dates for Jones and his troupe in the Orient in return for playing gratis for GI personnel stationed in the area.

In what is believed precedental action, the offer, in a letter on official U.S. Army stationery dispatched from Tokyo, reported that 21 "commercial" one-niters could be arranged on a schedule that would also permit about half that many gratis appearances before strictly GI non-paying audiences. Even engagements in Tapei, capital of Formosa, were offered, on the basis of three or four paid one-niters to two free dates for U.S. personnel. Other dates promised included Hong Kong, Manila, Tokyo, Osaka and other Nip stands.

Offer, signed by Walter A. Bouillet, was taken along by Ralph Wonder, Jones' manager, when troupe took off last week for three weeks Down Under. Troupe's departure had been delayed from the original Feb. 11 takeoff due to failure of Aussie promoters to post $103,000 in U.S. dollars here, part of deal which calls for troupe of 22 to receive a total of $163,000, including coin for transportation and other expenses.

Eartha Kitt Set for 1st N.Y. Copa Date in April

Eartha Kitt will play her first date at the Copacabana, N. Y., starting April 21 for three weeks. Her previous N. Y. stand was at La Vie en Rose.

Miss Kitt is also set for a week at the Apollo, N. Y., also her first in that house. She'll work there for one week starting Sept. 9. She's also pacted for the Bolero, Wildwood, Aug. 29. Singer has been tied up for sometime in the legiter, "Mrs. Patterson," which recently closed.

'HIPPODROME' TO SPEND ENTIRE YEAR ABROAD

"Hippodrome" will skip its U. S. tour next season and will spend the entire year in Europe. Revue opened in Antwerp on March 9 and has already lined up sufficient work to keep it busy for the bulk of the year.

"Hippodrome," which will return to the U. S. for dates in the 1956-57 season, played two years in the U. S. in various arenas. Show initially was "Skating Vanities," but changed its format.

Harold Steinman, show's producer, is expected to leave for Europe within the next two weeks for an extended stay with the show.

Strong Show Lined Up For Ike's D.C. Photog Dinner

Washington, March 15.

A strong show has been lined up for the annual dinner for the President given by the White House Photographers Assn.

Dinner, to be held Saturday (19), will feature Ray Bolger, Lena Horne, Liberace, Howard Keel and Connie Russell, with Joe E. Brown emceeing. Bill was put together by Stan Richardson of the Hollywood Coordinating Committee.

Association is made up of both newsreel and still photographers. Tony Muto, head of the Fox Movietone bureau and 20th studio rep here, will be installed as the new president. Top brass of the large studios will be guests at the affair.

Salute to Jean Hugard

By MILBOURNE CHRISTOPHER

Magico Jean Hugard, who braved many a barrage of live ammunition during his sensational bullet-catching feat, was on the receiving end of a battery of tributes when the Parent Assembly of the Society of American Magicians staged "A Salute to Jean Hugard" recently at the Barbizon-Plaza Hotel, N. Y.

Today, at 82, the vet hocus-pocuser is the Dean of the Society, the most prolific living writer on legerdemain and, though blind, the editor and publisher of Hugard's Magic Monthly.

Born in Toowoomba, Queensland, Australia, Dec. 4, 1872, young Hugard saw his first magic at the age of seven when Louis Haselmayer, the Viennese deceptionist, played his home town.

During his school years and a subsequent business career as a bank manager and investor in the meat-packing industry, Hugard spent most of his spare time mastering the intricacies of sleight-of-hand and building a repertoire of stage illusions.

At 24 he took to the road as a professional wizard. Card manipulations, escapes from straitjackets and water cans, a pantomime Chinese act and an original version of the bullet-catching trick were features of his full evening show.

After five tours of Australia and three of New Zealand, the baffler from bananaland set off on a swing around the globe. He came to the U.S.A. in 1917 by way of the Fiji Islands, Samoa and Hawaii.

Occupational Hazard

American vaudeville bookers vetoed his bullet-catching as too dangerous. More than a dozen magicians had been killed presenting it and there was always the chance of an accident. Matter of fact, Hugard himself had had a close call in Wellington, New Zealand. A volunteer rifleman slipped a handful of shot down the barrel of his weapon while no one was looking and though Hugard successfully caught the marked bullets, the unlooked for pellets of shot penetrated his stiff shirt front and had to be pried from his skin with a sharp knife when he left the stage.

With the Chinese portion of his show Hugard, as Chin Sun Loo, offered his wordless wonders on the Loew, Keith and Proctor time. "The Chin Sun Loo Co., Oriental illusionists and novelty workers, were easily the best features on the vaudeville card.

From 1919 to 1929 Hugard presented his "Modern Miracles" in his own theatre at Luna Park, Coney Island, during the summer. "The Chinese Water Fountains," "The Floating Ball" and "Black Art" were high spots of his seaside sorcery.

On Nov. 12, 1928, Hugard made his Broadway debut as a specialty act in "The Squealer." The melodrama, by Mark Linder, whose chief claim to fame is another epic from which Mae West evolved "Diamond Lil," was panned by the critics, but Wilella Waldorf in the Evening Post wrote: "Jean Hugard did all sorts of miraculous things with big metal rings and ate a good deal of burning paper, followed by what appeared to be wads of cotton. Later on he smoked considerably at the mouth, and blew fire into the air. Mr. Hugard, in fact, quite saved the evening for us."

As a result of the 1929 stock market crash, the bank in which Jean Hugard had deposited his lifetime earnings folded. So, almost 60, he had to start out on a new career.

He began teaching sleight-of-hand and this led to writing. In the early '30s he issued his first two manuscripts on card magic. Since then more than 30 texts of trickery have carried his name. His "Modern Magic Manual," "Expert Card Technique" and "Royal Road to Card Magic" (the latter two in collaboration with Fred Braue) are modern classics. He edited John Northern Hilliard's posthumous masterpiece, "Greater Magic," assembled "The Encyclopedia of Card Tricks" and translated Camille Gaultier's "La Prestidigitation sans Appareils."

On Jan. 3, 1950, Hugard was struck by an automobile while he was crossing Times Square. With the passage of time the resultant fractured hip healed, but his vision gradually faded and finally blacked out.

Recently he completed dictating an answer to Houdini's "Unmasking of Robert-Houdin," which will be published in book form later this year. Currently he is at work on a new textbook of conjuring.

Hugard's amiable manner and sage counsel have won him a host of friends in the hocus pocus world. Al Baker summed it up at another Hugard testimonial 10 years ago: "Jean Hugard, the magician who never did a mean trick."

AGVA Cracking Down On Non-Union Act Booking; Agents See Big Burden

The American Guild of Variety Artists is clamping down on agents booking non-union acts and agents who fail to submit terms of all contracts to the union. Interim committee of AGVA, comprising Dewey Barto, Tom Melody and Joe Campo, is currently working out a contract form which will provide space for the status of the performer with AGVA. Contract will note whether the act is delinquent in dues, his registration number with the union and other vital information, which will make it difficult for buyers to book non-union performers and those that have fallen from grace with their organization.

However, the difficult rub with agencies will be AGVA's insistence upon checking every contract. For example, the union may not only disapprove of a performer working that spot unless he's up to date in dues or on the unfair list for some other reason, but will also be in the position of refusing to okay a pact because the operator has no bond, hasn't signed a minimum basic agreement with the union, doesn't contribute to the AGVA welfare fund, or hasn't settled a union claim. There are also a variety of other reasons why an act may not be allowed to play certain spots on AGVA's proscribed list.

Whether agencies will submit to the new regulation without a struggle remains to be seen. Some argue that it will force the agent to become an enforcement officer for AGVA, responsible for the act's status and that of the cafe. Many do not want the responsibility and it's likely that the Artists Representatives Assn. will discuss the matter with the union before the new contract forms are printed.

Union spokesmen say that last-minute bookings will be okay providing the act or agent notifies the union by telephone or wire of the conditions set forth in the deal.

U.S. AUTO THRILL SHOW SET FOR O'SEAS TOUR

Chicago, March 15.

Abe Saperstein, owner of the Harlem Globetrotters, will send an American auto thrill show, the Hollywood Motor Rodeo, on a European tour. It will open in London April 30, to be followed by appearances in the British Isles, France, Italy, Germany and other European countries through mid-July.

The show leaves for Europe on the Queen Elizabeth April 20, with a crew of 11 men and 13 cars.

N.Y. AGVAites Reprove Nat'l Board on Goss Move

The New York branch of the American Guild of Variety Artists, which met last week at the Capitol Hotel, voted to censure the national board for its handling of the ousting of Irving Goss, who had been top organizer of the N. Y. branch.

Initially, motions had been made to condemn the board and ask for the reinstatement of Goss. However, the final form represents a compromise decision.

New Nitery Pact For British Chorus Girls

London, March 8.

A new contract for chorus girls in Continental niteries, agreed to by British Actors Equity, the Variety Artists Federation and the Agents Assn., went into force on March 1. The draft is to be printed in five languages to insure clarity among all managements concerned.

The new pact makes it necessary for managements to deposit a fortnight's salary, plus the cost of return fares. It also stipulates that English girls are not to be told to carry out social duties such as acting as hostesses and sitting at tables with customers.

Kay Starr's $12,500 at Fla. Hotel Cues Another Round of Pay Hikes

The Miami Beach hotels may be paving the way for higher salaries in hotels all around the country. The Fontainebleau, Miami Beach, which seats 500 in its La Ronde room, has signed Kay Starr for two weeks starting March 28 at $12,500, the highest salary ever paid a singer by any hotel outside of Las Vegas. The Fontainebleau, incidentally, has as one of its owners Ben Jaffe who is one of the partners in the Flamingo, Las Vegas, where Miss Starr has a three-year deal which guarantees her six figures. General Artists Corp. set the Miami deal.

Fact that the Fontainebleau is willing to pay five figures for a singer even though it has only a 500 capacity, and has no casino to justify such salaries, is seen as having a considerable effect on the hotel-nitery field. It's expected that name singers will press for similar contracts in other spots, and prices may zoom even higher. It had been felt by many that except for Las Vegas, salaries had reached some degree of stability. However, the Starr booking seemingly reverses that trend.

In many ways, it's believed that the Fontainebleau deal with Miss Starr will have even a more profound effect on salaries than Las Vegas deals. In the gambling belt, performers could be persuaded that Las Vegas was a world apart because the greenfelts paid for everything, and therefore one shouldn't expect to get anywhere near that kind of money in any other part of the country. However, with a 500-seater shelling out $12,500, that argument will no longer apply, it's feared.

Agencies feel that hotels and niteries again face another round of increases because of this action. How many more hikes they can afford before going out of business, hasn't been computed as yet.

FRIARS M&L SHINDIG BRINGS IN $60,000

The Friars dinner to Dean Martin & Jerry Lewis at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., last Friday (11) brought in $60,000, according to Carl Timmin, organization's executive secretary. Proceeds represent the $35 and $50 per-plate receipts from 1,028 paying customers and the souvenir journal.

Coin this year will be divided between the Friars' relief fund and the Muscular Dystrophy Assn., in which Martin & Lewis are interested. Last year, the profits were divided with the various theatrical guilds.

Ex-Scribe Exec Director Of Ringling Bros. Circus

John Ringling North, head of the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus, has named Michael Burke as executive director of the show. He's a former radio and film writer. It's a newly-created post and gives the newcomer a position secondary only to that of North. Burke is a former All-American back from the U. of Pennsylvania, and received a Silver Star and the Navy Cross for heroism during World War II while serving with Navy Intelligence.

North, at various times, has placed a lot of Ivy League college grads in various circus posts.

Frances Langford & The Fellas (4); Stanley Melba and Chico Relli orchs; $2 and $2.50 couvert.

The Cotillion Room's maestro-impresario Stanley Melba is queer for babes—the femme kind. And not a bad idea. His bookings run the gamut from Hildegarde and Denise Darcel to Marguerite Piazza and Marion Marlowe to the incumbent Frances Langford and upcoming Kaye Ballard. True, occasionally he garnishes them with a little muscular atmosphere, such as Jack Whiting vis-a-vis'ing Hildegarde, or The Fellas, personable male quartet, foiling for Miss Langford.

Songstress, of course, is a savvy trouper as befits a seasoned performer who has worked the plush-eries and the GI foxhole circuit, with pix and tv in between.

Melba, emcee-bandleader, opens the new frolic with Carlos Rantini, his lead violinist, making with the Cotillion Strings, which is a sub-unit in the regular Melba dansapation troupe. Lois Bannerman at the harp is the focal of the string quintet which gives out with a little Kreisler, and thence into the telephonic routine as The Fellas "page" Miss Langford.

Blonde thrush in an arresting little bouffant number whipped up by the couturier Ceil Chapman then goes into a surefire songalog of current pops and generous helpings of Porter and Berlin (billed by name), Ethel Waters, salute to the bandmen (a natural segue from her "Glenn Miller Story," Universal pic stint) and a personal past hit parade—songs identified with her. The accent is on the torch or intimate ballad, and it makes for pleasing listening.

Miss Langford has given lots of attention to readying her stint. Herb Ross staged it and Jerry Seelen-Lee Pokriss fashioned the special material. The Fellas are a consistently good assist.

Alternating with the Melba toast of the Cotillion Room, the Chico Relli orch plays the Latin sets. Per usual matire d' Pasqual is a fixture at the tape, and handles his plush room with the 10 Downing St. manner usually expected of a class bistro. Abel.

Biltmore Bowl, L. A.

Los Angeles, March 11.

Jon & Sondra Steele, Wally Boag, Los Gatos Trio, DeMattiazzis (2), Hal Derwin Orch (10); cover, $1-$1.50.

The Steeles, Jon and Sondra, are back at their old stand for the new setup at this downtown Bowl, where Wally Boag and the Los Gatos Trio also are repeats. Only thing new for this stand is a European novelty act called The DeMattiazzis, a bit too Continental in flavor for much popularity here.

Headliners have become a habit at half a dozen local spots during the past few years. Sondra lends a note of glamour along with a saucy air as she sings her numbers, and strikes a nice note to rate a hefty hand for her valiant efforts. She's easily the better half of this twosome, her pianist husband's selections lacking her showmanship. Best of her chirping probably "You've Changed." Together they do such numbers as "Begin the Beguine," "The Old Soft Shoe Routine" and "How Important Can It Be?"

Boag brings his familiar balloons with him as mainstay of his comedy act, but humor is forced and he's best with a softshoe dance. The Los Gatos Trio opens the show with their fast tumbling and handstand act, three clever guys to watch, and The DeMattiazzis employ a full-sized mechanical man on skates which talks by remote control for their turn. It seems out-of-place for a supperclub floor. Hal Derwin as usual backs the show with his excellent music as well as dispensing dance tunes. Whit.

Copa City, Miami Beach

Jane Powell, Nat (King) Cole, Los Chavales de Espana with Trini Reyes, Eileen O'Dare, David Tyler Orch; $3.50-$5 bev. minimum.

Boniface Murray Weinger has evidently decided to concentrate on triple-draw lineups, eliminating the June Taylor-Benny Davis production. Current array is illustration of the new policy. Although topheavy on singers and notably lacking in comedy, the two-week show plays smoothly to wind effectively audience-wise.

Jane Powell, trim and shapely, handsomely gowned, is per usual a winning thrush whose compote is adroitly blended to feature her lilting vocalistics. The fetching filmstar tees off with a bright "It's A Most Unusual Day," then launches a carefully balanced group of operetta and musicomedy extracts to build into the "Jewel Song" from "Faust." Change in pace is accomplished adroitly with concentration on blues and rhythm tunes. In a tough spot following Nat (King) Cole, Miss Powell has them all the way via confident approach and shining personality which comes through strongly, thanks to elimination of any delivery frills or overselling.

Cole belts them from the walk-on. The guy is at home on a nitery stage, as evidenced in the easy, assured approach, the continued control of aud moods and constant reaction build while he switches from the piano to mike to project his group of over a dozen clicks he's been associated with. He could stay on longer, and has to beg off.

Los Chavales de Espana, annual fixture at the Saxony, make the transition from swank hotel cafe to a night club with ease. The 11-man-plus-Trini Reyes unit are a finely-integrated organization, interchanging in various units to feature virtuosity on instrumental work, most of them doubling on choral work to background the trio of charm boys who take over for Latin-American chansons. Miss Reyes adds a fiery touch to the act with sharply-defined castanet-h a n d c l a p-fingersnap accompaniment to her flamenco and Castilian dance concepts.

Eileen O'Dare, held over all season, spells the topliners with a zingy, gasp-raising assortment of acro - dance routines featuring whirlwind spins, butterfly twists and flips. David Tyler and his orch play the backgrounds for shows in able manner. Lary.

Blue Note, Chi

Chicago, March 9.

Teddy & Marty Napoleon Quartet, Australian Jazz Quartet; $3 minimum.

Bandstand at this Windy City jazz emporium will look like a musical instrument fire sale for duration of the current bill's two-week stay, with sidemen switching from horn to horn with the bewildering rapidity of football's flashier razzle-dazzle plays. When both groups are highly competent, as is the case in this layout, good gates are assured.

The Napoleon brothers both play the 88's and are backed by a bass and traps; group's approach is highly informal, with much chatter between customers and musicians. An attempt is made at creating a rehearsal atmosphere, and the quartet carries it off pretty well. Napoleons at the keys hold the spotlight as they essay such faves as "You Came Along" and "Stairway To The Stars." Group's sound patterns are pleasant and well received by patrons.

The Australian Jazz Quartet, newcomers to these shores, should adapt very well and build a loyal following. Basically a piano, sax, bass, drum combo, this quartet adds, from time to time, the vibes, bassoon and flute, subtracting as needed to keep it down to four. Customers are surprised and pleased to hear "Lullaby of the Leaves" in a piano, bassoon, flute, vibes, interp. Unusual sound goes over big. Group does an original "Saxaphone Pads," authored by Dick Healy, quartet's bass, saxophone and flute quick-change artist, for good mitt. Jack Brokensha, drummer and vibraphonist, impresses with his scene-stealing showmanship. Australians produce interesting and original sounds, unusual instrumental combinations, and keep the customers interested and happy. Quartet should have big future. Gabe.

One Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Clara Cedrone & Damian Mitchell, Karen Anders, Bob Downey & Harold Fonville, Hazel Webster; no cover or minimum.

Current entertainment layout at this Greenwich Village nitery is a pleaser. Clara Cedrone & Damian Mitchell, who've played the club before, provide ample yock material, while the vocal slot ably handled by Karen Anders, who's reviewed under New Acts.

Kicking off with some songstering, Cedrone & Mitchell work into a couple of okay routines. Duo has an amiable manner and act fits the small room nicely. A takeoff on the tune, "Entertainment," with special lyrics referring to contemporary performers, is good, while a lexicon bit and a flapper stint have risible value.

Working the keyboard in their usual adept manner are regulars Bob Downey & Harold Fonville and Hazel Webster, Distaffer works solo, while the other two perform as a team. Jess.

Joanne Gilbert, Nat Brandwynne & Mischa Borr Orchs; $2.50 cover.

Some performers take years to develop to the point where they feel justified to play key showcaser—such as the Waldorf's Empire Room. Joanne Gilbert had her New York comer-outer at the ex-Gogi's LaRue a couple of years ago, but failed to stir the town. She broke in her songalog at the Mocambo on the Coast. There, the combination of her Ray Gilbert songwriter parentage ballyhoo and staging and her own bright looks and youth seemed to have cast a spell over some of the intra-trade clientele; and in between Miss Gilbert completed the Big Three with a Las Vegas booking, not to mention inserts in a film or two.

Thus there are now fewer worlds to conquer—albeit lots of spots undoubtedly available to her to rake in the coin and gain stature on the experience side.

The question arises, can she go a second time around the cafe circuits (forgetting the third go-round for the moment?). It's the repeat editions that measure the payoff in both prestige and groceries, and if they can't make it, that's that. Judgment on this is reserved, but candor compels the observations that (1) Miss Gilbert is not yet an automatic draw and the Waldorf didn't expect her to be, considering this Lenten booking; (2) she has quite bit to go before entering the dream trough as far as a major turn is concerned.

On the asset side of the ledger, Miss Gilbert is refreshingly fine looking, more of a teenage fuzz-not-yet-off-the-peach aura about her than her 22 years of the reports; a real dilly in her beaded white toreadors to show off that slim figure and its elegant gams; and has a cute if somewhat overplayed style of making with the gestures while essaying the ditties.

Miss Gilbert is not a character or narrative type singer, at least not yet, so the "Hello Bluebird" stuff with the fingers encasing the mythical feathered friend is pleasant without particularly adding up. In similar groove is her "Poor Butterfly" with the fan for a prop. But she's upbeat on items like "Fascinatin' Rhythm" and a nice rearrangement of "Surrey With the Fringe on Top" that displays her easy way in the light comedic idiom.

In the saucier vei , she goes to work on "Let's Get Together and Let's Get Busy," accenting the "Let's" in a reprise to upgrade the sex notion, but seems too young and innocent looking to register on such a choice. In "Sweet Georgia Brown" she's neat and nifty, ditto with the red-caped matador stuff (good sound effects of the bullfight crowd on a waxing), and there's a nice finale in "Breezin' Along With the Breeze." No socko in the 25-minute library and nothing to remember her by, but in a season or two the reports should read differently.

Meanwhile, Miss Gilbert has lots to offer in her this-side-of-sophisticated style, while obvious that the special treatment provided by mechanical contrivances, as in films, are figured to boost her stock. She has a winning personality, quiet and effective, and extra poise which now seems fabricated somewhat out of shyness, or perhaps caused by a refusal to pander to the crowd by those ingratiating designs remindful of less endowed singers. If-by chance she can latch on to a disk click, there may be another chapter in the rapid-advance Gilbert story. Trau.

Ritz Carlton, Montreal

Felicia Sanders (with Irving Joseph), Johnny Gallant, Joe Settan trio; $1.50-2 cover.

Young in years and appearance, Felicia Sanders has the poise and piping of the true rhythm singers of another decade and the Ritz Cafe patrons are going overboard for the pert brunet in this two-weeker. Appreciation on opening night was one of most spontaneous ever in this swank boite, and Miss Sanders responded like a vet with a hefty songalog and the savvy to get off when ahead.

Gowned in a simple black dress without the flash and cleavage of the usual chirper, Miss Sanders opens with "Old Devil Moon" from "Finian's Rainbow" and midway through offering the room gets right behind her and she builds solid fashion to a rousing begoff. With Irving Joseph (her arranger and former 88'er with Lena Horne) at the piano, thrush gets added boost as she belts "Man That Got Away" and a plaintive torchant "Something Cool" to fine appreciation.

Patter is explicit and brief without being coy; piping is full-bodied and clear, lending emphasis to her song selection. Arrangements, though almost too complicated at times, never go overboard or veer from song topic whether blues ballads.

In a room that favors the Gallic and English femmes with a penchant for everyday pops and special material items, the straightforward mood and blues style of Miss Sanders minus today's cornball "leer-ics" refreshing change. And the payees are going for this gal in spades.

Between shows, Johnny Gallant establishes some fine piano music and the Joe Settano trio cuts dansapation sides with customary ease and finesse. Newt.

Chateau Madrid, N. Y.

Lolo & Lita, Paco Michel, Line (3), Ralph Font & Maya Orchs; minimums, $3.50, $5.

Angel Lopez has installed a comparatively brief show for his Chateau Madrid. The major reliance here is on novelty, with Lolo & Lita filling that bill while Paco Michel holds down the singing spot. A three-girl line is rather sparse even for the comparatively small dimensions of the Chateau Madrid floor.

Lolo & Lita have a wide repertoire. Most of the act is vested in the male's abilities as he performs on elongated shoes, which provides a lot of comedy effects while he juggles plates on a stick. His magnum opus is a plate-twirling bit. Altogether, the pair does well.

Michel is mainly for the Latino crowd. His tunes are melodic and easy to take, but at times fail to hold the crowd. His sole entry for non-comprendo crowd is "Let Me Go Lover," which isn't particularly for male delivery.

The three lookers doing the production are agile, fairly well routined and interestingly costumed. Sole drawback is the paucity of bodies for the necessary splash. Otherwise it's a good visual interlude.

Chez Suzy Solidor, Paris

Paris, March 15.

Suzy Solidor, Katherine Essex, Ray Kidd, Moune De Rivel, Lona Rita, Gino Borghi, Jean Chabaud; minimum, $5.

Tab for this intimery may be a little steep, but most of the clientele are followers of Suzy Solidor, and the upper bourgeois are making this as staple windduppery. Two shows, both the same in content, are presented at 10 p.m. and 12 midnight for the early and late risers. Ensconced among the surrounding (over 100) portraits of her done by most of the w.k. artists of the past few decades, Miss Solidor still displays a sonorous song presence, an ability with jewel-like poems and a way with a story. Statuesque and dignified in her chant knowhow, Miss Solidor remains one of the solid song items of the nitery pic here, but her surrounding talent is of ordinary calibre and all the club success is due to her.

In her black dress, Miss Solidor chants her grave songs for fine aud response. Always the showman, she is not averse to pushing tnd selling her latest disks. Katherine Esssex is an elegant woman who essays bombastic songs in French and English. Her physical accoutrements are not in keeping with the material and presentation is a bit incongruous. However, this atmosphere she fits well. Ray Kidd is an American tenor who essays a flock of show tunes. Agreeable in presentation and voice, Kidd makes a nice entry. Lona Rita is an ex-dancer who has evolved a song act after a leg accident. She is pert and saucy and makes up in cuteness what she lacks in the song department. Good material could make her a neat addition to the personality "fantaisiste" category.

Moune De Rivel, a robust sepia songstress, adds an exotic feel to the proceedings with a hearty, pleasing Creole stint. Self-accomped on guitar and then piano, she has a caressing voice and a fine sense of rhythm that scores in this intimery. Gino Borghi is an Italo tenor in the sugary department and hits quivering notes backed by a sleepy-eyed mien. He is well applauded but specialized, and limited to this type of boite. Jean Chabaud supplies an excellent piano accomp and doubles for the dance breaks. In all, this is strictly Gallic in draw and has primarily only Miss Solidor for U.S. appeal. Mosk.

Versailles, N. Y.

Leonard Sillman's "Come As You Are," staged by David Tihmar; starring Paul Lynde, Connie Sawyer, June Carroll, Dick Smart; features Bill Mullikin, Jimmie Russell, Betty Logue, Inga Swenson, Johnny Laverty, Franca Baldwin; lyrics, June Carroll, music by Arthur Siegel; costumes, Thomas Becher; scenic design, Robert Galster; rangements, Buddy Dufault; musical director, Salvatore Gioe; bands by Gioe and Panchito; $5 minimum.

Leonard Sillman's "Come As You Are" revue bids fair to crowd George White's longrunning "Glad To See You" floorshow which opened for part of season, at Nick & Arnold's class East 50th St. cabaret-restaurant, and stayed two years. This is a miniature "New Faces" and while June Carroll, for example, has already been exposed in that legit musical, Sillman has surrounded his four stars with a flock of new values. Miss Carroll, Paul Lynde, Connie Sawyer and Dick Smart get the bold type.

As with "Faces, Miss Carroll has done a good special material job (lyrics) to Arthur Siegel's tunes. Under David Tihmar's staging, utilizing the miniature rostrum of the Versailles to maximum effects, "Come As You Are" will get 'em coming. Unlike previous revuettes, same show plays both for dinner and after-theatre; White had two separate "acts." But there is so much pace, novelty and verve that this show is easy to take at any session.

The values are solid and each avails himself to the utmost. Dick Smart, who reminds of filmster Philip Reed, is a good juvenile; Paul Lynde and Connie Sawyer capably hold down the comedy slots; and Miss Carroll's character number are also bellringer. Bill Mullikin, Franca Baldwin, Jimmie Russell, Betty Logue, Inga Swenson and Johnny Laverty round things out with their own punchy song and dance specialties, which are set off effectively against the Robert Galster scenic designs and set-pieces that flank the podium, or are perched behind the band on the stand. Thomas Becher did the effective costume designs.

Some of comedian Lynde's stuff is a little subtle but it's not that cranial that they don't dig his pokes at "the trip of the month" (bandaged tourist back from darkest Africa, a la Hemingway casualty); June Carroll's practical jokes number ("April Fool") and her later "Cooperation" click. Latter song is an obvious paraphrase of "Monotonous" which Eartha Kitt belted out to a personal score in "New Faces" and which Miss Carroll probably fashioned for her, as she did much of that 1953-54 legit musical's tunes. Lynde did the "tourist" routine in "New Faces."

Connie Sawyer's comedies start rolling with her click special song on "If-Walls Could Talk"—"do you want me to bang my head against people?", she (The Wall) complains. It follows a good "Not A Dull Moment" ensemble number and segues into "The Boy Most Likely To Succeed," effectively led by Miss Swenson.

Lynde returns with some more of his dry humor, some its delightfully non sequitur, as he indites an "ode to a moat" (prison).

The successive numbers afford equal opportunities, with the development of this gay spring revue, for a West Indies number; June Carroll as a lady explorer; some Charles Addams comedics in songs; Smart's standout "You're Bad For Me"; Miss Sawyer's folk-song satire; women tv satire on "Stars In The Rough," coming "live" from New York; nonsense with the Infidelity Insurance Co.; and to the finaleing "I Thought They'd Never Go Home" (Miss Carroll and Smart"), in answer to the "Come As You Are" party invite. It's of the "Two Sleepy People" genre, but a good signoff.

Show withal has novelty, talent and originality, as good a parlay as any revue would ask for. The pace might be accelerated a bit, however, with some judicious pruning; it's a little too generous i length.

Maestro Salvatore Gioe batons in his usual expert manner (Buddy Dufault gets credit for the musical arrangements) and the Gioe band alternates with Panchito and His Rhumbas for the dansapation. Nick Prounis and Arnold Rossfield have a hit on their hands and maitre d' Robert, who is as much a part of the Club Versailles atmosphere as Marie Antoinette was back in the original Paris suburb, will be a busy kid at the door. Abel.

Le Ruban Bleu, N. Y.

Julius Monk's talent selections at Le Ruban Bleu make for an extremely interesting session, inasmuch as he isn't fearful of experimenting with new talents. There's at least one newcomer on every show and frequently they become regulars at this spot. The new faces on this display are Jane & Gordon Connell, further described under New Acts.

To insure entertainment values in this Theodore & Al Mele spot are such vets in the intimeries as the Three Riffs and Dorothy Loudon. The Riffs, of the better Negro comedy song trios around, send out some hearty entertainment. Tunes are excellently routined so that they build in entertainment values. One of their highspots is a sapolioed version of "Speedy Gonzalez," and also an assortment of special material that hits jackpot applause for them.

Miss Loudon also does well here with an assortment of oldies. One of her major assets is her ability to take a vintage tune and treat it museum piece with the right amount of irreverence for its age. In this genre, "Louisville Lou" and "Jamboree Jones" hit excellent responses for her.

Raymond Chase, also new to this room, provides a good concertina novelty. The chap is apparently an accomplished musician and can squeeze out a lot of virtuosity from that instrument. Most of his efforts are in the classical vein, with tunes by Kreisler, Smetana, Lecuona and the like. He also squeezes out a medley on a very small concertina for a change of pace. He's well appreciated.

The Norman Paris Trio continues to gain stature. Paris, a clever pianist, has extremely colorful and frequently explosive arrangements that make even the lulls lively. Monks also gets some respectful attention with his intermission piano music. Jose.

Elegante, Brooklyn

Dori Brooks, Jack Wakefield, James & Jardine Williams, Russ Curry Orch; minimum, $3.50,$5.

The Elegante, one of the more resplendent Brooklyn rooms, is operating on a very sound premise for these days. Either they get names that will undoubtedly draw or else moderately-priced talent certain to entertain. It seems to be working out, inasmuch as weekends are jammed at this hospice sufficiently to take care of any losses incurred during the week. Spot during this session has a bill comprising Dori Brooks, Jack Wakefield and James & Jardine Williams.

Miss Brooks, although around on the circuits for sometime, has come up with a completely refurbished turn designed along basically sound lines. Miss Brooks, a deep-throated thrush, sends out a lot of warm tones. Act shows a lot of preparation, with a medley of Frank Loesser tunes providing a strong exit. As routine is presently designed, the song selection shows a tendency to place her voice in the same level, which destroys a lot of inherent color. However, she holds on to her audience throughout her turn. Looks well, and gowns are tops.

Wakefield indicates promise in the cafe comedy field. He has an essentially good delivery and his gab is fairly commercial. He tells a story well. Wakefield needs a bit of polishing in delivery and material before he can venture into the important coin. But at this rate of development, it should come shortly.

James & Jardine Williams comprise a personable terp tur with softshoe and tap routines that set them off with the audience. They are well-costumed and nicely routined and net a rewarding mitt.

Russ Curry showbacks ably. Jose.

Latin Casino, Philly

Philadelphia, March 11.

Mae West, with Tony Dexter, Richard DuBois, Louise Beavers; Bela Kremo, Migal Twins, Jack Curtis, Joe Frasetto's Orch (10); minimum $5.

Mae West, the lady who epitolizes the whole department of sex a barroom joke, brought the smiles back to the headwaiters faces during her week stand at the Latin Casino. Miss West's appeal seems to cut across a wide age spread and a variety of classes. The club had one of its best weeks of the current season with the vintage charmer.

When La West steps up to the like and chants "If I Could Do All Day, What I Do All Night," or arranges herself comfortably on a garish couch with "Fix the pillows, honey, I may want to lie down for a couple of days," she is in character, and the character people know and expect from her. It has been suggested that such Westian antics constitute a parody on sex. That may be, but for the cafe audience, although Miss West may be funny she ain't kidding.

Accompanied by a unit of 19, Miss West's own show runs close to 45 minutes. Richard DuBois (Mr. America) flexes his biceps and sings a la Billy Eckstine. Tony Dexter, from the films, is an acceptable leading man. A perfectionist, Miss West carries along Louise Beavers to cue her on for a couple of bits. The display of muscle men, which she labels variously as "Something for the Girls" and "Every One Knows It's a Man's World," is the highpoint of the production and also something of a switch with its array of weight-lifters instead of the customary chorines.

Incidentally, the Lati Casino line was laid off for the week in deference to Miss West's masculine coryphees. The star, in fact, was the only femme on the bill (except for Miss Beavers).

Emcee Jack Curtis leads off with a couple of songs and is followed by the Migal Twins, dance duo which breaks up its tap work with acrobatic stunts. A newcomer from Hungary named Bela Kremo offers astonishing work with hats and cigar boxes and also furnishes some comedy relief. Joe Frasetto's orch does its usual effective backing. House was jammed at late show. Gagh.

Bar of Music, L. A.

Les Pine, Cathy Monroe, Vespia Bros. (2), Geri Galian Orch; Saturday minimum, $2.

For a first crack at the saloon belt, a new comic named Les Pine draws plenty of yocks at this Beverly Boul' boite, which should assure him continued bookings. His long routines generally are pinpointed for the popular palate, which gets further spicing from a flashy blonde pop singer, Cathy Monroe, in abbreviated attire. Word-of-mouth may help here for a fair potential.

Pine writes his own material, and after a long opening monolog which should be trimmed, gets down to cases for raucous account of heavy meal at his mother-in-law's, probably his best offering. Each of his four routines is personalized and despite an unfamiliarity with mike technique, he displays an easy delivery which time should snap up.

Miss Monroe, a looker, does four song numbers, and with "Eadie Was a Lady" contrives a semi-striptease which gets a big hand as she unveils a comely pair of gams. "Who Took Me Home Last Night" and "The Laziest Gal in Town" are equally effective for her style of chirping.

The Vespia Bros., comedy singers, opens the show as an average attraction, and Geri Galian and his orch provide lilting dance tunes, Galian also backing Miss Monroe on the piano. Whit.

Hotel Radisson, Mpls.

Minneapolis, March 9.

Jane Morgan (with Ernest Bragg), Don McGrane Orch (8); $2.50 minimum.

Making her first local appearance, blonde thrush Jane Morgan offers skilful vocalizing, good looks, stunning apparel and some off-the-beaten-path material calculated to catch every customer's fancy.

She does an expert selling job on her songs, these including "Fancy Living," the amusing and slightly naughty account of a hillbilly maiden who learns and cashes in on life's facts in gay Paree. Then there's a sentimental "Why" excursion, revealing reasons for living this life, and the revelation of how the typical American song, "There's No Business Like Show Business," sounded as she sang it in French during her Paris appearance.

The routine has th proper amount of variety and pace change and Miss Morgan, with a good set of pipes, invests the warbling with piquancy, warmth or exuberance, as the occasion demands. Her occasional lapses into French are appropriate under the circumstances and her introductions to the selections have a commendable polish. Her own pianist accompanist, Ernest Bragg, assists creditably and Don McGrane and his musicians also play important part in making the performance enjoyable. Room was well filled at supper show caught. Rees.

Chi Chi, Palm Springs

Palm Springs, Cal., March 8.

Connee Boswell, Yonelli the Great, Harris & Shaw, Bill Alexander Orch (6); $2-$2.50 cover.

Experience, it has been said, is not what happens to you but what you do with what happens to you. That might serve as the keystone on which Connee Boswell has built her long continuing success as one of the top singers.

For 35 minutes opening night she cradled the audience close to her with showmanly blandishments and her stylish, deep-throated singing. She celebrated some sort of triumph with every number and had to beg off with a brief speech.

Opening with "Indeed I Do," she follows with "I'm In Love Alone" to get off to a glowing start. She eases in "A Little Nest Of Heavenly Blues" for change of mood and romances them with "Young At Heart." With a tribute to Sophie Tucker's golden anniversary she offers a bell-ringing impression of "Some Of These Days."

Miss Boswell tilts the beat with a swift-paced "Begin The Beguine," succeeded by her newly-recorded "How Important Can It Be." For a sizzling windup she encores with "Basin Street Blues" and obliges to calls for "Martha."

In the second slot, Yonelli the Great employs the novelty of miniature musical instruments and unorthodox techniques for solid applause and yocks. First half of routine is pantomimic with Yonelli finding voice and funny words to go with it in latter part. Gift for droll delivery warrants the suggestion that Yonelli might employ same profitably throughout the act.

Harris & Shaw in the opener seem slow and lethargic and do little to set the show's pace. Comedy dance team attempts satirical takeoffs which unfortunately are solidly grounded. Comedy is not broad enough and the team's efforts are too obvious and unslick.

Bill Anderson, popular fixture here, does his usual job as emcee and his sextet neatly backs the acts and keeps the dancers happy. Brown.

Shoreham Hotel, Wash.

Washington, March 8.

Tippy Stringer, Burch-Mann Trio, Instrumental Trio, Singing Violins (12), Shoreham Ballerinas (6), Barnee Breeskin Orch; $1 cover, $1.50 Saturdays.

The Shoreham Blue Room offers another of its series of revues. This one has the now expected novelty of these shows, runs a little longer than those in the past, but fails to equal several of the recent ones in all-around effectiveness. This appears to be because there is more diffusion and less building toward a peak.

Difference shows in two new featured acts. A trio of girls playing woodwinds lacks the sock of such former units as the four guitarists, the harp quartet, etc. Likewise, the Burch-Mann dancers offer lots of motion, but don't seem to be focused on anything in particular.

The Shoreham ballerinas are a polished and eye-filling troupe who do very well by the Blue Room, and pert vocalist Tippy Stringer is more satisfactory than usual.

This production gives plenty of attention to the Singing Violins who, by now, have become the trademark of the Bernie Bralove shows. They are handsomely framed and featured during the production, but one point is noticeable as it has been in recent revues. The violinists have been withdrawn from the audience. They started out last summer on the Shoreham Terrace in intimate style which had been discoursing schmalzy melodies directly among the tables. This was an effective, romantic touch which made Washington talk about the 12 fiddlers. These days, the presentation is such that the intimacy is lost.

Barnee Breeskin, veteran maestro of the Blue Room, backstops the acts effectively with his house orch and also plays for dansapation. Lowe.

Eddy's, K. C.

Kansas City, March 8.

Four Joes, Del Ray, Thurl Henry Orch (8); $1 cover.

Current craze for the vocal-instrumental quartets continues here with Four Joes getting the latest nod. They're combined with magico Del Ray, both new to the town, for a lively and attention-holding 40 minutes. The Eddys should do some pleasant business this fortnight.

Ray has the magician's stock, but with an added fillip or intriguing twist to each turn. A mechanical teddy bear which pours himself a drink on command from a patron, flames spouting out of the magician's hands or mouth unexpectedly, and the unending string of lighted cigarets, among others, keep audience attention rapt and draw him a solid hand.

The former Four GI Joes now in civvies have been touring the night club and hotel circuit for about a year, following the rep they gained in Korea and Japan. Youthful, handsome boys, their work is musical and polished, and it's easy to understand how the house was heavy on applause all the way. Lou Tulianello on accordion and Kenny Davis on guitar, with brothers Pete and Steve Antos vocalling only, make this quartet a bit apart from other current foursomes. They stick largely to standards, such as "Perfidia," "Dry Bones" and "Hold That Tiger," but also have a varied turn with "Four Joes" as original opener, Greek lyrics to "Ramona" and novelty "Stand-Ins for Stand-Outs," among others. Quin.

Bon Soir, N. Y.

The Bon Soir is celebrating its fifth anni this month but its youthful exuberance is undiminished. It's still one of the liveliest spots in Greenwich Village, or around town for that matter, and its layout continues to abound with zest and gaiety.

Much of the breezy, free-wheeling aura can be credited to the perennials, who never leave, or keep coming back after short treks to other boites. The vets here this outing are Mae Barnes, Jimmy Daniels and the Three Flames (Tiger Haymes, guitar; Averill Pollard, bass, and Loumel Morgan, piano).

Newcomers are comic Phil Leeds and comedienne-songstress Helen Halpin, and they both fit easily into the spirited goings-on. Miss Halpin is a breezy gal who knows how to mug and belt out a song. "She's standout in the latter department with a style reminiscent of Judy Garland's, but not too much so that her own individuality is lost. Her turn is well-fashioned and moves at a brisk pace. She holds interest all the way by mixing up mugging, straight singing, parodies and carbons. All hit home and she walks off a winner.

Leeds is quiet comic. He doesn't hit you over the head to get his point across and he projects as a pleasant guy to have around. His delivery is sure, and although some of his material vintage stuff, he builds for yocks via his story-telling style.

Miss Barnes is the powderkeg here. In the headline spot, she knocks 'em over with her frisky vocalistics. She knows the room and the clientele and seemingly can do no wrong. Best in her repertoire are "Summertime," "Ole Man Mose" and "Old Time Religion."

Jimmy Daniels emcees and vocalizes in an easy manner; The Three Flames give the acts quality support and Don Herman provides a pleasant intermish sesh at the keyboard. Gros.

Fairmount, Ottawa

Ottawa, March 9.

Ice Capers of 1955, with Powers & Reynolds, Betty Jane Ricker, John Melendez, Harry Pozy Orch (8); 75c admission, $1 Saturday.

Neatly packaged, the fast-paced "Ice Capers of 1955" preems a Canadian nitery tour at the Fairmount Club to okay business and solid impact. Unit has only six people on its 20-by-30-foot ice surface; no chanters or gabbers, all skaters and enough standouts to keep it to high standards. Topper honors go equally to adagio pair, Powers & Reynolds, and single, Betty Jane Ricker, latter a Canadian gold medalist. Comic antics of John Melendez are okay, showing savvy but lacking the punch to give the stanza a lofty yock rating.

Powers & Reynolds work three numbers amply loaded with lifts and spins that would be tough without skates. With blades added, the socko work of this pair grabs hefty, unstinted mitting. Tall, well-built Miss Ricker is a looker who performs in clinging garb that covers everything but hides nothing. She has an easy, confident style in fluid, speedy routines that work to begoffs. Nick Powers of the adagio duo handles a brief single item with clicko effect. Like other acts, comic Melendez is on three times. His okay blading is augmented by gimmicks and novelty actions. None of the cast seems seriously hampered by the miniature ice surface and customers are left wishing they could see them on arena ice. A pair of unbilled femme skaters fill the showgirl slot with the troupe. Gorm.

Saxony, Miami Beach

Tommy Dorsey Orch, featuring Jimmy Dorsey, with Buddy Rich; Artie Dann, Chandra Kaly, Dancers (4), Bobby Clark; $2.50-$4 bev. minimum.

Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey may be testing the pattern—sans the June Taylor girls—they will be presenting as part of the Jackie Gleason hour on tv come next fall. The package they've brought into the Pagoda Room of this swankery contains the skeleton for a fast half hour, although on this three-week outing they're on for 60 minutes.

The Dorsey combo is a slick one, the arrangements played sans the furbelows that too many bands add to obscure the basic theme. Tommy leads the brass, while brother Jimmy helms the reed section for the interchange and blends called for. Buddy Rich provides the strong beat that marks their rhythm and blues, the ballads and Latin compos. In solo spots there's the featuring of recording hits identified with them, either in single or in tandem days. Rich takes over for a sock skinbeating stint toward the end of the act that keeps the tablers enrapt. Topper in the group sectionings is the dixieland ensemble, a rouser, with the brothers leading the whingding.

Three supporting acts show intelligent booking. Chandra Kaly and his trio of femme aides add color to the proceedings with Indo-Javanese dance ideas. Brilliantly costumed in native finery, the exotic note adds to their impact. Artie Dann comes up with a potpouri of something old, something almost-new for a fair share of laughs, then winds strongly with a solid special piece titled "Hands." Novelty is added by clever puppeteer Bobby Clark. His figurines are intriguing and, although working the strings in full view of the audience, he keeps the eyes focused on their antics. Notable in the lineup he parades is a clown and a stripper, complete to white stole at entrance. Lary.

New Golden, Reno

Reno, March 9.

Frisara & Reynolds, Four Guys, Dorothy Kramer Dancers, Will Osborne Orch; no cover or minimum.

The New Golden has somehow pulled a good followup for the Haley Comets which did so well—and with unknowns. Frisara & Reynolds, the comics in this case, are okay, but the Four Guys (the originals) are great. Between these two acts there's a good hour's fare.

Frankie Frisara and Gary Reynolds plow through some pretty well-tilled ideas and harvest rather heavy response. During the last minutes they create havoc by barging through the tables playing trumpet and sax, blasting in everyone's ears, sitting in laps, marching on the bar, and eventually winding up the siege rocking on their backs on stage—still blowing the brass. It leaves the payees shaking their heads but mitting loudly.

The sleeper is the Four Guys—a versatile and vigorous group. Two sets of brothers, Bert and Dee Carroll, two white boys, and Billy and Larry Austin, two colored fellows, sound good, look good, and move fast.

Nice climaxes are built on such numbers as "Ebbtide" and "I Believe." Boys branch out in all directions as act builds—on piano and sax, and with the Austins in some flashy dancing. Group is bound to shape into a big thing. Mark.

Italian Village, Lincoln

Lincoln, Neb., March 11.

Phil Ford & Mimi Hines, Italian Village Trio; $1.25 minimum.

Phil Ford and Mimi Hines, a young, talented, good-looking couple, become the first act to be held over at Tony Domino's Italian Village, only Lincoln nitery boasting a floor show. And with a wealth of new material, the kids easily could go into a third frame if it weren't for prior bookings.

Ford, a Van Heflin lookalike, opens show with a clever "Francis the Skywriter" bit, then does socko impreshes of Gary Cooper and Walter Brennan. "Born in the Saddle" and "Join Me Cause I'm Coming Apart Over You" numbers cue the entrance of pert Mimi, who can double for Audrey Hepburn.

Couple scores with a fine De John Sisters takeoff, then does a cute "Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" straightaway. Mimi, like her hubby a talented comic, does the boxing champ interview, then departs for costume switch while Ford handles requests. At show caught Ford handled a ringside heckler adeptly. Trump.

Big Biz Exhibs

biz circles, was out to demonstrate that it was at least to an industrial giant what Robert Montgomery is to President Eisenhower.

The three-day meeting had mimics, models, mikes, screens, stages, the industrial equivalent to footlights, etc., as bankroller bait. The exhibition had as sidebars pitches from a closed-circuit tv'er; an industrial adviser on "Theatre for Industry"; TelePrompter, acting both exhibitor and adviser, on this and that, and Billy Rose. The showman aired his views on "N.Y.'s Permanent World's Fair," a pet theory involving realtors Webb & Knapp and their plans for that new building above Grand Central Terminal which he first expounded on "Person to Person" several weeks ago.

TelePrompter, noted primarily for servicing video, keyed the fact that they've been in on industrial angles since '52. They've got it so, they claim, that any speechmaker with the aid of TelePrompter—plus a little direction and canned music—could make like George Jessel. TelePrompter in the recent past "staged shows" for a host of magnates. No matter where the businessman-turned-performer should look, there'd be another TeleP., invisible to the audience but not to the speaker. TeleP even goes in for fancy lighting attached to the lectern to make an industrialist look like his better Bachrachs.

Builder-designer firm Gardner, Robinson, Stierheim & Weis has found a way to put a model or an actress to work, not just at looking pretty and/or dishing out pamphlets, but at acting. Since most exhibition halls demand silence beyond the precincts of the booth, a lot of industrial outfits have had to eliminate special sound in their pitches. GRS&W hires and trains attractive thesps to mimic a spiel being delivered to a large group by earphones, and hires others for real vocalizing, but before only one buyer at a time.

Naturally, BOTV, there for closed circuitry, got its bit in also. Wally Ross spoke for closed circuit as one of the more established show biz touches in industrial exhibition. A good number of the exhibitors stressed the scenic layout angle. And to observers, it looked as if video prop men might take a small lesson on: stuffed cows with moving tails, phonied up turbines, outsized telephone receivers—or any number of gimmicked-up straight props.

Formosa Show Biz

theatre Saturday morning to wait in line—or buys tickets from a scalper at about 300% of the box-office price.

Last week Formosan cinema-goers had their choice of "Gambler From Natchez," "Magnificent Obsession," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Violent Men," the last named in CinemaScope, Technicolor and all with Chinese subtitles. Theatres run about six shows daily, starting at 10 a.m. Most of the films are American, with some French and Italian features from time to time.

Nevertheless, Formosan exhibitors aren't making sensational profits, they report, because of heavy taxes on film house revenue.

Legit attractions—both occidental and native—fare equally well at the boxoffice. American Drama Group, with thespians recruited from the 4,000 Americans on Formosa, plays to packed houses whenever its parttime actors can ready a production. During the past six months they've done "Death Takes a Holiday," "Goodbye, My Fancy" and "A Murder Has Been Arranged."

Current attraction at Taipei's one Chinese legit house is the opera. Audience packs the house but pays little attention to the show—talks, yells, eats and spits all through the performance except when leads are on stage. Then there's absolute quiet.

Concerts are always sold out too. The former NBC Symphony is scheduled to play here in May.

There's also a touring company of Chinese actors which puts on shows for Nationalist troops and also tours before Chinese in other Far Eastern ports.

Big entertainment event of my stay was opening of a two-lane bowling alley at the Friends of China club, where most correspondents stay. Club also has weekly movies, also packed.

Native nightlife revolves around the cafes. No floor shows, no music, but each guest has his own personal waitress. She's not paid by the management but lives on tips. These waitresses currently are controversial subject for Taipei newspapers. They wear a high-necked, sheath-like dress so tight that skirt has to be slit to permit the wearer to walk. Some of the waitresses have discovered that the higher the slit the more attention they get. Editorials discuss how high the slit ought to go.

Island has one radio station, Free China Radio, which beams Chiang's messages to mainland. It's mainly government supported but takes some commercial spot announcements.

Jimmy Wai, the station's alert young manager, also runs one of the island's newspapers, hopes to come to the U. S. when things quiet down to look at the American tv situation.

vaudeville, and all the top acts, on tv for free.

There's one 40-minute talk a night. General Carlos P. Romolo, former president of the Philippines, discusses "Asia." Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland discourses on problems of the atomic age. Dorothy Thompson, third of the speakers, has chosen the subject "The Crisis of the West."

It's believed to be the first time any trade show anywhere has presented lectures in place of entertainment on the stage.

Cory admits he has shocked some of his exhibitors with his new sort of "stage show."

Lashinsky Bros.

venture was booking dance bands in their native Ohio. It was in Charleston 16 years ago, when the Lashinskys rode in from their home town in Cambridge, O., that they booked their first legit show, "Tobacco Road," at the auditorium. They began to interest the New York booking agencies when they brought Jose Iturbi to Charleston and "oversold" the 3,500 seats at the auditorium. The pianist liked the way Harry handled his Charleston appearance, resulting in a Lashinsky-promoted Iturbi tour of midwest cities.

Then there was the day Bill Blair, then manager of Pittsburgh's Nixon theatre, came to Charleston to talk business with Harry Lashinsky. He gave the taxi driver the address and presently the car stopped in a warehouse section of town. The visitor told the cabbie he must have made a mistake. But when Blair walked over some big pieces of metal, opened the door of a one-story building, he was greeted by Lashinsky.

The office looked like that in any other busy junkyard. But then Harry led Blair into a handsome rear office, and the inevitable transformation took place. For it is in the rear office, which looks like something out of "Executive Suite," that junkman Lashinsky turns into showman Lashinsky, with jeans changed for street clothes and the appropriate manner for the business there's nothing like.

Napoleonic Gala

priced at $30 a piece, were all sold weeks before. Paris made it an officially swank event and the square in front of the opera house was floodlighted and cleared of traffic, with a Napoleonic bivouac tent set up on the main traffic island. Military bands played inside and outside the theatre and jackbooted national horseguards lined the entrance stairs to salute the arrival of President Coty and his entourage. Police held back crowds eager to have a look at the show outside, a show that almost equalled the one within, almost but not quite.

Distinguished audience gave full approval to Guitry's version of the Man of Destiny's turbulent career and there were cheers and tears as the three-hour film rolled on its way, with scene after scene singled out for rocking applause.

Guitry has cast himself as the cynical politicio, Talleyrand, and the picture commences with him receiving news of Napoleon's demise. In a series of flashbacks the story of the hero is told. In detail it not, of course, complete, but Guitry has highlined the major events and built them into a compelling drama. When someone asks him if he is going to tell about Trafalgar, he replies, "Let me tell things my way. Trafalgar, that's something for the British to remember."

Austerlitz, the coronation—after David's famous painting—the burning of Moscow, the downfall of the emperor when war has bled France, his suicidal attempt by swallowing poison which later caused his death by cancer of the stomach, Elba, the 100 days, Waterloo and the tragic, despondent last years on St. Helena—Guitry has included them all and given many an anecdote of the great man's love life: the dismissal of Josephine, the marriage with Marie-Louise of Austria, the affairs with Countess Walewska, Eleonore Denuelle and others.

Star-Studded Cast

Daniel Gelin plays the young Bonaparte first wandering through Paris during the Revolution and seeing the humiliation of Louis XVI at the Hotel de Ville when he is obliged to don the red bonnet of revolt and drink a toast to liberty before the angry mob. There are some scenes of Bonaparte's first victories in the field and his rise to fame as a general. The changeover from Bonaparte to Napoleon is cleverly made in barber-chair sequence when Gelin is replaced by Raymond Pellegrin, who is to play the future emperor.

The cast is star-studded, with virtually every French actor of note appearing, while such foreign ones as Maria Schell (as Marie-Louise), Orson Welles (as Hudson Lowe, Napoleon's British guardian at St. Helena), Erich von Stroheim (registering forcefully as Beethoven) and Gino Antonini (as Pius VII), also bow.

Both Daniel Gelin as Bonaparte and Raymond Pellegrin as Napoleon triumph in their difficult assignments, avoiding any staginess in their portrayals. There is fine work by Patachou as Mme. Sans-Gene, by Guitry himself as the wicked Talleyrand, by Danielle Darrieux as the coquettish court flirt, by Henri Vidal as the brave Murat, by Michele Morgan as Josephine, and by Jean Gabin as the dying officer who sees the folly of war. Also in the company are Jean-Pierre Aumont, Jean Marais, Yves Montand, Micheline Presle, Dany Robi, Pierre Brasseur, and Guitry's wife, Lana Marconi.

Color photography and lensing by Pierre Montazel a e tops and production is marked by good taste and flayored with Guitry wit and irony. Main fault is with some unimportant scenes in first half—Luis Mariano's parlor singing bit, for example—but these may be cut before the film is released after Easter.

The 70-year Guitry, who with Cocteau is France's most versatile theatrical genius, has turned the trick again. At the gala he came before the curtain to deliver a short introduction, looking toil-worn but very much the elegant grand old man, and though cutting of "Napoleon" has just been completed he starts on his new one, "Paris," early in April. Guitry is also editing an hour-long film on the making of "Napoleon" which will utilize material that has been cut from finished product.

House Reviews

Chicago, Chi

Chicago, March 11.

Vic Damone, Joan Weber, Don Tannen, Berk & Hallow, Lou Basil Orch; "New York Confidential" (WB).

Current display at the B&K flagship should pack 'em in; unusual opening-day crowd presages big biz.

Vic Damone tops this bill and starts his romantic ballad pitching with a smooth interp of "April In Portugal." Crooner's popularity is well established and is obviously traceable to a pleasing set of pipes, good looks and poised showmanship. The presence of these qualities makes it doubly disappointing when these endowments are half-heartedly utilized, as was the case in the show caught. Damone also affects an ostentatious nonchalance which bespeaks taking success for granted. Damone makes a pitch for the middleaged fans by dedicating and singing "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" to a gray-haired grandmother in the audience. He wraps up with "Sorrento" in Italian, for the aficionados of the Neapolitan folksong. Crooner goes off to good palms.

Joan Weber, handling distaff vocal chores, capitalizes on her current Columbia "Let Me Go, Lover" record-hit but does not impress equally with handling of other tunes. Gal opens with a peppy "Just Rolling Along" but uses pipes to best advantage in torchy numbers like "How Important Can It Be" and "Let Me Go Lover," in a style reminiscent of a female Johnnie Ray. Deficiencies in volume, tone, breath control and phrasing become too apparent when essaying such numbers as "Muskrat Ramble." Gal has much feeling in her voice, and tries hard, which explains good handling of torchers. Miss Weber gets only mild palms.

Don Tannen does a comic ventro turn, and elicits big chuckles. Comic opens by ribbing other ventriloquists; he proceeds to take his dummy apart and projects his voice from his pockets, inside his coat, etc. His aping of the dummy is an unusual takeoff. Tannen proceeds to cut mildly rib-tickling carbons of Liberace, French songsters, and winds up with a hilarious interp of a German beer-hall singer with dictatorial tendencies. Turn gets big mitt.

Show is uncorked by the terp-acro team of Berk & Hallow, who do a showmanly job. Gal particularly evidences top training in skillful blend of tap, ballet and acro techniques. Boy does equally well at straight hoofing, making a top terp turn.

Lou Basil, back from vavcation, helms the house orch in the usual expert showback. Gabe.

Palace, N. Y.

Lee Sullivan, Bud Harris & Mantan Moreland, Louis & Oliver Sisters (3), Berry Family (4), Bobby Brandt, Maxie & Millie, Julia Cummings, Cleopatra & Co. (3); Jo Lombardi Orch; "Big House" (UA).

Six of the Palace's eight current acts fall into the novelty class. And, to lopsided bill, three of the six acts fall largely into the acro-novelty class.

The two turns not conforming with majority rule are tenor Lee Sullivan and the comedy brace of Bud Harris & Mantan Moreland. Sullivan, has a light Irish tenor that serves nicely through an extensive repertoire, ranging from "It's Gonna Be a Great Day" to "Count My Blessings" and "Come To Me, Bend To Me." Harris & Moreland are the other lead act. Both Negro performers fall short of the entertainment mark. Jokes are antiquated; routines are unimaginative, and handling not sharp enough to overcome other deficits.

The Berry Family, a vet foursome, constitutes an okay roller skating teeoff. Bag of tricks isn't extraordinary but it's rapidfire and efficient. Bobby Brandt follows, and his acro-taps show marked agility. His somersaulting draws nice response.

Next in order are Maxie & Millie, a tooting duo that depands heavily on bicycle pump music, handling of three horns at once, etc. Interlaced comedy fails to register, with musical portions being average entertainment. Julia Cummings makes out better than her predecessors. An impressionist, she romps through a flock of standard mimicries — Bankhead, Kitt, Davis, et al.—to please. Miss Cummings, who is quite attractive, could use additional fresh comedics to support her six minutes on the apron.

With Miss Cummings and singer Sullivan following, the next turn, Cleopatra, is the middle of the strongest three acts on the card. A magico, she employs two assistants, rabbits, a tuned-in radio and whatever else is handy for some nifty disappearing stunts. She winds her way through the first few rows of stubholders, pulling coins out of ears, nose and such.

Louis and the two Oliver Sisters are okay in some head-to-head acrobatics. Art.

Apollo, N. Y.

Sarah Vaugh , Tito Puente Band (14), Dyerettes (5), Leonard Reed, Al Hibbler, Ben Beri; "Saracen Blade" (Col).

Sarah Vaughan, perennial at the Apollo, adds zest to a generally tasty bill this week which has Tito Puente's crew dishing up the Latino rhythm and Al Hibbler in the male vocal slot. Rounding out the session are emcee Leonard Reed, ofay juggler Ben Beri and the Dyerettes, a quintet of femme acro-dancers.

Fetchingly garbed in a pink gown, Miss Vaughan warbles no less than seven numbers, including her current disclick, "How Important Can It Be?" Her inimitable style scores solidly with the stubholders on such oldies as "Swonderful" and "If I Knew Then." Winds to a sock finish via "Perdido." Tune, incidentally, could pass as her trademark—she's used it so often.

With five rhythm, five reed and four brass, Puente's combo opens the layout with a breezy "Mambolino," followed by one of the orch's recent waxings, "Cha Cha Cha." Chili tunes are their forte and they make with the tabasco on "Drum Mambo," frantic affair that brings in Puente himself for a spirited session on the skins. A lively outfit, boys also back the show neatly.

Hibbler, who crooned with Duke Ellington's band some years ago, is one of the top Negro singers. With a style best suited for ballads and the slower tempos, he reaps salvos via "Daybreak," "After the Lights" and "Danny Boy," among others. "Unchained," his latest platter release, is making some noise saleswise and he reprises it here for a warm reception.

The Dyerettes, group of five lissome lasses, are scantily clad—the better to display their physical values. Onstage twice, they initially open with some okay terping in unison followed by strobilited routine in a Latino genre. A well-disciplined unit, the femmes return to execute some snappy acro-dance stuff to click handily.

Working in top hat and tails, Beri adeptly juggles rubber balls, Indian clubs and plates with equal dexterity. Booking makes for a fine change of pace on the Apollo bill and the customers react accordingly. Emcee Reed is a familiar figure to house patrons and he has no difficulty in establishing rapport with them. Gilb.

Empire, Glasgow

Glasgow, March 11.

Eddie Calvert, Kordites (4), Authors & Swinson, Falcons (3), George Meaton, Jeffrey Lenner, Alan & Chris Kemble, Jackie, Marie de Vere Girls (6), Bobby Dowds Orch; 80c top.

Vaude offering is filled by sound, interesting turns in a pleasing layout. Headliner is Eddie Calvert, English trumpeter who recently hit prominence via waxing of his best-selling "O Mein Papa."

Calvert, smallish, roundly-built musician, reveals good musicianship in a varied repertoire, and has a modest approach to his success. Spotlight on trumpet resting on cloth-covered table center-stage is cue for musician's entrance. Opens with "Midnight," then into "Mystery Street," "Roses of Picardy" and (for Scot tastes) the Hebridean melody, "The Skye Boat Song." There's solid palming for his rendition in original form of "O Mein Papa."

Calvert lacks polished showmanship, but act rings sincerely through unassuming style of gabbing and modesty of approach. There's scope for more comedy, however.

The Kordites, English radio group, are made up of two males and two gals who give out in happy harmony. Group is not good visually, but scores with precision-style movements and polish.

Alan & Chris Kemble a mixed pair of youthful entertainers on high ladder and on wheels. Marie de Vere Girls offer bright terping routines as useful opener and filler spot. George Meaton scores with sound impressions ranging from motorcycle racing to noise of London underground trains, railroad station announcer and gangster pix impressions. Uses roving hand-microphone to achieve effect, and would be good bet for U.S. radio.

Authors & Swinson, Canadian duo, are a youthful pair of males who have the good sense to bring new material to their act, already seen at this vaudery. They open neatly with banter and crosstalk that is pleasant to take although not overly sock, and wind with their toprate miming.

Negro Names

ready for casts of mixed races being treated as equals. It's pointed out that on the recent NBC-TV telecast of "Tosca," Leontyne Price the Negro soprano got accolades in her performance opposite David Poleri. It's also pointed out that various Othellos were played by Negroes. Years ago, Uta Hagen played opposite Paul Robeson in "Othello."

The Mariners on the Arthur Godfrey show comprise two Negro and two ofay lads, and they've been getting visual exposure for a number of years without agitating the advertising sponsors.

With these examples at hand, the Negro singers are beefing heavily at being restricted to niteries. Several, such as Billy Ecksti and Billy Daniels have been spending considerable time in Europe and Australia where color lines aren't pronounced. Eckstine has spent considerable time on the pop-concert circuits, but this market is apparently n.s.g. at this time.

The offices are sympathetic to that problem, but it's still difficult to break the barrier despite the growing number of examples. For instance, "Blackboard Jungle" has Negro and white lads in the same classroom. Newly made war pictures will have Negro and white soldiers side-by-side because of the desegregation policy in the armed services. However, there aren't too many producers risking alienation of southern markets.

The problem might not be as acute were there plenty of theatres open where acts could get plenty of work. But the Negro performer, like his white contemporary, finds little security in hitting the same spots with deadly regularity. His paleface colleague may find the same deadliness in that situation, but at least he has a greater chance of stepping out of that groove than the Negro act.

New Frontier

late show. The cocktail lounge will be dubbed the Cloud Nine Room and will be launched by the Mary Kay Trio. The breakfast and lunch room will be called the Planet Room.

Al Mathis and Steve Crane, owners of the Luau in Beverly Hills, will be in charge of the dining room and lounges. Sammy Lewis will be director of entertainment. Bob Cannon, present manager of the Last Frontier, will remain.

"Bob Alton has been signed as our choreographer," said Friedman, "and he's now casting 18 girls and six boys in Hollywood for the line. The Garwood Van orchestra will be augmented to 19 sidemen and we'll bring in name guest conductors from time to time." Bob Livingston will design the costumes. Jay Livingston and Ray Evans have been signed to write the music for the shows.

Aside from the escrow, and possible opposition from Katleman, the new owners must get clearance from the Nevada State Tax Commission to be off and winging by April 4.

New Acts

TERRI STEVENS
Songs
10 Mins.
Boulevard, Rego Park, L. I., N. Y.

Terri Stevens, whose "Unsuspecting Heart" the AA label is on the topselling lists, is a singer of considerable warmth and charm. A tastefully gowned looker, Miss Stevens at the Boulevard, Rego Park, L. I., is able to get outsized rooms to attention and hold them with a fetching tune selection. She mixes her numbers gracefully, is able to achieve change of pace, and shows up at her peak in songs which call for thespic as well as vocal skill.

Of course, "Unsuspecting Heart" gets that kind of treatment and another that hits a jackpot is "Let Me Go Lover." One of Miss Stevens' assets is her ability to cut down the size of a room with a migratory mike. It's skillfully done since she overcomes the inherent danger in this kind of bit of losing the section of her audience at her back.

Miss Stevens, who incidentally, the wife of Arturo Cano, a partner in the Boulevard, has a background as a singer with Desi Arnaz's band, and seemingly has the savvy and looks to make good in virtually any song spot. Jose.

THE FALCONS
Comedy Dancing
6 Mins.
Empire, Glasgow

Trio, composed of two males and one femme, scores in zestful knockabout comedy and eccentric terping. Would be useful act for U.S. vaude.

Opening is worked out straight, one male and the distaffer engaging in serious dance routine. Second male then enters garbed in red fez and horn-rimmed spectacles, King Farouk-style, and proceeds to mess up the act with slapstick. From here on, act speeds up into fast-paced knockabout, all three working at full speed and suffering knocks and falls while orch plays at fast tempo. Gord.

JEFFREY LENNER
Comedy
12 Mi
Empire, Glasgow

Young comedian garners laughs from first entrance by singing "With These Hands" and having his mitts concealed by overlong sleeves. Segues into patter that is pleasing if not standout, and earns near-continous chuckles with series of new and old gags.

Pace and timing are good, and there's potential for grooming. Helps his yock-gathering by crazy appearance via too-big suiting and unruly mop of hair. Once act is sharpened, would be possible entry for slotting for U.S. and Commonwealth vaude. Gord.

KAREN ANDERS
Songs
15 Mins.
One Fifth Ave., N. Y.

An attractive songstress, Karen Anders confines her staff mostly to special material. Act is tailored along sophisticated lines, with songstress demonstrating performer savvy throughout the stint. Besides vocalling she also nabs a few laughs via asides to customers and Steinway accompanist. These are tossed off with aplomb and are good audience warmers.

Smartly gowned in an off-the-shoulder job, she delivers two special material items and the standard "Love Me Or Leave Me" before going into a neat windup takeoff on Mae West doing "Frankie and Johnnie." Miss Anders is a good bet for intime situations. Jess.

THE CHUCKLES (3)
Songs-Instrumental
12 Mins.
Boulevard, Rego Park, L. I., N. Y.

The Chuckles, a trio of youngsters who mix instrumentalizing and singing, is the genre of act that has been breaking out all over the disk world. Playing guitar, bass and accordion, the boys beat out a solidly commercial brand of rhythm which gives added punch to their vocal efforts.

Their big item is "Foolishly" which they have riding for them on Label X. Their rhythms are clean and colorful. The instrumental and vocal work makes for a combination that can carry in largeseaters. The trio have a good act, since they provide good theatrical fare with a set of impressions. However, their major strength lies in their songs and they may be able to hang around the nitery circuits even when devoid of a bestselling record. Jose.

JANE & GORDON CONNELL
Comedy
10 Mins.
Le Ruban Bleu, N.Y.

Jane & Gordon Connell, a duo that have operated on the Coast, have apparently invested in a lot of material for their N.Y. debut. Most of the routines are in the payoff category. The girl has a plastic and pliable face that enables her to mimic a wide variety of characters, such as lecturers on the women's club circuit, debutantes and others.

It's an intellectual brand of comedy at times and one that is made for the intimate circuit. The girl has a good singing voice, while the lad backs at the ivories, provides a spoken precede that sets the mood, and chimes in with verbiage when required. There is, however, one piece of dubious value. Miss Connell does a bit on a dipsomaniac actress on the downgrade. Her subject isn't one to be made fun of. The lampoon is on the kind of person that needs help and can't fight back. It seems to build up an unconscious resentment, and unless a different treatment is evolved, it should be dropped. It's in unfortunate slotting also since it closes the act and leaves a downbeat footnote to the entire turn. Jose.

JACKIE
Balancing
7 Mins.
Empire, Glasgow

This is attractive, talented offbeater with potential for U.S. vaude.

Youthful, well-built male balances with two hands, then one, and finally by head alone atop lighted column, and raises gasps from the customers. Gimmick is his playing of instruments while thus positioned, ukelele i one hand and mouth harmonica between lips.

Winds with familiar but difficult routine of balancing via hands on two columns of small square bricks, rearranging these into two new columns. Feat calls for deftness and sureness of balance through height of columns. Gord.

countries. (Rio and Sao Paulo Brazil).

It has averaged a month to two months in each city, its longest stand being in B. A. (15 weeks). According to Jules Borkon, who is running the tour for Folies owner Paul Derval, the show has grossed "over $3,000,000." In Buenos Aires the take was over $1,000,000.

During the first three nights in Havana, the gross was $28,000. (Reportedly the show has been guaranteed a minimum of $250,000 in Havana by Cuban impresario Emilio de Armas. Armas is using the Blanquita theatre because of its capacity: 6,900 seats, said to be the largest in any theatre in the world). (It is.—Ed.)

To transport the 52 girls, 10 male dancers, 12 technicians, 47 sets and the costumes, the Folies has used trains and planes. Five chartered planes brought the troupe to Havana from Caracas.

Borkon said that censorship has not been a problem. The 12 girls who appear nude have "dressed" in accord with local custom. In Ri they were completely naked, i Havana they wear G-strings and in Caracas small rhinestones were added to their upper structures.

Government officials have been among the Folies' best customers. In Buenos Aires 300 choice seats were set aside opening ight for government and diplomatic big shots. Cuban papers reported that several Cabinet ministers and congressmen attended pre-opening rehearsals in Havana.

One problem the Folies faced was the turnover in girls. Twenty in the original 52 had to be replaced after they quit, were fired or ran off with Latin Lotharios.

In each place that the Folies played, local musicians were hired. They were led by Andre Tildy, seconded by Leon Defossez.

The Folies management considers its first tour in the Western Hemisphere so successful that Derval plans taking it to the States next year. Borkon says he has "three propositions" from New York already. To look into these, he was flying to Gotham this week.

To please American tastes, U. S. impresarios might well suggest that he include girls in his show

Ask State to Back Ozone Drama; New Mass. Tent; Other Barn News

Greensboro, N. C., March 15.

Legislation calling for state sponsorship of an annual historical drama in South Carolina will probably be introduced in the General Assembly shortly by Rep. Burnet R. Maybank Jr. of Greenville. The idea would be to present an outdoor pageant-drama similar to several done by summer in North Carolina.

The Greenville legislator, one of several who last year successfully proposed appointment of a special committee to look into the situation, now plans to call for legislative action leading toward actual establishment of an historical drama.

Their function would be to obtain an excellent script, equal or superior to those of other dramas now being presented the area, and to arrange for the actual production with professionally competent actors. Every effort would be made to avoid duplication or conflict with historical dramas being staged in neighboring states.

The Maybank plan likewise would require that approximately one-third of the costs of producing the drama be assumed by the area in which it might be presented. Such funds could be raised by popular subscription, or could come from public funds, if available. Provision would be made for repayment of donations if the presentation produced sufficient revenue of its own.

The committee which explored the possibilities of presenting a state-sponsored drama estimates that the cost would range between $100,000 and $125,000.

New Mass. Tent

Boston, March 15.

"Kiss Me Kate" has been set as the opening musical-in-the-round at the new North Shore Music Theatre, which will operate in Beverly, about half-way between Boston and Gloucester, starting June 24. Plans for the 1,300-seater were initiated a couple of years ago by society bandleader Ruby Newman and Stephan Slane. They organized a corporation with $100,000 capital, with Slane as managing director.

Due to a technicality involving the zoning of the 30-acre tract on Route 128, work had been delayed on constructing the theatre until last week when local officials, at a public hearing, okayed the project. The aldermen unanimously passed the zoning amendment allowing the presentation of live entertainment, but barred drive-ins.

In addition to a theatre building, plans provide for a restaurant and enclosed ice-skating rink.

Allentown, Pa., March 15.

Melody Circle at Dorney Park here will open its season June 10 with "South Pacific." Ethel and Manny Davis operate the tent.

Other bills during the 12-week season will include "Merry Widow," "Fi ian's Rainbow," "Wonderful Town," "Song of Norway," "Kiss Me, Kate," "By the Beautiful Sea," "Call Me Madam," "Desert Song" and "Guys and Dolls."

St. Loo Muny Sked

St. Louis, March 15.

"South Pacific," "King and I," "Wonderful Town" and "Allegro," none ever done outdoors here, will be presented during the 88-night repertory season opening June 2 at the Municipal Theatre's alfresco playhouse in Forest Park. Opener will be "Merry Widow," which will be having its ninth production at the spot.

Others pieces skedded for presentation "Brigadoon," "Vagabond King," "Guys and Dolls," "Desert Song," "Carousel" and a revised Rodgers and Hammerstein concert.

Douglas Conway to Ft. Wayne

Ft. Wayne, March 15.

Douglas Conway, of New York, has been engaged as producer-director of the Ft. Wayne Festival Music Theatre's sixth season of summer musicals, opening June 24 at the Franke Park Outdoor Theatre. He succeeds Albert K. Germanson of Columbus, O.

Festival will have a new policy, with various theatrical departments handled by separate directors. Conway will handle dramatic phases of each show, and in general, supervise the activities of the other departments. Charles T. Morrison Jr., Mason City, Ia., has been named assistant director and scenic designer.

Antioch Opens 'Flexible' Theatre

Yellow Springs, O., March 15.

Antioch Area Theatre will unveil its new "flexible" theatre at Yellow Springs next Friday (18), with Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset." The new house was remodeled from a former foundry on the campus, at a cost of $55,000. Chief feature is an overhead crane, which permits shifting of the seating sections.

The theatre has 315 seats, mounted in sections. Future plans include more seats and extensive exterior decoration. The "new" building puts the Antioch Area Theatre production on an almost a year-round basis. The same group currently produces the summer Shakespeare-under-the-stars program.

Daisy Amoury's Strawhat

The American Legion Playhouse in Legion Park, Ephrata, Pa., will house a theatre-in-the-round operation this summer. House has been leased to Amoury Productions, headed by Daisy Amoury. A resident Equity group, tagged the Amoury Players, will perform under the direction of John Cameron.

Miss Amoury, incidentally, is a novelist and radio-tv scripter.

Suburban Philly Tent

Philadelphi , March 15.

Philly area is due for a new music circus this summer with a tuneshow tent skedded to be erected in suburban Downingtown, Pa., under the sponsorship of Bernard L. Sackett, local producer, writer and director. Location will give Sackett a strategic spot in a 30-mile radius of such cities as Philadelphia, Camden, Chester, Wilmington, Lancaster, Pottstown and Reading.

Sackett says his musical showcase, capitalized at $100,000, will operate in association with the Richard Aldrich management of the South Shore Music Tent, Cohasset, Mass., and the Cape Cod Melody Tent, Hyannis, Mass. Producer claims the new tent will be the only air-conditioned one in this area.

Mass. Tents Set Staffs

Cohasset, Mass., March 15.

Ralph Roberts will be general manager this summer of the South Shore Melody Tent here, with George Campbell pressagent, Hans Busch stage director and Arthur Norris musical director.

Roy Somlyo will be general manager of the Cape Cod Music Tent, Hyannis, Mass., with Donald Shapiro pressagent, William Morrow business manager, Ernest Sarracino stage director and Julius Rudel music director. Both spots are operated by N. Y. attorney David Marshall Holtzmann, with Broadway producer Richard Aldrich as advisory associate.

Recalls Barn Building In Craven's '14 'Cooks'

Boston.

Editor, VARIETY:

In Inside Stuff Legit in your issue of Feb. 16 you report that the barn-rebuilding scene in "Plain and Fancy" actually antedated a similar sequence in the recent film, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers." Another such scene onstage was done in the late Frank Craven's play, "Too Many Cooks," which I covered for the Atlantic City Press when I was the pioneer drama critic of the boardwalk city. ("Too Many Cooks" was produced by the late William A. Brady at the 39th Street Theatre, N. Y., Feb. 23, 1914. Ed.)

Later, when I was pressagent for the late George Broadhurst, we built a framework of a house at the Playhouse, N. Y., for the Lillian Trimble Bradley play, "The Wonderful Thing," based on a Forrest Halsey story, which Broadhurst produced Feb. 17, 1920, with a cast including the late Jeanne Eagels, the late Henry Duffy, Philip Dunning and Eva Leonard Boyne.

Then Who Could?

Oscar Hammerstein 2d, going up the aisle at the intermission of a Broadway musical opening recently, was overheard to tell a companion that he couldn't pick out the hit songs in the show. "I can't tell until I've heard them a few more times on the outside," he explained. A reviewer interrupted to remark, "I agree with you, Oscar, but what would you do if you had to pick them tonight, for tomorrow morning's paper?"

"I couldn't do it," answered the lyricist-producer.

"But suppose you had to?" persisted the reviewer.

"I couldn't," Hammerstein insisted.

'Bus Stop' B'way Click Has Philly on a Limb; Columnist Swears Off

Philadelphia, March 15.

Local legit circles are still trying to get their eyebrows down to the normal level after the Broadway click of "Bus Stop." The William Inge play drew two-to-one critical pans and did only moderate business on its recent tryout engagement in Philly.

Robert T. Sensenderfer, of the Evening Bulletin, was the lone dissenter in print, calling "Bus Stop" "moving" and "richly rewarding." Critic didn't mind the lack of tion, saying the play is "almost Chekovia."

Harry G , of the Daily News, dismissed the show with the opi ion that it "fails to get very far off the ground." He added, "Inge popped out to shortstop on this one."

Henry T. Murdock, of the Inquirer, said, "If one expects the dramatic force of 'Sheba' the hopes and frustrations of 'Picnic,' it will be something of a letdown." He found the play sprawling and conversational, and lacking action and excitement. Frank Brookhouser, Evening Bulletin Columnist and radio and tv reporter, stated "virtually everybody was disappointed in it."

Harshest of the local writers was Earl Selby, Bulletin columnist. Two days after the opening Selby reported, "Speaking of the theatre, we walked out on another current play, 'Bus Stop.' A block or two from the Walnut we were passed by two motorcycle cops escorting a limousine.

"The realist who was with us said this was merely an escort for visiting U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr.; but in our dark and moody thoughts another idea occurred. This was the playwright of 'Bus Stop' leaving town under armed guard."

Protest letters forced Selby to take another wallop at the show. The columnist sidestepped enough to praise Elaine Stritch, but added, "We did not mean to say 'Bus Stop' was the world's worst play, all we meant was it was the worst we've ever seen."

The following Sunday, Selby admitted he could have been wrong, and followed with a recipe on how "to get egg all over your face in dramatic criticism."

The columnist wrote, "We called 'Bus Stop' the worst play we've ever seen. On Wednesday it opened in New York. Since Thursday we've been flooded with copies of the reviews." He ended his column, "I will not review any more plays," repeated six times.

Another Bid to Require Theatre Seating Charts

Albany, March 15.

Another attempt to force theatres to display seating charts in the lobby is being made in the State Legislature. Latest measure has been introduced by Assemblyman Daniel L. Kelly, Manhattan Democrat, who sponsored a similar proposal last year. As before, Broadway theatrical interests are expected to oppose the move.

Kelly's bill would require that theatres selling reserved seats "conspicuously post and at all times display, adjacent to the box-office or other place where such reserved seats are sold, a diagram of such theatre, or other places of amusement or entertaiment . . . showing the exact location by letter and number of each reserved seat ticket." The measure to amend the general business law, would take effect immediately.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Melody Fair, a tent-musical operation to be opened this summer at Colonie, N. Y., about equi-distant from Albany, Schencetady and Troy, is being capitalized as a corporation, with $80,000 in no-par common stock. Officers of the company are Myron K. Weinberg, president and director, serving as managing director and business manager, at $150 a week for the season plus 13 weeks; Benjamin Levy, vice-president and director, serving as operations manager, at a total salary of $300 before the season; Edward M. Greenberg, secretary-treasurer and director, serving as artistic and stage director during th season, at $225 a week; Herbert Champagne, assistant secretary and director; Seymour Krawitz, director, serving as pressagent for the season plus 11 weeks, at $150 a week, and Howard M. Squadron, director. Champagne and Squadron are attorneys.

According to a prospectus sent to potential investors, it's estimated that the project will cost $30,115 to open and $12,395 a week to operate, and the potential weekly gross will be $24,660 for a seven-performance schedule, at a top of $2.59 week nights and $3 Friday and Saturday nights. The canvas-top spot will seat 1,500.

Backers of the Lynn Austin-Thomas Noyes in association with Producers Theatre production, "Portrait of a Lady," which folded on Broadway earlier this season after four performances, included Kenneth Banghart, tv announcer- mmentator and legit producer, $800; Wallace G. Garland, head of Broadway Angels, $6,400; playwright Rosemary Casey, $800; ex-producer Raymond Curtis, $800; producer Sherman Ewing, $800; Richard E. French, general manager for Courtney Burr & John Byram, $800; United Paramount Theatre president Leonard Goldenson, $3,200; Ann Connolly Lester, actress-daughter of the late Walter Connolly and Nedda Harrigan (Mrs. Joshua) Logan, $800; Mrs. Logan, $800; Jan Mitchell, owner of Luchow's restaurant, N.Y., $400; Roger L. Stevens, a partner in Producers Theatre and member of the Playwrights Co., $21,600; Actors Fund prexy Walter Vincent, $3,200, and Charles R. Meeker Jr., managing director of the State Fair Auditorium, Dallas, $800. Production represented a loss of approximately its full $80,000 capitalization.

"Peter Pan" may be the biggest audience-getter of any play in U.S. television history, but it's apparently too tame for modern Scot moppets. "There is general agreement that children today are many times more sceptical and more precocious than they once were," comments The Scotsman, an Edinburgh publication, in reference to fact that the James M. Barrie fantasy is not visiting this country, for the first tim in many years. Tour of the play, with Canadian actress Barbara Kelly in the title part, by-passed Barrie's native Scotland. Some ascribed the reason to the fact that Miss Kelly has a weekly Sunday night tv commitment as a "What's My Line?" panelist. However, the real reason may be that on its last visit to Scotland, the show did disappointing business.

Although various deals are being discussed, no Broadway production is set for "The Sleeping Prince," Terence Rattigan's romantic comedy done in London last season by Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh. Among those seeking the U.S. rights is Jerry Wald, who'd like to costar Noel Coward and Judy Holliday in the play and then a screen version for Columbia release. Coward is also sought to do the film treatment. However, major hitch to such a deal is that the actor refuses to commit himself for a legit run of more than a couple of months, which is prohibitive from an investment standpoint. There has also been talk of Robert Donat playing the male lead, but he prefers not to come to New York because of his chronic asthmatic condition.

All four firststring Chicago critics turned up for the opening last week of "Tea And Sympathy" at the Blackstone. "Dear Charles," which opened the same night at the Erlanger, got two secondstring first-night reviews and three firststring notices second-night. Sydney Harris, of the Daily News, and Roger Dettmer, the American, turned in second-night reviews on "Charles," while Herman Kogan, Sun-Times, did a followup to secondstringer Glenna Syse's opening notice. The two Sun-Times reviews were "compatible," both lauding Tallulah Bankhead, the show's star, while brushing off the play itself.

'CAN-CAN' SCREEN SALE GIVES SHOW $250,900

Sale of "Can-Can" to 20th-Fox will net the Cy Feuer-Ernest H. Martin stage production an additional $250,900 profit. Musical was sold to the film company for $650,000, payable in six installments running through January, 1961. Deal calls for a $65,000 down payment and $117,000 annually for five years, beginning January, 1957.

Production's share of the initial $65,000 payment is $25,090 on the basis of the regular 60-40 split between authors and backers, including deduction of 3½% negotiator's fee. Similarly, the production will get $45,162 from each of the ensuing installments.

Besides income from the film sale, show racked up $626,775 profit as of a Jan. 29 accounting. Operating profit for the four weeks prior to the accounting was $23,960. Total cash distribution was $554,547. Assets included $26,220 bonds, $7,687 miscellaneous assets, $25,000 cash reserve and $13,321 balance available.

Currently in its 97th week at the Shubert, N. Y., the Cole Porter-Abe Burrows musical is expected to continue until early summer, with a tour contemplated immediately following. Initial proceeds from the film sale will not be distributed to backers, but will be held in reserve to defray expenses of sending the show on the road.

Portland Bookings

Portland, March 15.

William Duggan has booked "Pajama Game" for the week of May 17 at the local Auditorium, with "Teahouse of the August Moon" set for a four-performance stand opening May 31. Only other legit item is the tentative date of July for "Solid Gold Cadillac."

Colleges May Require Light Course in Design; Say It's Basic Element

Move to make scenic lighting compulsory part of scenic design is being considered by the drama departments of Yale and Columbia U. Idea is that lighting is as basic as color to scenic effects, and that no qualified scenic artist should be unable attend to the lighting as a regular part of designing a production.

Heads of the Yale and Columbi drama schools, which make special attempt to keep in close with the professional theatre, would make lighting a required course for all students of scenic design. In doing so, they would be reflecting an increasing squawk of Broadway producers that it should not be necessary to hire a lighting expert in addition to the designer for a legit show.

Attitude of some Broadway managements is that it not only raises the cost of a show to pay a lighting expert besides the designer, but it may actually hurt the show artistically, since no lighting expert can possibly fully understand or express the designer's scenic conception. Such top designers as Jo Mielziner, Donald Oenslager, Raymond Sovey, Ralph Alswang and Howard Bay have always insisted on doing their own lighting, it's noted.

Yale drama department, which is to be boosted to school status next July, with Prof. F. Curtis Canfield becoming dean, has scenic design course taught by Oenslager, with Stanley R. McCandless in charge of the class in lighting. Prof. Milton Smith heads the Columbia drama department, with Woodman Thompson teaching scenic design and Edward Kook, head of Century Lighting Co., having the class in lighting.

London Crix Roam More Than Gotham Stay-at-Homes; New O'Casey Uproar

Recent Dublin premiere of a new Sean O'Casey play, "The Bishop's Bonfire," appears to have aroused controversy not only in the 71-year-old dramatist's native city, but also in London. It has also highlighted again the peripatetic policy of some of the London critics in contrast to the stay-at-home practice of most New York aisle-sitters.

Fact that at least two London reviewers, Kenneth Tynan, of the Observer, and Harold Hobson, of the Sunday Times, went to Dublin for the opening was characteristic of them, and not unusual for most of the London critics. Tynan and Hobson habitually cover the theatre in Paris and, in common with virtually all London reviewers, also regularly cover openings at Stratford, Edinburgh and elsewhere in the British aisles.

Among the New York critics, only Brooks Atkinson, of the Times, makes a practice of going out of town to catch shows. He has gone as far as London, Stratford (both England and Ontario), Dallas, Houston, Pasadena, Seattle, New Orleans, Cleveland, Washington and Yellow Springs, O., in recent seasons. Other New York aisle-sitters, notably Walter F. Kerr, of the Herald Tribune; Richard Watts Jr., Post, and William Hawkins, World-Telegram, have viisted London in recent seasons, but on vacation rather than on their papers' time.

They Never Forgive

In the case of the O'Casey premiere in Dubli , the London critics, at least as represented by Tynan and Hobson, did not share the rage (or outrage) expressed by the local Irish reviewers, but noted the

She Oughta Know

During a lobby confab between the acts of a recent Broadway opening, a drama critic mentioned having received a squawk letter about one of his reviews of week or so before.

"You should see the mail Walter gets," volunteered playwright Jean Kerr, wife of the N. Y. Herald Tribune critic. "In fact, I'm preparing a form reply to be sent to all the people who write him letters starting, 'Who the hell do you think you are?'"

'Bleecker Street' Cuts Show Sked (and Nut) In Back-to-Wall Fight

"Saint of Bleecker Street" is making a last stand for survival at the Broadway Theatre, N. Y. As of last Saturday (12), the Gian-Carlo Menotti opera had an approximate $118,000 deficit on a $150,000 investment. The Chandler Cowles production had lost money on five of its last six weeks.

In an unusual move for a Broadway production, "Bleecker" is switching, effective March 25, from a full-week sked to weekend performances only. Since its Broadway opening last Dec. 27, the show has been giving seven performances a week. New schedule calls for four performances per week, including Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday and Sunday matinees.

Production is under the jurisdiction of the American Guild of Musical Artists, and is thus permitted to employ its principals on a per-performance basis rather than a straight weekly salary. Also, the various trade unions have made concessions to lower the operating nut, while modified terms are being worked out for the rental of the theatre. On the full week sked, theatre got 30% of the first $20,000-gross and 25% of the balance.

Switch to a four-performance week will reduce the operating nut from about $30,500 to around $22,000-$23,000. Capacity gross will be cut from $54,000 to about $28,000. On the basis of past business, the management figures that receipts should average around $24,000 weekly for the four performances, which would net an operating profit of about $1,000-2,000. At capacity, the opera could earn around $5,000-$6,000 operating profit.

John Patrick's Musical Of Amory's 'Resorts'

Playwright John Patrick ("Teahouse of August Moon," etc.), tackles his first musicomedy libretto based on Cleveland Amory's "The Last Resorts," with an eye to fall legit production. Both are in Jamaica, B.W.I., on a 10-day business-holiday powwow, but Patrick will probably stay on longer to work on the script.

The Amory bestseller was up once before as an Ethel Merman starrer, with an Irving Berlin score, but Patrick is now tackling it, with an assist from the original author.

Tele's 'Rainmaker' Legit-Film Mint

Playwright N. Richard Nash has pyramided a television script into a goldmine. The author, who originally received about $1,700 for the tv rights to "Rainmaker," has since realized approximately $320,000 from the property, with more coin to come.

Although originally blocked out by Nash as a full-length play, "Rainmaker" preemed on tv last year in an abbreviated version. Telecast drew critical and trade attention, and the script was picked up for Broadway presentation by Ethel Linder Reiner, who produced it earlier this season in association with Hope Abelson. With Geraldine Page as star, it had a two-and-a-half week out-of-town tryout and a 17-week New York run, with Nash's royalty for the entire period totalling about $38,000.

Film rights to the comedy were purchased by Hal Wallis and Joseph Hazen for $350,000, with Nash getting about $210,000 as his share of the sale the regular 60% split as author. On top of that he is being paid nearly $50,000 to work on the screen adaptation. Play has had about 10 foreign productions already, with author royalties from those presentations expected to come to about $20,000. Negotiations are currently being held concerning a London production.

Playwright expects to pull in another $1,000 weekly from the touring edition of "Rainmaker," which hit the road last Thursday (3). There's been an avalanche of requests for stock rights, which will presumably provide additional income, while a musical version of the play is also a prospect following the release of the film.

'WALTZ' TO OPEN LEGIT, L.A.'S CARTHAY CIRCLE

Los Angeles, March 15.

Carthay Circle Theatre will launch operations April 10 under its new legit policy, with "Anniversary Waltz" as the first of four plays to run four weeks each. Howard Duff and Marsha Hunt will costar in the opener, to be co-produced by Jack Present and Harry Zevin, who will also handle production reins.

Following bills will be "Oh Men, Oh Women," with original Broadway leads including Franchot Tone, Betsy von Furstenburg and Gig Young, opening May 9; "The Shrike," June 6, and a fourth play not yet set.

Randolph Hale, operator of the Alcazar Theatre, San Francisco, will co-produce "Oh Men," which starts a four-week run at this house April 11, prior to L.A.

'Oh Kay' Revival Tourer Will Open Stockbridge

A revival of the 1926-27 Broadway musical, "Oh Kay," will tour as a package this summer under the sponsorship of George Mully and David Clive. Show will be directed by Mully. Clive, incidentally, is associated currently with Herman Shumlin's upcoming production of "Inherit the Wind."

Musical, with songs by George and Ira Gershwin and book by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, will kick off the season June 20 at William Miles' Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass.

'Peg O' My Heart' Tuner

Hollywood, Marach 15.

Herb Rogers, Palm Springs Playhouse producer, is prepping a musical version of "Peg O' My Heart" for Broadway presentation this summer under the tag, "Peg."

Herb Hendler is composing the music.

British Equity Seeks to Limit West End Entry

London, March 15.

A plan to limit entry to the West End stage to artists who have served a probationary period in repertory or stock companies is being submitted by British Actors' Equity to the Society of West End Theatre Managers. This the main outcome of a special session last November on the unemployment situation.

The actor union nixed a suggested, which had been accepted at the special meeting, that it should close its books for a year and admit no new members. It's claimed that would constitute an attempt to establish immediately a closed shop in every field, including those where even a union shop had not been achieved.

"To attempt something so utterly impracticable could only harm Equity and might destroy it, and to hold a referendum would imply that the Council believed it to be practical," says a report to members.

U. S. Angles.

Actors Equuity, the U. S. counterpart of the British union, has not been notified whether the proposed restriction on West End appearances would apply to aliens. It's assumed, however, that players who had worked on Broadway would not be affected. With the exception of American students at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and other English acting schools, virtually all American players in England have appeared on Broadway.

There has been no serious effort to set up experince requirements for Broadway or for membership in U. S. Equity.

Still Another Trend? Form Corporations To Finance, Produce Legit

Legit production and/or investment corporations are becoming more prevalent. At least two such outfits are already active, with investments in Broadway shows, while another, recently formed, is scheduled to produce an off-Broadway show as its debut effort.

Off-the-Stem entry will be presented by LPS Productions, organized by actors Paul A. Lilly, Bill Pen and Robinson Stone. Play, Patricia Joudry's "Teach Me How To Cry," is scheduled to open April 5 at the Theatre de Lys. Miss Joudry, who lives in Toronto, is a radio-tv scripter and the play was previously done by Canadian Broadcasting Corp., first on radio, then tv. The de Lys production will mark her debut as a legit playwright. Robert Hartung will direct the presentation.

LPS capitalization has been set at $250,000, Lilly is president of the corporation, Stone is veepee and Penn is secretary-treasurer. LPS is also contemplating opening a tent theatre somewhere in Pennsylvania this summer. Besides producing its own legit shows, the outfit plans investing in others and also spreading into varied show biz fields.

The two corporations already having stakes in legit productions are Broadway Angels and Theatre 200. Former has been active for several years in backing shows, but has also announced production plans. Latter was formed last September by Edwin Specter, founder and ex-manager of the Pittsburgh Symphony. Initial investment was a $10,800 share in "Wayward Saint," which folded at the Cort, N. Y., last Sunday (6) after 21 performances. Theatre 200 also aims to go into production.

Fireworks Loom for Equity Meet; Controversial Questions Hold Stage

By HOBE MORRISON

Plenty of fireworks is expected at the quarterly membership meeting of Actors Equity Friday afternoon (18) at the Sheraton Astor Hotel, N. Y. Besides a likely contest over the election of membership representatives to the nominating committee, hot discussion is anticipated on at least three controversial questions.

Foremost may be the proposed merger with Chorus Equity, ter for which have been drawn up by a joint Equity-Chorus committee and approved by the Equity council. If the suggested setup is acceptable to this Equity session and a forthcoming membership meeting of the Chorus branch, it will be submitted to mail referendum, where it must be approved by both branches, voting separately.

Another issue likely to precipitate a tussle is a revised version of previously-rejected constitutional amendment. This measure would require that all union contracts be subject to membership approval. The council is opposing this emendment and, if it is passed by a two-thirds vote by Friday's meeting, it will probably be challenged, forcing it to go to mail referendum.

Also due for presentation at the session, if time permits, is a resolution condemning the action of certain Equity and American Federation of Television & Radio Artists members in cooperating with and supplying information to Aware Inc., a private group claim-

Who, Me?

New Haven, March 15.

As a promotion for the theatre and for her latest show, "The Honeys," which was trying out at the house, a bronze plaque was unveiled in the lobby of the Shubert last week and dedicated to Broadway producer Cheryl Crawford.

There were appropriate emonies, including a laudatory speech by F. Curtis Canfield, dean of the Yale U. drama department, but Miss Crawford stole the show with her brief acceptance. A suitable inscription on the plaque, she suggested, would be, "She Had Her Nerve."

Off-B'way Seeks Industrial Coin

Management of "Shoestring Revue" is angling to augment its off-Broadway run with industrial show bookings. Initial pitch in that direction was made in Chicago last Monday (14) by three performers from the Ben Bagley musical. Group did excerpts from the show for a conclave of execs from various frozen food companies.

Purpose of the project was twofold. Besides being paid for the special performance, the "Shoestring" outfit figured it as an audition for the revue material and for themselves as performers, for any industrial shows the food execs may produce. Any such extra employment would supplement the nominal pay for their regular off-Broadway schedule.

Members of the "Shoestring" cast who made the Chicago trek, were Dorothy Greener, Beatrice Arthur and Chita Rivera. Also in the group were Charles Strouse, who wrote some of the music for the revue and handled musical direction and arrangements, went along as piano player, while Bernie West, not associated with the off-Broadway musical, acted as emcee. Sketches performed in Chicago were restaged by Lo Harden, revue's stage manager.

Chicago deal was set by Hillard Elkins and Henry C. Brown. Former is sales rep for "Shoestring," while the latter handled arrangements with the Ted Bates ad agency.

LOESSER MAY RETURN FOR 'KNEW' PRODUCTION

"They Knew What They Wanted," Frank Loesser's operatic version of the Sidney Howard drama, is slated for Broadway production next fall by Lynn (Mrs.) Loesser, in association with an established legit management. Such an rangement has been discussed with several producers, but no decision has been reached.

Mrs. Loesser, who returned to the Coast last week to confer on the stage project and also to attend to Frank Music, their music publishing business, confirmed that Sidney Kingsley is one of the Broadway producers with whom she'd talked. Contrary to previous reports she says Loesser has no intention of staging "They Knew What They Wanted," for which he is completing the book, music and lyrics.

The songwriter has just finished three new numbers for Samuel Goldwyn's film version of "Guys and Dolls," for the stage edition of which he supplied the songs.

Tutin Replaces Shearer In British 'Camera' Tour

London, March 15.

Dorothy Tuti , who played Sally Bowles in the London production of "I Am a Camera," has resumed the starring role in the Christopher Isherwood-John van Druten play on tour. She succeeds former ballerina Moira Shearer, who started the tour as her first straight-play assignment.

Julie Harris, who played the role in the original Broadway production, has just repeated it i the British-made film version.

Columbus, O., Show Train On N. Y. Theatre Toot, With Stayover Option

Columbus, March 15.

The sixth Columbus Citizen New York Theatre Party is set to chug out of Union Station here next Sunday (20) carrying 200 theatrephiles to Manhattan for a five-day saturation exposure to the stage and attendant municipal entertainments.

Patrons have plunked down $99.50 each, which includes all expenses during the junket except meals. For that amount they will get transportation, hotel accommodations, a trip through Radio City and tickets to five Broadway productions. The schedule: Monday, "Flowering Peach"; Tuesday, "Cinerama Holiday" and "The Bad Seed"; Wednesday, "Silk Stockings" and an evening television show; Thursday, UN tour and "Plain and Fancy" Friday, lunch at Ruby Foo's and start return trip.

For another $32.50, a junketeer may stay on during the next weekend and see "Fanny," "Anastasia" and "Boy Friend."

The tours, the idea of Norman Nadel, Citizen theatre and film critic, began with a single one in the spring of 1952. It attracted 90. There were 250 on the tour the next fall and since then the junkets have been limited to 200. They are now offered in autumn and spring editions.

Besides, Nadel, who intends to catch the new shows and do a round of interviews, the party will be in charge of Dick Tracey, Citizen promotion editor; Bill Moore, of the Citizen staff; Charles Kauderer, local travel agent, and Wesley Llewelyn, N. Y. Central passenger agent.

'Burning' Not Too Hot; 'Room' Old Hat, London

London, March 15.

"The Burning Boat," a three act musical play by Nicholas Phipps and Geoffrey Wright, which opened at the Royal Court last Thurs. (10), is an artless entry with little hope of staying the course. Presented by Laurier Lister and directed by Murray MacDonald, the piece stars Bruce Trent, Marie Ney, Michael Gough and Marion Grimaldi.

On the previous Monday (7) Bernard Delfont presented a revival of Gilbert Wakefield's "Room for Two" at the Prince of Wales for a four weeks' engagement. The production, which marked the legit bow of tv and vaude star Terry-Thomas, was generously rated as a crude and old fashioned bedroom farce.

Show Set Up as 'Collapsible Corp.' Has Tax Edge on Ltd. Partnership But for Top-Bracket Angels Only

By BURTON CRANE
(Financial writer, N. Y. Times)

Not so long ago a firm of Wall Street accountants was given an assignment. Wouldn't it be possible to get a better break on Broadway show investments for the lads who lousy with the loot? Wasn't there a way for the moola moguls—the gentlemen in the upper income-tax straitjackets—to have just as much fun for a fraction of the over-all risk?

The answer, typed up in a report by the accounting firm of Oppenheim, Appel, Payson & Co. was an unqualified yes. If a certain basic plan is followed, the Broadway angel in the 80% bracket—which means he has adjusted taxable income of $120,000 a year on a joint return or $60,000 on an individual return—can be given twice as good a run for his money. And anybody in a bracket above 60% can get a better break.

The results of a couple of past seasons demonstrate that if investors in those years had been able to get equal shares every publicly-financed Broadway show and if this method had been used, they would have cantered off with after-tax profits of at least 3.2% and possibly as much as 5%. The unfortunates in the 80% income-tax bracket would have to have a before-tax return of 16 to 25% to do as well.

But the two "ifs" are the trolling words. The catch is that the average investor could not have gotten an equal piece in every show. Moreover, some of the ventures from which he would have been excluded turned out to be the top grossers. Any attempt therefore, to draw broad conclusions is rather like playing the saxophone in the bathroom. It sounds a lot bigger than it is.

The trick, for the tax-conscious producer, is to incorporate his hits, but to let his doubtful shows continue under the traditional limited partnership form of financing. The corporation never pays a dividend—which would be taxed as ordinary income.

Instead, it continues until it has done its job and then is wound up. The investors get their profits as long-term capital gains, which are taxed at a maximum of 25%. That is a lot better tax break than a high bracket taxpayer gets on ordinary profits paid by a limited partnership.

Change of Format

Suppose that the producer decides to use the method worked out by Oppenheim, Appel, Payson & Co. He makes his pitch only to top-bracket investors. He has his lawyers draw a partnership agreement with a new kind of cause. This provides that, if a show develops symptoms of turning into a hit, the producer is authorized to turn the partnership into a corporation, allocating the shares of its stock in the same proportion that partnership profits were to have been divided.

Take this idea first in over-simplified form. Start with an 80% bracket boy who collects a profit of $1,000 from a limited partnership. After taxes he has $200 left. Now, suppose the show had been incorporated. Suppose also that corporation taxes are 50%. The $1,000 profit would be reduced to $500 before the investor saw a penny of it. But when the corporation was wound up and he got his $500, it would be subject to the 25% long-term capital gains tax of 25%. His after-tax income would be $375 instead of $200.

Of course, it isn't all quite that simple. Study of the actual tax structure indicates that an investment in a straight play hit may prove more profitable to our top-bracket boy than a hit musical. Note that there is a comparison between hits, not between the relative chances of straight plays and musicals of becoming hits.

Federal corporation taxes are not a flat 50%, as in the example above. Instead, they are 25% on the first $25,000 of profits, 52% on the balance.

Assume that a straight play capitalized at $60,000 that earns a profit of $120,000—$60,000 for the limited partners or preferred stockholders—over two years. Also assume the same kind of 100% profit on a musical financed at $300,000. Here is how they would fare as corporations:

Taxes for the Little and the Big

($1,000 Investment)

	Straight Play	Musical
Total profit in 2 yrs.	$120,000	$600,000
Total corporate taxes	54,000	316,000
Remaining profit	65,600	284,000
For preferred stock	32,800	142,000
Capital gains tax	8,200	35,500
Balance	24,600	106,500
Return on $1,000 share	410	355
N.Y. State tax	4	3
(Balance on tax after Federal deducti for taxpayers 80% bracket.)
Net on $1,000 after taxes	406	352
Percentage of profit	40.6%	35.2%

But everything is not quite as simple as that seems to be. There is also Section 102 of the Revenue Act of 1954, which deals with undistributed profits. And this refers to forming a corporation which tends to distribute no profits until it winds itself up! How are we going to make out with this penalty tax?

It is not a negligible little thing, like a leading lady with hiccups. This costs real money. Section 102 penalizes a corporation that, without good business reason, adds more than $60,000 to its undistributed profits in any one year. It taxes the first $100,000 of such overage at 27½%. Undistributed profits in excess of $160,000 are taxed at 38½%.

Two things are important here. First is the "good business reason" for not distributing profits. Suppose the producer delays launching his second company until near the end of his first year of operation. Obviously, he has a good use for his accumulated funds and there can be no penalty. No penalty is due if he winds up a corporation in the year in which the profits are earned.

Thus, a corporation that started a second company near the end of its first year and wound up both before the end of its second year would not pay any Section 102 tax. As a matter of fact, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has always had a tough time making the penalty stick. The 1954 Act doesn't make his job any easier.

Thus, the second important consideration is the run of the play. Once again, the straight play has a marked advantage over the musical, for more than two-thirds of all hits are straight plays and all but a handfulul of them make their profits and depart before they have run a year. Musicals take longer to get into the black and, when they are real hits, have a habit of running on into the third and fourth years.

Now, assume that both those productions mentioned above had no "good business reasons" to exempt them and wound up at the start of the second year:

Section 102 Penalties

($1,000 Investment)

	Straight Play	Musical
Retaining profit—above	$ 65,600	$284,000
Section 102 exemption	60,000	60,000
Taxable amount	5,600	224,000
Section 102 tax	1,540	75,240
After-tax profit	64,060	208,760
Preferred stock share	32,030	104,380
Capital gains tax	8,007	26,095
Balance	24,023	78,285
Return on $1,000 share	401	261
N.Y. State tax	3	3
Net after taxes	398	258
Percentage profit	39.8%	25.8%

The advantage of incorporati for a musical seems to be growing less and less, but note well that an advantage still remains. Note also that the reader may adjust the figures above according to the capitalization of his play.

Both sets of figures above are for shows that pay off 100% profit for limited (preferred shareholder) investors. If the same profit were paid on a $100,000 straight play, the return would be cut to 24%.

There is an interesting possibility here. If shows are generally incorporated when they become hits, there may not be so many attenuated. If a show comes up to the end of a year still making money but not much of it, and if there is no real chance of another company, those concerned may decide to close and avoid the penalty tax. That, of course, is much more likely with musicals than with straight plays.

One other possible tax needs to be considered: This is the penalty imposed on investors in "collapsible corporations." In the first place, note that any corporation that lasts for three years is not collapsible. In the second, note that holders of interests smaller than 5% are not affected by Section 341.

Collapsible Corporations

There seems little reason to believe that show-producing corporation that honestly lives out its life and is wound up only when its job is done can ever be subject to these penalties. (When a corporation is defined as "collapsible," the bigger shareholders' income from it is taxed at their regular rates, not at long-term capital gain rates.)

"Section 341 assets" must not be higher than a certain percentage of all assets after cash and securities and capital goods have been deducted from the latter figure. But "Section 341 assets" are primarily goods intended for sale and a show at the end of its run hasn't much to sell. However, any movie sale had better be made before the corporation is liquidated or the large stocholders may find themselves arguing like mad.

The study of which this is a layman's explanation was made a couple of years ago by Oppenheim, Appel, Payson & Co. for the producer of a big Broadway musical. It was never used because a recording company came in with 25% of the limited capital.

A corporation gets an 85% tax deduction on all dividends received but here, if the musical were incorporated, there would be no dividends, only capital gains. Again, the recording company did not fancy an arrangement that would lop off more than half of its profits before it got them.

So make this note. If a producer wants to incorporate, he mustn't offer pieces of his show either to corporations or to low-bracket taxpayers.

Recall 'Monkey' Trial

The Scopes "monkey" trial, the subject of the upcoming Jerome Lawrence-Robert E. Lee play, "Inherit the Wind," is recalled in letter from 20th-Fox writer-producer Nunnally Johnson, in answer to a query from the show's pressagent, Arthur Cantor. "I covered a lot of different stories, from murder to labor investigations, during my dozen years on papers in New York," he wrote, "but the Scopes trial, which I covered for the Brooklyn Eagle, was without question the best and most memorable. I can't say that I think it had any particular effect history, but it was certainly remarkably characteristic of its times.

"For the newspapermen, it was a lark on a monstrous scale. Few of them could take it too seriously. As you probably know, it was instigated and promoted by a newspaper, and the outcome was inevitable. Scopes knew this and was agreeable to conviction from the start. The truth was, he had admittedly violated a law, and the purpose of the trial was less to exonerate him than it was to tell the world of the existence of this somewhat absurd law.

"But there was one bit of enlightenment for the sophisticated metropolitan newspapermen. Being admirably cultivated fellows, there were all of course Evolutionists and looked down with contempt on the local Fundamentalists. But some of us soon learned that there were still further levels of intelligence. The Fundamentalists had a group to look down on, too. The objects of their contempt were the members of something called The Church of God, who assembled near a great oak tree in the country near Dayton (Tenn.), babbled in tongues (sic), and whose first and firmest belief was that the world was flat. The Fundamentalists shook their heads sadly over these ignoramuses.

"I remember very little of what I wrote about the trial, though I covered it from the beginning through Darrow's assassination of William Jennings Bryan. The stories, I assume, can be got from the Eagle files.

"I wish the play great luck. The material is extraordinary. I hope it can be interpreted, the perspective of time, so that some sense can be made out of it."

Also replying to a letter from Cantor, was Adlai E. Stevenson. The Democratic presidential candidate wrote in part, "I did not personally attend the Scopes trial in Tennessee. At that time I was working on the Bloomington (Ill.) Daily Pantagraph as an editorial writer, and generally learning the newspaper business. I recall writing a series of editorials as the trial progressed, which I am afraid would now seem juvenile in the treme. I was just out of school and more confident than wise.

"I, of course, knew William Jennings Bryan as a boy. He came several times, as I recall, to visit in my grandfather's house in Bloomington during my childhood; but I can't really add anything about th atmetsphere of the Scopes trial."

As already announced, Paul Muni will play the defense attorney, Clarence Darrow, and Ed Begley will portray the special prosecutor, Bryan, in "Inherit the Wind."

Another Bid to Permit Bars in N. Y. Theatres

Move to permit the sale of liquor in New York theatres is on again. Spearheading the drive, at the request of the League of N. Y. Theatres, is N. Y. State Senator Stanley J. Bauer. An amendment to the alcoholic beverage control law, to permit bars in legit houses, was introduced by the senator last month. A similar measure sponsored by him last year died.

New bill has been referred to the Committee on Excise until notification of public hearings is made. Amendment calls, in part, for drinks to be served no earlier than one-half hour before curtain time and no later than one-half hour after the closing.

'Mendel' Snappy $4,000, Savoyards Closing, L.A.

Los Angeles, March 15.

Local legit was all in the small houses last week. The American Savoyards continued their Gilbert & Sullivan repertoire with "The Gondoliers" for their fifth offering, but week showed the poorest biz of any to date. The troupe is reprising "The Mikado" this week, and the final two frames of the scheduled eight-week stand have been cancelled.

"This Is Your Life, Mendel" in its sixth week at the Civic Playhouse, and "Finian's Rainbow," in the 11th week at the Hollywood Repertory, are still doing profitable biz.

Opening of "Cai Mutiny Court-Martial" tomorrow (Wed.) to re-light the Huntington Hartford Theatre should strengthen the local legit scene.

Estimates for Last Week

This Is Your Life, Mendel, Civic Playhouse (C) (6th wk) ($3.30; 400) (Leo Fuchs). Capacity agai ; $4,000.

The Gondoliers, Las Palmas (5 days) ($3.30; 400). American Savoyards limped to near,y $3,500.

'HONEYS' $24,500 FOR 5 IN NEW HAVEN TRYOUT

New Haven, March 15.

Heavy advance on "The Honeys" at the Shubert here last Wednesday-Saturday (9-12) helped to offset the mild word-of-mouth. On five shows, at $4.60 top, the comedy grossed a stupendous $24,500, virually complete sellout.

"Ankles Aweigh" opens next Saturday (19) and plays nine performances through March 26. "Da Yankees" preems April 2-9, and "Seventh Heaven" is due April 16-23. Penciled for April 25-30 is "Kismet," opening a tour.

'Caine' $35,600, St. Loo; Booth in 'Vinegar' 14G

St. Louis, March 15.

"Caine Mutiny Court Martial," starring Lloyd Nolan, John Hodiak and Barry Sullivan, grossed a hot $35,600 last week at the American, at a $4.48 top. House is dark this week, but relights Monday (21) with -week session of "Tender Trap" at $3.36 top.

Shirley Booth i "The Vinegar Tree," grossed a fine $14,000 at the Empr Theatre, and the stock bill was held over for a second week, current. Top has been upped to $3 for the spot.

Shows Out of Town

New Haven, March 9.

Cheryl Crawford production of comedy in three acts (five scenes) by Roald Dahl. Stars Jessica Tandy, Hume Cronyn, Dorothy Stickney; features Mary Finney, Len Doyle, Heywood Hale Broun. Direction, Reginald Denham; scenery, Ben Edwards; costumes, Motley. At Shubert, New Haven, March 9, '55; $4.50 top.

Mary Honey ..... Jessica Tandy
Maggie Honey ..... Dorothy Stickney
Bennett Honey ..... Hume Cronyn
Curtis Honey ..... ristopher Labatt
Nellie Fleischman ..... Mary Finney
Maloney ..... Heywood Hale Broun
O'Dwyer ..... Len Doyle
Inspector White ..... Paul Lipson

"Honeys" the type of stage venture that makes a producer grateful for the legit institution known as road tryout. If this newest comedy is to get within hailing distance of Broadway's hit columns, it will need every possible break within its next four pre-Gotham weeks to do so.

Preem indicates that the total of the opus never approaches its component parts. With a fairly amusing story idea, show leaps off into a sort of vacuum that never completely develops its potentialities.

There are many funny lines, but too great a proportion of the dialog impresses merely as space fillers. Perhaps this predicament stems from the fact that "Honeys" is a first effort on the part of author Roald Dahl. He knows how to create laugh wordage and chuckle-laden situations, but the job of stretching short story material into full-length play, while not insurmountable, will be stern challenge.

Humorous homicide is the plot basis for "Honeys." Two middle-aged wives, dominated by their crusty, selfcentered twin husbands, get certain ideas when they learn of the butterfly existence of a mutual widow friend whose penny-pinching husband fell (or pushed) from window.

Lion's share of thesping assignment falls to Hume Cronyn, who plays both husband-twins, and he handles it cleverly. Dorothy Stickney, one of the wives, exhibits considerable skill and energy in maintaining pace even when dreary segments of the production are against her. Jessica Tandy, as the other spouse, has been short-changed a bit in the material handed her.

In support, Mary Finney is capable as the good-time Charlie widow. Heywood Hale Broun and Len Doyle register as a pair of flatfoots and Paul Lipson has good moments in a brief police inspector role. Ben Edwards two sets are excellent and the femme apparel by Motley, though not extensive, is attractive.

Reginald Denham, who directed rehearsals and got billing here, relinquished the staging assignment following the premiere. Bone.

HOLLY HARRIS SUBBING

Chambres a Louer

(ROOMS FOR RENT)

Montreal, March 4.

La Jeune Ecene production of a tragedy in three acts, by Marcel Dube. Direction, Guy Beaulne; scenery, Michel Ambrogi. At Gesu Theatre, Montreal, Mar. 1, '55; $2.50 top.

Francois ..... Guy Godin
Maman ..... Lucie Poitras
Albert ..... Jean Duceppe
Joseph ..... Emile Genest
Arthur ..... Robert Rivard
Tit-Paul ..... Hubert Loiselle
Adrien ..... Edgar Fruitier
Simone ..... Helene Loiselle
Francine ..... Monique Miller
Le voix du Pere ..... Jean-Louis Paris
Jack ..... Yves Letourneau

Marcel Dube's second major play, "Chambres a Louer," indicates that this young playwright may be a real comer and one of the more serious-minded authors to break into the theatre in Canada for several years. This script won the Eastern-Canada Drama Festival contest in mid-Februarv and after its two-week run at the Gesu Theatre here it is being taken to Saskatchewan for the Canadian finals, where Dube's first play, "Zone," the winner two years ago.

Like Dube's previous works, "Chambres a Louer" deals with the working class. It is about an unpleasant Montreal family with a whining mother, and domineering elder brother, and it becomes a bit hard to take, although the realism and characterizations are convincing and reveal knowing stagecraft.

However, the author repeats the error of many French playwrights, using interminable monologs instead revealing the characters and moving the story by means of dialog. Except for the prolog and epilog th play frequently becomes tiresome.

As the catalytic visitor in the household, Monique Miller is fine, but a tendency to play in too brittle a fashion loses the ethereal quality the role needs. The mother, as portrayed by Lucie Poitras would better be more heroic instead of continuously whining. All three brothers are well played and the minor roles are adequate. Guy Beaulne's direction is sound, and Michel Ambrogi's setting is suitably drab. Newt.

Marching Song

Toronto, Feb. 25.

Murr. & Donald Davis production of drama in three acts, by John Whiting. Direction, Basil Coleman; designer, John Wilson. At Crest Theatre, Toronto, Feb. 23, '55; $3 top.

Harry Lancaster ..... Budd Knapp
Dido Morgen ..... Frances Hyland
Matthew Sangosse ..... George McCowan
Father Anselin ..... Eric House
Catherine De Troyes ..... Barbara Chilcott
Rupert Forster ..... Murray Davis
John Cadmus ..... Donald Davis
Bruno Horst ..... Grant Reddick

This John Whiting drama is as stirring as its title. There's not a laugh in the controversial opus, however, and it's a grim presentation of that chilling dictatorial formula whereby an unsuccessful soldier pays for his military defeat by suicide in order that the regime and its bureaucratic concepts will continue. (The play, which was done in London last season, is not to be confused with the similarly titled Broadway drama of 1936-37, by John Howard Lawson.)

Set in an unidentified capital in Central Europe, it's the conflict between an individual whose personal ambitions run counter to the mass policy of the State. To Western ears, it's a baffli political pamphlet marked by strong performances and lengthy philosophical speeches that deal with the causes of war and its needs, plus some morality statements on the decadence of church and science, complete with stock characters.

On the mythical country's defeat, the government needs a patsy, and selects the general. He stands trial for ar guilt and confesses—after he has been provided with a cya ide capsule. The drama provided by his decision whether to be a "patriot," or to make his personal appeal as an individual.

With the general allowed his last few hours, under house custody, with his former istress, h still labors under her arguments for a new life, plus some sneering opinions of the masses presented by an American film director, and a street waif seeking refuge, who prevails upon the general to make his ow decision.

Murray Davis, as the military trial target, shows a fine sense of theatre, though some parts of his message warrant contradictory customer argument in his taking of a dignified out, despite his war atrocities. Donald Davis is equally strong in his underplaying of the dry and polite chancellor with his nationalistic advice.

Of the additional male characters, Budd Knapp is effective as the drunken but clear-minded Hollywood film director; with Grant Reddick, as the execution-officer, making an otherwise small part stand out in the third act. As the mistress, Barbara Chilcott is regal and sympathetically understanding; ditto the tender gamin of Frances Hyland.

The author tells harrowing story, rich in poetic prose and cumulative build-up, but it's a complicated, talkative melodrama dealing with disillusioned radicals. McStay.

Equity Fireworks

ing to be fighting the "Communist conspiracy in entertainment communications."

Proponents of the resolution claim that Aware is actually engaged in blacklisting, which is contrary to Equity rules. If essary, they hope to recess Friday's meeting a couple of weeks to allow sufficient time to deal with the question.

Lively Maneuverin

Although, as usual, there has been little open electioneering in preparati for the election of membership representatives to the nominating committee, there is understood to have been lively maneuvering by the liberal and conservative factions in the union. The three council representatives selected last week, Lois Wilson, chairman, and John Emery and John Drew Devereaux, are regarded as more or less middle-of-the-roaders/ But they are, of course, likely to be outvoted by the membership reps in the selection of the regular slate for the annual election next June.

Due to be elected in the annual balloting are the union's seven officers: president, four vice-presidents, treasurer and recording secretary, and 12 council members, including 10 for full five-year terms, one as a four-year replacement and one as a one-year replacement. Incumbent council members whose terms are expiring this year are George Britton, Thomas Chalmers, Edwin Clay, Doris Dalton, Paul Ford, Florida Friebus, Rusty Lane, Carmen Mathews, Leonard Patrick, William Roerick, Jane Seyi and David Wayne.

The slate selected by the nine-member nominating comittee will represent the "regular" ticket. However, Equity rules permit nomination of independent tickets by petition. No such slate was entered in last year's election, in which the regular ticket was generally regarded as liberal. The conservative forces conducted a write-i campaign instead of entering a formal slate. In both the previous two annual elections, however, independent slates were entered.

Off-Broadway Shows

The White Devil

T. Edward Hambleton & Norris Houghton's "Side Show" presentation of Jack Landau's production of a tragedy in two acts, by John Webster. At Phoenix, N.Y., March 14, '55; $3.45 top.

Cast: Frederic Warriner, Arthur Seelen, Jacqueline Brookes, Mitchell Agruss, Michael Higgins, Fritz Weaver, Rosetta LeNoire, Sada Thompson, Earl Montgomery, Thayer David, Nancy Wickwire, John Harkins, Robin Michael, Sorrel Booke, Dee Victor, Jn Oyster, Albert Corbin.

"The White Devil" is Phoenix Theatre's "Side Show No. 2." T. Edward Hambleton and Norris Houghton may well be wondering why they didn't book it into the main tent. Under Jack Landau's unsparing direction, John Webster's gory classic is a violently explosive piece of theatre.

The principal flaw derives from the play's too generous portion of horror. At the sanguinary denouement, it would take an expert calculator to keep track of the deaths, and the audience can only gasp with nervous laughter as the frenzy mounts. Webster was writing savage tragedy, however, and if plot fulfillment required shedding of blood, he was not one to be squeamish.

But the violence is not all, for this is the work of a good playwright and fine poet. There satire, there is a kind of grim humor, there are fleeting moments of lyric beauty. And above all there are parts for actors to get their teeth into. The gid gloves are in mothballs and the resulting theatrical experience is turbulent.

The involved plot defies brief summary. Roughly, the Duke of Brachiano falls in love with a married woman and, to consummate his passion, contrives the murder of his wife and her husband. The murdered wife is sister to the Duke of Florence who plans, and ultimately achieves, a revenge more horrifying than the original crime.

The company that acts this bloodstained story excellent. Performing in modern dress on a bare stage that is furnished only with a few chairs and a long platform, the actors imbue the characters with dimension and fire. As the wife who conspires in her husband's murder, Jacqueline Brookes performs with flashing scorn, demonstrating a genuine flair for high tragedy. Although Michael Higgins has difficulty giving breadth to the somewhat flat character of the impassioned Duke, he plays with great energy.

Nancy Wickwire has a blazing scene as the betrayed wife whose death the incentive for the catastrophes that follow. As the evil genius who goads his sister and Brachiano into illicit love and murder, Fritz Weaver's sardonic guile is constantly potent. Earl Montgomery is the avenging Duke of Florence, his straightforward quality lending balance to some of the play's more ranting moments.

Thayer David is forceful as an unscrupulous Cardinal, Frederic Warriner is a si ister conspirator, and Rosetta LeNoire is vigorous as a courageous slave girl. Sada Thompson has a poignant scene as she weeps over the body of her son who has been slain by his brother.

Intelligently conceived and directed, this Phoenix "Side Show" is a graphic reminder that Elizabethan England had more than one playwriting genius. If the bloody finale tend to strain credibility, the production's virtue is that this is full-bodied drama done in the grand manner. It does not pretend to be theatre for the dainty. Geor.

In April Once

"In April Once" is an intellectual search for the wellsprings of man's faith. There is little dramatic action in William Alexander Percy' long dramatic poem, but there is intensive probing of mind and spirit. The words tumble forth in such profusion that the ideas are sometimes hard to follow, but the Chapel Players have worked earnestly to project the author's thesis. This seems to be that the proof of faith is not violent affirmation but in a tranquil conviction that enables man to withstand tribulation.

As thinly dramatized, a guard of good-will permits three of his prisoners to sun themselves on the battlements of an Italian castle. One is a foppish courtier who is anxious to mount a new crusade, another is a shaggy pirate who made mockery of a children's crusade by selling them into bondage, the third is a leprosy-stricken heretic. Ironically, the heretic is the true believer wh shows the others the way to abiding faith.

Page Johnson plays the sympathetic jailer with a troubled passion that seems deeply felt. As the miserably tortured yet undaunted heretic, Don McHenry is convincing both in appearance d urgency. Bill Penn, becurled as a medieval dandy, tends to overdraw the jaunty courtier who dies defending the escape of the jailer and the heretic. James Morris is forthrightly agreeable as a monk and Vince Gardenia plays the truculent pirate who prates of his misdeeds.

In stressing physical action to offset the play's static quality, director Ernestine Perrie has created tension, although occasionally verging on melodrama. She has perhaps used the auditorium too freely, the courtier's initial entrance down a rope from the balcony smacking of circus stuff.

"April" was not written in theatrical terms, but the Chapel Players have given it compulsion. The message is timely. Geor.

Legit Followup

The Rainmaker

(SHUBERT, WASH.)

Washington, March 7.

"Rainmaker," on tour following its Broadway run, should do moderately well in most situations and needs little stripping down for strawhat bookings. With three exceptions, the comedy has the same cast with which it opened in New York last October. Since the play stands or falls on the portrayal of the spinster daughter of a Dust-bowl farmer, all is well. Geraldine Page, who originated the role, still plays it, and with a class that make the entire production click.

Also continuing on the road are Darren McGavi in his Broadway role of the glib-talking, title character, and Cameron Prud'homme, as the loyal, worried father. As long as these three are in the cast, there doesn't seem to be much to worry about. "Rainmaker," with its relatively modest nut, can get along. Essentially, however, it's Miss Page's show. While she occasionally plays a little like a coy adolescent, she imparts verve to th part and proves the kind of actress that women will "just love."

Joseph Sullivan, who played the heroine's older brother throughout the New York run, continues smoothly. Bert Remsen has taken over the part of the impulsive younger brother, giving it considerable fun. But John Crawford, as the deputy sheriff, doesn't succeed in clarifying the fuzzy character. Ted Jacques does adequately as the sheriff. Lowe.

RKO Drops Cincy Legit House After 20 Years

Cincinnati, March 15.

RKO Theatres has turned back to the Shubert interests the Shubert Theatre, which it has had under lease for the last 20 years. Except for two brief rentals to evangelists, the 2,100 seat house has been shuttered for several years. Its future is a question.

Converted from a YMCA building, the theatre tenanted Shubert road shows prior to the Shubert-Erlanger booking consolidation in the mid-30's, and continued as legit house until the old Erlanger Grand Opera House was sold to RKO Theatres and gave way to a modern film and storefront setup. Then Shubert dramatic shows wer put into the 1,300-seat Cox, also Shubert property and musicals were booked into the indie 2,500-seat Taft.

RKO Theatres took the Shubert in the lush era of motion pictures, when it dominated Cincy's firstruns. Today RKO Theatres' downtown operations are the Albee, Palace and Grand plus the hilltop Paramount. Gone are the Lyric and Family.

play's faults while also relishing its merits and the author's remaining talent. Both made "Bonfire" sound worth seeing.

Tynan wrote in part, "Truly, the Irish never forgive those they have insulted. Back from long exile came Sean O'Casey to Dublin, and his compatriots hissed his play at curtain-fall. At the first-night of O'Casey's 'The Bishop's Bonfire' there were more stage Irishmen in the house than in the cast, and by the first interval venomous tongues were already lamenting the play's failure.

"Those who uprooted the author now charged him with having forgotten his roots; those who had expelled him from the parish charged him with being too parochial. How, they jeered, could a man from an urban working-class Protestant family write well about rural middle-class Catholic family?

"Some blamed the director, picturing Tyrone Guthrie as an ambulance which had run over the man it was summoned to help. Others excoriated the cast. In this congress of feud and polemic the play was forgotten.

"And what are the facts? That O'Casey's genius, once tragic-comic, had declined into a state best described as manic-depressive; that his hand had lost his sureness in shifting from mood to mood; and that there were two plays, one ghastly, one goregous, in unhappy juxtaposition.

"What matters is the manic half of the play. Here, O'Casey hits his full stride the old mocker and fantastic ironist, ever happier with tongue in cheek than with hand on heart. Broad comedy of protest was always the best Irish vein, and O'Casey strikes it rich.

O'Casey was never a great thinker; he is no longer a great craftsman; but he remains a great singer."

Sues Gregory for 50G On 'Three for Tonight'

Los Angeles, March 15.

Suit for $50,000, charging unfair competition and asking an injunction against Paul Gregory and associates, was filed here by legit producer Hal Gerard. Action involves Gregory's "Three for Tonight."

Complaint alleges that Gerard had a three-act variety show, "3 for Tonite," which played L. A. in 1952. It contends further that Gregory used the title, "Three for Tonight," for the purpose of "deceiving and confusing the public." Plaintiff asks that the defendant be enjoined from all advertising of the show and that he make an accounting of its profits.

Ione Hutaine Wins Suit Over Jersey Barn Deal

Flemington, N. J., March 15.

Ione Hutaine was awarded $2,500 damages by a jury here last Thursday (10) in her litigation with Rudolph Wishy, of New York, involving the Hunterdon Hills Playhouse near here. The same jury threw out a $20,000 counter-suit Wishy had started against Miss Hutaine.

Wishy sued the grounds that Miss Hutaine misrepresented facts when she borrowed money from him to operate the Playhouse. He contended that she failed to produce "name stars" as she allegedly had promised when they entered a business agreement in 1947. He also charged that she did not disclose the full amount of her indebtedness when the contract for the operation of the theatre was signed.

Miss Hutaine also asked $20,000 damages, in a counter-claim for alleged breach of contract for rent and occupation. Her lawyer contended that a settlement made in 1951 cleared her of any further obligation. She is the owner of the Playh

Bank-Loan Legit

Minneapolis, March 15.

In the Minnesota iron range section, where busi has been slack the past year and money is tight, local promoters bringing in stage shows have evolved a new way to finance patronage. They've arranged with a bank in each of the towns played by the shows to advance the admission price as loans to short-of-cash theatregoers.

'Festival' Closed $105,545 in Red

"Festival," Walter Fried's production of the Samuel and Bella Spewack comedy, involved a loss of $105,545. The venture was capitalized at $75,000, plus $35,000 put up by Marion Davies, through her nephew, author-producer Charles Lederer, in an effort to buck the generally poor notices. The show folded Feb. 5 after 22 performances.

According to an accounting sent to the backers last week, it cost $84,076 to bring the play to town, including $55,542 production cost, $16,426 tryout loss and $12,108 pense for the week's postponement of the New York preem. The operating loss on Broadway was $18,882, and there was $2,146 closing expense and $500 reserved for possible subsequent costs.

With a letter to the backers, companying the accountant's statement, Fried encloses photostats of the enthusiastic reviews of William Hawkins, critic of the N. Y. World-Telegram; Mark Barron, of the AP, and an un-bylined reviewer for INS. He does not refer to the flurry kicked up by co-authoress Bella Spewack in curtain speeches and press, tv and radio interviews in a campaign to keep the play running in the face of preponderantly unfavorable notices and progressively losing business.

Canada Drops B.O. Tax On Home-Grown Legit

Toronto, March 15.

Giving Canadian theatres a needed hypo, Premier Leslie M. Frost has wiped out the former 12½% amusement tax on all Canadian-produced stage shows. Decision goes into effect April 1, but promises a b.o. mixup, particularly in summer theatre circuits, with no tax relief for legit houses importing American productions.

With rep houses and certain Canadian summer theatres, this Government tax elimination will mean around a $500 weekly increase in repertory revenue. That slim margin has in many cases been determining weekly profit or loss, with rep situations either folding or continuing to precarious b.o. returns.

While not "ordering" legit theatre to pass the reduction on to the customers, Premier Frost said in a press conference, "The benefits should be passed on to the people in lowered prices to increase attendance and revenue. If the tax reduction is not passed on, the entertainment field has no cause for bellyaching in the future. The abolition of the amusement tax is restricted to wholly Canadian entertainment on the live stage, including concert engagements of Canadian talent. This should foster Canadian culture."

But if there is a single non-Canadian in the cast, the amusement tax will have to be paid, he said. It was emphasized, however, that the Treasury still has the power to make exceptions and abolish the amusement tax on such stage productions as the summer Shakespearean Festival at Stratford, Ontario, which imports American and British stars.

Shows Abroad

The Burning Boat

London, March 11.

Laurier Lister production of musical play in three acts, by Nicholas Phipps and Geoffrey Wright. Stars Bruce Trent, Marie Ney, Michael Gough, Marion Grimaldi. Direction, Murray MacDonald; decor, Hugh Casson; dances, Michael Holmes. At Royal Court Theatre, London, March 10, '55; $2.20 top.

Leo Hartmann	Bruce Trent
Mrs. Coleridge	Marie Ney
Peter Manson	Michael Gough
Jane Manson	Marion Grimaldi
Marryat	David Rees
Jack Constant	Don Williams
Lt. Peter Warren	Michael O'Connor
Frances Coleridge	Diane Todd
Jim	John Abineri
Ted Marryat	John Bennett
Maureen	Valeri Hermanni
Sheilah	Anthea Askey

After the smash success of "Airs on Shoestring," which jammed the small Royal Court for almost two years, "The Burning Boat" seems a curious choice as a successor. It is as artless as its predecesor was sophisticated and as unfunny as the revue was witty. Producer Laurier Lister can write this off to experience.

A musical play, "Boat" has a surfeit of songs, presumably to compensate for the lack of plot. Mostly they are sentimental ballads to develop the mushy triangle. However, one standout, "A Girl Ought to Look Like a Girl," has nothing to do with the story, but another, "Running Festival," is a bright little number with a fast and racy lyric.

The show is set in a small Devon port during the period of a musical festival and the plot involves a married woman who falls in love with a visiting musician. She's all set to break up her marriage, but when her husband is burned in a fire aboard ship she feels she must stay loyal to him.

Nicholas Phipps, a writer with wide experience, has turned in a surprisingly naive entry and the music, mainly by Geoffrey Wright has little sparkle. Acting and direction are indifferent. Bruce Trent never relaxes as the musician and Marion Grimaldi is too immature as the wife. Michael Gough plays the husband with an over-emphasis of the dramatic, while Marie Ney wanders rather aimlessly through the producti . Only Anthea Askey shows signs of an individual personality in a bit part. Myro.

Room for Two

London, March 8.

Bernard Delfont production of a farce in three acts, by Gilbert Wakefield. Stars Terry-Thomas. Direction, Charlotte Frances; decor, Geoffrey Chin. At Prince of Wales Theatre, London, March 7, '55; $2.25 top.

Hubert Crone	Terry-Thomas
Claire Broden	Beryl Baxter
Hilda Westby	Georgina Cookson
Robert Broden	Bill Fraser
Henry Westby	Bill Shine
Mary	Paddy Webster
Hotel Manager	Raymond Dyer
Porter	Michael Voysey
Maid	Patti Brooks
Waiter	Julian Strickland
Hotel Detective	Ralph Nossek

Terry-Thomas, a local tv and vaude name, makes his legit debut in this revival of Gilbert Wakefield's outmoded, crude and vulgar farce. His performance, cashing in on all his noted mannerisms, is adequate enough. But the experiment cannot be judged on the basis of this vehicle. It is a stop-gap presentation at the Prince of Wales until the new Folies Bergere revue opens next month. It hardly merits a transfer.

Using all the well-known cliches of the conventional bedroom farce, "Room For Two" is little more than an inane smutty joke extended over three acts. For two of these, the star is in femme attire, resisting the amorous advances of the women he had been chasing. The dialog creaks and most of the situations are all too obvious.

Under the racy direction of Charlotte Frances, a game cast battles valiantly. Beryl Baxter, Georgina Cookson, Bill Fraser and Bill Shine extract more laughs than the play merits. Myro.

The Lovers

Edinburgh, Feb. 25.

Jack De Leon & Sam Wanamaker production of new dramatization, in three acts, by Juliet Mansel and Robin King, of Emile Zola's "Therese Raquin." Stars Sam Wanamaker, Helen Haye, Eva Bartok. Direction, Wanamaker; scenery and costumes, Georges Wakhevitch; incidental music, Lain Hamilton. At Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, Feb. 21, '55; $1.30 top.

Camille Raqui	Harold Lang
Laurent	Sam Wanamaker
Prostitute	Constance Wake
Mme. Raquin	Helen Haye
Therese Raqui	Eva Bartok
Michaut	ynaston Reeves
Grivet	Peter Copley
Others	Judith Gick, Peter Vaughan, Leni Freed, James P. Vicars

Emile Zola's early novel "Therese Raquin," in this English version titled "The Lovers," by Juliet Mansel and Robin King, is a sombre melodrama about passion and remorse. It marks the British stage debut of Eva Bartok, Hungarian-born film actress, in the central role of the young wife, Therese Raquin.

Plot concerns the love affair between Therese and Laurent in Paris in the 1880's, and their murder of her weakling husband. Th lovers eventually marry, but morse sets in, and the play ends in tragedy as Laurent dies. Most of action passes in Mme. Raquin's shop and in a bed-sitting room, and a drop curtai used to give glimpses of her callers outside. This device of exterior interludes is fairly effective at the outset, but becomes tiresome.

Miss Bartok, in a red wig, makes the most of her many dramatic scenes. Although the play doesn't test her fully via dialog, she's visually effective either black mourning dress or in a state of undress in the love-making scene.

Glasgow, March 4.

Citizens' Theatre production of comedy in three acts, by Eric Linklater. Direction, Richard Mathews; scenery, Nevil Dickin. At Citizens' Theatre, Glasgow, Feb. 28, '55; 90c top.

Anthony Canticle	Paul Curran
Peter Milford	Fulton Mackay
Albert Edward Hu	William Franklyn
Evelyn Hunter	Margo Johns
Michael McAdam	Gordon Whiting
Margaret McAdam	Barbara Lott
Gwen Ketch	Ann Walford
Adelaide Avalon	Joan Haythorne
Calum	John Grieve
Christina	Enid Hewit

Eric Linklater, w.k. Scot author and playwright, sets this new three-acter in rehearsal rooms of a London theatre and later on a remote island off the west coast of Scotland. Play, described as a comedy, shows its liveliest moments in act two, but thereafter becomes tedious and sprawls to an inconclusive and unamusing climax.

The Linklater wit shines here and there through certain speeches, but the overall effect is that the playwright is preaching rather than entertaining. Switch to the yarn is that the lonely island has once been a stronghold of women only, and the femme members of the newcomer group takes control, making the men do all the chores, even to kitchen drudgeries.

Thesping chores are capably sustained, notably by Barbara Lott, Ann Walford and Joan Haythorne, Minor gem of characterization is by John Grieve as an islander seeking to oil his bagpipes with whisky. Paul Curran is adequate as an author, and Fulton Mackay as a theatre producer.

Richard Mathews has directed confidently, and Nevil Dickin's scenery is a highlight, particularly the second act setting of a living-room of the mansion house on the island, with Scot hills showing through the window and changing sky effects from bright blue to dusk. Gord.

Armand Deutsch Aims Calhern 'Dish' on B'way

Film producer Armand Deutsch is moving into legit. He'll make his Broadway managerial debut as sponsor of Edmund Morris' "Wooden Dish." Rights to the play were previously held by Richard Aldrich & Richard Myers and Julius Fleischmann, who produced the play in London last summer in partnership with British manager E. P. Clift.

Deutsch plans to do the dram next November, with Louis Calhern starring and directing. Actor is under contract to Metro, but the film studio has given him a leave-of-absence for a run-of-the-play contract. Deutsch was with Metro for the past six years and was associated with Calhern in the studio's production of "The Magnificent Yankee."

Phyllis Manning Troupe Back to Borscht Circuit

A legit touring company, under the sponsorship of actress Phyllis Manning, will play the eastern resort hotel circuit this summer, its second season in the territory. Unit will play approximately 28 hotels about double the number covered in '54. Sked calls for the presentation of about 10 shows, with six one-niters a week.

About 30 Equity performers will be employed on a jobbing contract, with season slated to run from the last week in June through Labor Day.

N. Y. Orch to Set Symph Touring Mark With 231G U.S., 250G O'Seas Treks

For the first time in American symphonic history, a U.S. orch is doing both a transcontinental and an overseas tour in one year. The N.Y. Philharmonic will make a five-week tour of the U.S. this spring and a four-week jaunt through Europe this fall, virtually covering half the world's map between the end of its regular season here and the beginning of the next.

The transcontinental trek, first in 34 years, and the orch's longest, will open April 1 in Detroit, go south to Texas, then to California and Oregon and back, winding in Ann Arbor, Mich., May 22. Orch will give 31 concerts in 30 cities, with an estimated take of $196,000 and an anticipated deficit of $35,000. Some dates are at straight $6,000 fee plus percentage; others at guarantee and percentage.

Orch will use a special N.Y. Central train of six sleepers, one coach, one baggage car, and a diner where necessary, for the 10,000-mile trip, with $67,000 as the railroading cost. Personnel, including staff, numbers 115, with co-manager Bruno Zirato and assistant manager George E. Judd Jr. making the entire trip. Judd arranged all details, working with Columbia Artists Mgt., which did the bookings.

Payroll will be the same as in N.Y., from $18,000 to $19,000 per week. Men will also get a $12 per diem when not using Pullmans, and otherwise $6.50. Management figures a $116,000 cost for players alone. (It also points out that the men get seven extra weeks' employment this year via the two tours). Baggage transfer will run about $7,000 on the U.S. trek. In L.A., Frisco and Denver, the local symphony is sponsoring the N.Y. orch, on straight percentage.

State Dept. Angle

Details on the European jaunt aren't complete. Although the management wouldn't disclose details, the trip (in salaries, per diems, transportation, etc.) will cost around $250,000. Orch, visiting Europe for the first time since 1930, will plane out Sept. 3 to Edinburgh for six concerts there to close the Edinburgh Festival. It will give 18 concerts on the Continent, in Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy and Greece, winding with two concerts in London Oct. 4-5, and returning to N.Y. Oct. 7.

Orch is touring under aegis of the State Dept., via ANTA's International Exchange Program. It expects to take in $100,000 at the b.o.; will get some help from the State Dept. for passage, and expects to raise the balance of monies needed from private donors. With trip costing 250G, it's been variously estimated that the orch will have to raise $100,000 privately for its deficit. Part of this has already been promised.

Music director Dimitri Mitropoulos and guest-conductor Guido Cantelli will share podium chores on both tours.

Buffalo's Krips Set For Dutch, Aussie Dates

Buffalo, March 15.

Josef Krips, conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic, will record the entire production of "Don Giovanni" as performed by the Vienna State Opera in June. Mr. Krips has also been engaged to conduct at the Holland Festival early in July. From the Netherlands he will go to Australia, returning to the United States in November.

Already engaged for the 1956 Edinburgh Festival, the conductor will direct a Beethoven cycle in London with the London Philharmonic.

Iturbi Unchanged After Collapse in Buffalo

Buffalo, March 15.

Condition of pianist-conductor Jose Iturbi, who was hospitalized here following his appearance with the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra last week, is reported unchanged at Sisters Hospital. Dr. Arnold A. Hutschnecker, of New York, Iturbi's personal physician, is here taking tests, with pianist believed to be under observation for a heart ailment.

Iturbi's illness forced concellation of a month's tour of England, which was to have started the first of this month, and his plans for scheduled European concerts are indefinite.

Gigli, 65, Back to U. S. For His 'Farewell Tour'; Then To His Vineyards

Beniamino Gigli, vet Italian lyric tenor, is returning to the U. S. this spring for a short concert tour under management of the Coppicus, Schang & Brown division of Columbia Artists Mgt. Dino Fedri is the piano accompanist. The 65-year-old ex-Met Opera singer has just closed a tour in England, which he calls his last, and announces the U. S. visit as "a farewell tour" too.

Concertizing in Europe and South America in recent years with great success, despite his age, Gigli will do about eight dates in the U. S., followed by six more in Canada. He'll sing April 17 and 24 at Carnegie Hall, N. Y.; in Newark (21), Hartford (26), Philadelphia (29), Chicago, May 8, and do a couple more dates here before Canada.

Gigli, a Met Opera mainstay, quit the Met in a huff in 1939 following a salary cut. He hasn't been there since. Tenor advises Columbia that he's retiring to go into the wine business in Italy, planning to put out his own product under a Gigli label, with his photo prominent on the bottles.

Concert Bits

Joseph H. Conlin Jr., young N.Y. impresario, is flying to Europe Friday (18) on a two-week scouting tour. Columbia Artists Mgt. has turned four Beniamino Gigli dates over to him to present, two in N.Y., and one each in Newark and Hartford.

Renata Tebaldi, Met Opera sensational newcomer, who made her debut Jan. 31, finished six performances at the Met with Saturday's (12) "Otello." She also made two recital appearances there, second being last night's (Tues.) date, and will return to her native Italy this week.

Concert pianist Maryla Jonas has recovered from a rare blood disease that made her an invalid for more than three years, and will play again next season. She's managed by Coppicus, Schang & Brown, of Columbia Artists Mgt.

The National Council of the Metropolitan Opera will hold its annual spring meeting in the Opera House, N.Y., March 24. A luncheon at Louis Sherry's is to follow.

Jacques Singer Re-Signed

Corpus Christi, Tex., March 15.

Corpus Christi Symphony Society has reengaged Jacques Singer as conductor for the 1955-56 season.

He's currently serving his first season as maestro.

Maestro Danny

Hollywood, March 15.

Danny Kaye will become a longhair, temporarily, the night of March 17 when he will function as conductor for one number by the L. A. Philharmonic Orchestra at the Ambassador Hotel. On the same program will be Jack Benny and Dinah Shore.

Show will be a benefit performance aimed at raising part of a $200,000 fund for the Philharmonic. Heading the campaign is Johnny Green, Metro's music chief.

Met Sets 6-Week $1,100,000 Tour

The Metropolitan Opera starts off on its annual spring tour at Easter, opening a trek in Cleveland April 11 that will cover 7,160 miles and 15 cities in a 6½-week jaunt. (Last year's tour ran six weeks.) With a top of $7.20 to $10, depending on hall's capacity, and all dates guaranteed (at average minimum of $19,000 against percentage), the Met hopes to gross around $1,100,000 and make a profit of about $100,000.

Tour has been set up as usual by Francis Robinson, assistant general manager and b.o. head. Cleveland gets eight performances in a week as does Boston. Chi and Toronto get six each. Atlanta visit has been extended to four showings. Other cities are Houston, Washington, Birmingham, Memphis, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Minneapolis, Bloomington (Ind.), Lafayette (Ind.) and Montreal, where the tour closes June 1.

"Andre Chenier" is the leading opera, to be done eight times. "La Traviata," (7), and "Tosca" (6), follow in popularity.

Longhair Disk Reviews

Rossini: Italian in Algiers (Angel). Sprightly, bubbling version of the charming, melodious light opera is a treat. Frequently reminiscent of the "Barber of Seville," it still stands sturdily on its own. Mezzo Giuletta Simionato and basso Mario Petri are a delightful duo as leads, and Cesare Valletti a ringing though lyric tenor. Carlo Maria Giulini reins the La Scala forces ably.

Sibelius: Symphony No. 2 (RCA Victor). Leopold Stokowski conducts NBC Symphony members in a galloping, nervous version—especially the third movement.

Tchaikovsky: Sleeping Beauty (Columbia). Complete ballet score cleanly, tastefully played by Andre Kostelanetz and orch, with zest, without schmaltz, for an appealing album.

Mozart: Concerto No. 5 in A (Decca). Russia's brilliant violinist, David Oistrakh, shows his mastery of the classic style in this cool, limpid performance of the "Turkish" concerto, with the Saxon State Orch assisting. Reverse has the Bamberg Symph, under Fritz Lehmann, in a polished reading of Mozart's Symphony No. 32 in G.

Bach: Partita No. 2, in D Minor & Sonata No. 1 in G Minor (Capital). Violinist Nathan Milstein, unaccompanied, bringing a rich tone, clean approach and an expressive interpretation to this Bach. The w.k. Chaconne shines out for its purity.

Puccini: Madame Butterfly (Cetra). Brisk, attractive version of the opera. Clara Petrella has a creamy, full soprano (a little shrill at the top, sometimes), and brings drama and warmth to the central role. Ferruccio Tagliavini is a sterling Pinkerton and Giuseppe Taddei a sonorous, sympathetic Sharpless. Good choral and orchestral support under Angelo Questa.

N.Y.C. Opera Teeing 5-Wk. Season On 210G Budget; Sees 'Trifling' 30G Loss

The N. Y. City Opera Co. opens its 12th spring season at City Center, N. Y., tomorrow (Thurs.), with "Der Rosenkavaller," in a five-week run extending through April 17. Where last fall there were no new productions, due to straitened finances, this spring season will boast two. Season's budget runs around $200,000 to $210,000, on which management will probably lose $20,000 to $30,000. "That's a trifling sum," says the opera troupe's general director, Joseph Rosenstock. "If an opera company doesn't lose money, it's a bad company."

New productions are Nicolai's "Merry Wives of Windsor," not heard in N. Y. in over 20 years, and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale." "Pasquale," with completely new sets and costumes, will cost just under $10,000 to put on. "Wives," also new, will however use the sets and costumes from the company's "Falstaff" production, cutting costs considerably. Company will also present "Cenerentela" for the first time in English, under title of "Cinderella," in a translation by Martha W. England and James H. Durbin Jr. Last-named opera, a hit when first done, has sagged at the b.o.; and the new English version has a double purpose, to hypo its draw as well as to give the company another so-called matinee opera, which it needs.

Late Go-Ahead

A good opera season last fall, and a profitable winter drama season, permitted the opera troupe to put on new works this spring. Go-ahead from the board, however, came late, at the end of January, although plans had been long in the works.

Thirty-four performances of 14 different operas will be given, in all, "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "Carmen" and "Rigoletto" will be re-staged, John Butler returns to the company, after a season's absence, as choreographer. Rosenstock conducts the opening night. Emerson Buckley makes his debut as N. Y. City Opera conductor, the next night, with "Rigoletto."

Rosenstock, who has been at the helm of the opera company for three years, has already been re-signed for next year. In his three-year tenure, he points out, the NYCO has had 58 debuts, 53 of them being American singers. Of 50 operas in the company's repertoire, 26 are modern or offbeat. Of these 26, Rosenstock says, 13 were introduced during his three-year regime, the other 13 being presented during his predecessor's eight-year tenure. Of his own 13, eight were American.

Boris-Hobi Re-Pacted; Dolin Buys 'Le Jazz Hot'

The Ruthanna Boris-Frank Hobi Co., new vest-pocket ballet troupe which toured the Community Concerts circuit for Columbia Artists Mgt. this season, has been signed for another Community tour next year. Miss Boris and Hobi are assisted by dancer Stanley Zompakos and pianist Paul Kueter.

Repertoire includes a new ballet, "Le Jazz Hot," a dance spoof of the '20s choreographed by Miss Boris. Anton Dolin, director of the Festival Ballet of London, saw the work during his recent U. S. visit, and has bought it for his own troupe's use.

N. Y. City Ballet Winds Up 4-Week Run to 174G B.O.; Pays Off Its New Works

The N. Y. City Ballet wound up a four-week run at City Center, N.Y., Sunday night (13) with a fine $174,460 take. Troupe opened to a $35,000 first-week and built steadily, jumping to $45,500 the second stanza, $46,450 the third, and $47,510 in the final weeks.

Company just about breaks even on the 174G gross, but did much better than expected. Management thought it would do about 150G and lose around $35,000. Troupe also paid off costs for two new works, "Roma" and "Western Symphony," at $15,000 each, plus $500 for a new Pas de Trois. It also had four weeks of rehearsal costs this winter, which it did not have for the previous fall season. Winter gross was only $4,000 under last fall's take.

Troupe also managed to pay a few costs (such as for shoes, etc.) for the forthcoming European trip, which starts next month.

THEY TAKE NO CHANCES WITH EXPLOSIVE STOKY

Miami, March 15.

Leopold Stokowski was cut off the air Sunday night (13) by radio station WKAT during a concert of the U. of Miami Symphony when the conductor began raising-on-the-air objections to the accuracy of the script. Station v.p.-general manager John Prosser said he cut Stokowski off when the latter, who was guest conductor of the orchestra, objected to statements in the script about his birth date and his mother's nationality, for fear of what Stokowski might say if he got "excited."

Script said Stokowski was born in 1882, at which point Stokowski shouted, "No, no, no, no, no. That is not true. I was born in 1887." Prosser, who was announcing the show, read on, declaring that the conductor was born of a Polish father and an Irish mother. At that point, Stokowski cut in again with "My mother was not Irish. This is terrible. Where did you get that stuff?" At this point Prosser pulled the switch. He later said the script had been researched and the specific information came from the International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians.

D.C. Underwriting $10,000 For Two Met Opera Dates

Washington, March 15.

Metropolitan Opera Assn. has been booked into Loew's Capitol Theatre, April 25-26, for its first Washington appearance in two years. "La Traviata" and "Faust" are tentatively skedded, with the house scaled from $3 to $9.75.

The Hayes Concert Bureau, which is cooperating with booker S. Hurok and the Met, is handling. Patrick Hayes has set up a new sponsoring group, the Washington Metropolitan Opera Committee, headed by Francis J. Kane, president of the D. C. Board of Trade. Purpose of the committee is to assure an underwriting fund of $10,000. Met sang here in 1952 and 1953 for the first time since 1931.

BUSY ROBERT STOLZ

Viennese Composer on Bicycle Between Europe and N. Y.

Viennese composer Robert Stolz has slotted his New York return for early July in preparation for his annual conducting chore of the "Night in Vienna" concert at Lewisohn Stadium, July 23. He's also set to conduct at the Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia, July 18.

Meantime, Stolz is readying his new musical "Signorina," for a preem at the Opera House, Nurnberg, April 16. He'll conduct the orch at the initial performance. Book and lyrics for the tuner were penned by Robert Gilbert and Peer Schwenzen.

He's now winding up the composing and conducting of the entire score of the Viennese color-filmusical, "Die Duetschmeister" ("The Vienna Regiment").

Vermont State Symph Voted $5,000 Annually

Montpelier, Vt., March 15.

Without a dissenting vote, the state House of Representatives has voted to appropriate $5,000 annually for the next biennium to the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra.

Increased aid for the 20-year-old organization, one of the first state orchestras in the United States, was proposed for two reasons: 1. People in Vermont are not accustomed to paying high prices for their entertainment as folks do in metropolitan areas. 2. Vermont does not have halls large enough to accommodate people, to give large concerts at popular prices.

Beef From Buff

Buffalo, N.Y.

Editor, VARIETY:

I read the lead item in your "N.Y. Sound Track" column in the March 2 issue of your irresponsible rag with mingled feelings of consternation and despair. The mere implication of your comparing me—the authentic dean of VARIETY's correspondents' corps—with some 28-year-old service whippersnapper from Pittsburgh is an excruciating indignity to my literary ego and one, sirrah, which leaves me undecided whether to send by seconds around in the morning with my card and the choice of swords or pistols or whether just to write you a nasty letter. On second thought, on account I have always been a lousy swordsman, I have decided on the latter—or to be precise, on the letter—or to be even more precise on this letter

For your information, for the record and so that all may be advised by these presents in the future, my correspondent's commission from your mercurial sheet dates back to the spring of 1919 when, as a stripling, Sime snatched me from the arms of my nurse and pinned me with the bright badge of Buffalo coverage—a rue which, although now somewhat tarnished by time, I have worn with a difference ever since. On my slide rule, that makes it 36 years ago—and at a time when I am sure brother (Harold V.) Cohen [Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and VARIETY] was an innocent hidden in the bullrushes of the Monongahela.

So, forsooth, when, in the future you make so bold as to venture comparisons among your ageless correspondents, I bid you, like the ghost of Hamlet's father, to remember me"—and smile!

Sidney Burton Pfeifer.

P.S.—And, while we're on the subject, whatever became of Eric Gorrick of Australia—the only other one left of our little band of simonpure originals?

(Harold Myers, VARIETY's London bureau chief, points out that while he's a "new boy with only about seven years service," (Miss) Clem Humphries, office manager, has been in the London office since 1923 and Harry Regensburg, ad exec in London, joined the paper about a year later.)

Erle Krasna's Jessel-Book O. O.

William E. Buckley, veep of Henry Holt & Co., is in receipt of a legal letter from Mrs. Erle (Norman) Krasna, in connection with George Jessel's forthcoming memoirs, "This Way Miss," due early in April.

Mrs. Krasna, Al Jolson's widow, through the Mendel Silberberg law firm in Hollywood, wrote that she "heard" the Jessel book contained some material "derogatory to the memory of the star. (Part of the book, reportedly, includes eulogies of show biz greats at whose biers Jessel officiated, among them Jolson). The Holt publishing firm advised the attorneys it will conduct its publication business the "usual manner," declining any preiew of proofs to Mrs. Krasna.

Non-Elfinesque Morton

Charles W. Morton, associate editor of The Atlantic Monthly, has a new book due for publication soon by Lippincott. As usual, he's begun a series of kidding plugs for the volume in The Atlantic Bulletin, the monthly promotion pamphlet he writes for the mag.

First such blurb is headed, "Caution to All Booksellers—Important!" The piece, in the form of a notice from the publisher, warns, "We are informed by our attorneys that our reference to the humor of Charles W. Morton, on page 17 of our spring catalog, as 'elfin' is libelous per se, and that it should be deleted. Mr. Morton denies that anything in his book, 'A Slight Sense of Outrage,' could fairly be described as 'elfin,' and he has provided us with the following words (a footnote indicates more synonyms are available on request) which may be substituted in place of 'elfin': macabre, languid, eerie, magnificent.

"No such word as 'elfin' will appear on the jacket of "A Slight Sense of Outrage.' Mr. Morton feels, and we concur, that there is no telling what a reviewer may do with a book when endowed, as a starter, with a word like 'elfin.'

"We regret the necessity for this correction."

Also Don't See Lotsa Things

Soviet literature and art are above such things as horror comics, according to Dr. Hewlett Johnston, the "Red" Dean of Canterbury, English cleric, in an address to the Scottish-USSR Friendship Society in Glasgow.

"You never see a crime comic in Russia," he said. "They would be shocked if you tried to produce one. You never see anything that is sexually unpleasant."

He said Russian painting was "magnificent . . . it has a kick one misses in the modern art of Britain today."

More Books On The Bard

"The Shakespearean Moment (and its Place in the Poetry of the 17th Century)" is being published in the U. S. by the Columbia U. Press, Patrick Cruttwell, lecturer in English at the University College of the South-West, Exeter, England, is the author. Chatto & Windus first published the book in England.

Another Englishman to deal with "Shakespeare: The Last Phase" (Harcourt, Brace) is Derek Traversi, director of the British Council in Chile, whose earlier book, "Approach to Shakespeare" (1939) will be republished in revised edition by Archer.

New Approach to Shakespeare has been taken in "Spiritual Values in Shakespeare," by Dr. Ernest Marshall Howse, minister of Bloor St. United Church in Toronto, due for publication April 11. Book explores the moral values in eight of the Bard's plays. Abingdon Press is publishing.

'Egghead Paperbacks'

This week's (March 19) Cue weekly gives the lowdown on the highbrow paperback book industry in an article by Tim Taylor titled "Paperbacks Go Egghead." Taylor points out that the serious reader who can't afford the expensive hardback originals has never had it so good, with about 150 titles of quality tomes now available from 10 publishing houses and another half-dozen publishers expected to jump into the field by the end of this year.

The 10 publishers of the long-hair literature are listed as Doubleday's Anchor Books, Knopf's Vintage Books, Evergreen, Beacon, Meridian, Image, Anvil, Rinehart, Modern Library and Britain's Penguin Books, which pioneered. And, of course, other paperback publishers, including Pocket Books and New American Library, have their quality lines in addition to pop titles.

As to the future of egghead softcovers, Cue notes that Doubleday editor Jason Epstein believes that a sale of 3,000,000 per year is conceivable, and he predicts his Anchor line will grab a third of the market. Chief problem confronting the pubs is the lack of an adequate back-list. Epstein has ordered 20 originals from topflight authors to help overcome this stumbling block.

Scores Big Biz In Journalism

Morgan Thomson, Labor Member of Parliament for Dundee, Scotland, speaking at Edinburgh, said the advertising manager had become an increasingly important figure in British journalism. The editor has lost status, with result that the press was extremely unwilling to say anything, however necessary, which would upset any large body of advertisers.

Newspapers have become big business. This meant that the kind of persons who controlled them were not primarily newspapermen at all. They were financiers and industrialists who, in virtue of their position, were able to influence the kind of news that was published. It was wrong, he said, that the supply of news should be controlled by the personal eccentricities of newspaper proprietors and their wives, as it often was.

He advocated the growth of non-profit-making trusts. It was possible there was room for a national newspaper run on the lines of the British Broadcasting Corp., but in the long run it was the public which would determine the kind of newspaper they got. Meantime, they needed to educate the public in the art of reading the newspapers; it must learn to read between the lines and to distinguish between fact and comment.

Beirn's 'Bite Dog' Reprint

An ad agency prexy's speech has become a "bestseller" by design. Address by F. Kenneth Beirn, of Biow-Beirn-Toigo, titled "Newspapermen Must Bite Dog," got 5,000 reprints last week done up in a 12-page, pocket size slick and distributed to editors, journalism schools and libraries throughout the U. S. on a straight mailing and request basis.

Speech was retitled "Beirn Bites Dog" when run virtually in full in VARIETY some weeks ago.

Paris Music Hall Mag

Marking the permanence of the music hall comeback in Paris the last year is the appearance of a new monthly magazine, devoted to variety and song, called Music-Hall. Published by SIPA, its managing editor is Pierre Balatier, well-known song chronicler and impresario. Mag is slanted at the new young element brought into the music hall habit by the headline chanters.

Laid out like a cross between a fan and trade mag, this has enough for both segments of the public, and is hawked at the music halls and cabarets here. It will appear the 15th of every month and looks to find a place for itself. It sells for 80 francs (23c), and present issue has a profile on up-and-coming young singer Gilbert Becaud, news from variety spots around the world and various articles and pic stories on aspects of the song and house pitch here. Mosk.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Dublin, N. H.

"I see," said Mr. Dooley, "where the Irish are still passin' jint resolutions to show they have no gredge aginst thimselves. They favor St. Pathrick's Day as a festival for all mankind, includi ' the Jook of Windsor and Philip Dunne."

"An' who's Philip Dunne? asked Mr. Hennessy. "I niver heerd iv him."

"Ye wuddent," said Mr. Dooley, "because he was a writher iv the moon pitchers and recently became a perducer iv his own wild dreams. He was wan of the sons of Finley Peter Dunne, him who uster spy on ivrybody, us included, an' write it all in the papers. For money, mind ye, Hinnissey."

"Ye mean," said Hennessy, "Dunne was his real name an' he didn't have to change fur Hollywood?"

"He wasn't an acthor, Hinnissey. He was a writher. Intellectuals don' have to change their names, though they often do. Thin their accint bethrays them. It's use'ly from Hung'ry."

"So the revolution is over and the Irish will be comin' out of their cellars an' bicyclin' past Fuzzy Glen Corner and aroun' Phoenix Park and down O'Connell Sthreet that used to be called Sackville and maybe over to Martello Tower at Sandycove where Docther Sinjun Gogarty and Jimmy Jyce lived befur wan became notorious, and the ither infamous."

"Well, maybe Philip Dunne did not change his name," said Mr. Hennessy, "but I see where John Ford is now Sean O'Feanna and is makin' another Irish picther like 'The Quiet Wan.'"

"Is he now? And where did you read that?" asked Mr. Dooley.

"In Eddie Sullivan's coluym."

"Did ye now? Well, I guess that's the Burke's Peerage of Broadway, though it slightly contradicts what the Scullywag of VARIETY revealed tin years ago."

"Which was what?"

"That his name was not Ford but Feeney. But maybe time has added r'yalty to it and now it's O'Feanna. I remember that when O'Scully said Ford was as Irish as the Hibernian School of Dublin, Sean, who was then known as Jack, was a Commander in the Navy and was fit to be tied because he feered the revelation would get him sthripped of his high rank. That was in the days when gobs used to sing, 'Ireland must be hivven for they have no Navy there.' But now that he's retired as an Admiral maybe he doan't mind. I think we should be proud of him, a civilian who could climb that high in the American Navy without being as English as Admiral Sims was."

"But didn't you see where O'Feanna has deserted the Navy fur the Army and jined the Long Green Line?" asked Hennessy.

"Wasn't it The Long Gray Line, Hinnissy?"

"Well, it was all about Marty Maher and Maureen O'Hara and some wan named Aisenhower, though how he got by the gates if the Irish were guardin' the place as well as they did Castlenock, I'm at a loss to understand. And besides, gray turns to green if left in the sun long enough."

"Or rubbed in the grass by Nothre Dame tackles," said Mister Dooley. "But Feeney or O'Feanna, 'tis a name highly honored in Ireland. The Widow Feeney it was who adopted Gar Files when some tinkers abandoned the lad, and him only three years old at the time. He wasn't bright and grew up to be called the Leenane Fool and his name was give to the recrutin' sargint and he would have been took away to fight for freedom, and when, as Gogarty asks, is a fight not for freedom? But the Widow Feeney tapped her forehead and the sargint nodded he understood. So they left Gar behind. But as he left the sargint winked at Gar, an' they met in the nixt village an' so Gar became a private in His Majesty's Army.

"Layther in the great rethreat, when the British sojers all fell exhausted asleep in the ditches, Gar woke up to find a giniral's beribboned tunic lyin' in the mud beside him. He was a fool but he was not such a fool as to not know he was cold. So he put on the beribboned tunic and 'wint to sleep agin.

Rip Van Gar of Eire

"The Germans took him prisoner and threeted him like a Prussian giniral, which is to say with respect for his rank, and the fact that he had been a village idjet wouldn't uv surprised them because in the first place they thought he was British and in the second place their own Fearer was an idjet too. So they kept Gar till the end uv the war and the British guv'ment granted him a giniral's pension, an' for all I know he may be enjoyin' his retirement right now with some russet cutie in the Bahamas."

"Did he ever send a shillin' to the Widow Feeney that befriended him?" asked Hennessy.

"I dinaw," said Mr. Dooley. "Gogerty never said. But I doubt it and besides Files never took the name of Feeney, remember."

"Too bad," said Hennessey, "that such a hero has to be lost to Irish histhory."

"You're right, Hinnissy, for he was as grrand a hero as Tiddy Rosenfeld, author of 'Alone In Cubia,' and at least the akel of the Inspictor Giniral or Barren Munchhausen or anny of those who have added lusthre to the lithrechoor of furriners. Some day O'Feanna or Ford, whichever you prefer, will prob'ly get aroun' to immortalizin' Gar in the cinema, for Sean has done manny Irish pitchers beside 'The Quiet Wan,' includin' 'Riley The Cop,' 'Mother Machree,' 'Hangman's House' and 'The Informer.' But he had to put some Englishmen like Victhry McLaglen and Wally Ford in that 'Informer' to make it the gr-reat success it was."

"Is Wally Ford English?" asked Hennessy.

"Well, he was borned there, Hinnissy"

"I know, but I remember hearin' Ella Logan sayin' that because she was borned in Scotland that didn't make her Scotch, annymore than Olivia de Haviland being borned in Hong-Kong made her a haythen Chinee."

"You're right for a change, Hinnissy, but I'm afraid the pricidint will be havin' all those Hollywood b'ys in the picthers claimin' they're as Irish as Maureen Fitz Simons, who now goes be the name of O'Hara, though hivvins on'y knows where half of thim was borned. I'm referrin' to such janial wits as the Jimmys McHugh, Cagney and Gleason, and not forgettin' J. Pathrick McEvoy who uses the initials J. P. because that's what Morgan used. McEvoy is the writher Ben Hecht says is the on'y wan who wasn't a financial idjet.

"Thin there's Pat O'Brien from the Irish methropolis of Milwaukee an' Frank McHugh, Joe Breen, Bill Harrigan, Leo McCarey, Tim McCoy, Pat McGeehan, George O'Brien, Paul Kelly and Dennis Day, whose name was McNulty, and odd ones with such unsaintly names as Spencer Tracy, Guthrie McClintic, Barton MacLane, Kenneth MacGowan, or is it Mac Kenna? Joel McCrea, Mack Sennett, Burr McIntosh, Patterson (not Pathrick, mind ye) McNutt, and wan called Bing Crosby, whose real name was Harry, if it wasn't Henry, and if they were thinkin' of the Ayteth in his line they weren't thinkin' of anny Irish saint.

"It's sad, Hinnissy, to see how manny of thim have gone to their reward, but whether they were too rich to enther the kingdom iv hivven, or too poor to get out of purgathory, won't be known till we jine them. I'm thinkin' particularly of Jim Tully, Pat Casey, John Hammel, Ernie Hare, J. Farrell MacDonald, Douglas MacLean, Ray McCarey, George McCall, Cliff McBride, George McManus, John McCormack, Winnie Sheehan, Frank McGlynn, Jim McGuinness, William Slavens McNutt and Hughie Mack, and him so big St. Peether will have to widen the gates to get him in."

GEORGE POLI

George Poli, 53, advertising manager of "Hippodrome" and "Dancing Waters," died March 13 in New Haven after a short illness. He was the nephew of S. Z. Poli, founder of the Poli Circuit which operates theatres in Connecticut.

Poli at one time was a talent buyer for the Keith-Albee circuit. He was also associated with the Frank Wirth circus office for a time. He became advertising manager of "Skating Vanities" about 10 years ago and remained with that office for several years, except for one season when he was with "Ice Capades." "Skating Vanities" later became "Hippodrome."

He is survived by his wife, Daphne Dee Poli, who is publicity manager of the two shows with which he was associated.

EDWARD C. H. ROWLAND

Edward C. H. Rowland, 72, writer of the original lyrics of the famed World War I song, "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," died March 12 in Surrey, England. Composer of the music was Lieut. Gitz Rice, a Canadian friend of Rowland's.

Although "Mademoiselle" later became a standard, the writers never realized any profits from the tune since they had failed to copyright it. Rowland retired as a film theatre manager six years ago, after a show biz career of a half century.

GEORGE J. PODEYN

George J. Podeyn, radio pioneer and manager of WHJB in Greensburg, Pa., since 1940, died March 8 in the Westmoreland Hospital. He began his career in broadcasting with WEAF in New York in 1923 and reputedly was the first man in radio hired to sell time. He became sales manager of WEAF in 1926.

A year later, NBC sent him to San Francisco as its Pacific Coast head. He built the organization and studios inaugurating the Pacific Coast network in April, 1927, and later went to Chicago as western manager for NBC. Later he joined the George Batten Co. to create a radio department for that agency. When Batten merged with Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Podeyn handled broadcasting arrangements for clients of the combined agency.

Ever since going with WHJB in 1940, Podeyn had been Westmoreland County radio chairman for the March of Dimes. He also was a lecturer on radio in the Summer Workshop at Seton Hill College.

Leaves his wife and two sons.

EDD JOHNSON

Edd Johnson, former CBS News editor, was killed in a plane crash March 8 when a Mexican airliner struck a wooded mountainside after leaving the Pacific coast resort of Puerto Vallarta. He was on vacation from the San Francisco Chronicle at the time of his death.

Before leaving CBS News to join the Office of War Information during World War II, Johnson was in charge of the network's shortwave listening post, where broadcasts from foreign countries were picked up and translated.

RICHARD STEADMAN

Richard Steadman, 67, longtime Kansas City, Mo., exhibitor, died there March 8. He formerly owned the Ashland Theatre, now operated by Commonwealth Amusement Corp.

Steadman began the Ashland in 1909 on Kansas City's far East side, with a tent as a building. By 1926 he and his wife had enlarged the operation to a 2,000-seat theatre of permanent design, but with partition walls with which it could be converted to an outdoor theatre in season.

Survived by a son and a grandson.

MIROSLAVA

Miroslava Stern, 25, Czechoslovakian actress known professionally as Miroslava, was found dead March 10 in Mexico City. Police said the star of many Spanish-speaking films and plays had killed herself with an unknown poison.

With her family, she had escaped from her native Czechoslovakia in 1940 and had lived in Mexico for the past 15 years where she became one of that country's leading actresses. She appeared in an American film, "The Brave Bulls."

Her father and brother survive.

JOHN PALEY

John Paley, 80, English trumpeter, died recently at Scarborough, Eng. He had played the instrument for over 60 years, retiring in 1948. At the age of 17 he toured America as cornet soloist in a military band of 100 musicians. He later taught and conducted bands in all parts of England, and had a long association with the Northern Philharmonic Orch. His last engagement was as a member of the orch at the Spa, Scarborough.

Survived by three sons, all cornet players.

EDWARD J. CARR

Edward J. ("Eddie") Carr, 72, onetime vaude performer who appeared in a turn known as Conlin, Steele & Carr, died March 4 in Buffalo. He was a brother-in-law of the late Michael Shea, vaude operator and circuit exec; and was brother of the late Henry Carr, manager of Shea's Court St. Theatre in Buffalo for years.

Surviving are a brother, John Carr, former manager of Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo.

JULES BERNSTEIN

Jules Bernstein, 70, manager of Loew's Yonge St. Theatre in Toronto for 35 years, died March 14 of a heart attack in Los Angeles. A resident of southern California for the past seven years, he was a founder of the Canadian Picture Pioneers.

His son, Arthur, a U. of California professor, survives. Body was shipped to New York for private interment.

HERB SOBOTTKA

Herb Sobottka, veteran theatre exec, was killed March 12 in an auto accident in Seattle. He was v.p. and city manager of John Hamrick Theatres in 1949.

In the course of his 35 years in show business, Sobottka was associated with Fox-West Coast in Portland as well as with the Evergreen and Hamrick loops in Seattle.

FREDERIC MERAN

Frederic Meran, 57, formerly executive producer of Cambridge-Meran Productions of Hollywood, died Feb. 17 while visiting near Milan, Italy. During the last 10 years, he financed and held residual interests in several motion picture and television properties.

There are no immediate survivors.

EVERETT R. JAMES

Everett Robert James, 71, father of Harry James and former bandmaster, died March 7 following a heart attacak at his son's ranch in Chatsworth, Cal. For some years the elder James led the band in the Haag & Christie Circus with Harry as one of its members.

His wife also survives.

VESS SPRINGGATE

Vess (Bud) Springgate, 58, sales manager of radio station KXOX, St. Louis, died March 12 of a heart attack. He began his radio career in 1934 as a salesman with KMOX. He became KMOX sales manager in 1944 and last year was named to the station's board of directors.

Survived by wife and son.

WALLY SHARPLES

Wally Sharples, 63, vet vaude performer, died March 6 in Boston. Born in England, he came to the U.S at the age of 13. He appeared in burlesque with Clark & McCullough and toured in vaude in an act known as Sharples & Maples.

His wife survives.

HARRY LEDORE

Harry Knight, 89, known professionally as Harry Ledore, oldtime comedian and clown, died in Liverpool, Eng., Feb. 26.

He had been in show biz for over 80 years, and was among the first to introduce living marionettes to Britain.

MARK SALOMON

Mark Salomon, 89, building contractor who built some of Chicago's earliest motion picture theatres as well as the White City Amusement Park, died March 11 in Chicago.

Surviving are a daughter and two sons.

Friars' 'Audition' Dinner for M&L

make good at or they'll start to worry about our sponsors."

Phil Silver, as the prior of the Friars, gave Berle a rather erudite intro, in the best Chauncey Depew manner, and then was brought back for a comedy routine. Robert Merrill sang the National Anthem and then was brought back for the convincer that he's really a Met barytone star, as if the hep $35 and $50-a-head out-fronts already didn't know—or maybe were skeptical that Merrill's authoritative chirping of "The Star-Spangled Banner" was being done through an agent.

Lots of Wham Routines

And so it went. Paradoxically, the later the hour the more effective the podium funsters, such as Jack Carter and Jan Murray, virtually in the next-to-closing spots. This was after Sammy Davis Jr., Benny Fields & Blossom Seeley, Steve Allen, Joey Adams foiled by Al Kelly and vice versa, Sam Levenson, Robert Q. Lewis, Bobby Clark, Eddie Fisher, Marilyn Monroe, Red Buttons, Buddy Hackett and Henry Youngman, did virtually entire routines. Not to mention the intros of the brass; addresses by Gov. Harriman and Mayor Wagner, Par's Barney Balaban, Paul Cohen of the Muscular Dystrophy charities in which Martin & Lewis have distinguished themselves.

There were also brief addresses by Harry Delf, dean of the Friars, and Irving Gray, Berle's personal rep and chairman of the dinner. Par director Norman Taurog, who specializes in the M&L pix, Joseph Ross, board chairman of the M&L Pictures Corp., Folsom, Weaver, Sarnoff, DeSapio, Weitman and John W. Rumsey, only surviving founder of the Friars, contented themselves with bows.

By 1 a. m. not even Martin & Lewis, even if they were headstrong enough to try it, could have topped or whammed. Their stuff didn't exactly fetch polite nods, but neither did it lay 'em in the aisles; because, by their manner and mien, they too telegraphed their personal fatigue. What they did was OK and understandable to all. Some even wished they'd stood in bed considering the seat-athon.

When everybody was much younger than when the shindig ended quite a few nifties were unspooled. Berle was in fine style alternatingly calling M&L Leopold & Loeb or by some obscure small-time vaude team's billing. "If a bomb should hit this joint Pinky Lee would be a great star" was good for another once-around, considering the timing.

With Teeth

Introducing Mayor Wagner, Berle observed that "our new mayor already saved the city $1,000,000—he cashed in Impelliterri's plane tickets." Bobby Clark likened Martin & Lewis to the television version of Wheeler & Woolsey, "excepting they have all their teeth" (an inside laugh). After Seeley & Fields' extended stint, Berle labeled them "the Tex & Jinx of the French Revolution." Huddling with Marilyn Monroe for a bit, he ad libbed, "Heck, Jane Russell is a boy!" The Met singer's robustness fetched Berle's crack that he's known as "Whispering Robert Merrill."

Jack Carter's Ed Sullivan takeoff (at Berle's insistence) was a standout and a natural for this mob. Youngman observed the Berle manse "has a Persian rug made out of real Persians. We also had a green salad at dinner—shredded 50's." Youngman also thought he'd start a little sideline so "I founded a drive-in synagogue." Murray's crack about the Jerry Levitch (Lewis) & Deno Crosetti (Martin) relationship segued into "it's the only time when the Eyetralian feller got the nose bob."

Berle explained Gen. Sarnoff couldn't be here because he had a date at the White House—" in Robert Montgomery's office; he's hiding Ike's golf clubs because he doesn't want him to do a guest-shot on the Sullivan show." For Silvers' second dais personal, good both times, Berle spoke of the begoggled comic's new tv pilot—"I understand it's a situation panel show." Murray's topper was "it's funny to see so many comedians out of the hospital."

Youngman's material also dwelt on Marilyn Monroe; she refused to kiss so he turned in his calendar; "a movie fan in the Bronx always faints when he sees a Marilyn Monroe picture, and keeps hollering 'seltzer,' 'seltzer.' Ushers could understand the fainting but why holler 'seltzer.' 'I get thirsty also when I faint,' he explained."

The honored guests' Paramount and NBC (Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co.' "Comedy Hour") business ties gave the dinner a strong Hollywood-Radio City accent, with a shade more on the tv end. Even the MCA table (agency handles M&L) was a shade secondary to the William Morris agency's brass out front. Such is the protocol at these dinners.

WRCA Hike

kenshire Show, Richard Willis, "Jinx's Diary"; "Sky's the Limit," now $750 on a 5-for-4 basis (buy four and get five) is converted to a straight $750 each and the $1,750 time and talent package for a quarter-hour is scrapped. "11th Hour Theatre," weekend filmer, goes to $325 from $200. Spots on web's "Tonight" rise to $525. Herb Sheldon's Saturday stanza is upped to $325 from $200 and "Hopalong Cassidy" rises from $575 to $650.

Under the new shuffle, participating sponsors would be eligible to include these and other given shows under the station's 14/50 discount plan only if they paid the higher rate on those programs indicated for a September increase. With dropping of the "Today" package and the 5-for-4 plan, the o&o will concentrate on three basic wrapups embracing its three major "prize" commodities—the Personality Prize package for live personalities, the Celluloid Prize package for film shows and the 14/50 plan for station breaks alone or all three in combo. What results, according to sales chief Jay Heitin, is a "dimension formerly missing in our sales structure," because rather than having the discount structure penalize the advertiser unless he concentrates on one category or the other, "he is encouraged to buy both participations and station breaks in combination."

U. S. Steps Up Cultural Front War; $2,250,000 'Seed' Coin Aids Show Biz

By ARTHUR BRONSON

This year, for the first time in American history, the world is seeing a bigscale drive by the U. S. to best the Russians—not in guns, science or sports—but in culture.

It's apparently the first time that the Government has recognized the need for battling the Reds on the highbrow front for what's left of the free world, by making the latter aware of U. S. cultural (as against economic or scientific) progress.

Worried by Russian participation in various fairs, by Soviet ballet invasions of Italy and France, by folk song and dance group visits to Central Europe, and by symphonic and solo artist tours of Japan and elsewhere, Congress last summer appropriated $5,000,000 for American counter-action. Half of this is earmarked for financing U. S. representation in foreign trade fairs. The rest, or about $2,250,000, is going into the educational and entertainment fields, to show the world that we have an active, artistic life that matches the Russians.

This year, we're sending out cultural ambassadors everywhere, by the wholesale, to Iceland, South America, Europe, the Near and Far Easts. Three major symphony orchestras, two major ballet companies, legit troupes, individual artists—all are carrying the torch. The big push, with major takeoffs, starts next month.

The Government is by no means subsidizing these artists or carrying the full freight. What it's doing

Miami B'ch Clubs Fold After Dismal Season; '55-'56 Looks No Better

By LARY SOLLOWAY

Miami Beach, March 22.

Two of the Big Three among the straight night clubs shuttered this week — the Lati Quarter per schedule; the Copa City suddenly —with the Beachcomber carrying on the competition with hotel-cafes, using Betty Hutton as the lure.

In the case of Copa City, Murray Weinger decided to shutter when Nat (King) Cole left for a tv engagement, two days before closing date, with Weinger's consent. Difficulty in obtaining a new show to open this week hastened the decision to give up, at least temporarily.

It is no secret that this has been the most dismal season yet for the cabarets in this area. Even triple-name lineups failed to draw them in. It was a rare booking that clickoed big enough to bring in patronage that meant full houses for first shows; second show business just wasn't there. Only the

'Investigator' From Radio to Wax to Legit

"The Investigator," which mushroomed from a radio show on the Canadian Broadcasting Co. into a bestselling longplay disk, will now be expanded into a Broadway legit show. Rights to the opus have been obtained by George Brandt, who is now on the Coast dickering with Norman Corwin for the stage adaptation. Brandt is aiming for production in the early fall.

"The Investigator" is one of the freaks in the amusement business. Written by Reuben Shipp for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., the disk was produced in the U. S. by Radio Rarities Inc.

$6,000,000 TV Coin Bagged For 'Mickey Mouse'

ABC-TV pulled the lid off its sponsorship lineup on Walt Disney's upcoming "Mickey Mouse Club" daytimer on the eve of sponsor-network-producer meetings on the Coast this week to reveal the show is already half sold, with 10 of the weekly 20 quarter-hours in the bag. Bankrollers are General Mills, in for six quarter-hours via Knox Reeves; Campbell Soup, in for two, via Leo Burnett; Bristol-Myers, for one through Doherty, Clifford, Steers & Shenfield; and Armour, via Henri, Hurst & McDonald, for another one.

Sum total of the business already in the house is about $6,000,000 a year, and reportedly the web is buzzing with other deals in various stages of development. Mean-

WHOLE CIRCUS FAMILY IN RINGLING ONE-ACT

Sarasota, Fla., March 22.

Three generations of the Ringling circus clan will be represented in a one-act play skedded for a preem run at the Palm Tree Playhouse here next Tuesday (29) through April 3. Trio are all descendants of Charles Ringling, one of the five brothers who founded the Ringling Bros. Circus. Play, "Pearls and Sawdust," was written by Hester Ringling Sanford, Ringling's daughter and Playhouse treasurer.

CHEAPEST ITEM IN TV--MONEY

By GEORGE ROSEN

There is increasing apprehension within the industry over the "reverting back to form" on the part of the television networks in committing themselves to the type of longrange contracts being pacted, as witness the recent wave of "coin no object" pacts in which CBS practically resolved lifetime annuities for Jackie Gleason and Ed Sullivan and NBC spread out the five-year carpet for Max Liebman, Ralph Edwards, and a 10-year document for Jack Webb. On top of that NBC is now in process of finallzing a 15-year pact with Martha Raye.

It's strictly a throwback to the days when Milton Berle was cushioned with a 20-year security; when NBC, still groping for a "tv blueprint for the future," was ladling out $100,000 to a Billy Rose for a study which never saw the light of day, and subsequently negotiating a nine-script deal (at $25,000 per play) to Robert E. Sherwood only to wind up in a mutual agreement to call the whole thing off after a brace of plays. Today both NBC and CBS find themselves involved in a variety of contractual obligations which they now regret having made in the first place.

For a while, when there seemed to be an awareness of reckless spending, the webs gave every indication that they had learned their lesson and were determined to mend their economic fences. But

Marx Bros. May Reunite for Vegas

The Marx Bros. may be reunited for a Las Vegas nitery stand at the Riviera, which preems April 20 with Liberace. Jack Goldman, operator of the spot, is currently dickering for the teaming of Groucho, whose sole activities are now on radio and tele, Chico and Harpo, who have been working as singles and in tandem, on various dates. Goldman is also dickering for Jeff Chandler, and has signed Edith Piaf, Mickey Rooney and Kitty Kallen. Chico and Harpo have been inked for four weeks late in August and Groucho may join them for two frames.

Goldman, who is shelling out $50,000 for Liberace on the preem show, has been accustomed to paying terrific prices for talent. He has been a consistent user of top names in the operation of the Clover Club, Miami Beach, and learned the hard facts of talent buying back in the roadhouse days when he bought such names as Van & Schenck and Bea Palmer for the Castilian Royal, Pelham, N.Y., and the Castilian Gardens, Long Island.

Jukebox Operators' Nat'l Conv. Aims To K.O. Proposed Copyright Changes

Chicago, March 22.

When the jukebox industry assembles here next Monday (28) for the Music Operators of America convention, the top point on the agenda will be the U. S. Senate bill to withdraw the jukebox exemption from the 1909 Copyright Act. The juke ops are solidly lined up against the bill, introduced by Sen. Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) with the support of 10 other senators.

The juke ops' first line of battle is aimed at defeating the amendment before it gets to the President's desk for a signature. If, however, the bill manages to go through, the juke ops will likely conduct a last-ditch fight against payment of any licensing fees to the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers and Broadcast Music Inc. Although ASCAP execs have repeatedly asserted that they have no intention of imposing unreasonable fees on the jukes, the latter fear the licensing bite may amount to some $10,000,000 annually.

One method of combatting payment of license fees would be the setting up of a licensing society controlled by the jukebox industry. This has already been proposed in various forms but the juke ops are in favor of waiting until the Copyright Act is amended, if and when, before going into the performing rights business. It involves an undertaking that would parallel the setting up of BMI

'No Revolution, Tint TV Will Be Gradual': Folsom

Noting the gradual sales development of color television sets, RCA prexy Frank M. Folsom is now of the opinion that spectrum tv's grip on the American consumer will be "one of evolution, not revolution."

The continuing bullish sales of black-and-white tv sets support the evolution premise. There'll be no revolution because of the color; that is coming along in the general merchandising pattern in about the same ratio that the two-set homes came into being. So, too, will that "extra" set eventually be the color job.

Quick Payoff Trip by 'Bus'; Three Weeks

It's getting so a legit show almost doesn't have to open anymore to recoup its capitalization. Rapid five-week Broadway payoffs earlier this season were slow compared to the record pace set by "Bus Stop." The Robert Whitehead-Roger L. Stevens production, which opened last March 2 at the Music Box, N. Y., moved into the black during its third week at the theatre.

Major factor in the situation was the sale of the film rights to 20th-Fox for $250,000. Picture deal called for a $75,000 down payment. On the basis of the regular 60-40 split between author William Inge and the production, latter got about

NEGRO D.J. RAPS SPREAD OF 'FILTH' VIA R&B DISKS

Rapping the disk industry for failing to take the responsibility in cracking down on some indie labels which have been peddling "filth" in the Negro market, N. Amsterdam News, said, "we couldn't help but flip when the Bible of show business (VARIETY) came up with a perfectly correct and much-needed editorial decrying the uninhibited waxing and exploiting of filth, passing under the guise of hep lyrics." He said that he, Jack Walker, Hal Jackson and some other Negro disk jocks have been making the same point for the last three years.

Bostic contends that the major companies have awakened to the Mobile Station Quotes 'Variety' on Leer-ics, Will Not Broadcast 'Em

Mobile, Ala., March 22.

Taking its cue from the recent VARIETY editorials on the rhythm & blues "leer-ic" problem, station WABB and WABB-FM in this city has announced that it will bar all off-color or double-entendre disks from its airlane. WABB has recorded an editorial statement on its position which will be aired before each major show. The outlet also ran a major ad in the Mobile Press Register Sunday (20), restating its stance versus smutty songs.

The ad states: "To VARIETY's warning to the music industry, WABB and some other broadcasters around the country are adding their protest. But a trend, once established, is difficult to stop in such a highly competitive business.

WABB points out in the ad that since "radio is the prime mover for the sale of records," it follows that "if the offensive tune is not heard originally on the air, there will be no call for it. If there is no call for it, music stores will not stock it, distributors will not push

From Averell Harriman to Cabbies, They All Knew Eddy Duchin

By WHITNEY WILLIAMS

Hollywood, March 22.

Everybody wants to get into the act in helping out in the preparation of Columbia's upcoming biopic of Eddy Duchin. Everybody knew him—if they didn't room with him, they were his most intimate friend, or he practically never made a move without 'em.

That's the tenor of the communications pouring in on George Sidney, borrowed by Columbia from Metro to direct "The Eddie Duchin Story." Since it first was disclosed several weeks ago that he would take on the assignment, he's been the recipient of more than 200 letters and telegrams, countless telephone calls and even folks dropping by his house at night with suggestions for the screenplay or info on the late orch leader.

Even so famed an artist as Jose Iturbi was a caller one evening, to relate his experiences with Duchin. In 1928, early in the Spanish pianist's sojourn in this country, he was approached one night at the Central Park Casino in N. Y., by Duchin, who asked if he would

Offergeld's 'Authorized' WW Biog; Future B'cast Status Still Unresolved

"The Private Papers of Walter Winchell" is the title supplied by the columnist to Robert Offergeld who is planning to do an "authorized" biography of the commentator. Winchell liked Offergeld's chore in one of the issues of the now defunct Flair when he was assigned to do a "communications" story.

Meantime Winchell's future tv-radio plans are shuttling among the four major networks, including Mutual. Columnist best tells the progress report in his past Monday's (21) column in the N. Y. Mirror, as follows:

"What the papers didn't print: That when we asked for 'out' at ABC we gave up a $1,000 per week life-time contract . . . For the time nobody wanted us on the air . . A $1,000 weekly—whether we worked as a news-room consultant —or not! . We never said we wouldn't 'ever again' speak over ABC mikes . . We wanted our contractual freedom . . . We told ABC we would get our own sponsors . . And that if they chose ABC, of course we'd go along . . . 'You have been with us so long (nearly 25 years) you forget the policy,' ABC replied. 'We do not buy commentators from sponsors, unless we can control them.'

"Thanks to the CBS, NBC and Mutual networks . . Newschief Burgh of the latter said: 'How about radio only? We have 565 stations, more than both major nets'. . . We hope to land on Sabbath eves as near to 9 as possible . . NBC: How about 8 p.m. Sunday nights? . . . The Colgate Comedy Hour asked pals (months ago) if we'd consider it . . We could use the first 15 minutes for news and then do The Old Soft Shoe, etc."

Brit. Pubs Ban U.S. Showtunes To GI's in Reich

Frankfurt, March 15.

The question of who controls the airwaves and to what extent is being bandied about by the West German and British press, with the British music publishers applying bans on music which is intended primarily for U. S. listeners in Europe.

The British publishers acquire the rights to songs from hit Broadway musicals and then restrict the sale of the records in England until the show arrives, feeling that if their radio listeners are bombarded with records from a New York show, when the musical arrives in London a year or so later, the audience is saturated with the music and no longer interested.

In an extension of these rights, the British publishers have listed their song rights with the State Dept. in Washington, which in turn furnishes American banned lists to the U. S. radio stations in Europe and even to the German stations, since both are often monitored by

Fotogs Dinner Scores: Ike Again Stooges For Liberace; Lena Horne Wows

By HERMAN LOWE

Washington, March 22.

If vaudeville ever comes back, it will be because of shows like the one unveiled for President Eisenhower and 700 guests Saturday night (19) at the annual dinner of the White House News Photographers' Assn. Bill, put together by Stan Richardson and the Hollywood Coordinating Committee, was by far the best of the three offered at the big newsmen dinners this year; it must rate with the best.

There wasn't a weak spot in the show from the moment Joe E. Brown came on as emcee and proceeded to call, in order, the Amon Bros., Howard Keel, Connie Russell, Liberace, Lena Horne, and Ray Bolger. The acts seemed to be playing "can you top that?"

Prexy Eisenhower and the other head table brass—Supreme Court Justices, members of the Cabinet, top congressional figures, motion picture industry leaders such as Eric Johnston and Spyros Skouras, newsreel toppers, and officials of the broadcast networks—obviously loved it.

Brown struck a new note in em-

When 'Variety' Was 50 Years Younger

This is the Golden Jubilee of VARIETY, founded in 1905 by Sime Silverman. It's a far cry from those early days when the vested vaudeville tycoons, who didn't like Sime's candor, punned that it was "slime's sheet" to Mayor Jimmy Walker, at a later epoch, seriously proposing to rename the north end of Times Square as "Sime's Square."

The first Dec. 16, 1905 issue of VARIETY was a saddle-stitched tabloid that sold for a nickel. With the years it went by easy stages to a dime, 15, 20 and 25c and at one time back to 15c on the publisher's hoped-for theory that the smaller showfolk would thus be enabled to own their copy instead of passing it around in the dressingrooms and elsewhere.

The key editorial asked "Is honesty the best policy?" and answered "VARIETY will give the answer in its first Anniversary Number."

The first edition's fancy cover, with Grecian pillars flanking the front page, was adorned by four likelinesses. One was Sime, one was Epes Winthrop Sargent, an eminent vaudeville critic of his day, who left VARIETY but eventually came back to it making his Chic sig a longtime value in the paper. Two other faces are now unknowns. "Acton Davies On Vaudeville" was the cover feature story —Davies was a distinguished writer on the theatre at the turn of the century.

VARIETY was first published in the now defunct Knickerbocker Theatre Bldg. (38th St. and Broadway) at $2 per annum; $3 foreign.

Tod Sloan, a champ jockey of his day, was taking a vaudeville flyer at Hammerstein's Victoria (where the Rialto Theatre now stands at 42d St. & 7th Ave.), and fate allotted him position in the paper's makeup as the first New Act review. Chicot (or Chic, as he was later known) reviewed him. Sime's first New Act review was Fred Hallen & Molly Fuller doing a sketch by Herbert Hall Winslow at Hyde & Behman's. Sime also reviewed in that issue The Military Octette, owned by Jesse Lasky (the same) and B. A. Rolfe (later the Lucky Strike radio bandmaster), but at that time partnered in producing vaudeville acts.

The leadoff stringer's position went to George Leslie Hutchinson, recording the Philadelphia show biz scene, and it is noteworthy that O. M. (Monte) Samuel was the New Orleans stringer, a post he held consecutively until his death 40 years later. He was the longest consecutive out-of-town correpondent for the paper, a distinction to which Sidney Burton Pfeiffer (Buffalo), dating from 1919, recently laid claim as the natural successor.

The first 16-page edition had 2½ pages of advertising about equally divided between music publishers and vaudeville agents.

In the fifth edition Sime was proud to announce that VARIETY "was not being distributed by the American News Co. Artists desiring copies may order through any dealer."

Me as King Farouk?—Tut, Tut!

Ratoff Warns That Any Inference of His Egyptian 'Abdullah' Being You-Know-Who Risks Litigation

Anyone drawing a direct parallel between Egypt's former King Farouk and the principal character in "Abdullah the Great" will have to do so at his own risk, says Gregory Ratoff who directed the film in Egypt and also stars in it.

Ratoff, who arrived in N. Y. last week and brought a print of the Technicolor pic with him, admitted that the notion was widespread that there was more than a passing resemblance between the "Abdullah" in the film and King Farouk. But the resemblance is misleading, he claims.

"Our man is some 20 years older than Farouk and he's not married. Also, we make it very clear that he resigned in 1937 (Farouk quit in 1952) and that he's 75 years old when the film starts," Ratoff commented. A French paper was sued by Farouk when it ran a layout from the pic.

"Abdullah" was shot in its entirety on Egyptian locations, principally in one of Farouk's former palaces in Cairo, Ratoff reported. It was financed by a wealthy Egyptian, Rodi Regelia, living in Italy and cost around $1,200,000. "That man (Regelia) has seen only two Parents Dump Problems?

Detroit, March 22.

Parent - Teacher groups, alarmed at petting parties by 11 and 12-year-olds at film matinees, have been told by theatre managers that they are unable to cope with the problem and that parents are to blame.

Managers charged parents with giving children "too much freedom and too much spending money" and using theatres as a means of getting rid of their youngsters.

School Superintendent Arthur Dondineau said he didn't believe the problem was too serious and that it "can be controlled by the theatres."

PTA is trying to work out a "youth code" to curb the practices in cooperation with the children, parents and teachers.

San Francisco Very Coy On CBS' 'Donation' For Police Aiding 'Line-Up'

San Francisco, March 22.

Considerable off-camera entertainment was afforded locally when Charles Raudebaugh of the San Francisco Chronicle attempted to run down the facts behind the "cooperation" of the local police department with the CBS-produced television melodramas, "The Line-Up". How much money, specifically was CBS "donating" to the cops' benevolent arm, the Widows & Orphans Assn.?

Issue developed when the Police Commission decided that CBS was not paying enough. But everybody got very coy about what actually was ponied up, or what was asked. Everybody passed the buck, including Mayor Elmer Robinson who sent word that "he had no time to reply to questions."

Apparently producer Jaime Del Valle of CBS pays $100 per episode to the Widows & Orphans. Apparently he had been asked to up this to $500, and had declined. Neither the gendarmes nor the network cared for any spotlighting "The Line-Up" is described as CBS'—and San Francisco's—answer to NBC's "Dragnet" which has the cooperation of the Los Angeles police.

Which Show Gets The 'Tony' Is No Big Secret

It says in a publicity communique that names of winners of the Antoinette Perry Awards in legit are kept secret until the actual hour of presentation. The American Theatre Wing's "Tonys" will be handed out Sunday (27) at the Hotel Plaza in N.Y. How does one keep a secret when radio-tv displays are involved that day? An excerpt from the winning play i scheduled as a N.Y. cut-in to open NBC-TV's "Entertainment '55" spectacular (7:30 to 9) in dedication of the web's color studio in Burbank. It will also ride on radio (NBC but not N.Y.) at 11:30 p.m. The tv end (first homescreening on the "Tonys") also involves sponsors in addition to a multiplicity of other behind-scenes personnel.

NBC would appear to be a coincidental winner on the selection of the best play since the inside on this is that "The Desperate Hours" will grab the marbles. "Hours" was staged by Robert Montgomery of the NBC-"Montgomery Presents" camp.

FILM SOCIETIES BOOM, NOW 258

United Artists Welcomes Brainpower Of Eastern Reps for Producers; Schwalberg Deemed Sales Asset

United Artists has the welcome mat out for eastern business reps of indie producers despite the fact that UA is providing the financing for the filmmakers. The eastern reps have the authority to approve exhibition contracts and otherwise handle business affairs for the producers.

In a sense, this costs UA some coin, for the eastern reps usually are cut in on a percentage of the gross rentals before the film company and the producers take their split.

UA spokesman said that indie producers are free to hire eastern reps without restriction, or, alternatively can elect to get along without such representation. Hecht-Lancaster Productions, for example, doesn't want a N. Y. rep, preferring to deal directly with the distrib's own homeoffice personnel.

UA acquiesces to producer rep setups, it's said, because these mean added exec talent that can aid in the selling of a pic. Notable newcomer to the ranks is A. W. Schwalberg, who's to bow out shortly as Paramount's domestic distribution chief. Schwalberg is a vet exec in sales and, as rep for Paul Gregory and other producers aligned with UA, his services will be an important asset to the company, said the UA source.

In an association set this week, Del Handel and I. H. Prinzmetal have become producer's reps for "Kiss Me Deadly," produced by the Parklane unit for UA release.

Graduation Day For Tyros at U

Universal, which spends $1,000,000 a year to "build" new talent, is also using it extensively in its pix.

Rundown of pix of U now shooting or editing shows the company casting one or two of the newcomers on its contract list in practically every one of its films. Idea is both to give the players the measure of required experience and to intro their faces to the public.

A number of theps who started out from the U talent school have by now attained star status. They include Rock Hudson, Tony Curtis, Jeff Chandler and Rory Calhoun, to mention a few.

It's the theory of U execs that, if there exists a star shortage in the industry, it can be cured only via determined and long-range planning. That includes the selection of likely marquee personalities, their training and the casting of fledgling performers alongside more experienced ones. In addition, U is sending out its new people in droves for p.a. stands in the field. This is figured to help the exhibs and also get the new names established in the press, on tv and with the public generally.

Among the up-and-coming names on the U lot, names which show up again and again in forthcoming U pix, are Colleen Miller, Pat Crowley, Myrna Hansen, David Janssen, Mamie Van Doren, Keith Andes, Paul Gilbert, John McIntire, Julie Adams, Piper Laurie, Barbara Rush, Rex Reason, Gregg Palmer, etc.

Mature to Produce

Hollywood, March 22.

Victor Mature is the latest Hollywood star to join the throng of actors who are risking ulcers to become indie producer under the banner of United Artists.

Arthur B. Krim, UA chief, revealed that Mature has closed a deal to produce six features in the next five years and to star in at least three of them.

Another Miracle Camera?

Hollywood, March 22.

New and revolutionary camera, capable of motion picture filming and live telecasting at the same time, has been developed here by Al Simon, production supervisor for Burns and Allen's McCadden Productions, in cooperation with RCA.

According to Simon, his video-film camera will transmit a live image via television while simultaneously recording the image on 35m motion picture film, both picked up by the same lens.

Future TV Rights Big Legal Issue To New Partners

A new wrinkle in eventual ownership of completed pictures is developing as a result of the increasing number of participation deals being signed by the major studios. New contracts being signed by the film companies and their actor, producer, or director partners has studio lawyers working overtime in getting down the subsidiary points, especially the relation to future sales to television.

In some cases, where a studio is particularly anxious for the services of a partner or a package, the tv rights may revert to the outsider. In other instances, where the studio provides the major portion of the coin, the film remains the property of the film company. In a third case, the video rights, when eventually sold, may be split according to a stipulated percentage.

All in all, it's a lot different from the days when a studio signed an actor, writer, or director, paid each a fee for services, and held an unbreakable grip on the completed property.

THEY'RE SCREEN'S CEREBRAL FANS

Reflecting a rising public interest in the screen medium both artistically and historically, the number of film societies in the U. S. is moving up steadily.

Following a pattern long in existence abroad, and particularly in such countries as Britain, Canada, France, etc., the societies have multiplied, particularly in the past two years, until there are today an estimated 258 such groups in existence in this country.

Flourishing in the main at the universities but centering occasionally also on museums, libraries, etc., these societies today have a membership of approximately 100,000 and the audience attending their 16m showings of U. S. and foreign films, documentaries, etc., is said to reach as high as 160,000.

Come April 7 and 8, the Film Society Caucus will convene within the framework of the American Film Assembly at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, N. Y., to huddle on the possibilities of federation along the lines of the societies' counterparts in Britain and Canada.

The Assembly is the second such affair under the sponsorship of the nontheatrical Film Council of America. One of its features is the 16m Golden Reel Festival which launches April 4.

A recent survey based on questionnaire responses from various groups and societies indicated that 36% of them were interested in a national federation of film societies. Another 33% indicated they'd probably be interested and 23% said they weren't sure.

Changing Documentaries

Film societies are now springing up all over the country and many of them arrange local festivals combining showing of both documentary and feature pix. It's noted that, while the volume of docu-

Loos-Sale Team Spotlight 'Indie' Dominance of Overseas Producing; Paris Itself Star in 'Brunettes'

Hollywood, March 22.

"Independent film-makers, many of them financed by major studios and distributing through the major releasing organizations, have taken over foreign film production," report the producing-directing-writing team of Mary Loos and Richard Sale, just returned from England and France where they filmed "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes," a United Artists-financed release.

"When World War II finished," said Sale, "the major studios all jumped into Europe, using frozen funds and money that could not be converted in any way other than through production. For five or six years this condition existed with not many films being made and, honestly, many of them of poor quality.

New York Distrib Circles to Watch 'Marty' for Omens

Pre-opening talk within the trade on Hecht-Lancaster's "Marty" rivals in volume the speculation attendant to many a high budget entry. "Marty" is in large sense unique as a first production fashioned directly from a television one-shot show, and brought in at a negative cost in the neighborhood of $300,000, with little name values — Ernest Borgnine is the star.

The film is regarded as important because it is well done (see VARIETY' review, this issue). An inept production would have meant simply a second-class entry from which no conclusions might be drawn. Having been well turned out, "Marty" is being looked upon

Hollywood's system of previewing pix is wrong and harmful to both the films and the studios that make 'em, according to vet film director Norman Taurog.

On an Eastern visit this week, Taurog said in N. Y. Monday (21) that the "blind" previewing of new attractions was a mistake in that it brought the wrong type of audience into the preview house.

"What's more logical than indicating to the potential preview patron what type of picture he's going to see?", Taurog asked. "Just take the Martin & Lewis pictures.

Trade Tapers Off; 'Girl' Champ Second Time in Row, 'Battle' 2d, 'Untamed,' 'Line,' 'Horse' Next

Film grosses are lagging this session, with Lent, income tax problems and a tightening of money belts variously blamed. Some run-of-mill fare also is taking the rap in some localities. Mostly it's a problem of short supply of top-flight product.

"Country Girl" (Par) is champ again for second week running, making the third time it has finished first this month. "Battle Cry" (WB) again is second, the same as last week. Both pix are now mainly on extended-runs, indicating the stamina of each.

"Untamed" (20) is capturing third position, the first week out in release to any extent. "Long Gray Line" (Col), third a week ago, is taking fourth spot.

"Chief Crazy Horse" (U), another newcomer, is landing fifth money, with torrid to big showings in most key cities covered by VARIETY. "Hit Deck" (M-G) is winding up sixth as compared with fourth last session.

"Cinerama" (Indie) is placing seventh while "Conquest of Space" (Par), out for first time this stanza, is finishing eighth. "Racers" (20th) is ninth. "Bridges at Toko-ri" (Par) rounds out the Big 10 although it has completed nearly all principal playdates.

"Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G), "Gate of Hell" (Indie) and "Underwater!" (RKO) are the runner-up films.

"Man Without a Star" (U) shapes as real boxoffice contender predicated on results this week. It is the ace new pic in Pitt, with a sturdy stanza; mighty in Philly and bright in Washington. "East of Eden" looms as another great grosser for WB. It is sock in Detroit, wow in Frisco, terrific in N.Y. and stout in L.A. "Blackboard Jungle" (M-G), which is giving the N.Y. State its biggest opening week in many months, looks to be heard from plenty in the future.

Republic appears to have latched onto a winner in "Doctor in House." It is big in Chicago, socko in Frisco, good in Denver and smash in N.Y. "Long John Silver" (DCA) is rated so-so in Philly.

"Holiday For Henrietta" (Arde), another newie for the arty houses, is starting out as smash in Chi as it has been on extended-run in N.Y. "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) is disappointing this round, ranging mostly from dull to fair. It is rated neat in K.C., however. "N.Y. Confidential" (WB) is in much same category, with not a good session in the lot.

"Big Combo" (AA) looms good in Minneapolis. "Leagues Under Sea" (BV) shapes stout in L.A.

"Capt. Lightfoot" (U), good in Louisville, is fair in Denver. "White Feather" (20th) is fancy in Providence and Denver.

'Oklahoma' in Todd-AO Probably Hitting Broadway in Late July

Opening of "Oklahoma" at the Rivoli Theatre, N. Y., may be set back to late in July. Feature, first release in the Todd-AO wide-screen process, was to have preemed at the Broadway house in May.

Tentative decision to postpone the opening is said to be due to a variety of reasons. Lease on the house, which is owned by L. B. Mayer, is up within another year and George Skouras of Skouras Theatres Corp. and Magna Theatre Corp. (the "Oklahoma" distributing outfit) is reluctant to risk the considerable investment in Todd-AO equipment and installation without the certainty of his status as a tenant. This difficulty has now been resolved, with United Artists Theatres mulling a new long-term lease agreed to by Mayer.

The Rivoli is closed at the moment, ostensibly for alterations. House has shuttered before due to a lack of product. Extensive structural changes are required for the theatre to be able to show "Oklahoma."

Another reason for delaying the "Oklahoma" opening till the fall is the time element for subsequent preems of the Todd-AO feature in other cities. It's figured that, if N. Y. opens in May, other preems will have to string out into the summer. Magna execs feel that July or August would be a better kickoff point in that respect.

Whether the need to reshoot some of the "Oklahoma" sequences had anything to do with the delay isn't known. However, it's said that the retakes were merely routine. It's expected that the Todd-AO version of the Rodgers & Hammerstein musical will open in 40 to 50 cities. Subsequently, the CinemaScope and/or the "stepped down" version of the tuner will go into distribution, probably via Metro. Another delaying factor is the lag in the sound recording of "Oklahoma" which was held up.

If Hollywood's Exposition Clicks, Pay Deductions For Charity Will Cease

Hollywood, March 22.

Edmond L. DePatie, president of the forthcoming Motion Picture Exposition, told studio workers that the successful operation of the new venture is expected to do away with future payroll deductions for the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

Meetings are being held in a campaign to raise $1,000,000 to get the expo started through the sale of 5% debentures in $100 units offered to film workers. Exhibit will be staged at the old Warner Bunset studios.

Nat James Stands Again For Publicists' President

Hollywood, March 22.

Nat James will be a candidate for re-election as president of the Publicists Guild in the annual election to be held on May 26. Other nominees are Don Boutyette, Mort Lickter and Jerry Juroe, veepee; Barbara Best and Betty Mitchell, secretary; and Julian Myers and Clary Barbiaux, treasurer.

Guild inducted 12 new members: Paul Brandon, Gene Brooks, Stafford Clark, Bernard Bynes, Vance King, Laddie Marshack, Stuart Miller, Ray Parker, Paul Price, Ernest Solman, Jay Thompson and Wayne Thoms.

Folke Peterson on Own

Milwaukee, March 22.

Former Warner Theatres and Fox - Wisconsin Amusement Co. showman, Folke R. Peterson, resigns his post as Mayor Zeidler's secretary April 16, and opens a local public relations firm.

Peterson's concern will carry tag of Folke Peterson & Associates. He functioned as Mayor Zeidler's secretary for seven years. In addition Peterson served as secretary of the Civic Progress Commission, and P. R. director for three recent March of Dimes fund raising campaigns.

WHO'S GARBO?

Metro Questionnaire Uncovers Fleeting Fame in Detroit

Detroit, March 22.

Majority of local teenagers queried responded to a M-G-M questionnaire with: "Who's Garbo?"

Questionnaires were circulated in Detroit and suburban schools. One teacher noted: "The younger generation does not seem to be acquainted with Garbo." Another said: "I learned from experience that my gray hair is not without meaning. Very few had heard of her. Most didn't even know who she was."

Another teacher aroused some interest by referring to Garbo as "the Marilyn Monroe of your parents' time."

One school outside Detroit, which had cooperated with Metro's earlier survey before "Gone With the Wind" was re-released, refused to go along with the Garbo queries on the ground the questionnaire was not "of any value educationally."

Re-release of the Garbo-starrer, "Camille" began a run last Friday (18) at the Krim, 1,000-seat nabe artie.

U's Quarter Tops Yr. Ago; Earnings Equivalent To $1.08 (Previous: 70c)

Universal last week reported a substantial increase in profits for the first quarter ended Jan. 29, 1955. Net for the 13 weeks was $1,136,928 after Federal taxes of $1,015,000.

This compared to a net of $772,979 for the comparable period in 1953-54 after $800,000 in Federal taxes.

After dividends on the preferred stock, the first 1955 quarter represented earnings equivalent to $1.08 per share on the 998,349 shares of common outstanding as of Jan. 29, 1955. Comparable per share earnings in 1954 were 70c.

At the annual stockholders meet, U prexy Milton R. Rackmil predicted the good first quarter showing, but said that the second quarter's business volume would likely show a drop.

Horse Outclasses Mule To Win Animal Award

Hollywood, March 22.

This year's PATSY Award, meaning Picture Animal Top Star of the Year, went to Gypsy, a horse, for its work in Metro's "Gypsy Colt." More than 2,000 throughout the country voted in the poll conducted by the American Humane Association.

Second place went to Francis the Mule, for "Francis Joins the Wacs," and third place to Esmeralda the Seal, for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Minor awards were presented to Flash, a horse; Shep, a dog; Satan, a tiger, and Outlaw and Beauty, stallions. Permanent award plaque went to Sam, a dog, last year's PATSY winner.

IT'S CORNELL BORCHERS

German Star Joining Universal On Coast—Previously 'Borgers'

Universal last week got the word from its new contractee, Cornell Borchers, on how she wants her name spelled.

German star, who reached the Coast over the weekend, said she preferred the Borchers monicker in the U.S. and Britain as well as in her native Germany.

In France, however, and wherever her latest film "Oasis," is booked in the French version, she wants it to read Borgers. There's been some confusion on both her first and last names.

20th-Fox, which made "Oasis," tagged her Cornel Borchers. Universal made it Cornell Borgers. Some predict she may change her name altogether if she clicks in Hollywood.

French 'Sins of Pompeii' To Get Turner Treatment Via Near-Saturation

General Teleradio, which entered the theatrical film production-distribution field with "Gang Busters," has acquired a French-dubbed-into-English film for distribution. Working through its subsidiary, Visual Drama Inc., GI will give the picture, "Sins of Pompeii," the same handling it accorded "Gang Busters."

Under the direction of Terry Turner, picture will be given saturation distribution starting in July. It will be backed by a radio-tv campaign to cover the distribution area, with states rights distribs acting as the local selling agents. Joe Levine's Embassy Pictures, which launched "Gang Busters" in the New England territory, will get first crack at "Pompeii."

Since only 50 prints of "Pompeii" are available, the film will receive a modified saturation distribution as compared to "Gang Busters." Following "Gang Busters" and "Pompeii," GT plans to either produce or acquire the distribution rights to other pictures suitable for the radio-tv type of selling devised by Turner. Latter left for the Coast over the weekend to set up the campaign for the opening of "Gang Busters" there.

Aldrich's Crawford Film To Columbia, Not DCA

Hollywood, March 22.

Robert Aldrich will produce "The Way We Are," starring Joan Crawford, under the William Goetz Productions banner for Columbia release, eliminating a proposed deal with Dist. Corp of America.

Other features on the Goetz program for Columbia are "The Brothers Rico," "The Babylonians" and "Captain Calico," starring Clark Gable.

Hail to Julius Gordon

Testimonial dinner for Julius Gordon, head of Texas Consolidated Theatres, is set for Saturday (26) at the Beaumont Hotel, Beaumont, Tex.

Citizens Committee of Texas is sponsoring the salute, with participants to include Gov. Alan Shivers and much Lone Star State civic and community brass. Film execs from N. Y. and L. A. along with screen personalities also are slated to sit in.

Du Pont to Field-Test Cronar

Thinner Than Regular Safety Film — But Splicing Remains a Possible Drawback

Du Pont company has pushed development of its new safety film base, Cronar, to the point where it's ready to field test the material to establish its wearing qualities.

The Cronar base, which comes from Britain, is not only thinner than regular safety film, allowing more feet per reel, but has greater tear-resistance quality and will burn only very slowly and without heat.

Whereas it's possible to break or tear safety film, it's impossible to do this with the new Cronar base which duPont will manufacture at a new plant at Parlin, N. J. It's expected that, when Cronar goes on the market in quantity, it'll be competitive with the safety film currently offered by duPont's competition.

One of the difficulties with Cronar is that it requires a new splicing technique and it can't be spliced easily to other safety stocks. DuPont has developed a splicing method involving a transparent material resembling scotch tape. It covers an entire frame.

DuPont has also made progress on its new color film positive which is said to give better results on widescreen projection. Paramount is considering using it on its "Strategic Air Command," a VistaVision picture.

New York Sound Track

Shapely Silvana Pampanini, star of "Mlle Gobette," is currently advertised in a very brief chemise displaying much white thigh above the black silk stockings. Showbiz and sophisticates were amused last week to contrast the copy accepted by the N. Y. Post and the same pose as published in the staid N. Y. Times with the bare flesh covered up, an artist having re-designed the chemise.

Ludwig Polsterer, an Austrian producer, says the Russians producing films in Vienna have become so adept in editing out their propaganda content, that some have been fooled into thinking that these were actually Austrian pix. Actually, the Soviets are playing a clever double game. To insure their investment, they turn out several versions of each pic, one for the western countries and the rest for "home consumption" in the satellites.

Eugene W. Castle, the former home-film entrepreneur whose book, "Billions, Blunders and Baloney," hit No. 17 on the N.Y. Herald-Tribune bestseller list, will address the Economic Club of Detroit April 11 and Press-Union League Club of San Francisco April 16. Proceeds go to the Variety Club Foundation to Combat Epilepsy . . . Harry Brandt chairmaning today's (Wed.) AMPA luncheon at the Hotel Piccadilly devoted to Metro's Ticket Selling Workshop . . . As indicated in VARIETY last week, the juvenile delinquency film cycle has started. In addition to Metro's "The Blackboard Jungle" and Filmakers' "Mad at the World," Warner Bros.' is readying "Rebel Without a Cause." . . . Exhibitors are doing a burn at Zenith prexy Eugene F. McDonald's statement that "the only thing they (meaning theatremen) create is pop-corn. They change it from yellow kernels to white." . . . Dartmouth Glee Club, which is featured in "Cinerama Holiday," to attend a matinee performance at the Warner Theatre Sunday (27) before appearing on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of Town" tv show . . . Nina Foch (Mrs. Jimmy Lipton) back in Gotham after completing her role in Warners' "Illegal."

Trade paper reporters, plus Alice Hughes, of King Features, and Charles Houseman, of the N. Y. Journal-American to Albany Monday afternoon (21) to cover the two-day visit of Kirk Douglas on behalf of his "Man Without a Star" and attend a Variety Club dinner dance given that night. Charles Simonelli, Phil Gerard and Milt Livingston, of the Universal exploitation staff came along joining Maurice (Bucky) Harris in the capital city.

Goffredo Lombaro Jr., Italian Producers Assn. prexy and head of Titanus Films, and Alberto Lattuada, noted Italian director, were guests of honor Monday (21) at the opening program of the Museum of Modern Art's "50 Years of Italian Cinema" series. They were introed by Richard Griffith, curator.

Foreign correspondents covering the Hollywood beat are continuing their beef that they're often serviced with only dated news and brushed by the Johnston Office. So relates Nora Laing in London's World's Press News . . . Leon Brandt to handle promotion and supervise distribution of "Rebellion of the Hanged," produced in Mexico by Jose Kohn . . . Lester Dember switched from Buchanan & Co. to ad copy chief at Columbia.

Bob O'Donnell will be in Gotham April 2 to present Doris Day with the "Golden Script" citation. O'Donnell's Interstate Theatres, Dallas, intends to make the award an annual one in recognition of screen performances and boxoffice drawing power . . . Dick Powell and Jerry Wald working together (on the remake of "It Happened One Night") for the first time since 1932. In that year Wald scripted and Powell starred in "20,000,000 Sweethearts" . . . N. Y. University hosting a cocktail reception April 11 for alumnus Stanley Kramer.

'IF FCC OK'S TOLL, WE'RE BEAT'

Next M&L Starrer to Be VV Western; Need for More Family Films Seen

What this country—and the film biz—need right now is a new child star in the tradition of Shirley Temple and Margaret O'Brien, says director Norman Taurog.

Vet filmmaker, was in N.Y. this week to finalize production plans for the first pic via his own indie unit, Tauream Productions. It'll be a family film, he stressed, and it's expected to roll in early 1956 after he gets the George Gobel pic and another Martin & Lewis starrer under his belt.

Taurog made his remark anent the need for a child star in commenting on the desirability of more film entertainment for the entire family. He admits that there is a good deal of that type of pic being turned out, but feels there isn't enough universal family appeal in the overall programming. As for the grooming of a new juve star, "the time is just ripe for it," Taurog said. "These things come in cycles." He mentioned Tommy Rettig of the Lassie series as a kid with considerable appeal.

The next Martin & Lewis pic probably will be a western, the first time the comics have ventured into that field, Taurog revealed. He added that the boys, Paul Jones, the producer, and he himself were in agreement that this would be a good subject for the duo since it would tend to exploit the widescreen VistaVision potential to the fullest. The last M & L pic, still unreleased, which he directed was "You're Never Too Young" and it was made under the banner of York Productions, the comedians' own unit.

The new title of the Gobel film, which rolls in the early part of July, will be "So There You Are," an expression closely identified with Gobel from his tv shows. Film will be made for Paramount release by Gomalco Pictures, in

Resentful Generation

Des Moines, March 22.

A Des Moines theatre usher was charged with attempted arson after admitting he started two fires in the theatre this week. He signed a statement that he had tossed lighted cigarettes into piles of papers on two different days but fire department action brought both fires under control promptly without damage. In both fires the usher helped the firemen to put out the fires.

The boy, who had claimed to be 18, was arraigned in municipal court but the charge was referred to juvenile court when it was found he was only 15. The boy said he started the fires because he resented being reprimanded for not doing his work properly.

SDG Beefs to Metro As Pan, Stoll Plug 'Director' Billings

Hollywood, March 22.

Screen Directors Guild has protested to Metro over use of certain individuals' ads in the studio's "Hit the Deck" section in last week's tradepapers, claiming the ads violated the studio's agreement with SDG concerning use of the word "director." Guild specifically objected to George Stoll's use of the credit, "musical director," and Hermes Pan's "musical numbers conceived, directed by" choreographer credit.

Under terms of the Guild's basic agreement with major studios no one is entitled to use of the designation "director" except film directors themselves. Excepted are those with existing contracts, including art directors and cameramen. Music Directors Assn. of America for long has been pressing for "director" recognition. A friendly test case, in behalf of this org, is now pending, having been filed by Ray Heindorf, head of Warners' music dept.

'OMNIBUS' TO GINGERLY TREAD HOME-TOLL ISSUE

"Omnibus" tv show on CBS March 27 will carry a short "feature" piece on subscription television, making carefully sure to stay clear of the controversial issues involved.

This is the first time, as far as is known, that the subject of toll-tv has been introed on a commercial tv show. "Omnibus" is produced under grant-in-aid from the Ford Foundation and is given to the exploration of unusual topics and program subjects.

Show will be concerned primarily with the technical end of pay-as-you-see and the possible impact it may have on the entertainment world. There'll be no specific mention of any of the fee-tv companies.

If FDR Biopic Okayed, Terms Are Called Private By President's Widow

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt had some execs in the picture business puzzled this week with her comments on whether there's to be, or not to be, a film based on the life of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt insisted there was no "deal" for such a Ciopic. But she also indicated that an "agreement" of some sort had been entered with unnamed parties.

Her comments re reports of an FDR film were made in a question and answer page which she conducts in McCall's. Mrs. Roosevelt's "a" to a reader's "q" was this:

"I am not surprised that you have only found fragmentary reports because no 'deal' has been made. I doubt very much that I will ever give you all the details, since I don't think it is anybody's business except the members of the family and those who made the agreement with us.

"It would be impossible for me to give you any information now, because I have only said I would be willing to consider a proposition should it be made. The choice as to who will play the parts will be in the hands of people more accustomed to casting than I am."

METRO'S AIR ACADEMY IDEA IN DISCUSSION

Hollywood, March 22.

Metro is negotiating with the U.S. Air Force on the possibility of producing a high budget picture based on the new Air Academy in Colorado Springs, Col. Allen Rivkin is currently doing research work on the story.

Air Force Academy, ranking with West Point and Annapolis, is due to open in June.

THAT'S EXHIB IDEA BUT FIGHT LAGS

Exhibitor leaders, full of hard-hitting anti-coinbox tv plans, are somewhat taken aback by the lack of support their campaign is getting from networks, advertising agencies and (they thought) interested parties.

While some groups have rallied to the exhib cause, others who, the theatremen feel, might be most closely concerned with the advent of toll-tv, are hanging back. At the same time, there is every indication that the exhibition rank-and-file also isn't getting overly worked up about the pay-as-you-see issue. This despite some almost frantic pleas on the part of leaders of the Committee Against Pay-as-you-See TV.

Explanation offered is that, for a great many theatres, the issue of toll-tv is a distant one. What's more puzzling to the fee-tv foes is the lack of support they're been getting from the major circuits in N. Y., such as Loew's and RKO.

Solo Role Bad

It's felt in quarters close to the planing of the anti-subscription tv strategy that the lack of outside support so far is unfortunate for one specific reason. It's realized that, with the theatres carrying the ball before the Federal Communications Commission, the latter might be inclined to eye their testimony with a degree of suspicion as to selfish motives.

On the other hand, with a large movement, exhibition would represent just one of many opposing views. It had therefore been hoped to integrate and subordinate the exhibitors' voice into a much wider protest. To date, this hasn't been possible.

Exhibs also would dearly like for the distributors to take a stand on

Rental Units To Enlarge Network For May 16 Bout

Theatre Network Television, hoping to bolster size of its closed-circuit telecast of the Marciano-Cockell heavyweight bout from San Francisco, May 16, is offering theatres the use of portable units. The rental charge varies from $100 to $500 depending on the size of the projection equipment.

TNT has a total of 50 units available for rental, including 20 regular large-screen theatre outfits made by General Precision. These, it's expected, will go to drive-ins which have proved potent draws for the championship bouts. The remainder of the units, the so-called "intermediate sizes," are those which TNT's Telesessions subsidiary has used in hotels for business meetings. The smaller units may make it possible for many nabe theatres to book the fight.

Starr Slams Zenith's Publicity Vows; Warns Home-Toll Hurts All Who Cater

Walter Mitty Stuff

San Antonio, March 22.

Bill Leslie, former usher at the Majestic Theatre here returned this week, but not as an usher. He returned to sign autographs as one of the stars of the motion pic "The Long Gray Line."

Leslie will return to Hollywood following appearances here, Forth Worth, Dallas and Houston to appear in "The Queen Bee" with Joan Crawford, another San Antonian.

Columbia has given him title role in "The Valiant Virginian" this summer which is expected to make the ex-usher a star.

Boston, March 22.

The seriousness of the threat of home-toll television to the motion picture exhibitor and industry in general was stressed by Alfred Starr, co-chairman of the National Committee against Pay-As-You-Go TV, at a meeting of exhibs, managers and theatre owners at the Hotel Bradford last week. Attended by about 350, it was the first of a series of similar meetings skedded by the organization throughout the country.

Although Starr mentioned the three forms of subscription-tv patents under consideration by the FCC (Skiatron, Telemeter, Phonevision) he focussed his blasts on Phonevision, controlled by Zenith, claiming, "the company has the facilities to hire economists, legal talent and expert public relations counsels to easily sway the unsuspecting public into buying the extra gadgets necessary for Phonevision." He declared that "Zenith is flooding the country with propaganda promising all sorts of attractive programs, only available on toll-tv" but pointed out that "some of the promises are ludicrous." Starr also expressed surprise that the large advertising agencies and tv networks are not fighting the proposed innovation with vigor.

His main pitch was the urgent need for (the industry) speedily financing rebuttals by engineering, economic and legal experts before the May 5 deadline set by FCC. "After that," Starr continued," will come the time for intensive and extensive public relations work with the emphasis on the extra cost to the average family for buying the unscrambling device (estimated at between $75 and $100) and the continuing cost of servicing."

Starr also pointed out that home-toll would have a decidedly bad effect on the receipts of transportation companies, downtown restaurants, etc., with the family of the future becoming "stay-at-homes."

Maurice Goldstein Sure Companies Will Replenish Kid Library Very Soon

The companies have no intention of letting the Motion Picture Assn. of America's Children's Film Library die and the matter will be taken up at the next meet of the sales managers committee within three or four weeks.

In stating this in N.Y. this week (21), Maurice Goldstein of Allied Artists, current chairman of the sales toppers' group, said the matter would definitely be on the agenda of the next powwow.

He added he was confident that, in response to exhib pleas, the companies would replenish the library's print supply and add new titles. "I think this whole thing has been exaggerated," Goldstein remarked. He noted, however, that a problem did exist.

Story in last week's issue of VARIETY outlined the dearth of prints of library-recommended children's pix in the branches and pointed out that, unless some action was taken, the whole setup may have to fold. A whole long list of children's "classics" is no longer available, including such pix as "Huckleberry Finn," "The Biscuit Eaters," etc. In many cases the prints have either worn out or, since they were nitrate, have been taken out of circulation and never replaced with acetate copies.

CAST 'PHENIX CITY' FROM VIDEO IN N.Y.

Hollywood, March 22.

Producers Sam Bischoff and Dave Diamond plane to New York tomorrow (Wed.) to cast their Allied Artists venture, "Phenix City," from the pool of eastern stage and tv players.

Casting of the film's principals by signing new faces is being done for realism, according to the duo, who'll be accompanied by director Phil Karlson on the junket. Additional casting will be done in the Alabama city.

Chicago Local Sues, Says 'Waterfront' (NJ) Libels Longshoreman's Repute

Chicago, March 22.

American Federation of Labor's Chicago Local 374 of the International Bhotherhood of Longshoremen filed a $750,000 damage suit against Columbia Pictures in U. S. District Court here last week.

The longshoremen's union claims Columbia's "On The Waterfront" has damaged its reputation by depicting a hood-dominated New York dockworker's local with the same number. An injunction against further showing of the film is also sought in the court action.

SAM SPIEGEL SECURES SETTLEMENT OF SUITS

Separate suits brought in N. Y. Supreme Court by Republic Pictures and Beverly Hills attorney Bernard Reich against Sam Spiegel and Horizon American Enterprises were settled and discontinued last week according to Horizon attorneys Margulies & Heit. Settlements, of which terms were undisclosed, were also confirmed by Republic's legalite, Meyer Lavenstein.

Filed last May, Rep's action charged Spiegel and Horizon failed to repay a $24,000 loan. In the following month Reich lodged a complaint claiming the same defendants owed him $24,000 for services rendered. Among chores he performed, Reich asserted, was repping Spiegel in a divorce suit.

Almost simultaneous with the settlement disclosures, Justice Matthew Levy denied motions by Rep and Reich to prevent the sheriff from returning certain attached monies to United Artists which he held in connection with an action brought by Horizon against UA. Discontinuance of the

Color: Now 58.4% of U. S. Films

For the first time in the history of the industry, films in color have become more numerous than black-and-white entries. The trend for years has been toward more tinters, of course, and particularly accented since filmmakers in 1948 got underway in earnest with efforts to further distinguish their pix from the non-hued images on television.

A checkup made by the Motion Picture Assn. of America showed that of all Hollywood features and the major imports submitted to the Production Code Administration over the past year, the films in color amounted to 58.4% of the total. In 1953, as in all preceding years, the black-and-whiters were in the majority.

Major factor behind the big jump in color output last year was the widened use of CinemaScope. All films in this 20th-Fox-fostered process were tinted.

Film men believe the dyeworks treatment of pix will continue on the incline in the future but they add there'll always be some lensing in B&W. Cost factors must be considered, it's said. Also, a certain number of producers feel that a "poverty row" scene or the like looks more realistic in B&W.

Following table shows the climb made by multi-toned pictures:

	Percentage In Color	Percentage In B&W
1948	16.8	83.2
1949	18.0	82.0
1950	18.5	81.5
1951	23.8	76.2
1952	39.8	60.2
1953	42.7	57.3
1954	58.4	41.6

Hollywood has at times been accused of sloughing off truly spiritual values. The critics now have their answer in 20th-Fox's "A Man Called Peter," the life story of the late Peter Marshall, Protestant Minister and chaplain of the U.S. Senate.

If there is such a thing as "living religion" on the screen, moulding a message of faith, love and decency into the framework of good entertainment, producer Samuel G. Engel, director Henry Koster and scripter Eleanore Griffin have caught the essence of it in this film.

What's more, they've resisted what must have been a considerable temptation to sugarcoat this intensly personal story. Instead, they have presented it for the most part as just what it is—the portrayal of a man of God who, all his life, stood squarely on his beliefs and who, in his sermons, preached a new, vibrant, hopeful religion that had immense appeal to young and old.

"A Man Called Peter", in CinemaScope and excellent Color by De Luxe, is certainly an unusual entry and while it will reap the benefits of such a tag, it may also suffer from it unless sold carefully. Film manages to carry a message without becoming topheavy from it. It also allows itself the privilege of sacrificing some visual effects for those of the spoken word, with penetrating effect.

Again and again, the camera picks up Richard Todd as Peter Marshall mounting the pulpit to deliver the sermons for which he was famous and which drew overflow crowds Sunday after Sunday to the New York Ave. Presbyterian Church in Washington. These sermons are things of beauty and Koster and Engel deserves kudos for allowing them to run on for several minutes at a time. One thing is guaranteed—they pack such a punch and m / e so much common sense, few will be bored by them.

Todd does such a masterful job of preaching the sermons, the camera staying on him most of the time, they're almost the best thing in the picture. Marshall's religion was one all men could understand and such, too, is the message of the picture. The two sermons—one when he takes over stewardship of the Washington church and the other at Annapolis, when he talks of the meaning of death—are not only beautiful but greatly moving.

"Peter," based on Catherine Marshall's book of the same title, derives a good deal of its strength from the performance of Todd who lives the part to perfection. His Peter Marshall, an immigrant from Scotland, is a man of towering strength and great devotion to his ministry. He is completely believable even though it's unfortunate that Miss Griffin didn't choose to transplant from the book more of the small human touches which bring it humor.

There will be some who will quarrel over the casting of Jean Peters as Mrs. Marshall but on the whole she does a nice job as the devoted wife who copes with her own tragedy (tuberculosis) and later her husband's heart attack and death by deriving her strength from her belief in God. There are scenes in which she doesn't ring true, but that's in part the script's fault. At any rate, Miss Peters is easy on the eye. (She barely ages in the film.)

The minor roles have been well cast. Marjorie Rambeau as a crusty remnant of the Washington "aristocracy" who opposes Todd and his "upbeat" approach to religion, turns in a priceless bit. So does Gladys Hurlbut as a scatterbrain society dame with her heart in the right place. Les Tremayne is mild and effective as the Senator who derives from Todd's sermons the courage to oppose his political machine at home. Gloria Gordon is cute as a teenager. Jill Esmond as Todd's mother sketches a sympathetic portrayal.

Making the most of the wide screen, "Peter" features some outstanding lensing by Harold Lipstein, including radiant shots of Washington landmarks and a very beautiful one of the Lincoln memorial at night. But it isn't all preaching and scenery. Miss Griffin has worked into the script a number of incidents that variously touch the heart and uplift the soul.

There is much charm, warmth and sensitivity in Todd's and Miss Peters' courtship; in their carefree honeymoon; their introduction to Washington and Todd's deliberate flouting of the traditional in his belief that religion must have a meaning primarily for the present and the future. Inevitably, some of the scenes are highly theatrical and there is a tendency to put into words—for cinematic purposes—the most private feelings and emotions an individual can have those relating to himself and his God.

Koster's direction is unaffected and keeps the need for entertainment values in quite sharp focus. Miss Griffin's script is expert for the most part. Editing by Robert Simpson is fine except for the last reel when Todd addresses the Senate. That sequence is curiously chopped up.

Exhibs should handle "Peter" with care. It's the perfect Easter release and should attract great numbers of people who don't ordinarily see films. At the same time, even though Protestant church organizations will undoubtedly get behind it, the pic may lack "want-to-see" appeal for some who prefer their religious pix done up in more flamboyant style. To them it should be pointed out that "Peter" has a great deal of "heart", its comparative simplicity being a part of its virtues. In any case, it's a film to which 20th and the industry can point with considerable pride both at home and abroad. Hift.

Marty

Sock film version of a Paddy Chayefsky teleplay. Proper selling should make it a b.o. click.

United Artists release of Hecht-Lancaster production. Produced by Harold Hecht. Stars Ernest Borgnine and Betsy Blair. Directed by Delbert Mann. Screenplay by Paddy Chayefsky, from an original teleplay by Chayefsky; camera, Joseph LaShelle; editor, Alan Crosland Jr.; music, Roy Webb; song, "Hey, Marty," by Harry Warren. Previewed in N.Y. March 16, '55. Running time, 93 MINS.

Marty ..... Ernest Borgnine
Clara ..... Betsy Blair
Mrs. Pilletti ..... Esther Minciotti
Catherine ..... Augusta Ciolli
Angie ..... Joe Mantell
Virginia ..... Karen Steele
Thomas ..... Jerry Paris
Ralph ..... Frank Sutton
The Kid ..... Walter Kelley
Joe ..... Robin Morse

If "Marty" is an example of the type of material that can be gleaned, then studio story editors better spend more time at home looking at television. Based on Paddy Chayefsky's one-shot Television Playhouse (NBC-TV) teleplay, and screenplayed by the author, "Marty" has been fashioned into a sock picture. It's a warm, human, sometimes sentimental and an enjoyable experience.

"Marty" will further point up importance of the video showcase. Several Broadway plays have derived from that source. Warner Bros. had a b.o. click in the film version of Jack Webb's tv "Dragnet" and a number of film producers are currently readying film treatments of other video entries, both series and one-shots.

"Marty" is offbeat in theme and lack of big Hollywood names will require selling both by the distributor and the theatre. But it should rack up runs in specialized houses in big cities. Word-of-mouth will bring 'em in general situations, if exhibitors give the picture the ride it deserves.

Like "On the Waterfront," it demonstrates that story, performance, and direction always count. Neither color nor new projection and sound techniques could make "Marty" any better than it is now. Although filmed on a modest budget (reportedly about $300,000), there is no evidence of any stinting in the production values, a factor the industry will note.

Despite the picture's north Bronx locale and concern with an Italian-American family, the theme is universal and many viewers may experience a degree of identification. It's a quiet, simple story. While lacking in general excitement, it's sparked with sufficient comedy.

Basically, it's the story of a boy and girl, both of whom consider themselves misfits in that they are unable to attract members of the opposite sex. The boy, sensitively played by Ernest Borgnine, is a friendly, mild-mannered guy in his thirties who feels he hasn't the handsomeness or the necessary savoire faire to impress girls. He is constantly needled by his mother, with whom he lives, and the customers at the butcher store where he works, to get married.

The girl, beautifully played by Betsy Blair, is a plain schoolteacher whom everybody is always trying to fix up with dates. Pair come together at a boy-meets-girl dance where Miss Blair is ditched by her blind date. A blossoming romance brings both out of their shells as each is able to pour out pent-up emotions to the other.

Borgnine, remembered as the sadistic sergeant in "From Here to Eternity" and the brutal heavy in "Bad Day at Black Rock," does a complete switch in his portrayal of Marty and comes through with a performance that will be recalled next time thespian awards are distributed. Miss Blair is equally impressive in her finely etched delineation of the sensitive schoolteacher.

In the selection of Esther Minciotti, as Marty's mother who first urges his marriage and then opposes it for fear of being left alone, and Augusta Ciolli as his aunt who is the unwanted mother-in-law in her son's household, Hecht-Lancaster have come up with a pair of veteran Italo-American thesps who breathe realism into their roles. Joe Mantell, as the buddy who talks down Marty's girl to protect his own impending loneliness, contributes another gem to the topnotch dramatics. Frank Sutton, Walter Kelley, and Robin Morse are excellent as neighborhood pals who talk about conquests and likely prospects for dates. Jerry Paris and Karen Steele score as a bickering husband-and-wife faced with a mother-in-law problem.

Chayefsky has caught the full flavor of bachelor existence in a Bronx Italian neighborhood. The meetings at a bar and grill, the stag-attended dances, the discussions about girls and "what do we do tonight?" poser ring with authenticity. The film has sociological implications, but it's presented in an easy to take manner.

Delbert Mann, who directed the teleplay, dittoed on the film and deserves a large share of the credit for its overall excellence. All technical aspects are first-rate. Holl.

Gang Busters

Dull, repetitive cops 'n' robbers affair; strictly a dualler except where exploitation efforts push it into b.o.

Film Division of General Teleradio release (via states-rights distribution) of Visual Drama Inc. presentation in association with Terry Turner. Produced by William J. Faris and William J. Clothier. Directed by Bill Karn. Features Myron Healey, Don C. Harvey, Sam Edwards, Frank Gerstle. Screenplay, Phillips H. Lord (with revisions by Karn); camera, Clothier; editor, Paris; music, Richard Aurandt. Previewed in New York, March 1, '55. Running time, 78 MINS.

Truck Driver ..... William Fawcett
Pool Hall Operator ..... Ed Colbrook
Officer Rondeau ..... Charles Victor
Doctor ..... Bob Carson
Girl in Car ..... Joyce Jameson
Police Officer ..... Mike Ragan
1st Guard ..... Ed Hinton
2d Guard ..... Robert Bice

Boxoffice success of "Dragnet" apparently prompted General Teleradio, which had acquired all rights to the "Gang Busters" radio and television series, to try a picture version, its first entry in the field. Pic has had some striking successes in New England, where it's being distributed under a states-rights pattern, but it would appear it's strictly on the basis of the heavy television exploitation campaign being waged by Terry Turner (samples of the tv spots were heavy on the lurid violence aspect, thus probably accounting for some of that b.o. success). The film itself is a dull, repetitive affair that falls into the dualler category except in situations where Turner and Teleradio guarantee heavy video plugging. With the kind of tv exploitation demonstrated, the film's name and the plugs could draw fair to good returns.

Essentially, the William J. Faris-William Clothier production is a string of episodes wrapped around the repeated escapes of John Omar Pinson, at one time listed as Public Enemy No. 4. It's done in semi-documentary style with lots of location shooting in Oregon and concerns Pinson's final tracking-down by a pair of persistent detectives. Sum total of the drama is repetitiveness, and after the first escape it's kind of on the dull side. Script by Phillips H. Lord, originator of the radio series, is lifeless, despite the frequent scenes of violence, and director Bill Karn's revisions, for which he gets screen credit, apparently did little good.

Myron Healey is convincing as Pinson, an arrogant type of heavy with a brilliant mind and a fund of knowledge and tricks. Don C. Harvey, as the detective, is less so, apparently more concerned with being charming than a down-to-earth cop. Frank Gerstle is a bit more natural as Harvey's sidekick, Sam Edwards good as a fanatical follower of Pinson and Frank Richards effective as a co-escapee. Remainder of the cast is good. Clothier's camerawork has a realistic touch to it, but coproducer Faris' editing is spotty and somewhat jerky. Music, composed and conducted by Richard Aurandt, fits the dramatic moods.

Producer of the picture is listed as Visual Drama Inc. in association with Turner. Visual Drama is a subsid of General Teleradio, a wholly-owned subsid of General Tire & Rubber Co. which controls the Mutual Broadcasting System and owns a number of radio and television stations, apart from some tv-film activities. Turner works for Teleradio, his exact position never having been defined, the ex-RKO exploitation chief's in complete charge of "Gangbusters." Chan.

An Annapolis Story

Strong Allied Artists entry built around the Naval Academy and the war in Korea; excellent boxoffice prospects.

Hollywood, March 21.

Allied Artists release of Walter Mirisch production. Stars John Derek, Diana Lynn; costars Kevin McCarthy. Directed by Don Siegel. Screenplay, Dan Ullman, Geoffrey Homes; story, Ullman; camera (Technicolor), Sam Leavitt; editor, William Austin; score, Marlin Skiles; songs, Joseph W. Crosley, Marlin Skiles; technical advisor, Commander Marcus L. Lowe Jr., USN. Previewed March 17, '55. Running time, 81 MINS.

(Aspect ratio: 1.85-1)

A strong bid for important playing time is made by this Allied Artists entry. It's a Technicolor feature backdropped by the U. S. Naval Academy and the war in Korea and holds high exploitation potential. The production is expensive-looking and handsomely mounted, forcefully narrated and well enacted by a cast which has John Derek, Diana Lynn and Kevin McCarthy for marquee dressing. Hefty returns in all situations look likely.

The Walter Mirisch production was lensed partially at Annapolis and aboard an aircraft carrier to give authenticity and heightened interest in its story of midshipmen in training and later when they graduate into service. Don Siegel's direction blends colorful Annapolis parade and spectacle with the tale of two brothers seriously at outs over a girl, and subsequently melodramatizes their experiences as Naval airmen over Korea for exciting effect.

The script by Dan Ullman and Geoffrey Homes, from the former's original, is a straightforward piece of writing which effectively builds up the bitterness between the two brothers, Derek and McCarthy. Miss Lynn is the girl whom McCarthy loves but loses temporarily to Derek, the younger brother, when the latter is injured at the beginning of a summer Academy cruise and has an opportunity to escort her during his post-hospitalization. This bitterness extends through graduation and later to the Orient after both get their wings. Finale has Derek saving his brother after McCarthy is shot down into the ocean off Korea.

The three principals score in their respective roles, with the sympathy going to McCarthy for the theft of his girl. Derek is smoothly persuasive in a part which allows dramatic acting. Miss Lynn is charming. Top support is afforded by Alvy Moore, Pat Conway, L. Q. Jones and John Kirby, all servicemen. Expert photography by Sam Leavitt and a particularly atmospheric score by Marlin Skiles are added assets to the film's general overall excellence. Skiles' song, "The Engagement Waltz," is basis for a romantic production number, well staged, and Joseph W. Crosley's "Navy, Blue and Gold" also provides a striking musical sequence. Whit.

(V'VISION—COLOR)

James Cagney in good combo drama-western; medium returns overall.

Paramount release of William H. Pine-William C. Thomas production. Stars James Cagney, Viveca Lindfors, John Derek; features Jean Hersholt, Grant Withers. Directed by Nicholas Ray. Screenplay, Winston Miller; from a story by Harriet Frank Jr., and Irving Ravetch; camera (Technicolor), Daniel Fapp; editor, Howard Smith; score, Howard Jackson; song, Jackson and Jack Brooks. Previewed March 15, '55. Running time, 92 MINS.

Mayor Walsh ..... John Miljan
Harvey ..... Denver Pyle
Banker ..... Emerson Treacy
Doc Ridgeway ..... Gus Schilling
Andrews ..... Phil Chambers
Devers ..... Harold Kennedy
Miller ..... Joe Haworth

(Aspect ratio: 1.85-1)

Well-valued character and plot development stand in most of the time for straight giddyap action in "Run for Cover," making it more of an outdoor drama than a western. This in-between quality, while having appeal for those who are not formula-and-sixgun fans, may lessen its chances in the regular outdoor market, so overall grossing prospects appear medium at best. The appearance of James Cagney as the chief star and the use of VistaVision for the lensing are in its favor.

Production by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas for Paramount release is marked by generally smart casting and the use of fresh-appearing location sites in Colorado as the setting for the story by Harriet Frank Jr., and Irving Ravetch. Winston Miller's script provides Nicholas Ray's direction with a good basis for screen story-telling and the guidance brings out depth in the characters, plus hitting hard in the action moments.

Viveca Lindfors and John Derek co-star with Cagney and all are excellent in varied roles. Cagney takes easily to the outdoor saddle chores as a man turned wanderer after having served six years in prison on a mistaken identity rap. He performs with his usual authority, although his fans probably would have liked for him to have turned on more of the flamboyant toughness that has featured most of his past characterizations. It's still there to a degree, but quieter. Miss Lindfors does a warm, intelligent portrayal of a Swedish immigrant girl with whom the wanderer falls in love during a stay on the farm of her father, Jean Hersholt. Derek is very good as the young man in whom Cagney sees his dead son, but who has a basic weakness that prevents him from facing up to life honestly. Hersholt makes his scenes show up excellently.

This trio of leads is brought together when Cagney comes to a small western town and is mistaken, along with Derek, of being a train robber. They are nearly lynched and Derek is crippled. To make amends, the mob-minded townsters appoint Cagney sheriff with Derek as deputy. The basic flaws begin to show up in the youth. First, he permits a lynching while Cagney is away, then allows a prisoner to escape after making a deal to aid in a bank robbery. This comes out during Cagney's pursuit of the bandit gang with Derek at his side. The youth tries to kill Cagney twice and then dies himself at the finale as he is protecting the sheriff in a last-minute flash of honesty.

The cast toppers are given competent support by such players, among others, as Grant Withers, Jack Lambert, Ernest Borgnine, Irving Bacon, Trevor Bardette, Ray Teal and John Miljan. Daniel Fapp's Technicolor lensing demonstrates the ability of Vista-Vision's lazy-eight process to capture and make real outdoor vistas. Other technical credits are good, as is the score by Howard Jackson. Latter did a title tune, sung behind the credits, with Jack Brooks. Brog.

AUSTRIA: A GERMAN SATELLITE

Takes a European to Do This—

Italian producers aren't altogether happy over their government's pressure to force foreign importers to do a share of their color prints in Italo labs. In fact, the policy has begun to backfire.

Italians have been informed by several countries that, if they persist, these countries will put through a similar edict, forcing Italian exporters to do their color printing in foreign labs for local release.

Uneasy Peace In Italian Lab Case

Color print situation in Italy, while temporarily straightened out, has left a decidedly bitter taste with film companies execs in touch with their Rome offices. New York distribs say the U. S. industry hasn't heard the last yet on the problem.

Specifically, they get the decided impression that the Italians didn't retract without reservations when they lifted the import ban on U. S. tint pix. Also, there remains the question of imports of material for future releases over and above the films going to the theatres immediately.

In a communication to the companies dated March 11, Eitel Monaco of ANICA, the Italian industry org which works very closely with the government, informed the U. S. distribs that the ban on color pix imports was at an end. However, he noted that the government reserved the right to impose certain restrictions if and when it felt that the Americans had broken their contracts, i.e. hadn't lived up to the agreement to do a certain percentage of their tint work in Italy.

The Italians, fearing unemployment in their labs, want the Americans to do their color printing for local release in Italian labs. Status now is that the U. S. outfits have agreed, by March 31, to enter into negotiations with individual Italo processing plants.

Monaco's reference to restrictions conjures up the prospect of

GERMANS WANT OUT GATT'S TARIFF 3708

Frankfurt, March 22.

The Germans, long smarting under a section of the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs which forbids them to raise their domestic screen quota above 27%, are trying to withdraw from the section of the agreement relating to this limitation.

Arguing point is Tariff 3708 of the Torquay Agreement which supplements the GATT agreement. Annex two of this particular tariff states that the Germans cannot impose a quota greater than 27% for their own films. The remaining 73% of the German screens must remain open for the use of U. S. and other foreign pix.

On March 5, in the closing hour of the Geneva meet on GATT, the German government served notice of its intentions to withdraw from Annex two. The matter is now set for discussion between U.S. and German officials in early April. The trade here is rife with rumors that Germany has withdrawn, plans definite withdrawal and is holding out for better terms. Question remains whether the Germans can withdraw from Annex two without withdrawing from the entire agreement.

Trenton Drive-In Opening

Lawrence Drive-in Theatre, Walter Reade unit in the Trenton, N.J. area, reopens March 25 following a refurbishing job and installation of a screen measuring slightly over 100 feet in width.

New projection machines will have a 400-foot "throw." Ozoner ranks as one of the largest in the east.

Reade operates eight al fresco situations and 30 conventional houses in all.

7 Get Legion 'B'

List of pictures given the "Class B" rating—morally objectionable in part for all—by the National Legion of Decency continues to expand. Seven new films were placed in this classification by the Catholic reviewing group this week, for reasons of "suggestive" material, "low moral tone" and/or "excessive brutality."

Group comprises "Big House, U. S. A.," United Artists; "Cell 2455, Death Row," Columbia; "Hell's Island," Paramount; "Hit the Deck," Metro; "Love in the City" and "Too Young for Love," Italian Films Export, and "Untamed," 20th-Fox.

"Hit the Deck" is current at N. Y.'s Radio City Music Hall, this being one of the rare instances in which a "B" entry has played the house. However, the pic opened prior to promulgation of the Legion's ratings.

In another unusual situation, "Cinerama Holiday" has been given the Legion's clean bill of moral health via "Class A-1" rating but this is applicable only to prints shown in the U. S. Indication is that the domestic exhibition of the film will not include the total footage to be shown abroad.

Promise Belgium Print Decision

With the Italian color print problem resolved for the moment, Motion Picture Export Assn. has given assurances to the Belgian government that it will study the Belgian labs' request to do local color printing.

The U. S. distribs are to give their decision to the Belgians within four months. However, there is practically no possibility of MPEA acceding to the Belgian labs' bid that the Americans do 80% of their tint processing there.

Involved in the Belgian situation are not only the technical end but a number of economic questions. Only two or three prints of a pic are required for the Belgian market and per unit cost on that basis would come very high if these copies had to be made in local plants. In Italy, by comparison, a U. S. distrib may use as many as 30 prints on a picture.

EAU CLAIRE LEADER LED BACK TO FILMS

Minneapolis, March 22.

The one daily newspaper in nearby Eau Claire, Wis., the Leader, which for 15 years has nixed material publicizing pictures, has now opened its pages to film yarns and a listing of the current attractions at the three local theatres.

Credit for bringing about this policy change is attributed to Norman Levinson, new Metro exploiteer out of Minneapolis visiting Eau Claire for the first time.

Levinson's pitch to the newspaper executives, resulting in the switch, pointed out that (1) newspapers derived no revenue for radio-tv listings, (2) that video actually had caused a drop in the newspaper's advertising whereas theatres pay thousands annually for space, (3) that theatres bring people downtown, helping stores, restaurants, parking lots which, in turn, advertise in newspapers.

Levinson convinced the sheet that theatres are helpful to newspapers while radio and tv, competing media, could hurt newspapers financially.

THEMES MUST FIT REICH THEATRES

By FRED HIFT

Austrian film industry's bid for the international market is hampered by its almost complete dependence on German market returns, according to Ludwig Polsterer, indie Austrian producer and head of Cosmopole Film in Vienna.

In N. Y. to discuss distribution arrangements for two pix and for huddles with United Artists, whose product he handles in Austria, Polsterer said Austrian filmmakers couldn't get any kind of financial assistance from their government and were therefore dependent on distribution contracts and advances from the five major German releasing orgs.

"It's the German distributors who in effect determine the subject matter of our films," Polsterer said, adding that there were only one or two outfits, including his own, that could afford to be independent of the dictates imposed by the presumed taste of the German audiences.

Like Rank, In Flour

Polsterer, whose family owns flour mills in Austria (a curious parallel here with Britain's J. Arthur Rank, who also segued from flour mills into pix), is active in many fields. He recently took over the Wiener Kourier, formerly the U. S. occupation paper in Austria. With a circulation of some 150,000, it's the leading daily in the country.

Austria now produces between 15 and 20 films a year, costing an average of $100,000 to $150,000, with some going higher. Under a governmental arrangement designed to protect the German industry, the Austrians are allowed to import into Germany about 15 pix a year. The Germans, in turn, can bring into Austria 95 films annually.

The Austrian market being quite small, a film made in Vienna will

Yank Pix Slip At Swiss B.O.

Zurich, March 15

The first six months, ending last month, in the current season shows European product to be clearly on top in all five key cities (Zurich, Basle, Berne, Geneva and Lausanne). A check reveals that Yank pix copped a total of 583 weeks of playing time so far as against 891 for European screenfare. In Zurich, most important of the five cities, the difference is more than double with U. S. pix getting 150 weeks and others 310.

U.S. Returns Disappoint Italians; Trend to 2d Version in English

Main interest of the Italian producers now centers on arranging coproduction deals with major American companies which then take on the resultant films for worldwide distribution, according to Gianni Hecht, prez of Documento Film, Italo outfit making both documentaries and features.

Hecht, who's in N. Y. on his first U. S. visit, and is accompanied by his wife, the actress Tania Weber, said Monday (21) that his company next year hoped to make a number of films with American interests, starring Hollywood players and aimed at the world market via distribution by his U. S. partners. He noted that, with some exceptions, a coproduction could return $500,000 tops from the local Italian market.

Italian producers are not at all happy with their returns from the American market, Hecht maintained. He added that Italian producers "never consider the English speaking markets" in their production planning since they were acutely aware of the limited revenues. Hecht, who said he thought dubbing might be an effective answer, paid a compliment to Italian Films Export which, he observed, had done a very fine job in selling Italo pix in the U. S.

Hecht noted that on at least one of the Documento features, "Prohibito," starring Mel Ferrer, an

Kramer, Rocket Man

Stanley Kramer's sked: Arrived in N. Y. from the Coast Monday (21); for next few weeks will trek to Boston, Washington, Chicago and other east-of-the-Mississippi points plugging his latest, "Not As a Stranger"; to Europe April 27 for two-month swing of the various capitals, including Madrid for location scouting for next production, "Pride and Passion."

Continued: Back in N. Y. the end of June for the opening of "Stranger"; to the Coast for a month of "P and P" casting (he needs two male stars—an Englishman to represent "Pride" and a "Spaniard" for "Pashion"; back to Europe for seven to eight months, beginning August or September, for the "P and P" shooting.

Latter will wind up Kramer's two-picture deal with United Artists. He hasn't made any decisions yet on production and distribution tieups beyond that point.

Pathe Labs Into Diversification

Pathe Laboratories, division of Chesapeake Industries, is underway with a program of diversification in its lab setup, states Kenneth M. Young, head of the unit. The "big step" already has been made via application to Eastman Kodak for license to process and print Eastman-manufactured films sold to the public, including motion pictures and stills.

Pathe has one lab each in N.Y. and the Coast and handles developing and printing motion pictures from 3D to CinemaScope for theatrical producers and telepix makers.

William C. MacMillen Jr., president of Chesapeake, told stockholders in an annual report this week that film processing revenues for 1954 climbed to $8,724,728, compared with $7,926,896 in 1953. Pathe is the biggest revenue-producer among all Chesapeake subsidiaries. Chesapeake's net earnings for the year amounted to $1,001,496, against $1,031,080 for 1953.

Promote Bob Selig

Denver, March 22.

Robert W. M. Selig, assistant to president of Fox Inter-Mountain theatres, has been named division manager of the 65 theatres in the group.

Frank H. Ricketson Jr., president, made the promotion.

'BATTLE CRY' 5-WEEKER IN COLUMBUS, DAYTON

Columbus, March 22.

"Battle Cry" winds up its run here today to become the first film in recent memory to hold five weeks at downtown houses. Picture played two weeks at RKO Palace and then was moved to RKO Grand for last three weeks.

"Battle Cry" also equaled a record in Dayton by staying five weeks at the Victory. Only other picture ever to hold so long there was "This Is the Army" and its mark was set in the plush war years.

Invites Destruction!

Minneapolis, March 22.

St. Paul newspapers are continuing to publish letters from readers protesting against "Battle Cry" and denouncing it for its sexiness.

The papers' own critic, Bill Diehl, praised the picture, resulting in letters to the editor assailing him, which the sheets published.

One lengthy epistle described picture as a "sex orgy" and concluded with the assertion that "to continue in the ungodly spirit set forth in 'Battle Cry' is to make our nuclear destruction certain."

Print Shortage Consequence

Holdover dates for Warner Bros.' "Battle Cry," while a sign of sock boxoffice, is nevertheless causing the film company a print distribution problem.

Playdate department is faced with the task of corralling enough prints for the first New York subsequent run engagement which includes the RKO, Skouras, Randforce, Century and other circuits. At the same, a similar run is breaking in the Chicago territory. Company has a total of 350 prints in circulation.

As a result of the demand of the two metropolitan areas, company can expect beefs from exhibs who are expecting the picture but may not get it at booking availability because of the printshortage.

Perkins in From London Temporarily

Will Aid George Weltner During Latter's Break-In Period as Paramount's World-Wide Sales Chief

James E. Perkins, Paramount's managing director of operations in the British Isles, has been switched to the homeoffice on a temporary assignment, perhaps about three months. He arrived in N. Y. from London late last week.

Perkins' pro-tem job is to assist George Weltner in running the foreign department while the latter gives more time to acquainting himself with the domestic operation. Weltner, formerly in charge of foreign, recently was named head of both foreign and domestic.

In the wake of his appointment to the global role, Weltner has yet to name domestic and foreign managers to work under his supervision. He prefers to move slowly in deciding on the new exec personnel setup, it's understood.

Perkins was brought to Gotham because the Great Britain operation is not so complex that it requires his constant on-the-spot direction. That is, in contrast with John B. Nathan's territory, which covers the Continent, North Africa and the Middle East. It would have been more difficult for Nathan to take the time off from his Paris post to come to N. Y.

As for those future decisions, trade conjecture still has E. K. (Ted) O'Shea as the strongest candidate for the domestic sales chief spot. He had been second in command under A. W. Schwalberg, whose bowout led the shifts. And, it's figured, the top job in foreign will go to either Perkins or Nathan.

WB's 30c Dividend

Board of directors of Warner Bros. at New York meeting last week declared a regular quarterly dividend of 30c. per share on common stock.

Melon is payable May 5 to stockholders of record on April 15.

L.A. Holds Well; 'Eden' Lush $45,000, 'Horse' Stalwart 72G in 10 Spots, 'Deck' Fair 12G, 'Racers' NSH 17G

Los Angeles, March 22.

Local firstrun grosses are maintaining about an average pace, few newcomers being standout and most holdovers tapering off. Stoutest new fare looks to be "East of Eden" with big $45,000 in two theatres.

However, a strong showing is being made by "Chief Crazy Horse," with a neat $26,000 shaping in three hardtops plus a solid $46,000 in one nabe and six ozoners. Only fair $12,000 or near looms for "Hit the Deck" in upped-scale pre-release date at Warner Beverly. Popscale run of "Racers" is only moderate $17,000 in three houses.

Best of extended-runs continues to be "Hulot's Holiday," with big $6,000 in eighth week. "Cinerama" is fine $24,200 in 98th week. "Gate of Hell" looks steady $3,200 in 13th week.

Estimates for This Week

Downtown Paramount, Egyptian (ABPT-UATC) (3,200; 1,536; $1-$1.50)—"East of Eden" (WB). Stout $45,000. Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (6th wk), $18,200.

Warner Downtown, Wiltern, Hollywood (SW-FWC) (1,757; 2,344; 965; 80-$1.25) — "Chief Crazy Horse" (U) and "Land of Fury" (U). Neat $26,000, plus $46,000 for one nabe, 6 ozoners. Last week, with New Fox combo.

Chinese (FWC) (1,905; $1-$1.75) —"Untamed" (20th) (2d wk). Light $9,500. Last week, $15,000.

State, Hawaii (UATC-G&S) (2,404; 1,106; 80-$1.50)—"Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) and "Tanga-Tika" (Indie) (State only) (2d wk). Slim $9,500. Last week, $16,300.

Orpheum, Vogue (Metropolitan-FWC) (2,213; 885; 80-$1.25)—"Bridges Tok-ri" (Par) and "Tonight's Night" (AA) (2d wk). Slow $10,000. Last week, $16,400, plus fat $48,600 for one nabe, four ozoners.

New Fox (FWC) (965; 80-$1.25) —"Smoke Signal" (U) and "Capt. Lightfoot" (U) (2d wk). Slow $3,200. Last week, with Warner Downtown, Wiltern, $21,500.

Hollywood Paramount (F&M) (1,430; $1-$1.50) — "Underwater!" (RKO) (3d wk). Medium $8,000. Last week, $11,700.

Loyola (FWC) (1,248; $1-$1.50)— "Show Business" (20th) and "Bowery to Bagdad" (AA) (3d wk). Fair $3,500. Last week, with Los Angeles, Iris, Ritz, $19,600.

El Rey (FWC) (861; $1-$1.50)— "French Touch" (Indie) (4th wk). Small $1,700. Last week, $2,100.

Hillstreet, Pantages (RKO) (2,752; 2,812; $1-$1.50)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (5th wk). Light $10,000. Last week, $11,900.

Four Star (UATC) (900; 90-$1.50) —"Aida" (IFE) (6th wk). Slow $2,800 in 9 days. Last week, $2,900.

Fine Arts (FWC) (631; $1-$1.50) —"Hulot's Holiday" (GBD) (8th wk). Happy $6,000. Last week, soared to $6,400.

Fox Wilshire (FWC) (2,296; $1-$1.50) — "20,000 Leagues" (BV) (13th wk). Stout $9,000. Last week, $9,800.

Warner Hollywood (SW) (1,364; $1.20-$2.65) — "Cinerama" (Indie) (99th wk). Started current session Sunday (20) after fine $24,200 last week.

Vagabond (Rosener) (390; $1.50) —"Gate of Hell" (Indie) (13th wk). Neat $3,200. Last week, $3,400.

'Space' Stout 22G, Hub; Russell 20G

Boston, March 22.

Biz is holding fairly steady this stanza with newcomers in the "good if not gaudy" bracket. "Conquest of Space" shapes strong at the Paramount and Fenway, with afternoon and weekend biz especially good. "Underwater!" is rated fine at the Memorial, and holds a second. "Jupiter's Darling" looms barely okay at the Orpheum and State. "Country Girl" in sixth week at the Astor is holding up stoutly.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,500; 75-$1.25)— "Country Girl" (Par) (6th wk). Still in the chips at $13,000 following $15,500 for fifth.

Beacon Hill (Beacon Hill) (800; 75-$1.25)—"Camille" (M-G) (reissue). Opened Sunday (20). Last week, "Intimate Relations" (UA) (2d wk), thin $2,500.

Boston (Cinerama Productions) (1,354; $1.25-$2.85) — "Cinerama" (Indie) (64th wk). Still holding on with okay $16,000. Last week, $16,500.

Exeter (Indie) (1,300; 60-$1) — "The Detective" (Col) (6th wk). Neat $5,000 in final week. Last week, $6,100.

Fenway (NET) (1,700; 60-$1)— "Conquest of Space" (Par) and "5 Guns West" (SG). Good $5,000. Last week, "N. Y. Confidential" (WB) and "Black Pirates" (Lip), same.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 60-$1)— "Underwater!" (RKO) and "Sleeping Tiger" (Indie). Good $20,000 for Jane Russell starrer. Last week, "Far Country" (U) and "A&C Meet Keystone Kops" (U), $14,000.

Metropolitan (NET) (4,367; 60-$1)—"Untamed" (20th) and "Bob Mathias Story" (AA). Opens today (Tues.). Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (4th wk), fine $16,500.

Orpheum (Loew's) (3,000; 60-$1) —"Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) and "Golden Mistress" (UA). Fair $15,000. Last week, "Gray Line" (Col) (4th wk), $16,500.

Paramount (NET) (1,700; 60-$1) —"Conquest of Space" (Par) and "5 Guns West" (SG). Slick $17,000. Last week, "N. Y. Confidential" (WB) and "Black Pirates" (Lip), $14,500.

State (Loew's) (3,500; 60-$1)— "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) and "Golden Mistress" (UA). Light $8,500. Last week, "Athena" (M-G) and "Crest of Waves" (M-G), $11,000 in 10 days.

'RIVERS' FAST $15,000, ST. L.; 'BRIDGES' SAME

St. Louis, March 22.

Biz is spotty this session, with "Many Rivers To Cross" making best showing of newcomers. It is lusty at Loew's. "6 Bridges To Cross" also is solid with the same amount of coin at the Fox. "Cinerama Holiday" still is smash in fifth round at Ambassador. "Long Gray Line" shapes neat in second frame at the St. Louis.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (Indie) (1,400; $1.20-$2.40)—"Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (5th wk). Swell $20,000. Last week, $21,600.

Fox (F&M) (5,000; 75)—"Capt. Lightfoot" (U) and "Timberjack" (Rep). Opened today (Tues.). Last week, "6 Bridges To Cross" (U) and "Smoke Signal" (U), solid $15,000.

Loew's (Loew's) (3,172; 50-85)— "Many Rivers To Cross" (M-G) and "Fire Over Africa" (Col). Lusty $15,000 or over. Last week, "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) and "They Rode West" (Col) (2d wk), $7,500.

Orpheum (Loew's) (1,400; 50-85) — "Black Tuesday" (UA) and "Shield for Murder" (UA). Good $7,000. Last week, "Black Knight" (Col) and "Black Dakotas" (Col) (2d wk), $5,000.

Pageant (St. L. Amus.) (1,000; 82)—"Bitter Rice" (Indie). Nice $3,500. Last week, "Prince of Players" (20th), $2,500.

Richmond (St. L. Amus.) (400; 82)—"Prince of Players" (20th). Fair $2,000. Last week, "Bread, Love and Dreams" (IFE), $3,000.

St. Louis (St. L. Amus.) (4,000; 60-85)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Neat $12,000 following $14,500 opening frame.

Shady Oak (St. L. Amus.) (800; 82)—"Ugetsu" (Indie) (2d wk). Good $2,500 after $3,000 for opener.

'Star' Boffo 22G, D.C.; 'Untamed' 15G

Washington, March 22.

Four newcomers on mainstem will help biz here currently. Standout of new pix is "Man Without a Star" at Loew's Capitol, with a big session. Got help from personals by star Kirk Douglas. "N.Y. Confidential" shapes slow in two houses. "Untamed" at Loew's Palace also is solid. Holdovers are generally steady, with top honors again going to "Country Girl" in seventh session at Trans-Lux. "Long Gray Line" shapes bright on Keith's sixth round.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (SW) (1,490; 60-85) —"N.Y. Confidential" (WB). Weak $4,000 for Broderick Crawford starrer. Last week, "Underwater!" (RKO), $4,500.

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 70-95)— "Man Withtout a Star" (U). Big $22,000, with personals by the film's star Kirk Douglas helping. Last week, "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G), $16,000 for 8 days.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,174; 60-85) —"Women's Prison" (Col). Above average $8,000. Last week, "Black Tuesday" (UA) (2d wk), $5,500.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 65-$1)— "Gate of Hell" (Indie) (4th wk). Okay $3,500 after $4,000 last week. Stays.

Cincinnati, March 22.

Easter's approach is having little quieting effect on firstrun trade here this week. Two new bills, "Conquest of Space" and "Racers," loom above par at the Palace and Keith's. Holdovers of "Country Girl" at the Albee and "Battle Cry" at the smaller Grand shape well. "Girl" is big in third round while "Battle" looks strong on third moveover stanza.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 75-$1.25)— "Country Girl" (Par) (3d wk). Still big at $11,000 pace after $16,000 second stanza.

Capitol (Ohio Cinema Corp.) (1,376; $1.20-$2.65) — "Cinerama" (Indie) (40th wk). Potent $16,500 in the absence of extra shows which boosted last week's total to $18,200.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 75-$1.25)— "Battle Cry" (WB) (m.o.) (3d wk). Sock $7,500 looming after last week's $8,500.

Keith's (Shor) (1,500; 75-$1.25)— "Racers" (20th). Pleasing $10,000 or near. Holds for second frame. Last week, "Bridges at Toko-ri" (Par) (4th wk), $6,900.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 75-90)— "Conquest of Space" (Par). Snappy $12,000 or near. Last week, "Carmen Jones" (20th), $11,000.

'Star' Mighty 23G, Philly's New Ace

Philadelphia, March 22.

Kirk Douglas' personal appearances kited "Man Without a Star" into the higher brackets, with a mighty $23,000 or better likely at the small-seater Goldman. It's the biggest money in town for a pic playing regular scale. However, biz generaly is spotty with pre-Easter lull already being felt here. "Long John Silver" is rated only so-so at the Mastbaum although the juveniles are helping matinee trade. "Gangbusters" is only okay at the Stanton. "Cinerama Holiday" is pushing to a terrific total at Boyd in fifth stanza.

Estimates for This Week

Arcadia (S&S) (625; 90-$1.35)— "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) (4th wk). Fair $6,000. Last week, $8,000.

Boyd (SW) (1,430; $1.25-$2.60)— "Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (5th wk). Pacesetter in city, wow $29,000. Last week, $28,000.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 90-$1.40)— "Untamed" (20th) (2d wk). Off to fair $16,000. Last week, $28,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 65-$1.30)—"Man Without Star" (U). Whopping $23,000, unusually big for this type of pic. Last week, "Capt. Lightfoot" (U), $12,000.

Mastbaum (SW) (4,370; 75-$1.30) —"Long John Silver" (DCA). So-so $17,000. Last week, "Vera Cruz" (UA) (5th wk), $11,000.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,200; 65-$1.49)—"Country Girl" (Par) (7th wk). Solid $13,000. Last week, $17,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 75-$1.40)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (4th wk). Lusty $17,000. Last week, $20,000.

Stanley (SW) (2,900; 74-$1.40)— "Gray Line" (Col) (4th wk). Moderate $11,000. Last week, $13,000.

Stanton (SW) (1,473; 50-99)— "Gangbusters" (Indie). Okay $9,500. Last week, 'Davy Crockett" (EPI) (reissue), $10,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 99-$1.50) —"Animal Farm" (Indie) (2d wk). Poor $3,600. Last week, $6,000.

Viking (Sley) (1,000; 74-$1.50)— "Hit Deck" (M-G) (2d wk). Bright $14,000. Last week, $16,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (604; 99-$1.50) —"Stranger's Hand" (DCA). Weak $3,000. Last week, "Green Fire" (M-G) (5th wk), ditto.

'Lightfoot' Lively 11G, L'ville; 'Streets' $8,500, 'Girl' Rugged 6½G, 3d

Louisville, March 22.

General b.o. trend is on the light side here this week, with just two houses, the Rialto and State, showing fresh product. "Battle Cry" at the Mary Anderson is currently riding high in sixth week with possibility of a seventh round while the Kentucky with third week of "Country Girl" is continuing its socko pace. "Captain Lightfoot" and "West of Zanzibar" at the Rialto shapes good. "Down 3 Dark Streets" "Shield For Murder" combo at the State is only fair.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,000; 75-$1) —"Country Girl" (Par) (3d wk). Likely to do big $6,500 after last week's $7,500.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,000; 75-$1)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (6th wk). Dandy $6,500 after last week's $7,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 50-75)—"Capt. Lightfoot" (U) and "West Zanzibar" (U). Looks good $11,000. Last week, "White Feather" (20th), same.

State (United Artists) (3,000; 50-75)—"Down 3 Dark Streets" (UA) and "Shield For Murder" (UA). Fair $8,500. Last week, "Women's Prison" (Col) and "10 Wanted Men" (Col), ditto.

Douglas Virile $2,000, Ace Newcomer in Pitt; 'Holiday' Loud 18G, 5th

Pittsburgh, March 22.

Big weekend was stymied here Saturday night (19) by telecast of Duquesne-Dayton NIT championship basketball game (Dukes are a local team) and the dent at the wickets was noticeable everywhere. However, trade was doing well before that, and should be brisk down the stretch. "Man Without a Star" looks sturdy at Fulton. Both "Battle Cry" in fourth stanza at Stanley and "Camille" in second at Guild are strong, and likely will hold again. "Many Rivers to Cross" a slight improvement over recent pix at Penn but only oke. "Cinerama Holiday" continues to hold steady which means sock at the Warner.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 65-$1) — "Man Without Star" (U). Kirk Douglas in for two days of drumbeating and three personals to help launch his starrer. Should hit socko $12,000. Last week, "Long John Silver" (DCA) (2d wk), only $1,000 in 3 days.

Harris (Harris) (2,165; 65-$1)— "Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Stretching to okay $8,500, and probably will hold again since product is short here. Last week, $12,000.

Guild (Green) (500; 65-$1)— "Camille" (M-G) (reissue) (2d wk). Second stanza should be bigger than any pic ever did here in a week. Shooting for great $3,200 after record $4,600 opener.

Penn (UA) (3,300; 65-$1)—"Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G). Pushing ahead to oke $13,000. Last week, "Bad Day Black Rock" (M-G), $12,000.

Squirrel Hill (SW) (900; 65-$1)— "Tonight's the Night" (AA) (2d wk). Fair $2,000 or less. Last week, $3,000.

Stanley (SW) (3,800; 75-$1.25)— "Battle Cry" (WB) (5th wk). Plenty of staying power, with sturdy $14,000. This is great here at this stage of run. Last week, $18,500.

Warner (SW) (1,365; $1.60-$2.40) —"Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (5th wk). Pace very steady. Great $18,000 again this week, only a bit under last week.

'Untamed' Smash 13G, Seattle; 'Girl' 14G, 2d

Seattle, March 22.

Of the big-seaters, only the Coliseum, with "Untamed" and Music Hall with "New York Confidential" have new programs. Former is great, and one of biggest entries currently. "Confidential" is lightweight. "Country Girl" is rated smash in second Fifth Avenue session. "Gate of Hell" looms okay at Music Box. "Long Gray Line" is slow in second frame at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (800; 75-$1)—"Mr. Hulot's Holiday" (GBD). Good $4,500. Last week, "Far Country" (U) and "West Zanzibar" (U), (4th wk), $2,900.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,830; $1-$1.25) — "Untamed" (20th) and "They Rode West" (Col). Great $13,000 or over. Last week, "Amer-

Detroit, March 22.

Downtown biz is above average this week. "Untamed" shapes good at the Fox. However, "Conquest of Space" is standout with great total at the Palms. "East of Eden" is still sock in second round at the Michigan. "Cinerama Holiday" continues great in sixth week at the Music Hall. "Chief Crazy Horse" looms trim in second stanza at Broadway-Capitol.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Fox-Detroit) (5,000; $1-$1.25) — "Untamed" (20th) and "Devil Girl from Mars" (AA). Good $28,000. Last week, "Big House" (UA) and "They Were So Young" (Lip) (2d wk), $17,000.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; $1-$1.25)—"East of Eden" (WB) (2d wk). Socko $20,000. Last week, $32,000.

Palms (UD) (2,961; 80-$1)— "Conquest of Space" (Par) and "Bob Mathias Story" (Col). Great $18,000. Last week, "Capt. Lightfoot" (U) and "Land of Fury" (U), $10,000.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 95-$1.25)—"Gray Line" (Col) (3d wk). Still good at $7,500. Last week, $10,200.

Music Hall (Cinerama Productions) (1,194; $1.40-$2.65)—"Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (6th wk). Great $32,000. Last week, same.

Surplus of Longruns Bops Chi Biz; 'Doctor' Fat $9,000, 'Henrietta' Wow 6G, 'Girl' 22G, 5th, 'Battle' 21G, 4th

Chicago, March 22.

Downbeat here continues this round with too many holdovers flamed. Situation has film row headscratching since for no apparent reason grosses this Lent are not as hefty as last year's even though product is considered stronger by some.

"Doctor in House" at Esquire looks smash $9,000 in first frame while "Holiday for Henrietta" at the Ziegfeld shapes big $6,000 or close also opening week.

"New York Confidential" with Vic Damone helming stage bill at the Chicago shapes dull in second stanza. "Jupiter's Darling" at the McVickers looks okay in same round. "10 Wanted Men" and "Unchained" combo at Roosevelt is slowing down in first holdover session. "The Americano" and "Tarzan's Hidden Jungle" is dullish in same week at the Grand.

In the third round at the Woods, "Far Country" is not holding well. "Long Gray Line" shapes disappointing in same stanza at the Oriental.

"Battle Cry" is still nice in fourth stanza at State-Lake. "Country Girl" is holding well enough in fifth week at United Artists. "Cinerama" is still in the running at Palace in the 86th week.

Estimates for This Week

'Space' Strong $17,000, Cleve.; 'Horse' $12,000

Cleveland, March 22.

City is loaded with holdovers and a couple of oldies, with biz hold-very well in view of this. Ace new pic is "Conquest of Space," robust at State. "Chief Crazy Horse" looks just okay at Palace. "Long Gray Line" at Allen still is smart in second round. "Country Girl" continues big in seventh Stillman session.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (W-W) (3,000; 70-$1)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Smart $14,000. Last week, $22,500.

Hipp (Telem't) (3,700; 70-$1)—"Untamed" (20th) (2d wk). Good $15,000 following $19,000 last week.

Lower Mall (Community) (585; 60-90)—"Gate of Hell" (Indie).

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e. without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

'Eden' Wham 21G, Stewart 14G, S. F.

San Francisco, March 22.

Some new, strong fare is keeping firstrun overall total high here this session. Standout newcomer is "East of Eden," wow at St. Francis. "Far Country" looms fine at Golden Gate while "Big House U.S.A." shapes good at United Artists. "Doctor In House" shapes great at the Bridge. Second round of "Country Girl" is great at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Omaha B.O. Holds Firm; 'Horse' Sock at $7,000, 'Racers' Smooth $10,500

Omaha, March 22.

Plenty of competition this week, coming from Omaha Symphony, Blackstone's magic show, the "Seven Year Itch" legiter and Ice Capades, but the film boxoffice is holding quite firm. "The Racers" shapes okay at the Orpheum. Standout is "Chief Crazy Horse" socko at the State. "Conquest of Space" is only medium at the Omaha. "Battle Cry" is still sharp in its fourth session at the Brandeis.

Estimates for This Week

Brandeis (RKO) (1,100; 75-$1)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (4th wk). Neat $5,000. Last week, $8,500.

Omaha (Tristates) (2,000; 65-85)—"Conquest of Space" (Par) and "Devil's Harbor" (20th). Medium $6,000. Last week, "6 Bridges to Cross" (U) and "Other Woman" (20th), $7,500.

'Feather' Fancy $15,000, Denver; 'Kettles' 12G

Denver, March 22.

Heavy wind and snow last Sunday night did not appear to hurt the boxoffice here much. Four theatres are holding their pix. "White Feather" is grabbing top money and making the best showing of all the newcomers, playing the comparatively small-seat Fox. It stays on. "Ma and Pa Kettle Go to Waikiki" is rated good at Denver. "Country Girl" still is torrid in third round at Denham, and holds again. "Doctor in House," nice in second week at Vogue, remains a third.

Estimates for This Week

Centre (Fox) (1,247; 60-$1)—"White Feather" (20th). Fast $15,000. Holds. Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (5th wk), $11,000.

Denham (Cockrill) (1,750; 60-$1)—"Country Girl" (Par) (3d wk). Fancy $14,000. Stays on. Last week, $17,000.

Denver (Fox) (2,525; 50-85)—"Ma, Pa Kettle to Waikiki" (U) and "They Rode West" (Col). Good $12,000. Last week, "Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk), $9,000.

Esquire (Fox) (742; 70-$1)—"Gate of Hell" (Indie). Big $4,000. Holds. Last week on reissues.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,600; 50-85)—"Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G) and "Black Pirates" (Lip) (2d wk). Fair $7,500. Last week, $10,000.

Vogue (Brown) (442; 75-90)—"Doctor in House" (Rep) (2d wk). Good $2,200. Last week, $3,500.

Minneapolis, March 22.

Holdovers still stack up here as bigger spotlight grabbers than fresh arrivals. The latter include "Hit the Deck," "The Racers" and "The Big Combo," with "Deck" drawing the most attention at Radio City. "Racers" also looks okay at State. It's fifth week for "Country Girl" at World where still hefty. Second round of "Long Gray Line" at the Orpheum is stout. Bad weather continues to hurt biz, temperatures in the low 20's plus frequent snow.

Estimates for This Week

Century (S-W) (1,140; $1.75-$2.65)—"Cinerama" (Indie) (49th wk). Soldout special matinees giving grosses an added hypo. Big $15,500. Last week, $15,000.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; 65-85)—"Big Combo" (AA). Supposed to be world-preem here. Good $4,500. Last week, "Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G) (2d wk), $3,200.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 85-$1)—"3 Ring Circus" (Par) (m.o.). Here after prosperous Radio City session. Good $4,500. Last week, "Battle Cry" (WB) (5th wk), $5,500.

Radio City (Par) (4,100; 85-$1)—"Hit the Deck" (M-G). Nice $11,000. Last week, "3 Ring Circus" (Par), $12,000.

RKO-Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 85-$1)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Virile $8,000. Last week, $12,000.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 65-85)—"Southwest Passage" (UA) and "Khyber Patrol" (UA). Okay $4,000. Last week, "The Outcast" (Rep) and "Hell's Outpost" (Rep), $4,200.

State (Par) (2,300; 85-$1)—"The Racers" (20th). Very solid $9,000. Last week, "Bridges at Toko-ri" (Par) (3d wk), $6,500.

World (Mann) (400; 65-$1.20)—"Country Girl" (Par) (5th wk). At present speedy clip has long way to go before ending run. Hefty $5,000. Last week, $6,300.

'Untamed' Lusty $12,000, Port.; 'Horse' Hotsy 10G

Portland, Ore., March 22.

Town is loaded with strong product currently and this is keeping biz healthy. "Country Girl" moves into a fourth torrid week. "Long Gray Line" continues tall in second frame. "Hit The Deck" looms stout a new entrant while "Chief Crazy Horse" shapes sturdy, also for a new comer. "Untamed" looks lusty. It also is new.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (1,890; 75-$1)—"Hit Deck" (M-G) and "Security Risk" (AA). Stout $12,000. Last week, "Far Country" (U) and "West Zanzibar" (U) (2d wk), $5,900.

Fox (Evergreen) (1,560; $1-$1.25)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk).

B'way Low; Blame Rain, Lent, Etc.; Yet 'Jungle' Drums 68G, 'W'front' Rerun Okay 8G, Palace Tidy 22G

Broadway deluxers continued to be plagued by seasonal influences and an obvious tightening of public spending this stanza even though new pix preemed set a more cheerful note over the past weekend. Last Friday's snowstorm was bad enough for the b.o., but Monday's all-day rain followed by the continuous downpour yesterday (Tues.) were real crippling blows. Lent, income tax problems (both Federal and state) as well as a general tapering of spending were listed as factors in the current downbeat on Broadway. St. Patrick's day last Thursday helped several locations.

Ace newcomer is "Blackboard Jungle," which is headed for a mighty $68,000 at the State. This does not include a whopping take on Friday when the pic was previewed with "Timberjack," the then current film. House operated grind from early Saturday morning until the early morning hours Sunday. Theatre got $1.80 both Saturday and Sunday, this scale being installed fairly early in the afternoon. It's easily the biggest money at the State in many months.

"On Waterfront," playing second run, shapes nice $7,000 or near at the Globe. "Tight Spot" with vaudeville looks to get a lively $22,000 at the Palace. Otherwise, the Street is 100% holdover.

"East of Eden" is holding at smash $44.000 or near in second session at the Astor. "Holiday For Henrietta" pushed up to sock $6,800 in eighth round at the arty Fine Arts, and could stay longer except for a locked booking on its next pic. Winds up with the current (9th) week.

Champ longrun pic is "Battle Cry," which still is stout with $40,000 or close for seventh round at the Paramount. It continues for about two weeks longer. "Country Girl" looks nice $19.000 this (14th) week at the Criterion. "Mambo" is scheduled to open March 30.

"Hit the Deck" with stageshow shapes modest $108,000 in third and final week at the Music Hall. "Glass Slipper" with annual Easter stageshow opens tomorrow (Thurs.). "Untamed" looks like fair $35,000 in second stanza at the Roxy, staying only five days of third week to open "Man Called Peter" on March 31.

"Long Gray Line" is heading for a nice $22,000 in its sixth week at the Capitol. "Man Without a Star" opens at the Victoria tomorrow (Thurs.) after a good run with "N. Y. Confidential."

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 75-$1.75)—"East of Eden" (WB) (2d wk). Initial holdover stanza winding up today (Wed.) looks to hold with terrific $44.000 or near. First week was $51,000, over hopes. Stays on indef.

Baronet (Reade) (430; 90-$1.55)—"Game of Love" (Indie) (15th wk). The 14th round ended yesterday (Tues.) was big $3.900 after $3.800 in 13th week. Stays until April 4 or later, when "Trouble in Glen" (Rep) is due in.

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 85-$2.20)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (6th wk). Likely will get fine $22,000 in current round finishing today (Wed.) after $25,000, better than expected, for fifth week.

Criterion (Moss) (1,700; 75-$2.20)—"Country Girl" (Par) (14th wk). This session finishing today (Wed.) is heading for trim $19,000 after $22,000 in 13th week. Stays until "Mambo" (Par) opens March 30.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80)—"Holiday For Henrietta" (Arde) (9th wk). The eighth stanza ended Sunday (20) climbed to socko $6,800 after $6.400 for seventh week. "To Paris With Love" (Indie) comes in March 28 although this could stay considerably longer. However, "Love" is in here on a locked booking.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 70-$1.50)—"On Waterfront!" (Col) (2d run). Looks to land fine $7,000 in current round winding tomorrow (Thurs.). Last week, "Gilda" and "Deeds Goes To Town," Columbia reissues plus preview of "On Waterfront!" on March 17, $7,500. "Wayward Wife" (IFE) opens April 1.

Guild (Guild) (450; $1-$1.75) — "Gate of Hell" (Indie) (15th wk). The 14th round ended Monday (21) was wow $11,000 after $12,000 for 13th week. Stays on into the summer. Pic has been getting a fresh award about every week, and this has helped, natch.

Mayfair (Brandt) (1,736; 79-$1.80)—"Underwater!" (RKO) (7th wk). Sixth round ended yesterday (Tues.) held with fair $8,500 after $9,500 in fifth week. Stays until April 6 when "Long John Silver" (DCA) opens.

Normandie (Trans-Lux) (592; $1.15-$1.65)—"Camille" (M-G) (reissue) (8th wk). Seventh round ended Monday (21) was smash $6,500 after $8,000 for sixth week. Continues on.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 50-$1.60)—"Tight Spot" (Col) and vaudeville. Week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to reach fancy $22,000. Last week, "Big House U. S. A." (UA) and vaude, $25,000, over hopes.

Paramount (ABC-Par) (3,664; 85-$1.75)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (8th wk). Seventh frame ended last night (Tues.) held with sturdy $40,000 after $48,000 for sixth week. Stays over again, and likely will round out this phenomenal run here in about two weeks. "Strategic Air Command" (Par) due next.

Paris (Pathe Cinema) (568; 90-$1.80)—"Wages of Fear" (Indie) (6th wk). Fifth week ended last night (Tues.) was good $9,000 or less after $11,300 for fourth. Continues, with "Heartbreak Ridge" (M-G) announced as next in.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 95-$2.75)—"Hit the Deck" (M-G) and stageshow (3d-final wk). Held at mild $108,000 or under in final stanza after $110,000 for second. "Glass Slipper" (M-G) and annual Easter stageshow opens tomorrow (Thurs.).

Roxy (Nat'l Th.) (5,717; 65-$2.40)—"Untamed" (20th) (2d wk). First holdover session ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to dip to fair $35 000 after $52,000 in opener. "Man Called Peter" (20th) comes in with a special hospital benefit preem the night of March 31.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 78-$1.80)—"Blackboard Jungle" (M-G). Soaring to terrific $68,000 or near in first round winding up Friday (25). Holds, natch! In ahead, "Timberjack" (Rep), $16,000 in 10 days, with a great lift from preview of "Jungle" all day Friday (18). Figure for "Jungle" does not include preview coin of Friday which was considerably better than Monday (21).

Sutton (R&B) (561; $1-$1.80)—"Romeo and Juliet" (UA) (14th wk). The 13th round ended yesterday (Tues.) held with oke $4,800 after $5,700 in 12th week. "Marty" (UA) opens April 11.

Trans-Lux 52nd St. (T-L) (540; $1-$1.50) — "Doctor in House" (Rep) (5th wk). Current stanza ending today (Wed.) probably will hit smash $9,500 after $11,500 in fourth. Stays on.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,060; 50-$1.75)—"N. Y. Confidential" (WB) (6th wk-6 days). Curtailed week ending today (Wed.) looks to hit fair $3,000. Fourth full week was $12,000. "Man Without a Star" (U). Opens tomorrow (Thurs.).

Warner (Cinerama Prod.) (1,600; $1.20-$3.30) — "Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (7th wk). Sixth session finished Saturday (19) was wham $54,400 including one extra performance St. Patrick's Day. The fifth week was $53,700. Stays indef.

'A&C' Fairish $4,000 In Balto; 'Girl' Great 15G In 2d, 'Toko-ri' 7½G, 3d

Baltimore, March 22.

With only one new entry this round, grosses tend to be unexciting here. "Abbott and Costello Meet Keystone Kops," lone newcomer, is fairish at the Mayfair. "Country Girl" is holding stoutly in second session at the Hipp. Second week of "Untamed" is mild at the New.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-UA) (3,000; 25-65-95)—"Many Rivers To Cross" (M-G) (2d wk). Slim $7,000 after $10,500 opener.

Film Centre (Rappaport) (960; 50-$1)—"Romeo And Juliet" (UA) (2d wk). Pleasing $4,000 after $5,000 opener.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,100; 50-$1)—"Country Girl" (Par) (2d wk). Holding staunchly at $15,000 after $21,500 opener.

Keith's (Fruchtman) (2,400; 25-$1)—"Bridges At Toko-ri" (Par) (3d wk). Potent $7,500 following $10,500 in second.

Little (Rappaport) (310; 50-$1)—

Maryland Moralists Lose in Court; 'Obscenity' Definition Dies on Vine; Vindication for 'Game of Love'

If presently proposed censorship statutes in Maryland are signed into law by the Governor, the state censor board will operate under them with a strike against it from the very start.

Maryland's new definition of the term "obscene," which forms one of the cornerstones of the statutes, has already been found wanting in the courts.

Case involved the French film, "The Game of Love," distributed by Times Film Corp., of N. Y. "Game" was the first pic ever to be banned by the Maryland board in its entirety on the grounds of obscenity. The ban was appealed to the board by Felix Bilgrey, attorney for Times Film. Upon losing his appeal, he took the case to the Baltimore City Court.

In a decision handed down last week, Judge Emory Niles ruled that "Game of Love" wasn't obscene within the meaning of the term as defined by the Maryland statutes—new or old— and he ordered reversal of the board's action. Under Maryland law, there is no appeal from the Judge's decision.

Ruling is considered significant in that, at the very outset, it would appear to severely limit the interpretations which the Maryland board can put on the term "obscene" in the future.

Sex Versus Merit

In the now pending bill in the Maryland legislature, the meaning of "obscenity" is defined thusly: "The motion picture film or view shall be considered to be obscene if, when considered as a whole, its calculated purpose or dominant effect is substantially to arouse sexual desires, and if probability of this effect is so great as to outweigh whatever merits the film may possess."

Judge Niles observed that the definition had not been adopted by the legislature, and therefore wasn't binding on the court, but that, according to Sidney R. Traub, the former censor board chairman, "the definition constitutes the standard upon which the board acted in determining that the film was obscene."

The judge pointed out that "while it is true that the film implies that such relations (between a youth and a woman of middle age) have occurred, they are not depicted in the film itself. There is nothing in the film which could be termed pornographic. The situation can be summed up by saying that, although the film implies that improper conduct has taken place, the film deals with its effects upon the various characters involved. In this respect it does not differ from any novels and plays."

The decision added that "although it may fairly be contended that the film is based upon a narrative of improper conduct, it does not in the opinion of the court constitute incitement to such conduct."

The mere fact that the judge was so specific in his own definition of what is and isn't obscene, i.e. his comment that no obscene act was actually shown on the screen, is seen as carrying great significance in any application of a new Maryland statute.

Vermont Clergy Loses

Montpelier, Vt., March 22.

Sunday film matinee bill, with a rider also legalizing roller skating on the Sabbath, has been given final approval by the Vermont Legislature.

Under the measure, various communities will be able to authorize Sunday exhibition starting at 2 p.m., instead of being presented only in the evening as under the old law.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Leslie Barry of Chittenden, had been strongly supported by theatre men and as vigorously opposed by groups of clergymen.

Decides Pa. Has No Censorship —Or Does It?

Philadelphia, March 22.

Pennsylvania is preparing to rewrite its 40-year-old censorship laws as the whole status of State censorship was thrown into doubt last week by the action of the Attorney General's office in withdrawing a supersedeas.

Declared unconstitutional in Common Pleas Court last September, censorship in Pennsylvania was operating on the action filed by the Attorney General's office. "Withdrawal of the supersedeas leaves the Commonwealth without a censorship law," according to Abraham J. Levy, former special deputy Attorney General, who appealed the Common Pleas Court decision.

The fight against the State Board of Censors was led by Edwin P. Rome, acting as attorney on behalf of Hallmark Productions' "She Should'a Said No," a film about the drug traffic.

Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the censor board, asserted "we are going ahead with our duties, and so far as I am concerned nothing can be shown without a seal."

The change in State administrations at the start of the year has apparently ousted Mrs. Carroll, but she had had no official notice as yet. On a radio interview by John Raleigh over Station KYW, the censor board chairman said, "I am probably the only person in history to be fired by Drew Pearson." She had reference to a previous broadcast by Pearson, who stated she had been replaced.

Gov. George M. Leader has announced the appointment of a new censor board to be headed by Mrs. Louise John, of West Chester. The appointments, however, do not become official until confirmed by the Governor's opposition Republican-controlled Senate.

LADY DEMOCRATS ON PENNSY CENSOR BODY

Philadelphia, March 22.

Governor George M. Leader has named a new State Board of Motion Picture Censors to be headed by Mrs. Louise M. Johns, of West Chester, Pa. She succeeds Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, who headed the board for years under the Republican regime in the State. The chairman's salary is $6,000 annually.

Two other Democrats were appointed by Gov. Leader to replace Republicans ousted from the board. They are Mrs. Helen K. Massock, of Washington, Pa., and Mrs. Clara Stevenson Black, of Harrisburg. They replace Mrs. Jewel M. Frank, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Beatrice Z. Miller, of Germantown. Board members are paid $5,000 a year.

Easter Natural For 20th's 'Peter'

Since it considers Easter the ideal time for the release of its religiosos pic, "A Man Called Peter," 20th-Fox plans to open the film in 350 U. S. and Canadian keys during the holidays, representing one of the largest across-the-board openings of a CinemaScope production.

In N. Y., "Peter" kicks off at the Roxy Theatre on March 31, Preem is a benefit for the Highland Fund of North America which seeks to restore the Caledonian Hospital of N. Y.

"Peter" is being screened this week in 60 cities for clergymen, lay church leaders and opinion makers who're expected to "spread the word" on the film.

U Buys 3 Stories for '56

Hollywood, March 22.

Universal bought three story properties, all in one day, for inclusion in its 1955-56 production program.

Yarns include "Late Have I Loved Thee," written by Jay Anthony; "Draw Sabres," by Blake Edwards; and "The Land Unknown," by Charles Palmer.

Up-Frame Titles for Widescreen!

Theatres' switch to widescreens shapes as a problem for foreign film imports carrying subtitles.

In using regularly titled prints on the widescreen, exhibs tend to lose the printed legend. If, on the other hand, they move up the image to make the titles legible, they cut off the heads of the actors.

Importers say that the drive-ins, for one, would be more enthusiastic about booking their product if it weren't for the subtitle problem. As a result, some of the new foreign lingualers are pushing the titles higher up in the frame. Danger there is that they then impinge on the action and evoke unfavorable audience comment.

'Blackboard Jungle'—True or False?

Educators Apparently Uncertain Whether to See Reality or Caricature of Delinquency Problem

Metro's "The Blackboard Jungle," the story of juvenile delinquency in a big city school, is emerging as a highly controversial picture as expected. Like the Evan Hunter novel on which it is based, the film is causing a split in opinions on the conditions it shows in a vocational high school.

Although seen by New York City Superintendent of Schools William Jansen, the educational topper is taking a strictly hands off attitude, declining to take a pro or con stand. Unofficially, members of the N. Y. Board of Education feel that the picture can do some harm and some good. A good deal of highly sensational stuff has been telescoped into a short time period and may tend to give a false picture of actual conditions in th schools.

On the other hand, Metro claims to have unofficial statements from school teachers pointing out that conditions in some schools are worse than shown. The Legion of Decency has tagged the film with a "B" rating, and an outfit known as the Institute of Public Opinion has been sending postcards to film reviewers charging that the picture, like the book, is anti-public schools. Reviewers are urged to point out to their readers that the conditions as depicted do not really exist.

Metro has been forced to alter its filmed video clips at the urging of the networks. It has eliminated the scene in which a juve delinquent tears a teacher's dress in a rape attempt.

N. Y. Governor Averell Harriman, at Metro's invitation, saw the picture recently, and although M-G hopes to get some statement from him, the state's chief executive has issued no comment so far.

On Location—1955

Hollywood, March 22.

Some 47 members of the cast and crew of Universal's "The Rawhide Years" are making with Geiger counters on location at Lone Pine. Among the toters are Tony Curtis and Arthur Kennedy.

Reason is that the location is in the heart of the new uranium area.

Debate Goes On: Is 1946 'Fair' As Test of Normal

VARIETY last week touched off much trade pro and con-ing with a story relating that some execs felt the usual boxoffice comparisons between the present and 1946 were invalid. Point was made that 1946 was an era of false economy in that even mediocre pictures made money and at that time there was no tv competition.

Reaction in private conversations among N. Y. filmmen showed some split opinion. A number of execs agreed that such comparing simply was not realistic. Others took the opposite view. Paul Raibourn, Paramount, v.p., for one, stated: "1946 was a normal year because at that time we had our proper share of the market. Therefore, the comparison should be made. 1953 and 1954 were the abnormal years."

Editing Brazil in C'Scope

Washington, March 22.

Cutting starts in New York this week on footage for two 20th-Fox CinemaScope tinter shorts brought back from Brazil last week by Anthony Muto, D. C. rep for 20th and Movietone News. Muto will direct the editing.

First short will deal with the City of Rio de Janeiro, including the big annual carnival. Second short will cover a tour of the coffee plantations, steel production, the coffee port of Santos, and the city of Sao Paulo.

Evangelist Raps 'Young'

Albany, March 22.

A page one blast Friday (18) by The Evangelist, official weekly of the Albany Catholic Diocese, is believed to have been a factor in ending the run of the Legion of Decency-condemned "They Were So Young" at the Ritz Saturday, and the substitution of a reissue bill Sunday (20).

Letters of protest from Catholic organizations and individuals were also reported to have been received by the first-run house.

A boxed, black-typed story, captioned "Albany Movie Courts Ban," stated, "The Ritz Theatre, Albany, in its current motion picture billing impels Catholics to rigidly enforce their Legion of Decency pledge. 'They Were So Young' which newspaper advertisements have already displayed as a depiction of film that has not been previously 'dared,' is unconditionally condemned by the Legion of Decency. According to the Legion's review the Lippert picture is 'completely unacceptable for entertainment for motion picture audiences.'"

U Adds 2 for April

Hollywood, March 22.

Universal has added two starters to its April production program, making a total of four. First to roll is the Howard Christie production, "Away All Boats," starting April 6 with Jeff Chandler.

Other April starters and their producers are: "Better Than Before," Albert J. Cohen; "Fort Starvation," Aaron Rosenberg; and "The Kettles in the Tall Corn," Richard Wilson.

Britain: Not Free Speech Bastion?

American film producers, many of whom have been singing the blue-pencil blues, actually have far more script freedom than their British counterparts. So states Jill Craig, English writer and director, in an article in a recent issue of London's Sunday Express.

Miss Craig beefs that no British agency or organization will cooperate with a camera crew on location shooting unless the scenario is devoid of any critical material.

"The truth is," she writes, "that it is almost impossible to criticize any British institution in a visual medium. To do so it is necessary to set up cameras on the organization's property. We cannot make a film about the railways, for instance, without showing a station and trains. Permission for this is granted only when the script has been viewed.

"Here lies the difficulty. For the most cherished possession of the Public Relations Officers is the blue pencil. I know of a production that was abandoned because a pickpocket was to be shown travelling by train. This (the official maintained) would undermine the confidence of travellers."

Other taboos, Miss Craig goes on, were on a man closing a carriage window because "there are no drafts in British trains," and the depiction of a fireman in comic manner.

Miss Craig says the use of facilities is granted on these two conditions: "The organization must be glorified, and producers must pander to that blue pencil."

In contrast is the "artistic freedom" enjoyed by Hollywood and concerning this Miss Craig points to "From Here to Eternity," "Caine Mutiny," "Cell Block 11" and "On the Waterfront."

She concludes: "There are no signs that the American Army, Navy, prison system or dockers' union is toppling in consequence. It is even possible that they may have been strengthened. Thus the Americans teach the world to admire their capacity for self-criticism. They also collect the handsome reward at the boxoffice.

"No one believes British institutions are so weak that they can survive only if they have everlasting doses of praise. But that is the main impression Public Relations Officers will create if they are allowed to continue in their present absurd fashion."

EXHIBITOR-SPAWNED PRODUCING SETUPS ENCOUNTER NOTHING BUT HEARTBURN

Exhibitor efforts to relieve the "product shortage" by backing certain independent producers with guaranteed playdates, thus "causing" more pictures to be produced, has met with no success so far. Despite the ambitious plans of individual exhibs and exhibitor organizations, the combined activities of all theatremen has done little, if anything, thus far to increase the flow of product.

Theatremen have been beefing about the product shortage for more than a year. The first effort "to take things in our own hands" was Allied States Assn.'s support of the Hal R. Makelim plan, by which Makelim was supposed to deliver 12 pictures yearly at the rate of one a month to exhibs who signed far in advance for the entire package. Despite frequent trips around the country lining up theatres and numerous revisions of his delivery timetable, Makelim has yet to start production. The Makelim plan was supposed to be the forerunner of similar deals with other indie producers, but it appears that Allied has soured on the whole idea.

While not repudiating Makelim officially, Allied leaders have privately stated that they have abandoned hopes. However, they claim that the Makelim project as well as other exhibitor production incentive programs served to call the shortage problem to the attention of the major film companies which have since increased their production schedules.

DCA's Troubles

Another exhibitor-inspired project—the formation of Distributors Corp. of America by Century circuit topper Fred Schwartz—has also encountered rough going. DCA, financed by theatremen, has as its purpose the production and distribution of films. Except for Joseph Kaufman's "Long John Silver," which was completed in Australia before the formation of DCA, the new firm has acquired little for distribution that means much in terms of of sock boxoffice.

It has a number of co-production deals lined up, but few have actually entered the production stage. There are indications of defections from DCA deals as, for example, producer-director Robert Aldrich's shifting of the Joan Crawford picture, "The Way We Are," from DCA to William Goetz and Columbia. DCA is said to have so much tied up in "Finian's Rainbow," the feature-length cartoon, that it has been unable to spread its financing around. Decision of Schwartz to relinquish the post of Century chief and devote fulltime to DCA points up the difficulties the new production-distribution firm has been facing. Preceding "Finian," DCA hopes to place "I Am a Camera," made in England by Remus Productions, in release in May.

TOA Also Slow-Go

Theatre Owners of America's plan to get more pictures on the market via its Exhibitors Film Financial Group is also experiencing slow going. Prospectus of the EFFG has been out since mid-January. Although terming it efforts to raise $10,000,000 via the sale of 100,000 shares of capital stock at $100 par value as "encouraging," EFFG is still a long way from its goal. The numerous regional meetings that were to be held to pitch the project have been slow in getting started. TOA leaders apparently have diverted their attention to fighting the threat of toll-tv and reports of the progress of EFFG have been noticable by their absence.

The EFFG stock issue has the approval of the Securities & Exchange Commission, but it also requires special dispensations from each state. According to a TOA spokesman, the okay has been obtained in 38 states and about a half a dozen more are expected. The remainder, he said, will not be necessary because circuits own theatres in these states.

The EFFG plans to meet about May 15 to elect permanent officers and directors. The slate will be entrusted with the job of deciding how to invest the coin for film production. If the entire issue of 100,000 shares is sold, EFFG estimates the net proceeds will be $9,692,000 after deduction of expenses in connection with organization of the company, about $2,500, and expenses in connection with the issuance and distribution of the shares, estimated at $35,000. EFFG, it's noted, may supply all or only a small part of the cost for producing a feature-length picture. EFFG, under the planned outlined, may wish to conduct operations larger than can be financed by the stock issuance. In that case, EFFG is authorized to borrow from banks, using as security the company's assets and its interests in films.

With formation of EFFG on a permanent basis still several months off, it'll be quite some time before the TOA-backed group is ready to shell out coin for production purposes. By that time, some industryites feel, the problem (product shortage) that brought about its formation may have ceased to exit. There are already indications of fewer exhibitor squawks about a product shortage.

BERNARD REICH SUES

Atty. Seeks 62G For Pressing Action Against Howard Hughes

Bernard Reich, Hollywood attorney who pressed a minority stockholders suit against RKO and Howard Hughes in California three years ago, is bringing an action of his own in N.Y. Supreme Court against the five individuals whom he represented in the RKO Coast litigation. In his complaint he laments that although he repped the quintet from July, 1952, to Sept., 1954, he never received his $62,000 fee.

Named defendants in the suit are attorneys Louis Kipnis and Leo B. Mittleman as well as RKO minority stockholders Eli B. Castleman, Marion V. Castleman and Louis Feuerman. Reich claims he was hired by Kipnis and Mittleman to file and prosecute the suit against RKO in 1952. His retainer was to be 10% of the proceeds and an additional fee to be determined later.

Stockholders suit was terminated shortly after Hughes bought RKO last year for $23,500,000. Reich's action came to light last week when Justice Morris Eder granted the plaintiff's motion to force the defendants to accept a bill of particulars. Kipnis et al rejected the bill on the grounds it was late in being submitted. However, the court he'd that Reich adequately explained the delay.

$45,000 Average Price Picks Up 8 Features for TV

Hygo Television Films, tv distribution outfit, paid an average of $45,000 for each of eight features picked up last week. Product was made by indie producers circa 1942 to 1947 and while some good star names were in the casts—Susan Hayward, George Raft and Loretta Young, to name a few—the pix for the most part were so-so at the boxoffice in original theatrical release.

Films had been distributed by Universal and United Artists. Ownership was picked up by Motion Picture Development Corp. (Jaques Grinieff), which in turn made the deal with Hygo. Hygo already has a rental pact set covering the eight, plus others, for exposure in the N. Y. area on WCBS-TV.

Titles are "Spitfire," "Outpost in Morocco," "We've Never Been Licked," "Smashup," "Ladies Courageous," "Night in Paradise," "Eagle Squadron" and "Salome, Where She Danced."

MAKELIM PROTESTS TITLE

Goldwyn Jr.'s 'Deadly Peacemaker' Called Too Close

Samuel Goldwyn Jr. is making his debut as a producer with the currently-shooting "The Deadly Peacemaker" and already he's involved in a hassle. Hal Makelim is disputing young Gaydwyn's right to the title, claiming it's too close to his, Makelim's, property named "The Pacemaker."

Title Registration Bureau of the Motion Picture Assn. is to determine who's to have what pic nomenclature via arbitration proceeding.

How Culture Tag Saves Film Tax In W. Germany

By HAZEL GUILD

Bonn, March 22.

The statement attributed to two members of the German Board of Evaluation by Geoffrey M. Shurlock, head of the Production Code Administration, that "if Hollywood producers hope to gain any tax preferences in Germany they had better start minimizing violence and giving more attention to emphasizing human values on the screen," has been repudiated by a member of the Board.

The German Board of Evaluation has come in for much recent criticism by the German press and by the film industry here, and there is much misunderstanding as to its motives, its reasons for operation, and its entire basis for judging films.

The Board is a creation of the cultural ministries of the nine states of West Germany. It sees all German and foreign films which have been licensed by the Board of Censorship for release in W. Germany. The board's power lies in that it is accredited to give all these films and shorts a designation of "worthwhile" or "extremely worthwhile" if it feels that the films are of outstanding cultural interest for German viewers. And on features and shorts with this appraisal, the amusement tax is then reduced in the individual states of Germany for amounts as high as 20%. Since there is no federal amusement tax in Germany, but instead municipal amusement taxes levied with the consent of the separate states, the award by the board can mean a considerable tax saving to the film producers and distributors.

In Nordrhein-Westfalen, for instance, if one-fifth of the film program has the "worthy" appellation, the tax reduction is 2%, if two-fifths of the program are "worthy," the reduction is 3%, three fifths 6%, four-fifths from 10 to 11%. And in Breman, if a full length documentary has the "worthy" tag, the program is eligible for a 20% reduction of the amusement tax.

Controversy in Germany has often hit the headlines, as the evaluation board's decisions are seemingly capricious and based on prejudice or lack of knowledge of the moving picture industry rather than fair, honest appraisals of what films are really standout.

Since members of the Board are civil servants selected by their various cultural ministries, they are usually people who have little knowledge about or interest in the film industry. The press has often noted that the film judging could be better handled if the Board members were professionals with knowledge of the industry.

In the period from Sept. 1953 through August 1954, the board handed down its awards to 211 German pictures and to just 30 U. S. films.

WB's New Orleans Meet

New Orleans, March 22.

Two-day sales meeting of Warner Bros. southeast and southwest district concluded today (Tues.) at the Roosevelt Hotel. John F. Kirby, southern division sales manager, presided. Discussions of WB's upcoming spring and summer releases highlighted the confab.

Homeoffice executives who attended included Edward E. Hinchy, head of playdate department; Robert A. McGuire, auditor of exchanges, and Charles Bailey, assistant to short subjects sales chief Norman H. Moray.

Kids Free at Drive-In

Burlington, Vt., March 22.

The first ozoner to make its 1955 bow in this area was the Mt. View Drive-in theatre in nearby Winooski, which opened on the night of March 17.

The establishment, opening at 7:30 p.m. on weekdays and 7 on Sundays, has a 50c admission charge for adults and free admission for the kids.

Ban Vs. 'Casanova' Irks Italian Prods.; Threaten to Halt Filmmaking

Rome, March 15.

All Italian film production, already slowed down by government hesitancy over extending protective legislation, may halt altogether as the result of a new controversy, regarding censorship, which is rapidly becoming a national "cause celebre." Stoppage threat, voiced by the National Producers Assn. in a meeting yesterday, stems from revocation of a license already granted the pic, "Adventures of Casanova," produced by Orso Film and released by CEI-INCOM. Already in release two months with full license but placed in the "forbidden to under "16" class, had passed an ANICA self-censorship body in the script stage. Later it got a seal and passed censorship in the final stage.

Ban was invoked by government Under-Secretary Oscar Scalfaro on the basis of a 1923 law which states pic can be called back even after license approval and release. In this case, public opinion claimed against pic turned out to be a set of 23 telegrams from Catholic Action Groups asking recall on moral grounds.

Case has brought about a special meeting of the producers association. Latter group threatened total stoppage of production unless the government annulled the ban and proposed parliamentary revocation of the law via which the ban was enforced. Producers also may ask Senate and House intervention in this "threat to a national industry."

Producers Feel They're Right

Producers feel they have both legal and logical argument in their favor, and cite "other" public opinion in form of favorable reviews, even from Catholic critics, throughout Italy in which "taste" with which the Casanova story was handled is frequently mentioned. On legal basis, they are moving to claim "excessive application of power."

Producer Sandro Pallavicini points out that everything possible was done all through production and before to insure censorship approval. Film was submitted in script form, then to various groups including the industry's own regulating committee, for the seal. Pic passed in all cases, with 24 minor dialogue cuts and a change in title. A company spokesman said: "It is already difficult to produce here without a clear idea of what the new film legislation will offer in the way of protection—now this unexpected trouble is added, making it impossible to go on."

Ironically, after years of local criticism of Hollywood's production code, localites are slowly coming round to it. They are asking for similar "protection" on their own productions, via a clearly defined censorship code. Only a few days ago, Prime Minister Scelba reportedly promised government backing of such a code.

'Paint' Shifts to Sydney When Italian Opera Co. Preems in Melbourne

Sydney, March 15.

First Italian grand opera company to undertake an Aussie legit tour since before the war opens in Melbourne at His Majesty's for J. C. Williamson, Easter Saturday (April 9). Moving out to make way for the opera season is the American musical, "Paint Your Wagon." Latter debuts at the Empire in Sydney, also Easter Saturday.

JCW has imported Canadian actor Hal Thompson to head an otherwise all-local cast in "My Three Angels." It takes over at the Theatre Royal here when "Dear Charles" folds March 31 to play a season in Adelaide, opening April 9.

After "Angels," JCW will bring in Googie Withers and her husband John McCallum to do the trio, "Simon and Laura," "Deep Blue Sea" and "Winter's Journey." Local product McCallum and Miss Withers, are currently at the Melbourne Comedy presenting the three shows.

Order In-Person Evidence On Sinatra London Trial

London, March 22.

As a prelude to the impending libel suit by Frank Sinatra against John Mills of Les Ambassadeurs, show columnist Logan Gourlay and the London Express Newspaper Ltd., the Court of Appeals last week ordered that Alfred R. (Cubby) Broccoli, a principal witness, should give his evidence in person. This confirmed the decision of a lower court; Sinatra, however, applied for the evidence to be taken on commission.

Broccoli, it was stated during the application, was host to Sinatra at the club when Mills was purported to have cancelled his (Sinatra's) membership and ordered that he should on no account be admitted again.

The appeal judges ruled that he was an important and material witness and that, as he had considerable business interests in the country, they were not satisfied he could not be in London at the material time. The trial, they suggested, could be fixed for a time when he was likely to be.

Set French-Italo 3-Yr. Prod. Pact

Rome, March 15.

A three-year extension of the Franco-Italian co-production agreements was signed last week in Paris by Nicola DePirro, repping Italy, and Jacques Flaud, head of the Centre National de la Cinematographie, signing for France. Action on this extension, originally slated for late 1954, was delayed when the Italian government granted a six-months-only extension to the Italo protective pic law. Now that this has been extended to Dec. 31, 1955, the Franco-Italian talks were able to proceed.

New pact, which runs through Dec. 31, 1957, includes several important changes. Strict 50-50 cast-and-credit division on twin product has been relaxed in case of "artistic" production while splicing of Italo and French pix will no longer be a pic-by-pic process, but will be done on a yearly basis. These items, included in previous legislation, had been frequently criticized as too binding and damaging to the artistic quality of the films.

Further agreement was reached with respect to facilities to be granted pix especially moppet-slanted, following an already-approved motion by the International Producers Assn. Details still must be worked out. Finally, the new pact calls for a study of the possibility of granting double nationality to Franco-Italian documentaries, this to bring a hike in quality as well as a better exchange between the two countries in their short subjects.

Set Stars for Royal Command Vaude Gala

London, March 15.

Show biz history will be made next month when the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will attend a Royal Command vaude gala in Blackpool. Eddie Fisher, who will have concluded his Palladium stint by that time, has been named as one of the stars. The gala, which will be held at the Opera House April 13, is sponsored by the Variety Artists Benevolent Fund and coincides with a northern tour by the Queen. Jack Hylton is staging the production.

Gracie Fields, a famous Lancashire lass, is crossing the Atlantic especially for the occasion. The Victoria Palace will shutter for the day to enable the Crazy Gang to make the journey to the North. Many of the acts chosen for the gala have strong northern associations including George Formby, Al Read, Wilfred Pickles, Albert Modley, Arthur Askey and Jewel and Warriss.

Rose Signs 3-Picture Deal With Columbia

London, March 22.

A new three-picture deal has been signed by David E. Rose with Columbia. First under the new pact will be "Port Afrique," based on a novel by Bernard Dryer, which is to be filmed on location in Casablanca.

Rose's initial production for Columbia release was "End of the Affair," which last week closed a three-week pre-release run at the Empire, Leicester Square.

Zanuck Sees No Eidophor Till 1956 in U.S.

Paris, March 22.

Darryl Zanuck is back here after looking over the progress of the Swiss large screen tv process, Eidophor, which 20th-Fox has under option. Zanuck told VARIETY he was pleased with the setup, but could not predict when it would be ready for the U. S. market since technical progress itself was so unpredictable. However, he did say that the live and filmed demonstrations in CinemaScope proportions were excellent and compared well, in quality and image, with the early C'Scope films. He ventured an opinion that Eidophor may be ready for the U. S. market in 1956, but would need special launching and depend on pic and tv trends of the time.

Zanuck said that it would probably be best utilized in about 1,000 theatres throughout the U. S. which were large enough to accommodate it. Drawback is that a special projector has to be installed and this will probably necessitate big houses. Present idea is to present it a few times a week in conjunction with regular films. Special events, plays or operas might be the fodder utilized.

Zanuck said that he could not tell the difference between live and film presentation during the C'Scope Eidophor demonstrations.

Zanuck also expressed contentment with the C'Scope production progress in Europe. He said that 18 C'Scopers were now in production in England, four in France, and he had 13 offers from Germany. He will see the first Gallic C'Scoper, "Fortune Carre," which opens here this week. He then hops to Germany to see the first print of the Franco-German C'Scoper, "Oasis," which will be released by 20th. He says that "Carmen Jones" will probably be entered in the Cannes Fest if special dispensation can be obtained for it since it can't be played here due to the objections of Editions Chodens, publishers of the Bizet works.

Zanuck scotched reports, which have sprung up here, that he may buy out RKO or merge with them.

W. GERMANS OPPOSE DEAL WITH DEFA PIX

Bonn, March 15.

Much has been argued recently in the West German government about the possible future cooperation between East and West Germany in co-producing films or releasing films in each section which are made in the other section. But the latest word is an official "no deal" by the West Germans.

Many East Zone films, however, have been filtering into the West, with thousands of interested viewers to see what has been produced by their former compatriots now under the Russian cloak. The police in Hannover recently nabbed two East Zone films, "Sturm Uber Asien" (Storm Over Asia) and "Hochland Von Pamir" (Highlands of Pamir) plus several prints of DEFA films (Soviet-controlled filmmaking company). All prints were seized by the West German police.

Theatre owners who have been playing the pictures are not being prosecuted, but the prints are being held under a legal technicality which holds that they have not been licensed by the West German Censorship Board since smuggled in.

West End Okay; 'Star' Mighty 15G In 2d, 'Country Girl' Wow $12,500, 'Happy' Hefty 8G, 'Cruz' $6,500, 5th

London, March 15.

Led by "A Star Is Born," which established a new house record opening frame at the Warner, West End firstrun grosses continue on a high level. The extreme cold spell of the past week had made no appreciable dent in receipts.

"Star," which was given a mammoth send off by the Variety Club with a preem attended by 60 British stars, looks terrific $15,000 in second round.

Second major new entry, "Country Girl," looks set for a smash $12,500 in opening session at the Plaza. British-made farce, "As Long They're Happy," is heading for a neat $8,000 or near in first stanza at Odeon Leicester Square.

Among the holdovers "Show Business" shapes fancy $6,500 in its fifth round at the Odeon, Marble Arch; "Vera Cruz" looks potent $6,500 in its fifth London Pavilion week; and "End of Affair" did a pleasing $8,700 in its third Empire session.

Estimates for Last Week

Carlton (20th) (1,128; 55-$1.70)—"Desiree" (20th) (5th-final wk). Steady $4,200 in 5 days. Previous frame was $5,500. "That Lady" (20th) opens March 15.

Casino (Indie) (1,337; 70-$2.15)—"Cinerama" (Robin) (23rd wk). Nice at over $12,000. Continues.

Empire (M-G) (3,009; 55-$1.70)—"End of Affair" (Col) (3d wk). Sturdy $8,700. Last week, $9,200. "Bad Day At Black Rock" (M-G) bows March 17.

Gaumont (CMA) (1,500; 50-$1.70)—"Underwater!" RKO) (3d wk). Below expectations at okay $4,200. "Foxfire" (GFD) opens March 24.

Leicester Square Theatre (CMA) (1,753; 50-$1.70) — "Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Fair $6,000. Last week, $7,000. Holds for third round, with "Night My Number Came Up" (GFD) due March 24.

London Pavilion (UA) (1,217; 50-$1.70)—"Vera Cruz" (UA) (5th wk). Still big at $6,500 after $6,800 in previous session "Contraband-Spain" (AB-Pathe) opens March 18.

Odeon, Leicester Square (CMA) (2,200; 50-$1.70) — "As Long As They're Happy" (GFD). Neat $8,000 or near. Continues.

Odeon, Marble Arch (20th) (2,200; 50-$1.70)—"Show Business" (20th) (6th wk). Pleasing $6,500. Last week, $7,900. "White Feather" (20th) preems March 24.

Plaza (Par) (1,902; 70-$1.70) — "Country Girl" (Par). Unanimous press helped to achieve smash $12,500 opener. Stays, natch!

Rialto (20th) (592; 50-$1.30) — "Carmen Jones" (20th) (7th wk). Still fancy at $4,700. Holds.

Ritz (M-G) (432; 50-$1.70) — "Prisoner of War" (M-G) (2d wk). Average $3,300. Stays.

Warner (WB) (1,735; 50-$1.70)—"Star is Born" (WB) (2d wk). Mammoth $15,000 or more. Opening week (six days) hit alltime high with $15,500.

Former Abbeyite Gets Catholic Guild's Award

Dublin, March 22.

Former Abbeyite Maureen Delany was awarded the Catholic Stage Guild's St. Columcille Statuette (the Irish Oscar) for her contributions to the Irish theatre at the annual Stage Guild Benefit Performance here. Citation described actress, who currently is doing character roles in London and films, as "one of the greatest comedy roles of our time."

She toured the U. S. on several occasions with the Abbey Company and created Bessie Burgess role in Sean O'Casey's "Plough and the Stars."

Rent Strike Hits Greece Show Biz

Athens, March 15.

All shops, bars, cafes, theatres, cinemas and night clubs were closed in Athens, Piraeus and provinces for one full day last week to peacefully protest against the new rent moratorium put in force this month by the Greek government. This new rent law imposes high rentals on all kind of shops and places of entertainment.

Film theatres are especially hit by this new law. Though all the old prewar leases are protected, a high percentage rental has been imposed on all cinemas. This rental percentage represents 25% of the boxoffice gross (after deduction of admission tax) for all first-run theatres. It is 20% for the second runs and 15% to 17% for all the others.

Legit theatres pay a lesser percentage.

It seems certain that this new high charge on pix theatres will hit the film business in Greece because now Greek exhibitors say they will not be able to pay high film rentals.

Many protests are planned to make the government see the need of reducing this percentage tax. Shopkeepers and exhibs say that last week's demonstration was only a warning. Unless remedial steps are taken a strike of long duration is threatened.

UNION LIFTS BAN ON AUSSIE SUNDAY PIX

Sydney, March 15.

Theatrical Employees' Union has lifted its 20-year-old ban on Sunday films to permit previews which will raise money for flood relief in New South Wales. Exhibitors and distribs are stringing along. Providing the shows don't start before 8 o'clock and the pix used are classified for general exhibition, everything's okay.

Hoyts will put on "No Business Like Show Business" (20th) at the Sydney and Melbourne Regents, and the Newcastle Civic. Greater Union has lined up "Doctor in House" (U) for its big State Theatre here, and "Purple Plain" (UA) for Melbourne. Metro is running "Jupiter's Darling."

Film of Mozart Opera Set for London Preem

London, March 15.

A full-length color version of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," filmed during last year's Salzburg's festival by Paul Czinner's Harmony Films, is to have its London preem at the Royal Festival Hall Monday, April 18, at a gala in aid of the English Opera Group. It subsequently will be released for non-theatrical exhibition in concert halls throughout England and Europe.

The film is a complete record of the opera and with intermission runs for about 150 minutes. The title role is portrayed by Cesare Siepi.

Cinema B.O. Boom Still Rolls in Aussie; 6 Pix Rack Up 74-Wk. Total

Sydney, March 15.

At least for what's left of this receding pre-tele era Down Under, it's a $64 question as to how long the film boxoffice can continue to expand at its present rate. First stanza of "The Egyptian" (20th) at the Regent here recorded 15% more admissions than "The Robe" (20th), and the latter had industryites gasping.

"Gone With Wind" (M-G) preem in Melbourne this round was nearly 50% of the last showing in the first week. Pic played here in 1953.

Six longruns in Sydney firstruns have a total of 74 weeks on the slate, or slightly better than a 12-week average per pic. Marathon performers are "Gone With Wind" (M-G), Liberty, 21 weeks; "Woman's World" (20th) at Mayfair, 13 weeks; "Susan Slept Here" (RKO) at Century, 13 weeks; "The Kidnappers" (British Empire) at Embassy, 11 weeks; "Living Desert" (Disney) at the Paris, 11, and "Caine Mutiny" (Col) at State, 5 weeks.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

National advertising expenditures of the film companies increased 15% in 1954 over 1953 with appropriations for magazine ads up $471,882 or 21.7%, according to a survey conducted by C. John Crockett of Coronet Magazine. Figures are based on statistics supplied by the Publishers Information Bureau and Crockett's rundown brings up-to-date info on advertising expenditures for the 11 months of 1954, carried by VARIETY a month ago. Crockett's rundown showed Republic in the lead, having upped its general magazine and newspaper sections advertising by no less than 1,806%, from $4,225 in 1953 to $80,535 in 1954. Universal raised its coin outlay in mags alone by 179.3%, increasing it from $201,044 to $561,555 in 1954. Companies that showed overall drops included Columbia (25.6%) which almost eliminated newspaper sections; RKO (40.8%) and United Artists (44.9%).

Antagonism between the exhibition and production sides of the film industry being what it is (see any issue of this journal), an action of Pat McGee, exhibitor leader, from his headquarters in Denver, following the death last December of Joe Scott of Omaha is worthy of note. For over two decades Scott had been spokesman for production (20th-Fox) and had had plenty of sharp trading to do with the late Joe Cooper and McGee. That this did not preclude respect and affection is attested by McGee's action in securing the approval of the trustees of the Cooper Foundation of Denver for scholarships to each of Joe Scott's four daughters. Girls, the oldest nearly ready to matriculate, are thereby assured of a college education.

Request by Frank Quinn's "Hollywood Preview," WOR-TV Tuesday night show, for a clip from the Greta Garbo starrer, "Camille," currently in a successful rerelease run, had Metro attorneys checking Miss Garbo's old contracts just to be sure it was okay to release the footage to video. No reason could be found for withholding the film, so Quinn, also Daily Mirror film critic, scored a beat in showing the Swedish star on tv. Occasion of Miss Garbo's first video exposure called for extra promotion and show bought some advertising space on the Journal American's tv page. Some viewers, it's reported were disappointed. They expected Miss Garbo to appear for a live interview.

Indications are that the film companies are taking a tougher attitude toward labor unions representing employees in various categories. In the midst of a hassle with the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen which is demanding a wage hike, the film companies are showing stiff resistence to demands of the white collarites. The attitude of Paramount, which is negotiating with the Homeoffice Employees Union, Local H-63, IATSE, is regarded as an omen by laborites. Local H-63 and Par negotiators have held several meetings which, so far, has resulted in a stalemate causing talk of a strike among the collarites.

Hollywood's Motion Picture Permanent Charities has collected $32,969 in new subscription since the adoption of the year-round solicitation plan, according to Campaign Chairman Ralph Clare, Warners headed the list with $9,172 in new subscriptions, Paramount was second with $2,117 and Republic third with $1,169. To date the 1955 campaign has raised a total of $1,073,130, or 85.85% of the $1,250,000 goal.

New device called Ultra Panatar, a variable anamorphic-attachment projection unit, has been developed by Panavision, according to its president, Robert Gottschalk. It is an improvement over the company's old Super Panatar and weighs less than five pounds. One feature of the Ultra Panatar is that it is equipped with a one-control knob which functions as a corrector lens, thus doing away with the image shift and eliminating the necessity of focusing.

Loren Cluster of Salem, Ill., head of a string of houses in Southern Illinois, donates the entire proceeds of a memorial show for his father, the late Robert G. Cluster, to the American Cancer Association and at a meeting of the Missouri-Illinois Theatre Owners last week suggested that other exhibs adopt his plan. Cluster, pere, died in 1949 and every year on the date of his death the special show is held.

Samuel Goldwyn, perfectionist, had an interior street set paved with real black top to make it resemble an outdoor street. It covered more than 6,750 square feet. Reason was that the script for "Guys and Dolls" called for footsteps on an asphalt pavement in one scene between Marlon Brando and Jean Simmons.

Martin & Lewis In Cowpoke

which Gobel is partnered, and it'll be a tinter. Story, modelled after the "Lady Eve" story, is about a brewery heir who hates the brewedy biz and instead is fascinated by snakes and butterflies. Sidney Sheldon will script and Paul Jones will produce.

Surveying the various widescreen projection systems, Taurog opined that the small screen was likely here to stay for certain films presenting intimate subject matter, same as he thought the black-and-white picture would never fade completely. "Theatres should be flexible," he observed. "If a picture is good for widescreen presentation, by all means, show it wide screen. But if it's intimate, there's no reason why there has to be added width."

As for tinting, Taurog noted that the color was still improving with more and more pastel shades being introduced. "Color is a star today, a definite plus to a film," he said, "but there are some pictures where it just doesn't belong and never will. It'd make them look too pretty."

Directors today are more willing to experiment with new screen faces than ever before, Taurog found, "particularly if there is boxoffice insurance in the form of a name star playing alongside the newcomer." However, he recalled, U.S. film audiences are still star conscious. "If a performer livess up to the public's expectations, they'll stay with him for a long, long time," he thought.

Taurog, who favors subscription-tv as "something that is bound to come eventually," said he considered television an invaluable source of talent for Hollywood. "There are many wonderful writers coming up on tv," he noted. "It's a perfect breeding ground for us. We used to develop our people in the two-reelers and in stock. Now tv is performing a similar service." Taurog believes in the inevitable marriage of Hollywood and tv, keeping in mind that the requirements of the tv screen are distinctly not those of the wide theatre screen.

PHOENIX LINES UP 2

Taradash to Direct One of 'Em For Columbia Release

Hollywood, March 22.

Phoenix Corporation, headed by Julian Blaustein and Daniel Taradash, has acquired screen rights to "Bell, Book and Candle" and "Guard of Honor" as the first two productions under its four-picture deal with Columbia.

Blaustein will produce both films, with Taradash directing "Candle" from his own screenplay. Another writer and director will be signed for "Honor."

Blind Previews

We take them out to a theatre, put up a big banner saying 'Preview Tonight' and let them run.

"Had we announced that this was going to be a Martin & Lewis film, we would very likely have gotten an audience consisting predominantly of Martin & Lewis fans. They'd have enjoyed themselves and would have given us a realistic reaction to the various comedy situations.

"The way it's done now, half the people in the audience came possibly in the hope of seeing a romantic drama. Naturally, they're disappointed. Then you may get a comment like: 'If I'd known this was a Martin & Lewis film, I'd never have come in!' You can't expect a realiable reaction from these people."

Taurog knows whereof he speaks. He has directed the last five M&L pix and is due to do a new one later this year.

The director said he felt so strongly about the preview policy that he'd taken the matter up on one or two occasions with the Screen Directors Guild. "I never get very far there," he noted. "They just mumble about the exhibitors not wanting to let out any preview details. Actually, I can understand their reluctance to publicize titles. But why not practice a certain amount of selectivity and avoid grumbling discontent by indicating the type of film that's to be shown." Taurog said he hoped to broach the matter to SAG again.

Italy's Labs

the Italian government withholding individual licenses for individual companies if it isn't satisfied with their arrangements with the labs. The way the situation appears to shape up to apprehensive N. Y. execs is that the Italian government may well try to control the flow of imports in relation to the color printing and other conditions to which the American companies are being forced to subject themselves.

As for "above quota" imports, which are necessary to allow pix to be prepared for the next season, the Italians are refusing to concede anything higher than 10% above the present quota. This is very little, the companies complain, and makes it difficult for them to work in advance since most of the films released in Italy have to be dubbed locally. There's also the question of such imports being allowed in without specific lab commitments.

as source of meaningful guideposts for the future.

William J. Heineman, United Artists distribution v.p., has set "Marty" to open April 11 at N. Y.'s Sutton Theatre. This traditionally has been an outlet for offbeat and "art" merchandise. The angle is obvious, according to the vet and hep tradesters; Heineman wants at least eight weeks of word-of-mouth building. His aim is to "establish" the picture before there's any high and mighty sales pitch to trade and public.

A theatrical boxoffice payoff via "Marty" doubtless will lead to more and more tv-to-screen transitions. United Artists apparently already is convinced of the possibilities, having set the "Patterns" tv-er for a film version to be produced by Jed Harris and Michael Myerberg.

Rep and Reich claims, of course, makes Levy's ruling academic.

Horizon sued UA in Jan., 1954, contending the distrib owed it $90,000. UA, however, denied any coin was due the plaintiff and counterclaimed with the assertion that Horizon actually owed it $250,000. Subsequently Horizon attached $100,000 of UA's funds on the ground that the distrib is a "foreign" corporation." Court later directed the sheriff to return the escrowed fund.

'Cinerama Holiday's' Very Festive

Second in Medium Outpacing Icebreaker—Benefits From Intensive Regional Selling Know-How

Cinerama, the daddy of the widescreen systems, continues to amaze the industry. "Cinerama Holiday," the second picture in the medium, is expected to hit the $1,000,000 gross mark by next week playing in only five theatres. It opened in New York Feb. 8 and in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit, and St. Louis between that date and Feb. 21.

Surprising aspect of the second picture, according to a Stanley Warner spokesman, is that at this stage of the engagement in the various theatres it is doing better than the icebreaker. He attributes this to the mass ticket selling system devised by the company to bring in audiences from a radius of at least 150 miles from each theatre.

For example, 1,400 people were drawn to Philadelphia from Reading, Pa., 60 miles away; 1,500 from Youngstown, O. to Pittsburgh, about a 100 miles distant; 500 from M:. Holly, Pa. to Philadelphia; 1,500 students from the U. of Pennsylvania; 1,500, 2,400, and 2,000 respectively from Springfield, Decatur, and Buffalo, Ill. to St. Louis. In addition, Cinerama is making a specialty of catering to special groups via special Saturday morning kid shows at a $1 a head and group sales to industrial, charity and other orgs. Groups buying out an entire performance are given special discounts. A substantial percentage of Cinerama's sales are not made over the boxoffice.

Stanley Warner places its selling job in three categories—(1) convincing the public that a Cinerama picture will never be shown in nabe theatres, (2) selling by mail and by groups, and (3) finding a way to overcome the use of the word "travelog" in describing the two current Cinerama pictures. While the theatre company claims it has succeeded in its efforts on the first two counts, it still has a way to go on the last, although it feels that "travelog" is quietly fading from use. How to describe what "This Is Cinerama" and "Cinerama Holiday" is causing quite a poser for SW. It would like it to be known simply as a new entertainment form and let it go at that. While SW's bally and advertising may not call the pictures "travelogs," reviewers apparently haven't come up with a new word to please SW, and the odds are that when the third Cinerama picture, "Seven Wonders of the World," hits the market, the word "travelog" will be very much in use again.

SW execs, at least publicly, are not expressing any concern about the impending arrival of the Todd-AO "Oklahoma," maintaining that any new film process is good for all motion picture business. In fact, it's noted that some SW theatres will be probably equipped for exhibiting the Todd-AO process.

SW's direction toward the making of a story-line picture continues vague. The spokesman said the company was considering many projects. In his own personal opinion, but emphasizing that it was not an official company statement, he said the proposed deal with Warner Bros. to film "Lewis & Clark" was not dead. However, he had no facts to back his belief nor could he venture a guess on the timetable when the picture would be made.

Soviet Tint 'Bargain'

When the Russians took over their zone of Germany, they also grabbed the German Agfa color works. They're now offering their tint process, to German and Austrian producers at 20% under western tint prices.

In reporting this in N. Y. last week, Ludwig Polsterer, head of Austria's Cosmopole Film, said the Russian offer was only half-tempting.

"It so happens their color is also 20% below western quality," he commented.

Par's Curvature 1.2% of the Throw

Curved screens, the depth of which will measure 1.2% of the length of projection throw, will be used in exhibition of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command" in the VistaVision horizontally-fed-film system. This was explained yesterday (Tues.) at N. Y.'s Paramount Theatre by Robert Shapiro, managing director of the house, and Par execs A. W. Schwalberg, Jerry Pickman and Frank La Grande.

The United Paramount flagship situation is now being remodeled, with work crews on night shifts seven nights a week, to make ready for "SAG" April 20. The screen picture, it was said, will measure 35-by-64 feet and the high point of depth six to eight feet.

Screen dimensions will be the greatest in the world, said Shapiro, comparing, for example, with the 58-by-25 foot picture seen at N.Y.'s Radio City Music Hall when "White Christmas" played in the V'Vision horizontal process. Hall's screen was flat.

Curvature angle means a greater accent on the audience's sense of participation, claimed Schwalberg. He further stressed that exhibs switching to curved screens, which were recommended, or to flat-screen V'Vision in either horizontal or standard vertical format, need have no fear about the loss of seats. Up-front and side pews will provide completely satisfactory screen viewing, he said.

Standard optical sound will be used in horizontal V'Visioning of "SAG" for the simple reason there has been insufficient time to incorporate directional audio, said La Grande. In contrast, conventional prints will have Perspecta sound.

Special projection heads will cost $5,000 to $6,000 each for the horizontal exhibition of V'Vision but this is on an individual sale basis. Mass production will reduce the price, said La Grande.

Work at the Par Theatre, including removal of six feet of proscenium wall on each side, and installation of the big screen, will cost over $100,000, Shapiro estimated. He said though that the screen will be compatible with other widescreen-type pix, perhaps including Todd-AO.

Pickman disclosed that the first public theatre showing of "SAG" in kingsize V'Vision will be at the Orpheum Theatre, Omaha, at this upcoming weekend, this in connection with the U. S. Air Force's celebration of the ninth anniversary of its Strategic Air Command wing.

Jack Goldberg's New All-Negro 'Featurettes'

Jack Goldberg, film producer-distributor who specializes in all-Negro films, has acquired the worldwide distribution rights to 12 musical variety featurettes produced by Studio Films Inc.

Pictures, all in color, include such performers as Nat King Cole, Sarah Vaughan, Dinah Washington, and the bands of Lionel Hampton, Duke Ellington and Count Basie. Running time of the pix are between 30 and 40 minutes.

First of the series, "Revue in Rhythm" has been booked by the Loew's circuit for April showings.

PARAMOUNT CIRCUIT AWAITS OZONER OKAY

Minneapolis, March 22.

Although no confirmation is forthcoming from Harry B. French, United Paramount Theatres circuit president here, that circuit is prepared to enter the drivein theatre field as soon as Paramount has cleared all consent decree barriers.

Approximately 70 independent outdoor theatres have come into being throughout UP's territory comprising Minnesota, North and South Dakota and western Wisconsin.

Although this area is undoubtedly the country's worst weather belt, with an extremely short outdoor season, the Paramount chain has looked with envious eyes on the ozoner field.

Show Biz Shares In 40% Snapback

By MIKE WEAR

The stock market staged a sharp recovery the middle of last week after hitting the low of its recent nosedive on Monday (14). Advance represented about 40% recovery of the ground lost. Because many issues of the Amusement Group did not fall off as badly as numerous other groups, the rally did not mean any great rebound for some shares in this category. Majority of amusement stocks had minor gains.

After hanging up a long list of plus signs Tuseday (15) and Wednesday (16), the market turned mixed later, with Wall Street merely marking time on Friday (18). Since volume declined during the uphill climb and the market finished the week on a rather doubtful note caution on the part of many traders was plainly indicated.

The fact that motion picture shares failed to get far late in the week brought adverse comment in the Street. However, with grosses more or less marking time during Lent and the federal income (plus many state income tax) periods, this was a more or less natural development. But the number of modest-grossing pictures recently released obviously has been a dampening factor.

Biggest recovery among the amusements were the two CBS stocks. The Class A shares roared ahead 4¾ points to 91, where it was only 3¼ points from the year's high. The "B" stock soared 3¾ to 90, where it was 3¾ points below the peak. Both will be split soon, which undoubtedly figured. Zenith was the next strongest, climbing 2¼ to 96½. These shares undoubtedly were entitled to a sharp rebound after falling 5¾ points the week before.

General Precision Equipment also staged a sharp recovery of 1½ points to 61¼. It was down 4½ in the preceding week. Eastman Kodak was up 50c to 70.

There was plenty of film and cinema shares to show fractional gains. Best advances were made by Stanley Warner, up three-eighths; Universal, with a 50c gain and WB pix, an advance of five-eighths to 19. As is often the case, Decca moved up with Universal, sporting a gain of nearly a point to reach 15⅝.

RCA common climbed five-eighths to 41½, which hardly wiped out the 3¼ deficit of the preceding week.

Among the pix shares winding up with losses were 20th-Fox, off three-eighths; ABC-Paramount Theatres, down 50c; National Theatres, off 25c; Paramount Pix, off three-eighths; and Technicolor, off 25c. Last-named dipped below 15 at one juncture. Skiatron held about even.

Vistarama's New Rep

S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corp., N. Y., has been named the exclusive agency for the Vistarama anamorphic lensing process in the eastern half of the U.S., according to Carl W. Dudley, Vistarama prexy. The outfit has a non-exclusive arrangement for the rest of the country and overseas.

Earlier, Dudley had announced formation of Oceanic Pictures Corp. to handle negotiations for western hemisphere distribution on all future product of Dudley Corp.'s film units abroad. Oceanic has Dudley as prez and H. Bruce Newbery as exec v.p.

Like CinemaScope, Vistarama uses a "squeeze" lens compressing twice normal width images on to regular 35m and 16m negatives. Projected through an anamorphic projection lens, the image thus taken can be spread out to as aspect ratio of 2.66 to 1. Release prints in any aspect ratio—from the standard three to four dimension to the Vistarama anamorphic 2.66 to 1 ratio—can be made from the anamorphic negative, Dudley said. He stressed that Vistarama was now available to the industrial and educational markets.

Vistarama has been used on a series of theatrical shorts. Warner Bros.' first widescreen feature, "The Command," was made in Vistarama. It was later released under the CinemaScope tradename.

If FCC Okays Toll

the pay-as-you-see issue. They tried to make this come about through COMPO, but were turned down by the companies which have the government's 16m suit hanging over them.

Hurray for Gehring

Nevertheless, the theatremen have welcomed such individual expressions as the one that came last week in Dallas when William C. Gehring, 20th-Fox executive assistant sales manager, told a drive-in convention that "If the FCC authorizes toll-tv, we're beat." Exhib leaders favor this somewhat downbeat approach if for no other reason than that they hope it'll rouse other theatremen to what they consider a prime danger to the business.

Exhibs' future toll-tv strategy was discussed in Washington at a meet last week. It was attended by Alfred Starr and Trueman T. Rembusch, cochairman of the Committee against Pay-as-you-See TV; Dallas Smythe of the University of Illinois who will conduct a series of economic studies for the group, relating particularly to per program unit costs under various broadcast setups; Wilbur Snaper and Abram F. Myers of Allied; Marcus Cohn of the law firm repping the committee in Washington, and p.a. reps Robert Tapplinger and Donald Walsh.

Group deliberated all day and studied the FCC questionnaire on the basis of which interested parties are to file briefs with the Commission by May 9. Some of the questions posed by the FCC won't be answered by exhibs until the opposition has filed. The FCC has provided a month for rebuttals. The committee also went over a list of qualified men whom it might engage as engineering counsel.

The committee expects to meet again a week or 10 days prior to the May 9 deadline to discuss various aspects of the anti-toll brief.

Deny Frisco 'Significance'

Meanwhile, exhibs last week denied that, in taking the Marciano-Cockell fight from San Francisco, they're guilty of the very thing the toll-tv interests are accused of doing, i.e. depriving the public of "free" programs.

"The theatres aren't buying the fight, Theatre Network Television is," observed a spokesman. "Exhibitors are merely buying a show offered to them, and they're bringing it into their theatres on a closed circuit that in no way deprives the public of channels currently in use. If the toll-tv people would compete on the same basis, by bringing their own cables into the homes, we wouldn't have any objections to anything they carry. After all, this is a freely competitive economy."

Crux of the exhibs' arguments for a long time has been that the government has no right to hand over to special interests the "free" air. Since coinbox telecasts would inevitably use channels currently in use for regular broadcasting, exhibs maintain that they would deprive the public of shows it might ordinarily be seeing on those channels for free.

Toll-tv proponents have argued that, in bottling up the prize fight, exhibs are in fact guilty of the same offense they lay to the coin-box systems in that the public would be unable to see the bout anywhere except in the theatres. It's their view that, if anything, fee-tv would make the event available to all, with no blackouts necessary.

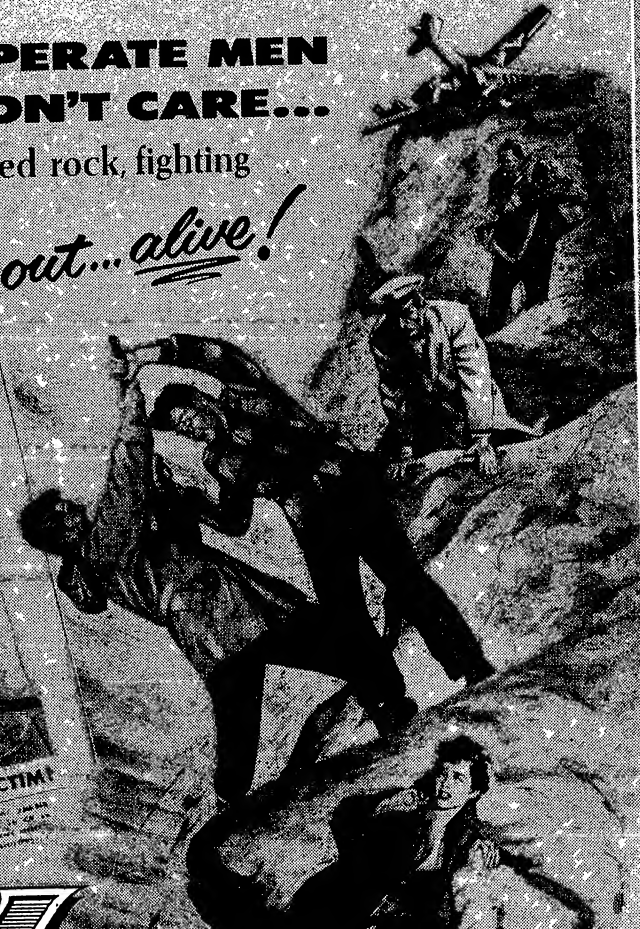
watches in the U. S. and the ensuing "hurt feelings" of some of the natives here, may be held responsible, it is generally believed that this is not the main reason. Some of this season's Yank releases, though mostly sturdy grossers in the U. S., are rated too American here as to story. Others, though having European themes or location, seem to be made too much from a Yank point-of-view to evoke much enthusism here.

The only U. S. pictures among this season's top grossers so far are "Living Desert" (RKO) and the reissue of "Modern Times" (UA). "Sabrina" (Par), just getting started, also looks like an important coingetter. Satisfactory, though not smash, grosses have been racked up by "Three Coins in Fountain" (20th), "Knock on Wood" (Par), "Mogambo" (M-G), "Glenn Miller Story" (U), "Knights of Round Table" (M-G) and "Rose Marie" (M-G), last in some keys.



Yank pix gets heaviest competition here from German and French product especially in the German and French part of Switzerland.

Broidy's Road Pitch

Tells Dallas Exhibs to 'Make Room for Allied Artists' —Assures Philly Nobody Else Will Handle His Pix

Dallas, March 22.

Steve Broidy, prez of Allied Artists, urged Dallas area exhibitors here Tues. (15) to "make room for Allied Artists." His talk opened a coast-to-coast, speaking tour in which he will tell the story of the "new Allied Artists" to exhibitors in 13 major cities. Morey Goldstein, general sales manager, accompanied Broidy.

Broidy invited the exhibitors to "gamble a little playing time" in order to expand their source of supply.

A crack directing team and flashy line up of stars was the chief selling points. Directors included William Wyler, John Huston, Billy Wilder and Jose Ferrer. The acting talent includes Humphrey Bogart, Gary Cooper, Jose Ferrer, Errol Flynn and possibly Clark Gable.

According to Broidy, "we are negotiating with Gable for a co-starring role with Bogart in "The Man Who Would Be King."

Where's That 'Shortage?'

Philadelphia, March 22.

Speaking here last week, Allied Artists' Steve Broidy denied rumors that AA was planning to distribute its blue chip product through other companies. "I deny this irrevocably," Broidy declared. "No company other than Allied Artists will distribute our product in the United States."

Broidy appeared with Morey R. Goldstein, v.p. and general sales manager, and William F. Rodgers, who was described as sales consultant for AA. The execs are making a nationwide tour of 15 cities, which began last Tuesday (15) in Dallas. "We are beating the bushes to let the exhibitors of this country know that Allied Artists has found its place in the sun," Broidy said.

Luncheon meeting followed a screening of "Annapolis Story" and "Shotgun" in the Variety Club's quarters in same hotel. Broidy said AA policy was based on premise that "a worthwhile story and the creative talent to depict it on the screen make the best combination."

Broidy outlined the history of his company, which this month celebrates its silver anniversary, including the switch from the Monogram label to Allied Artists 2 years ago. "When," he remarked, "the name Monogram seemed to indicate smallpox." He assured the Philly exhibs good product and listed such forthcoming releases as Errol Flynn in "The Warrior" and Joel McCrea in "Wichita."

Asking only for a break, Broidy added: "In looking over the availabilities in Philadelphia, there seems to be no such thing as a product shortage at least as far as Allied Artists is concerned."

Screening For Shareholders

Allied Artists prexy Steve Broidy is also bringing company stockholders into his educational program. For he's invited shareholders to attend a screening at the Avon Theatre, N. Y., tomorrow (Thurs.) of two upcoming AA films.

In the course of the preview Broidy will brief the investors on AA's future production plans. Scheduled to be screened are "An Annapolis Story," with John Derek and Diana Lynn, and "Shotgun." Latter stars Sterling Hayden, Yvonne De Carlo and Zachary Scott.

While major companies frequently invite stockholders to remain after annual meetings to o.o. new product, it's unusual to stage an "out-of-season" screening for shareholders. Response to the invitation, which went out last week, was described as "heavy" by AA v.p. Ed Morey.

Chi Tax Comparisons

Chicago, March 22.

Total theatre and amusement tax collections in the City of Chicago for 1954 show a slight increase over 1953 totals; 1953 collections were in turn greater than 1952 receipts. Thus for two straight years now Windy City amusement and theatre tax collections reflect a steady upbeat in theatre attendance (films and legit) and in general amusement patronage (cabarets, amusement parks, etc.).

Theatre tax collections for 1954 totalled $1,203,243 as compared with $1,118,039 in 1953 and $1,044,414 in 1952. Amusement tax receipts in 1954 were $1,916,495 as against 1,800,259 in 1953 and $1,718,752 in 1952.

Pittsburgh Exhib Conclave Told 'It Tolls for Thee'

By HAROLD COHEN

Pittsburgh, March 22.

More than 200 exhibitors attending 33d annual convention of Western Pennsylvania MPTOA at Roosevelt hotel were told that high film rentals are doing their best to kill theatre business and that pay-as-you-see tv, if it is permitted to go through, will do the trick if the distributors don't do it first. Number of speakers said home-toll was the biggest threat the industry has ever faced and Don Walsh, co-chairman with Trueman Rembusch of Committee Against Pay-As-You-See Television, warned delegates that it is much later than they suspected.

Heaviest gun was fired by Horace Adams, regional vice-president of Allied, who saw home-toll as the death knell and at the same time lambasted producers for failing to see the handwriting on the wall in charging so much for product. Adams pointed to the great number of theatre closings in the past couple of years, particularly in the smaller towns and scored Hollywood for strangling the grass roots of the business. He was seconded by Mrs. Clarence Armstrong, motion picture chairman of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs, who said the neighborhood theatre had become the hub of the community and the decline in the number of nabe houses was a real source of regret.

Charles L. Blatt, president of Allied of Western Pennsylvania, and Harry Hendel, chairman of convention, welcomed the delegates and other speakers were Terry Turner, on exploitation; James Nicholson, president of the American Releasing Corp., Fred J. Schwartz, head of Distributing Corp. of America.

Today (Tues.) Steve Broidy, president of Allied Artists, is to talk on plans of his company after screening "Annapolis Story" and "Shot Gun." Closed session is being addressed by Abram F. Myers, followed by forum conducted by Morris M. Finkel, local theatre owner and director of National Allied and chairman of board of directors.

Following election of officers, convention will end with a dinner dance at Ankara, local night club.

Perspecta's 5th Producer

Perspecta Sound, the single, optical track system of stereophonic sound, reports that Associated British Pictures Corp. is the fifth major film company to adopt the Perspecta system. Universal, Metro, Warner Bros., and Paramount as well as indie producers are already using Perspecta.

ABPC will install equipment for recording in Perspecta at its Elstree Studio in the near future. The system is already in use at Metro's British studio.

OMAHA OPENING

'Strategic Air Command' Gets the Junket Treatment

Omaha, March 22.

Paramount will give "Strategic Air Command" its first big splash this Friday, Saturday (25-26) with a preem screening at the Orpheum Theatre here. Air Command, headquartered at Offutt Air Base near here, is flying in 100-odd newspapermen, mag writers, and other pundits for the occasion.

Paramount will be repped by prexy Barney Balaban; producer Samuel J. Briskin, James Stewart, June Allyson and Frank Lovejoy.

Preview also marks first public showing of Paramount's new horizontal, double-frame VistaVision production and screen presentation process. Special equipment and a 50 by 27 foot screen were installed at the Orpheum.

This is the biggest hoopla for a pic since Howard Hughes wined and dined newsmen in Silver Spring, Fla., two months ago for "Underwater!"

While the whole operation ostensibly is SAC's, it looks like Paramount also had some influence in drawing the invitation lists. For, in addition to pressmen who specialize in Air Force and military matters, the invitees include many columnists, tradepaper editors and radio-tv newscasters who usually are asked to show business junkets.

Jerry Pickman, Par's ad-pub v.p., was in Omaha recently for confabs with Gen. Curtis LeMay, SAC chief, on setting the stage.

Brylawski Tells Maryland Legislators Films Rely Wholly Upon Weekends

Annapolis, Md., March 22.

Maryland film exhibitors are reasonably optimistic that the State Senate will pigeonhole the House-passed wages and hours bill. Nevertheless they are continuing to watch the situation closely because the Legislature folds April 4 and there is always the possibility of the measure slipping through in the last minute rush.

Bill, which proposes overtime pay for all weekend work, irrespective of whether overtime hours are involved, would hit the theatres, the bulk of whose business is weekends.

Julian Brylawski, repping TOA and the Stanley-Warner circuit, testified against the measure last week before the Senate Labor Committee. Brylawski, who came here from his headquarters in Washington, explained that no industry was more concerned with the bill than were the theatres. He pointed to the drop in attendance in recent years and predicted that passage of the measure would result in closing many more Maryland theatres, especially in smaller towns.

"We are today a weekend business," Brylawski said, "and this bill would penalize us upon the only days upon which we depend to keep alive." He added that at least 80% of theatre employees "are casual workers and usually hold jobs elsewhere, and this extra money is buying homes, paying hospital bills, etc."

He also emphasized that theatres in small towns are important in their communities and that that forced closing would damage other business in those communities.

'Prayer Award'

Washington, March 22.

Gene Autry and Gail Davis received the "President's Prayer Award" Friday (18) for services to the U. S. Savings Bonds campaign. Presentation was presented at the Treasury Department.

In addition to other services, Autry has donated a filmed short to encourage school children to participate by the purchase of saving stamps. Miss Davis, in her character of "Annie Oakley" appears in a trailer in a similar subject, now being shown on video.

"The President's Prayer" is an embossed copy of "the little prayer of my own," which President Eisenhower read at his inauguration. A Treasury citation is on the reverse side of the framed award.

IFE's Playdate Collection Drive

Tagged as a testimonial to Italian Films Export's three new division managers, IFE's "Playdate Collection Drive" launches tomorrow (Thurs.), according to Bernard Jacon, IFE v.p. in charge of sales.

The three new division toppers are Seymour Schussel, eastern division; Glenn Fannin, central division, and Alex Cooperman, western division.

U's '55 Total: 34

"To meet the demands of the present market," Universal plans to increase its 1955 releases from 32 to 34, according to Charles J. Feldman, U v.p. and general sales manager. That's an increase of six over the number of pix U released in 1953-54.

During the four months summer period starting in May, U will put out 12 pix, half of them in color, one in 3-D and two in CinemaScope. Summer sked also includes the pre-release of "The Shrike," starring Jose Ferrer and June Allison.

Disneyland, Etc., Excite New Zest For Video Bally

Success of the Disneyland tv show in plugging Walt Disney product plus the mentions Warner Bros.' films will receive on WB's upcoming telepix for ABC-TV has the industry, both distributors and exhibitors, seriously considering the value of film company produced or sponsored video entertainment. From the standpoint of the boxoffice, such shows as Disneyland and Ed Sullivan's occasional tributes to the industry or to individual pictures has aroused public interest in the product displayed.

Film moguls, via the Motion Picture Assn. of America, have long weighed an all-industry show, with a sponsor picking up the tab. However, the project has long been bogged in complications relating to who's going to do what and when. The Disney show and the upcoming Warner program indicates a free-for-all, and industryites feel that if the film biz is going to use television for serious plugging, it'll have to be on an individual basis.

Perhaps typical of the thinking of a large group of exhibitors is that of Edward I. Fessler, an Alabama drive-in operator. In an unsolicited letter to Metro production chief Dore Schary, Fessler suggests that Metro embark on a weekly tv venture possibly called "Movie Land" or "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Presents." The format, Fessler says, might "consist of various people from your organization, possibly yourself, acquainting the general public with the background of motion pictures, the methods of production, the stars involved, and frequently sitting it in on actual scenes from current or forthcoming productions."

Drive-In Consultant Now Dean at U. of Houston

Houston, March 22.

Dr. Frank Tiller, who has been active in making surveys concerning ozoner operations for the Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners Assn., has been named dean of the College of Engineering at the U. of Houston.

He was formerly dean of engineering and director of the research center at the Lamar State College of Technology at Beaumont.

B.O. Tax Cut Showing

Washington, March 22.

Uncle Sam received only $313,000 in admissions taxes in December 1954, compared with $602,000 a year before. Reason for the difference was the slash in the bite from 20% to 10% in the spring of 1954, and its elimination for motion picture tickets of 50 cents and less.

On the other hand last December was a boff month at the nation's niteries. The take was $892,000, contrasted with $433,000 for December 1953. The 20% levy on nitery tabs continues unchanged.

Majors Nix WRCA Local ½-Hr. Spot Preceding Oscar

Film companies, individually and collectively, are turning a deaf ear on a pitch to sponsor a half-hour show on WRCA-TV, NBC's N. Y. outlet, on March 30. The video station, asking $5,000 in time charges, had offered the 7-7:30 slot, which is sold locally rather than via network, with emphasis on the fact that it precedes the Academy Awards telecast of the same night by only a couple of hours.

Sales pitch was made to the Motion Picture Assn. of America which, in turn, forwarded it to the ad-pub directors of the distribution outfits.

Couple of the pic promotion execs, speaking privately, said they'd need substantially more time to set up a half-hour program, even if they were inclined to do so. One ad-pub topper made the point that often his company encounters no trouble in getting space on tv for free, that is, with the showing of clips from new pix on certain shows. So why pay? he wanted to know.

Skepticism Inbred As To Trade-Wide Promotion; Need Sunday Punch Boys

Film industry's newly-formulated program designed to build theatre attendance above the current "good but not good enough" level hinges on one consideration that will determine success or failure. This, according to trade vets, is whether genuine leadership will be given the various projects contemplated.

Close to 70 members of the trade, representing all of distribution and about 6,000 theatres, in a conclave called last week by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, called the turns on what should be done. They blueprinted plans for lots of research on the extent of public support of films, a poll in which ticket-buyers would vote their best pic and best player selections, and a three-pronged approach to boxoffice lures for the younger element.

Tradesters now admit, though, that these are but vague outlines of plans which demand the application of highly-placed exec talent if there's to be the right kind of followup and a final payoff. Specifically, it's said, each project must be placed in the hands of committee chairmen who command top respect in the trade.

It's no secret that previous undertakings by the trade collectively received little more than lip service after the original announcements. With the lone exception of "Movietime U.S.A.," say some pic officials, campaigns to build the b.o. on a nation-wide basis hardly got beyond the talk stage.

In light of this, the key problem is to obtain the services of top-bracket circuit men capable of carrying the ball and inspiring full-scale support from within the trade. Persons prominent in the COMPO fold concede this, adding that the multi-faceted campaigns to step up attendance might just as well be abandoned right now unless the leadership comes into being.

Talks French Unions Into 'If-Money'

Denied Government Subsidy, Sacha Gordine Devises A Unique Basis for Feature

Paris, March 15.

Sacha Gordine, always a colorful ornament of the industry, has gotten the five toughest unions in French films to give him a waiver on salary payments and the green light to shoot his next picture on an "if-money" basis.

Turned down in his request for a subsidy by the Centre National de la Cinematographie (government financial agency for the encouragement of independent production), Gordine has gotten permission from unions representing actors, directors, authors, cameramen, and studio crews to go ahead with a small fraction of the budget normally needed in this country for bigtime operation.

Refusal by government agency to bankroll veteran producer of such features as "Dedee d'Anvers," "La Ronde," "Miracles Only Happen Once" and others is attributed to (1) five year old flop, "La Cle des Songes," and (2) fact that Gordine has not always kept to allotted budget. His friends within industry claim but don't explain "politics."

Previously a roundrobin petition signed by some 250 names including such stars as Jean-Louis Barrault, Madeleine Renaud, Yves Montand, Danielle Darrieux, Claude Dauphin, Jean Marais; writers Marcel Achard, Jacques Deval, Noel-Noel, Henri Jeanson, Andre Roussin, Charles Spaak; directors Jacques Tati, Max Ophuls, Yves Allegret, Marcel Carne, Jean Boyer and Andre Cayatte had been presented to the Centre National asking that body to reconsider and subsidize Gordine. Latter no-diced.

Gordine's next effort, a nine episoder on the order of "If I Had A Million," has sketches from Jacques Prevert, Charles Spaak, Henri Jeanson, Jacques Natanson, Jacques Sygurt, Georges Neveux and Pierre La Roche. Skits will be directed by Marcel Carne, Rene Cayatte, Max Ophuls, Marcelle Pagliero, Jean-Paul le Chanois, Roger Tollier and Georges Lanpin. Chief cameraman will be Michel Kelber who has recently done the lensing for the Stendhal "Rouge et Noir" film.

How Dear to The Heart Can It Be?

As confusing as that elusive date for the industry roundtable conference is the date for winding up the arbitration conference. For a subject that some industryites feel is so dear to the hearts of the distributors and a segment of exhibition, there seem an amazing lack of knowledge or activity on the arbitration front.

The last meeting of the distrib-exhib conferees was held three weeks ago, at which time the illuminating statement that "progress was being made" was issued. Two or three little things had to be done, it was noted, and arbitration would be in the bag shortly.

A call to one of the conferees brings arbitration up to date.

"Any developments in the arbitration conference?"

"Damned if I know."

"Has anyone been in touch with you lately on the subject?"

"No."

"Is arbitration still alive?"

"As far as I know, it's still alive."

"Are any additional meetings planned?"

"I haven't been advised of any."

SANGUINE ON 'SAWYER'; EDIT FOR WIDESCREEN

Test run of David O. Selznick's 1938 "Tom Sawyer," in Technicolor, has convinced Selznick that the Mark Twain classic has as much audience appeal as ever and he is proceeding in editing the pic for widescreen presentation.

"Tom Sawyer" was first released in 1938 under the Selznick-International banner and went out as a United Artists release. Film has Tommy Kelly as Tom Sawyer, Jackie Moran as Huck Finn and Ann Gillis as Becky Thatcher. In its forthcoming reissue some 12 minutes will be cut from the original running time which was 93 minutes.

The reissue will be channeled by Selznick via the states righters as will be the reissues of several other Selznick properties including "Rebecca," etc.

Lightman Buys Two

Memphis, March 22.

M. A. Lightman, prexy of the Malco chain, added two local driveins to his list with outright purchases of Bellevue and Summer outdoor theatres from Kemmons Wilson. This gives Lightman eight theatres in Memphis, including five hardtop houses.

Lightman is also dickering for purchase of Frayser ozoner about 15 miles from here.

Broidy at Shor's Mar. 24

Allied Artists prez Steve Broidy, v.p.-sales chief Morey Goldstein and sales consultant William F. Rodgers will discuss upcoming production and "tell the story of the new AA" March 24 at a luncheon at Toots Shor's, N.Y.

Conclave is in line with a 14-city tour which Broidy and Goldstein launched in Dallas yesterday (Tues.) to brief exhibs on the company's new look. Accompanying the execs on the trek is AA ad-pub chief John Flinn.

Tax 'Breakage' Worth $3,000 a Day In New York City; Handed To Municipalities by Harriman

Albany, March 22.

Approval Wednesday (16) by Governor Averell Harriman of the Assembly Rules Committee bill which permits localities to receive the major "breakage" on the five percent amusement taxes, effective immediately but retroactive to Dec. 30, 1954, was accompanied by a statement "estimating" the breakage amount to approximately "$3,000 a day in additional revenue to New York City."

This figure was in line with the $1,000,000 annual income from the breakage which Assistant Corporation Councillor Stanley Buchsbaum declared was the sum at stake for the metropolis during arguments March 3 before the Court of Appeals on New York City's appeal from a 3-2 Appellate Division ruling that collection of major breakage was illegal.

Governor Harriman's statement that the breakage entailed additional revenue in "lesser amounts in communities where the legislation is applicable" also upheld Buchsman's declaration that the budgets of Binghamton and Elmira —both collecting the five percent admissions tax—would be adversely affected by an unfavorable ruling on the part of the Court of Appeals.

The Governor's statement concluded with the observation that "Prior to enactment of the law the 'breakage' was retained by theatre owners."

Robert Quinn to Denver

Robert L. Quinn has been appointed Warner Bros. western field representative. He'll headquarter in Denver.

He arrived in New York over the weekend for homeoffice confabs before assuming his Denver post.

The Tolstoy Front

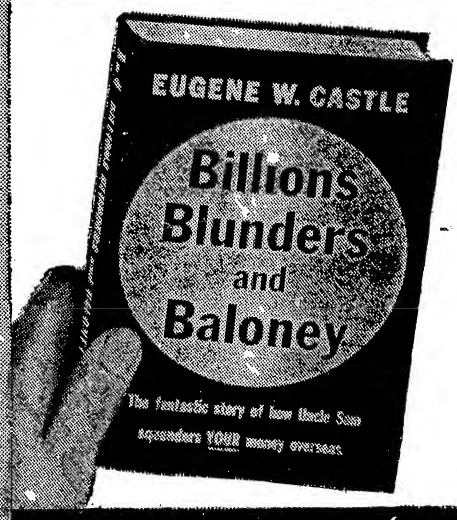
There were no announcements this week of any additional parties undertaking production of "War and Peace."

However, Pandora Productions appears planning a pic on the author. Company has registered the titles, "The Life of Tolstoy" and "Tolstoy and His Wife," with the Motion Picture Assn. of America.

Allied Puts Gripes On a Boxscore

Columbus, March 22.

Putting into practice a suggestion made by Reuben Shor, National Allied President, at the convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio two weeks ago, the ITO has distributed a box score blank to exhibitors where their grievances can be listed.



Shor made the suggestion in an offhand and informal way at the ITO convention, commenting that he would like to see a box score delivered with the ITO Bulletin which would give details on every film company. The box score was distributed last week and included these sections: "List the three best companies in order of their treatment of you . . . List the three WORST companies in order of their treatment of you: Give specific reasons and complaints such as terms, adjustments, lack of prints, failure of salesmen to call, availabilities or any other . . . List any pictures which you have been unable to buy in the last month because of terms."

SWEEPING PROBE OF TV INDUSTRY'S ECONOMIC STRUCTURE URGED BY FCC

Washington, March 22.

Television has its problems but an "adequate" service has already been developed and no "artificial" measures should be taken to get network shows to UHF stations.

This, in essence, was the FCC's answer last week to the recommendations made in the reports of Harry Plotkin and Robert Jones for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Considering the tremendous advances made in tv since the lifting of the freeze, with the number of stations quadrupled and over 90% of the population now within range of at least one station, "we cannot but feel optimistic," the agency said, "that the remaining problems can be resolved through constructive planning and cooperation among all interested groups."

Various moves underway or planned, FCC reported, will be of cumulative benefit to UHF. Among these, it mentioned the "five plus two" rule, authorization of UHF satellite stations, and the proposed five-mile transmitter site limitation.

The feasibility of "limited deintermixture" to increase the number of UHF "islands" is also under consideration but studies as to the effect of withholding assigned VHF channels from the communities involved, the Committee advised, are only in a "preliminary" stage.

Greater circulation of all-channel sets would be of considerable help to UHF. The agency therefore favored legislation to remove the 10% excise tax on manufacture of such receivers and voluntary action by manufacturers to boost all-channel production.

What's really needed at this time is a broad study of "the entire economic structure and operations" of the tv industry, the Commission said, to determine whether legislative or executive action is called for on the program front. Such a study, which would take more than a year, would include operations of networks, advertisers, agencies talent, independent film producers and other program sources.

Congress, the agency urged, should direct the Commission to make such a study and provide the funds as it did 20 years ago in authorizing the FCC to investigate telephone rates.

Magnuson's Cold Shoulder

The Commission's report got a cold reception from Committee Chairman Warren Magnuson (D-Wash.) who expressed disappointment at the absence of immediate steps to remedy UHF problems. The Senator was particularly irked by the agency's slowness in acting on deintermixture. He said he hoped the Commission moves "before it is too late to de-intermix anything."

"Sometimes," he added, "delay

NBC-TV's 'Zoo Parade' Safari to Africa In Get-Out-of-Town Kick

Chicago, March 22.

The NBC-TV "Zoo Parade" contingent next summer figures to set a new mileage record in tv's "get out of town" kick. "Zoo" crew is mapping a two-month South African zoological safari in July and August to shoot films to be used on next season's shows as well as on "Today" and "Home."

Delegation hopes to come up with enough exciting footage of African wild life to perhaps expand a few of the regular Sunday afternoon "Zoo" programs into hour-long zoological spectaculars. Junket represents a major setup for the production budget with the indications that the Chi-originator has a permanent place in NBC-TV's "actuality" schemes.

Heading up the trek with be Marlin Perkins, "Zoo" host and director of Chi's Lincoln Park Zoo. Show's regular producer-director Don Meier will helm the technical crew and NBC newsman Jim Hurlbut will go along as Perkins's layman assistant. Al Wiseman is slated to make the trip as press rep.

Frieda Weeps

Washington, March 22.

The problem of getting network programs to stations "got so bad one day I could not do anything but cry and I cried," Comr. Frieda Hennock told the House Appropriations Committee at recent hearings on the FCC budget.

Transcript of the testimony, released by the Committee last week, reveals that Miss Hennock's admission was induced by questioning as to why the networks do not sell their services to "every station that wants to buy it."

"Do they not have a monopoly just like it was alleged that the AP and the UP had in another field?" Rep. Albert Thomas (D-Tex.) asked.

"It is much worse in this situation than that ever was," Miss Hennock replied.

"But is not the answer to make their service available to anybody who wants to buy it in the same town, and if an additional person does want it, what's wrong with that"? Thomas continued.

Comr. Hennock replied:

"It is all right. What you suggest is wonderful, but they are 10 times as powerful as AP and UP ever were. They control your advertising, and have controlling influence on the station. You see, AP and UP did not have control of the advertising dollar in their own newspapers as such."

'55-'56 Plans Of U.S. Steel Still In State of Flux

What, if anything, happens to the U. S. Steel-sponsored hour dramatic show on ABC-TV next season is still a matter of speculation. Neither the Theatre Guild, producers of the show; the sponsor nor the network knows exactly where they stand at the moment, with U. S. Steel thus far not committing itself one way or the other.

Option time for a U. S. Steel renewal with the Theatre Guild comes up April 1. That's the date, too, for negotiation a new pact with director Alex Segal, with the client still having a three-year option on his services.

CBS has been making overtures to woo the show over from ABC but this, too, remains in a state of flux pending decision by U. S. Steel on a program renewal.

Mercer Vice Knode In NBC Station Relations

Resignation of Tom Knode as director of station relations for NBC to join the Petry outfit, effective April 1, as veepee-general manager of tv, came as a surprise to his associates at the web, although the Petry high command had been prodding Knode for several months to make the shift.

As veepee Harry Bannister's major factotum, Knode vested the role with a know-how and experience that made him a valuable entity in NBC's relations with affiliates, and both the Bannister and prexy Pat Weaver expressions of regret on his checkout were strictly on the level.

Succeeding Knode will be Don Mercer, veteran of more than 20 years service in broadcasting.

Weinstein to CBS

Bill Weinstein has joined CBS' public affairs as a producer-director. He exited NBC, where he served as one of the editors of the acclaimed "Biographies in Sound" radio series.

NBC is reshuffling its newsmen ranks as a preliminary to the upcoming weekend marathon programming in radio.

Kleenex Summer Coin

Chicago, March 22.

International Cellucotton, for its Kleenex label, has set a summer spin on NBC-TV with a flexible schedule of 12 half-hours on the web's hiatus lineup. Bankroller will get four identifications on three different shows during the hot weather span.

Agency is Foote, Cone & Belding.

Motorola, Admiral, Zenith Tint Dims

Chicago, March 22.

The color era is still at least a year away in the opinion of the top execs of the three major tv set manufacturing firms homebased here. Recent statements and the annual reports just released by Zenith, Motorola and Admiral paint a dim picture for color tv this year with the official prognosticators predicting it'll be late 1956 or early 1957 before volume production can be expected.

In his firm's 1954 financial report, Zenith prexy Eugene F. McDonald Jr. predicts that black and white sets will be the "backbone of the industry in the foreseeable future." Earlier, Zenith sales veep Henry C. Bonfig stated in a talk: "Without undue pessimism, we believe that color may not be off the ground before 1957."

Motorola prez Paul V. Galvin reports his company expects no "measurable increase in color television until late 1956 or early 1957" and that the production stepup will be predicated on a less costly tube. Galvin's bearish shortterm stance on color is considered especially significant since Motorola last July fanfared its entry into tint production with the optimistic predictions it would turn out 25,000 sets during 1954.

Motorola used the 19-inch CBS-Hytron tube with the set pegged at $895. Although the firm hasn't put out any figures on its actual output, it's understood that production bottlenecks limited the turnout to some 8,000 units.

Admiral prexy Ross D. Siragusa foresees only a "trickle" of multichromed receivers coming off the lines this year. It's his opinion too, that production won't reach major proportions until next year. He predicts the industry will turn out 6,500,000 black and white sets this year.

Color or no, 1954 was a banner year for all three electronic outfits. Zenith wound up with net profits of $5,676,264, or $11.53 a share, on sales totalling $138,608,360. This compares with a 1953 net of $5,631,701, or $11.44 a share, on sales of $166,733,276, highest in the company's history.

Motorola registered a 7% net earnings increase on sales of $205,226,000, second only to 1953's record $217,964,000. The 1954 net was $7,572,000, or $3.91 a share.

Admiral's net dipped slightly on lower sales. Firm netted $6,547,000, or $2.78 a share, on sales of $219,565,089. In 1953 earnings were $8,213,165, equal to $3.48 a share, on sales of $250,931,605.

Hamburger Back To Profiles, New Yorker May Drop TV Column

With Philip Hamburger checking out of the New Yorker television dept. (after a five and a half year run in which he turned out approximately 125 columns), it looks like the mag will drop the tv column completely, although there's no definite decision on this yet. Same thing happened back in radio when, after the Ring Lardner series, the New Yorker quietly folded its radio appraisals and never went back to it.

Hamburger asked to be relieved of the stint, preferring to return to authoring profiles (he's currently working on a Mayor Wagner piece) and "Talk of the Town" items.

D. C.'s Reaction to TV's High Cost

Washington, March 22.

Jackie Gleason's $11,000,000 contract might be the "trouble" with television, a member of the House Appropriations Committee suggested to FCC officials during recent hearings on the agency's budget. Transcript of the testimony just released revealed the following colloquy between Rep. John Phillips (R-Calif.) and FCC Comr. Frieda Hennock:

Rep. Phillips: "I think if I ask the Commissioner to tell me why anybody thinks Jackie Gleason is worth $11,000,000 and if you do not think that is the trouble with television . . . that will end my questioning."

Comr. Hennock: "I think that is a very good question—a very intelligent and very profound question. Although it sounds very funny, it is not. You said the programming is very bad."

Rep. Phillips: "That is an understatement."

Comr. Hennock: "I agree with you . . . But when you have three networks in New York putting on the programming 90% of the time, that is why they can build up a comedian to get $11,000,000. It is like the big movie stars."

Rep. Phillips: "Would it be better to let nature take its course? About one more contract like that will ruin the networks. I have heard more people express disgust with the networks since the Gleason contract was announced than in the last two years."

Comr. Hennock: "It took 30 years to accomplish the change in AM (from dependence on networks). Television will be worse and take longer.

Rep. Phillips: "Do you mean tv programs will get worse?"

Comr. Hennock: "Yes, 85% of your television" is in the UHF channels, above 13. "Channels 2 to 13 are what you can get. The people who run the networks and the manufacturers are responsible for that little thing."

Rep. Phillips: "Just do not let the Commission do anything to remove that little control on the right hand side of the tv set that you can turn a half-inch to the left and solve the whole thing. If Jackie Gleason is worth $11,000,000, I think George Gobel must be worth $100,000,000."

Comr. Hennock: "I agree."

European TV 'Still in Infancy'

Only Great Britain, With 94% of Sets, Making Any Kind of Dent

Washington, March 22.

Outside of Britain, television is in its infancy in Western Europe. Situation is pointed up by the fact that, of the 3,742,000 sets in operation at the beginning of this year, no fewer than 3,500,000 (94%) were in Great Britain, with only 242,000 sets in eight nations on the continent.

U. S. Department of Commerce, which has just completed a survey of the status of tv in 28 free countries of the world which either have service or are planning it for the near future, asserts that Eurovision "has been a tremendous success and is certain to prove a factor of great importance in the future development of television in Europe."

Survey discloses the following:

The U. S. and nine other nations (Canada, six in Latin America, Japan and the Philippines) are using the 525-line system. Great Britain is the only country using 405 lines. Ten countries are using 625-line transmission; and two are using 819 lines. These are exclusive of countries behind the Iron Curtain.

BBC programming 45 hours a week, but increases to 50 hours on occasion for special events. Belgium, with 10,000 receivers in use, is programming 30 hours weekly on two transmitters, one on a French system and one on a Flemish system. Denmark is programming about eight hours weekly, divided

Mull Lovejoy Series

Don Sharpe has optioned a sea-adventure series for telefilming with Frank Lovejoy as the star. Celluloid skein, called "Hurricane Kelly," is based on a tome by Rickard Von Kliest.

Series will be in tint if the deal is finalized. Lovejoy has made frequent appearances on Sharpe's "Four Star Playhouse" half-hour run.

More DuM Cuts (Shows & Staff); Lyford Quitting

Due to the lopoff in network programming, DuMont is making further personnel shaves with engineering expected to be hit hardest and with axings among directors and assistant directors also on the docket. However, the big single personnel note is the defection of Elmore (Buck) Lyford, who has held a high exec position as DuMont station relations chief. The Lyford departure is the most significant in a long time.

There will be a substantial number of engineers given the heave shortly, with no exact number yet fixed. In the cutback group will be two directors, one of whom was hired only for the soon-to-end Morgan Beatty news strip. Then there will be two assistant directors shelved, plus perhaps a few more in programming. Ted Bergmann, DuMont topper, said that the retrenchment is in direct line with program cutbacks which are soon to be effected. In addition to Beatty and "Captain Video," the latest show to crop up is the Paul Dixon daily hour, on which no definite departure date is yet fixed.

Lyford has been station relations boss for over three years (after a 17-year hitch at NBC), and by permitting his departure with no immediate thought of replacement, DuMont seems to be letting what's left of a live network's normally important station lineup dissipate itself.

One other rather important defection took place at DuMont last week. Bob Bernstein, who along with Gerry Lyons and Connie Ryan was one of the three mainstay publicity staffers left after the last network cut, has switched to a similar post at Guild Films under Lew Shainmark.

As for Lyford, he says the con-

Warners' ABC-TV Series Themed to 'Casablanca,' 'Kings Row,' 'Cheyenne'

Warner Bros. will base its ABC-TV series, set for Tuesdays at 8 in the fall, on three of its top pictures, "Casablanca," "Kings Row" and "Cheyenne," with the format of the tv series springing from the themes of the three films, one of which ("Casablanca") was a two-time Academy Award winner in 1943. Basic themes, except in the case of "Cheyenne," which may be changed, will remain the same, although stories and cast will be different. The series, which will be titled "Warner Bros. Presents" will be divided into three categories, adventure, romance and western, all based on the respective pictures.

Understood Warners, which has complete creative control over the program, will alternate the three categories weekly, with each running 45 minutes in length, then filling out the hour by trailerizing current WB theatrical productions. ABC-TV salesmen have begun pitching the program on a preliminary basis to the ad agencies.

ABC-TV'S 'GET 'EM YOUNG'

NBC's 'We'll Stand Pat'

Not since the initial inauguration of the Pat Weaver-inspired tv spectacular last September has there been such a concentration of bigtime full hour and 90-minute showcase as is due within the next couple of weeks on NBC-TV. Sandwiched in between the March 27-April 10 period, for example, are such spec-accented attractions as:

Next Sunday (27), preempting the regular Max Liebman 7:30 to 9 spectacular; the 90-minute hoopla marking the dedication of NBC-TV's Coast color studios in Burbank, featuring a flock of major NBC personalities;

March 29: The General Foods-sponsored tv "preview" of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus in the Tuesday 8 to 9 period;

March 30: The tv'ing of the Academy Awards from Hollywood, with Oldsmobile sponsoring the 90-minute ceremonies;

April 4: "Producers Showcase" presentation of Robert E. Sherwood's "Reunion In Vienna" starring Greer Garson;

April 9: Performance of "Merry Widow" in the Saturday night Olds-sponsored Max Liebman hour-and-a-half spec;

April 10: Colgate Comedy Hour's production of "Roberta."

Buckley's WNEW Ankles Blair

Station's New Owners Exiting Rep Outfit He Formerly Prexied

Most unexpected and surprising radio switch of the year: Dick Buckley, now the big boss and owner of WNEW, N. Y., is ankling the Blair station rep outfit which he prexied prior to negotiating his deal for the takeover of the lucrative Gotham indie from the Bernice Judis-Ira Herbert regime. It's understood that Petry is moving in.

What makes the move all the more surprising is that Buckley, over the course of the past month, has been filling all the WNEW vacancies (following the exiting of a string of key salesmen) with his ex-Blair associates. To make matters even more puzzling, since his acquisition of WNEW, Buckley had been indoctrinating all the station staffers with "Blair thinking" and concepts which he initially inaugurated as the Blair prexy.

'Norby' Axed; EK Gets 'Joan' Time

Eastman Kodak is putting its costly "Norby" colorpix out of the fray but will bounce right back on tv by taking over the Wednesday at 8 p.m. "I Married Joan" time on NBC as latter show checks out under General Electric. ("Norby" is Wednesday at 7 p.m.). Eastman will slot reruns of "Ford Theatre" starting next month, taking the Screen Gems' series over into September. Meanwhile, the huge camera outfit, having provided itself with a berth, is blueprinting a major show in the time next fall.

GE won't be lost in the summer shuffle, since it's taking the Armstrong "Circle Theatre" Tuesday spot on NBC as of July 5.

"Norby" exit comes after an avalanche of troubles with the David Wayne starrer. Fred Coe was brought in some weeks ago to revise the format and at one period it was figured to give the show a live treatment but EK finally put in for "out" after plunging about $800,000 into the bank-localled tinter (including chapters not yet exposed).

'Dr. Christian' to TV

Hollywood, March 22.

Deal is in the negotiation stage for Jean Hersholt to bring his "Dr. Christian" character to television. Actor reported, however, before his departure for three months abroad, that he would appear in no more than 13 of the 39 subjects planned. He might possibly narrate 13 others.

"Anybody who makes 39 pictures a year is crazy," vet actor declared. "The public gets tired of looking at you week after week."

TV 'Auditions' Yucca Flat

Barry Wood, NBC's director of special events, planed to the Coast over the weekend and was to double back to Yucca Flat, Nev.

Wood is auditioning the Yucca Flat site for the atomic tests to be televised in mid-April.

CBS Radio's 'We'll Chop 'Em Up Any Way You Like'

A $50,000 sale was racked up by CBS Radio last week on the simple proposition of network flexibility in the matter of buying and the program names to go with it. Here's how it came about, and results are being studied for furtherance on similar billings:

The 1955 Mobilgas Run held in Colorado Springs was won by a Studebaker Commander V-8 piloted by a Kansas wheat farmer. CBS set up an advance deal with Studebaker on an "if you win we have the shows for your plug" basis. Thus the Studie division of Studebaker-Packard was able to come through with a fastie, getting six segments of the "Amos 'n' Andy Music Hall" through tonight (Wed.) full half-hour sponsorship of the A&A Sunday comedy show (20), a quarter-hour of Friday's (8) "Arthur Godfrey Digest" and another 15 minutes of the Robert Q. Lewis show on Saturday (19), via Roche-Williams-Cleary of Chi.

Under the web's strip programming concept, its other fronters of name value include Bing Crosby, Rosemary Clooney, Tennessee Ernie and Edward R. Murrow. Thus fortified, John Karol, web sales v.p., is currently on another of his speaking tours, this time with a

OSCAR LEVANT TO HOST NEW TV SERIES

Hollywood, March 22.

Oscar Levant, who for the past four years has remained away from tv, has just completed a pilot film for a new type quiz-musical series which he will emcee and narrate. Show, to be titled "Story Behind our Song," is being packaged and produced by Randell Song-Ad Productions, headed by Peter Randell and Bob Sande. Film will be used primarily as a selling point since the series is planned as a live show presentation.

The regular panel will consist of Les Baxter, Pat Garrett and Jack Lait Jr., with a different guest star every week. In the film version, George Liberace is the guest.

MAJOR PAYOFF IN KID ACCENT

A new philosophy of network operation, welded out of an increasing appreciation of the part played by children in controlling tune-in and tune-out on the home television screen, has emerged at ABC-TV. The philosophy, in distilled form, is, "get the kids and you've got a network," and from the pragmatic point of view, the thinking has produced results, with ABC-TV in perhaps its most competitive position to date.

Thinking has emerged from a number of events and discoveries. One phase of it comes from the motion picture arena, where American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres topper Leonard Goldenson has been proclaiming loudly and longly that exhibitors must find a way to get the kids back into the theatres. Another source of the philosophy was the instantaneous success of "Disneyland." And a third, no less vital, was the network's emergence in the top rating position three nights a week in the 7:30-8 period, a time traditionally devoted to the last-ditch battle by the moppets for control of the tv set before they go to sleep.

ABC-TV, programming against the music-and-news lineup on NBC and CBS (Eddie Fisher and Dinah Shore plus "Camel News Caravan" on NBC, and Doug Edwards plus Perry Como, Jane Froman and Jo Stafford on Columbia), has made the strip a kids slot four nights out of five. Exception is the Monday night "Name's the Same" paneller, but on Tuesday it's "Cavalcade of America," Wednesday "Disneyland," Thursday "Lone Ranger" and Friday "Rin Tin Tin."

Tops NBC, CBS 3 Days

On Mondays and Tuesdays, the network is on a rating par with NBC and CBS, the three dividing the sets-in-use fairly evenly (but with "Cavalcade" up from an average of 12 last year to about a Nielsen 19 this season). But the other three days of the week, ABC walks away with the contest. "Disneyland" is pulling in the 50's, "Lone Ranger" is skirting the 30's, and "Rin Tin Tin," the year's sleeper, is up near a 40. It's a kids' world on those days, while "Name's the Same" is strictly for the adults and "Cavalcade" is often over the moppets' heads, even though in purpose, it's designed to educate the kiddies. Point is that this successful appeal to the under-teens audience has given ABC the only programming period in which it dominates its rivals.

Nor has the all-important daytime escaped the attention of the network. A principal factor in the web's weakness (encompassing the sum-of-the-parts affiliates and o&o's) is the fact that while the net has been building its nighttime structure, the overall programming pattern, the community identities of its member stations, have been weak, partly through local programming and partly by virtue of the fact that the web has never programmed daytime, except sporadically and unsuccessfully. Upcoming Walt Disney 5 to 6 p. m. "Mickey Mouse Club" is out to change all that (aside from the $12,000,000 or so revenue it will provide). Example of how the daytimer, with its focus on the children, will attempt to change all that is provided in the case of WABC-TV, the web's New York flagship and one of the weakest links in its chain.

WABC-TV has traditionally been

CBS-TV Getting the 90-Minute Spec Bug, Too; Sign Noel Coward To 'Present Laughter' TV Version

Martha's 15-Yr. Pact

NBC-TV is wrapping up a deal with Martha Raye under which the comedienne "swears allegiance" to the network for 15 years.

The pact continues NBC's "get 'em into the stable" spree and next to Milton Berle's is the longest ever signatured by the web for a personality.

CBS-TV will embrace the 90-minute spectacular pattern next season, just as NBC has been doing this year. Already signed is Noel Coward, who will do an hour-and-a-half version of his three-act legiter, "Present Laughter," which ran on Broadway back in '46 with Clifton Webb in the lead. Deal for the Coward-CBS get-together (marking Coward's initial entry into tv in this country) was set last week by Charles Russell, the playwright's personal representative, who came over to this country from England to finalize his tv deal.

Just how far CBS will go in embracing the 90-minute spectacular pattern isn't fully crystallized, although it's no secret that the Columbia program chieftains are planning a major reshuffle of its schedules in which full hour and hour-and-a-half live programming will play a more dominant role. That CBS is becoming more spec-conscious in its thinking isn't particularly surprising, especially since the universal acclaim accorded NBC-TV's "Peter Pan" two-hour presentation.

The jockeying for Noel Coward's services (along with that of Mary Martin) has been going on for sometime, principally between NBC and CBS. Thus far Miss Martin isn't committing herself to one or the other. NBC wanted the pair for a performance of Coward's "Private Lives." CBS also wants to star the two in a repeat of the charity show they did in London two years ago for the Actors Orphanage) when Miss Martin was doing "South Pacific" abroad).

Those close to the picture say, now that Coward has broken the ice with his CBS identity, Miss Martin will follow suit and succumb to the blandishments of CBS board chairman Bill Paley, who personally stepped into the breach.

Since the "Peter Pan" smash, ABC, along with NBC and CBS, has been getting into the "gotta-get-Mary Martin" act. When the star departed with her husband Dick Halliday for a 60-day South American cruise last Friday (18) she left herself free of any future tv obligations. However, it's generally assumed that if she agrees to a "Peter Pan" repeat it will be done under the same NBC-TV auspices, regardless of whether she makes a CBS deal for other specs.

Ex-Pabst TV Time To Gen. Electric; 20th-Fox in Deal?

Although Chrysler had first refusal on the Wednesday night 9 to 10 CBS-TV slot being vacated by Pabst in the latter's switchover to ABC-TV in June, the auto company has elected to stay put in its Thursday 8:30 to 9:30 berth next season. As result, General Electric has been given the nod for an alternate-week sponsorship of a major series that will go into the time, Y&R is the agency.

It's understood that GE may tie in with a 20th-Fox deal for its hour program product, (a la the Warner Bros. move-in on ABC-TV Tuesday nights) but details of the 20th-CBS-GE gettogether aren't crystallized.

CBS is still hopeful that U. S. Steel will move its every-other-week dramatic showcase into the period as the alternating client, but this must await an April decision of the U. S. Steel board of directors (see separate story).

GE currently sponsors the 15-minute once-a-week Jane Froman show, the Ray Milland half-hour vidfilm series and the Sunday night "General Electric Theatre," all on CBS-TV. According to present plans only Milland is being lopped off.

At WRCA-TV They Do Do Something About The Weather (Ask Esso)

Weathercasting is an exclusive business that can't stand back-to-back conflicts, even more so than rival products spotted in segue, verboten as a general practice in radio-tv. Esso News, 6:45-55 cross-boarder on WRCA-TV, N. Y., was caused to remove the weather report end-piece last week since the 6:55 capsule is exclusively about the elements via Tex Antoine's (Uncle Wethbee) sizeup.

Antoine got the spot a few weeks back sustaining, but with ConEdison (his late night backer) latching on, Esso was forbidden to forecast, even though a prior airer. There's an exception. When weather is major news (such as big snowfall, hurricane, etc.), Esso may go to work on such coverage.

It's all academic, however, since Esso reportedly will cancel on the NBC o&o's. Issue comes up Monday (28).

'Willis Wayde' Set For CBS-TV 'Climax' Series

Gore Vidal lit out for the Coast last week to ready the "Sincerely, Willis Wayde" script for an upcomer on Chrysler's CBS-TV "Climax." He'll finish the tele-adaptation of the John P. Marquand bestseller there and double over into a film studio where he's been dickering a contract.

Author Vidal will return to New York in about a week to continue writing chores for several tv shows, including a Radio Free Europe documentary on "Omnibus."

Montgomery In Ease-Off Plea

Robert Montgomery, it's reported, is anxious to ease his tv burdens and may check off his hosting assignment on the Monday night NBC-TV hour dramatic showcase next season. Particularly since he still has a legit gleam in his eye (he staged "Desperate Hours," current Broadway click), Montgomery feels that he isn't able to keep up with the mounting pressures from his multiple chores.

Along with hosting the Monday series, he has an exec producer status along with consultancy-advisory duties for NBC, not to mention affiliation with BBD&O agency and his White House tv advisory duties for President Eisenhower.

It's understood that Montgomery may wind up in an advisory capacity for the Monday dramatics if he can get network-agency-client to agree.

Morency's Prexy Status

Hartford, March 22.

Paul W. Morency has been named prexy of the Travelers Broadcasting Service Corp., operators of WTIC here.

Morency joined the station as general manager in 1929. He has been a v.p. of Travelers since 1946.

TV Scores A 'First' With 700 N. Y. Teachers in Closed-Circuit Exam

Teachers in New York City's public school system seeking licenses as principals will take their competitive exams via television next month in an historic "first." The setup is a joint operation of WCBS-TV and the city's board of examiners and will involve some 700 teachers in a single overall test. It's scheduled for Monday, April 11, from station studio 61, at 1465 First Ave., which will be converted into an elementary classroom. Two classes will be conducted, morning and afternoon, and transmitted by closed circuit to the Central Needle Trades High School auditorium where they'll be viewed on a big-screen of Theatre Network Television by the competing teachers.

After watching each lesson of 30 minutes, the teachers will be allowed two hours in which to draft a supervision report setting forth the strengths and weaknesses of the lesson and recommending improvements. The scores they achieve in the reports will be a determining factor in their elevation to principalships.

This contrasts with previous tests under which applicants were divided into groups of 15 or 20 and sent to watch class sessions. According to Arthur Klein, member of the education board's examining panel and chairman of the committee on supervisory positions, that system required that tests be given in about 40 schools. "Now all 700 applicants will be able to observe and evaluate the same lesson under the same conditions," Klein stated. "There will also be a positive saving of money. Under the former system, the cost to the board of substitute teachers needed to fill in for those taking the examinations would be $12,000" and this would be cut down via tv, plus making the grading of reports much simpler since there'll be one test instead of 40 or so.

A study leading to the April 11 "grand test" was made by the station, the examining board and Nathan L. Halpern, prexy of TNT, over the last four months, with one test telecast held and filmed. This was viewed by schools superintendent Dr. William Jansen, board members, associate superintendents and by a number of elementary school principals. Before the testcast WCBS-TV technicians visited several schools to fix seating arrangements for the studio class and to ascertain how to arrange the sound system. Engineers

Gleason No. 1 In Canada Poll

Montreal, March 22.

Tele poll conducted here, despite limited viewing due to controls by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., picked U. S. shows in the top three places when results were published last week. Top draw was the Jackie Gleason hour with many voters giving Art Carney a big boost as major contributor to their choice. The Sid Caesar offering ran second with Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" third.

As Montreal is in the midst of hockey playoffs, the National Hockey League's regular Saturday night tele hour ranked fourth. This program and "The Plouffe Family" which placed eighth were the only Canadian shows out of the top 10.

Five most disliked shows were all CBC origin with their pseudo-culture experiment "Scope" getting most adverse votes. A glut of panel shows found three of this type also on the thumbs-down list together with "Mr. Showbusiness" which is beamed from Toronto and mirrors the life of producer Jack Arthur of that city.

Poll was conducted by Pat Pierce, femme drama-film-radio and tele critic of the Herald and drew more than 2,000 letters during the week's test. Letters for the most part were constructive. The votes received came from people in every walk of life with 71% in 21-50 age bracket and less than 6% of the student group indicating that teenagers haven't taken control of Montreal viewing—yet.

Wick Negotiates For 'Overseas Secretary'

Telefilm Enterprises has finalized a deal with Trinity Production of London for a telefilm series called "Overseas Secretary" to be lensed in England by producer John Larkin, topper of the "Fabian of Scotland Yard" skein. Negotiations for Telefilm were handled by Charles Wick, just returned to the U. S. after a junket to London and to Istanbul, where he arranged some live talent deals.

"Secretary" has been described as a half-hour series which will feature an American female star (yet to be signed) in 39 pix with different countries as background for each. Format of the pix will be of no single dramatic type. With a few scripts now in tow, production is expected to start within the next six weeks.

MCA-TV FILM ADDS FLOCK OF SALESMEN

MCA-TV Film Syndication is adding five new salesmen to its staff, bringing the total somewhere above 60 men fulltime. New appointments are in four of the distrib's 19 sales offices, with one man getting an "at large" designation in the midwest. In the meantime, MCA is planning to add Mexico City and Rome its foreign sales centers, others being Paris, London and Toronto.

The size of the MCA sales staff, even before the new additions, ranked up with the Ziv complement, thus making it one of the two largest in the vidfilm industry. Appointments at MCA are: Cy Ostrup, L. A.; Ernest Montgomery, boss in Detroit; Al Lauber, Philly; Keith Godfrey, opening new office in Houston, and Frank Willis, the midwest's "at large" staffer.

Other recent MCA appointments were Howard Berk as the syndication outfit's eastern publicity boss, and Heyward Ehrlich as MCA chief of station relations, the latter job being largely concerned with audience promotion hypos.

$1,500,000 Budget On Ziv's 'Science Fiction'

Hollywood, March 22.

"Science Fiction Theatre," vidfilm series being produced for Ziv TV by Ivan Tors, has a $1,500,000 production budget, company officials said here.

Location lensing is planned at Air Force bases, universities and private labs. Series deals with scientific developments such as guided missile research, space and rocket flight, uranium research and radar.

Truman Bradley is host-narrator of the series.

Rose, Kinoy Prep Scripts For 'Marriage' Return

NBC-TV apparently hasn't given up plans for resuming the Hume Cronyn-Jessica Tandy "The Marriage" series, since it's tapped Reginald Rose to prepare a number of scripts for the fall. Rose and Ernie Kinoy have turned out four teleplays so far, but they won't be exclusive on the series, due to other commitments.

Ashley-Steiner agency, which is packaging the show, has been advanced the coin for the scripts by NBC. Rose, whose last script, "Crime in the Streets," drew critical kudos on "Elgin Hour," is repped by the agency.

Pop Music Accents WMGM Reshuffle

On the tail of the Ted Husing defection from two hours of daily deejaying, N. Y. radio indie WMGM has shuffled practically its entire before-8 p.m. sked. Since radio is generally becoming more intent on a strictly music and news format to stave off complete tv inroads, station chief Art Tolchin's chief aim is to build an unbroken pop music block in the 5-to-8 p.m. time (before sports coverage), when radio wanes markedly in face of after-dark video competition. A good share of that time was heretofore in the gab vein.

Tolchin says the early nighttime three-hour segment was heretofore a "potpourri," with no single kind of radio show in evidence. Ted & Rhoda Brown started it off with a gab session paralleling their morning husband-and-wife session. At 6 Husing came in, and as of late the w.k. d.j.'s tendency toward as much gab as music slowed down the ratings. Only the 7 p.m. time on was in line with the current pop music policy. Phil Goulding takes over the entire period during the week on a "strictly musical" program called "Your Hits of the Week." In the meantime, the Browns have gotten the hour they lose at night tacked onto their usual 7-to-9 ayem slotting.

The other big upheaval in WMGM programming, besides the nighttime changes, centers around Husing's other time at 10 ayem. The Browns go up to that time, (7 to 10) with home economist and stylist Carlton Fredericks being shifted from his old 9 ayem time to Husing's former 10 ayem slot. Dick DeFreitas and Aime Gauvin do from 11 ayem through 1 p.m., an hour more than before.

CUNNINGHAM EXITS MPTV

Guy Cunningham has exited his post as advertising-publicity-promotion chief at Motion Pictures for Television to join Nation's Business mag as sales promotion director. He previously was with CBS Spot Sales and WEEI in Boston, working there with Harold Fellows, now NARTB prexy.

Doubtful whether MPTV will fill the vacated post, since it's no longer directly involved in film distribution.

British Com'l TV's Rate Card

London, March 22.

Three of the four program contractors who are to operate Britain's new commercial tv web have now fixed their rates for advertising time. A peak rate of $2,800 per minute is to apply for weekend bookings on the London outlet, with a ceiling charge of $2,730 on weekdays.

First company to make the official announcement was the Prince Littler-Norman Collins outfit, Associated Broadcasting Co., which has the concession on the London station for weekends, plus weekdays at Birmingham. Their top London rate covers the peak viewing hours from 8 to 9:30 on Saturday and Sunday evenings; for test periods between 10 a.m. and 12 (noon) they are asking $560 per minute, with $1,680 for 7 to 8 p.m. and 9:30 to 10:30 p.m.

ABC's maximum rate on the Birmingham web will be at $1,400 per minute for the period between 8 and 9 p.m. Other times in the evening are priced at $840 per minute, with morning test periods at $280. Afternoon rates work out at $490 per minute.

Associated-Rediffusion, which will run the London transmitter from Monday to Friday each week, have set a basic evening and afternoon rate of $1,820 per minute, excluding the peak viewing hours between 8 and 10 p.m. Both companies have fixed a daily rate of $2,100 for London time signals. A-R are offering a guaranteed minimum of five a day, each of seven seconds; and ABC seven a day with a maximum air time of five seconds. In Birmingham ABC will be asking $1,050 for time signals.

The Winnick-Kemsley group, which has been allocated weekend time for the Manchester and Birmingham transmitters, have set a ceiling price of $1,680, with other rates scaled accordingly. The Granada group, who will operate in Manchester from Mondays to Fridays, have yet to announce their rates.

'IDEA' PEDDLERS GET AIR TIME

NBC Radio's 'Weekend' Format

NBC prexy Pat Weaver, exec veepee Robert Sarnoff (who now helms the radio operation), veepee Charles R. Denny and other web echelon concerned with the AM side of the picture set aside a day to mastermind "Operation Radio" last week and came up with the basic format for the continuous Saturday-Sunday weekend show which will be launched either late in May or early in June. Working title is "Weekend" but this will probably be changed before the marathon program tees off.

Starting each week at 6 a.m. Saturday and winding up midnight Sunday, the program will break down into entertainment and "service" components, with the primary aim to "keep the listener in touch with the world." This could be translated into a pickup of the Palladium in London while the Queen is in the audience; any "hot news spot" around the world where things are popping; it could take the listener backstage on Broadway or listen in on a major tv show in rehearsal (in fact the "communication center" to be installed at NBC hqs. in N. Y. will "monitor" everything in tv, regardless of network, and alert itself to the most desirable audio pickups).

The web's 200 radio affiliates will be enlisted for participation, with cut-ins for local originations. Such major network weekend entries as "Conversation" and "Biographies In Sound" will be integrated into the overall pattern.

Jim Fleming is directing the two-day program operation. The welcome mat will be out for participating sponsors.

P&G Slowly But Surely Building Itself a Nighttime TV Empire

Announcement last week that Procter & Gamble was taking over full sponsorship of CBS-TV's "My Favorite Husband," with Simmons pulling out, further reflects definite pattern under which the giant outfit aims to establish a soap empire in tv that will reach beyond its radio preeminence. This is without regard to the daytime spectrum, where P&G has long since been on a lofty soapbox as customer No. 1.

When the Cincinnati suds and detergent (etcetera) house made its big latterday move into tv nighttime, it latched on to bigtime programs, some of them long roosted in the Top 10, joining the "Operation Alternating" ranks as distinct from a years-prevailing setup under which P&G owned shows lock, stock and barrel and merely had to sit at the chess board to call the gambits. Today, P&G is on a rotationist binge but with a "money talks" torch song and with the kind of coin that, in a couple of instances, pays for the whole show with the alternating client virtually riding the gravy train.

The first break occurred only a few months back when P&G decided to go co-sponsor on a secure threesome ("I Love Lucy," "My Favorite Husband" and "This Is Your Life") which in one instance also indicated the decline in billings from the tobacconists (Philip Morris) that made possible the soaper's entry. P&G's not so hid-

WABC's Sweeping Talent Overhaul

Sweeping realignment of the talent and program structure at WABC, the ABC flagship in New York, is expected in 60 days at the latest, with many of local radio's top names due to be axed. This will be the first step in a campaign designed to push WABC from its fifth slot in the Gotham market to "third or even second," according to general manager Mike Renault. It's Renault's first major policy move since taking over the top slot at the outlet last fall.

Renault believes the inroads of television on daytime radio listening can be halted and even reversed "if we give 'em something to listen to." Key period is the morning 6 to 9 bloc, since that's the time where television's "novelty" via the early morning shows is most likely to wear off. "We've got to program right in the early morning to get the audience to listen. Then we've got to program so they'll stay with their radios the rest of the day." Consequently, Renault is planning a complete reshuffling, involving 6-9 a. m., 12-2:30 p. m.

Caesar Makes Good

Columbus, March 22.

That Reynoldsburg druggist who accepted a check from a bogus Sid Caesar some weeks ago had his money returned to him by the real Sid Caesar. The comedian read VARIETY's account of how Elmore Hayes permitted a ringer for Caesar to make a telephone call in his store — supposedly to Bing Crosby—and then took a check on a Canton bank for the cost of the call, $1.85. The druggist was pretty dubious about the stranger but thought he'd just mark it up to experience.

Last week he received a check for $1.85 and a letter from Caesar, who wrote: "Please accept this check as repayment for the hoax my 'double' pulled on you. Somehow I envy that fellow driving around the country. I wish I had enough free time to do just that. With all good wishes."

Despite Specs, Hazel Bishop Still Loves TV

Although Hazel Bishop is all washed up with the Sunday night spectaculars on NBC-TV, it's known to be cooking up a brace of other shows for next season. Of more immediate concern is the cosmetic house's buy of "Place the Face" which will be returned to tv via the Tuesday at 8 spot after Martha Raye, who carries the Bishop banner once a month, ends her skein (in the Milton Berle and Bob Hope time). The Raymond Spector rouge outfit is also going upbeat on spots.

Tuesday 8 to 9 will be divided between "Face" and another show reportedly carrying the coin from Toni and Associated Products. "Place" will be given a facelifting on format, but not known now what the components (including the emceeship) will be for the spring and summer ride. Board chairman Spector (serving both as the agency and sponsor topper) is laughing off reports that Bishop is scramming "This Is Your Life," a fixture shared with Procter & Gamble, since "Life" happens to represent a bit of clairvoyance on Spector's part as the original sponsor of a show that wasn't given much of a chance to survive when it first reached the tv light. Bishop's coin share since P&G bought into the Wednesday nighter has been substantially reduced, it's known, making reports of Hazel's doing a hurricane somewhat lopsided in Spector's view.

OPENS A NEW INDUSTRY VISTA

By LEONARD TRAUBE

A trend is developing at CBS and NBC toward "receptivity" to programs from sponsors engaged in peddling ideas and "partisan pitches" rather than products. It may well chart a new course for the broadcasting industry. Up to now, neither network has been a repository for such underwriters, although there apparently is no direct policy that would exclude them—unlike ABC and Mutual where paid religious programs, for example, have been a going business, and other sponsored periods in the realm of ideas have been accepted as a matter of course.

Although radio with its ever dipping revenues would appear to be more readily open to such an invasion, it's television that is marking the initial breakthrough in the area of "economic philosophy." Several owned & operated stations of both webs have been running half-hour films under the aegis of the National Tax Equality Assn., which has ben attacking cooperative setups such as those maintained in the insurance field, by credit associations, etc. WCBS-TV, the Columbia flagship in New York, gave clearance to the film the Sunday afternoon before last. Title was "Citizen Dave Douglas" and the business was placed by a Des Moines agency, Meneough, Martin & Seymour. The Class C time was at the gross card rate of $1,500. Same film, it is understood, is being displayed elsewhere on the o&o circuit.

No Hard & Fast Rule

While there is no direct, hard and fast policy at either web covering such bids for sponsored time, a policy may have to be worked up in a hurry on another count, and the question may have to be considered by the FCC in the end. This is the matter of request for "equal time" by opposition groups. One question is, would rival organizations be obliged to pay for programs in replying to an attack, whether direct or veiled? Some observers say that free time would be only just and fair, since otherwise it would indicate that only those able to pay can get their "philosophy" before the public. The resulting confusion would tax the wisdom of a Solomon.

It's reasonable to assume there will be more and more "idea" packages thrust at networks as a result of the pending merger of the CIO and AFL. With labor unions thus consolidated and getting stronger, management groups are expected to close ranks to array themselves against the unions.

The two major networks have never before been confronted with the problem. "Idea" billings on a national basis have been limited to political organizations, and then only to accredited parties or subdivisions such as citizens groups supporting candidates for office, and so labelled in the routine disclaimer—"this is a paid political broadcast." There has been no tendency thus far to interpret these as "ideological." The public accepts them as "the great American pastime"—like baseball—without giving them another thought.

"Ideas for sale" also extends to religious broadcasts, the most nota-

Kate: GF Plugger

Kate Smith, who lost her NBC-TV daytimer last year primarily because she refused to do commercials, is scheduled for a series of six special tv appearances during April—doing commercials.

She's been signed by General Foods, via Young & Rubicam, to introduce GF's new Instant Swans Down Cake Mixes. She'll do live pitches on "Our Miss Brooks" April 1 and 15; on "December Bride" April 4 and 11; and on "I Remember Mama" April 8 and 22. By coincidence, they're all CBS-TV shows.

Sunbeam Rides Again

Chicago, March 22.

NBC-TV is selling its Tuesday night at 8 Milton Berle-Martha Raye tandem for next season on a rotating sponsorship roundelay, a la the new sales treatment with the 90-minute Sunday night specs.

Sunbeam Corp., currently sharing the Max Liebman-produced Sunday specs with Hazel Bishop, has already cut itself in for a $3,000,000 1955-56 investment in both the Tuesday night parlay and the new one-a-month weckender, tagged "Color Spread." Appliance firm will rotate with two other bankrollers on the Berle-Raye combo and has ordered nine insertions in the specola.

New sales formula for the Tuesday hour was whipped up after Buick decided to switch from Berle to Jackie Gleason.

NBC-TV Resolves Spec Pattern For '56; 1-Shot Sales

NBC-TV has pretty much resolved its pattern of spectaculars for next season. There will be four series in all—the Saturday night one-a-month Max Liebman productions; the new "Sunday Matinee" which will rotate the Maurice Evans-produced series with "Wide Wide" World" and the NBC Television Opera Theatre; the Sunday night Liebman series and the Monday night "Producers Showcase."

The "magazine concept" of selling will be applied to the Sunday night series, permitting for participating one-time (or few times) sponsors. This, of course, is an extension of the sales pattern that applies to the "Today"-"Home"-"Tonight" shows. Hazel Bishop, Sunbeam and Reynolds Metals have been sponsoring the Sunday night color specs this season, but Hazel Bishop is pulling out. Sunbeam will tie in with the new "magazine" patterns next season. Also the Sunday night series will be geared chiefly to holiday periods keyed to the mag advertising setup for special pushing of products, although over a season's span they're expected to materialize on a one-a-month basis.

Oldsmobile is expected back for the Saturday spec series; ditto Ford and RCA for the Monday "Producers Showcase."

Max Liebman will pull out of the Sunday series next season as director-producer and contemplates his own weekly series along with the Saturday specs. Guest Broadway producers will probably take over the Sun. slots.

Under the "Color Spread" pattern as blueprinted by NBC there will be six commercial spots running 90 seconds at a gross fee of $70,000 for the winter positions and $48,000 for the summertime plugs on the 90-minute Sunday specs.

'Private Secretary' For Foreign Markets

Hollywood, March 22.

"Private Secretary," Ann Sothern series, is being readied for sale in foreign television markets.

Bids from the Philippines, Canada and the United Kingdom have been received by producer Jack Chertok. American Tobacco, which bankrolls series on CBS-TV, has rights to series for the U. S. and Latin America.

Radical change in the early evening (7:30 to 8) program structure is reported under serious consideration at CBS-TV for next season, primarily in an effort to stave off the major advances made by ABC-TV in the Monday-through-Friday time segment via the latter's "Disneyland," "Lone Ranger," "Rin Tin Tin," etc. This, of course, would mean the elimination of the news-music formula which has always been the basic CBS-NBC 7:30 to 8 staple. In the case of Columbia, it would involve the 15-minute cross-the-board Doug Edwards show and the alternating Perry Como-Jo Stafford-Jane Froman quarter-hour segments. (It's understood CBS is talking in terms of an hour-long showcase for Como next season.)

Just what CBS envisions slotting in the 7:30 to 8 time isn't known, although it's reported the web will convert to half-hour programming, or possibly full hour, instead of the long existing quarter-hour stanzas. When the network called in its key affiliate members about 10 days back this was one of the major items up for discussion.

The maneuvering throws into sharp focus a growing recognition of the fact that, insofar as news and music are concerned, the tv networks have yet to find the right formula. It's no secret that in many key cities these music-news shows are taking a beating on the ratings from stations slotting syndicated pix and other fare.

Ashley & Steiner Roll Lotsa Pilots

Flock of upcoming tv shows out of the Ted Ashley-Ira Steiner packaging stable are ready to roll via the pilot route this week. One of the major productions, on which NBC-TV has an option, is the new Worthington Miner Productions "Frontier" half-hour series which Sidney Lumet will direct and Matthew Rapf produce. First of the "Frontier" series, "In Nebraska," went before the cameras this week.

Pilot film on "How Now, Brown," comedy series starring Keenan Wynn, goes into production this week. Series will mark Wynn's debut in video with his own show. Developed from an idea by Don Quinn, the show is being written by Bill Manhoff, who is also producing. Series is rolling at McCadden Studios.

Another pilot off the vidfilm production beltline this week is the new Reginald Gardiner "Buckley" comedy package, the Goodson-Todman production repped by Ashley-Steiner. Show is being written by Ed Hartman. Guest star on pilot is Dorothy Lamour, with different name personalities to be used in subsequent installments.

Ratings-As-You-Ride

In the short time since its initial new local ratings A. C. Nielsen Co. has finished its first radio rating on nationwide auto listening, the first of its kind in the industry. The report, covering the two weeks ending Feb. 12, reveals that heaviest car listening was done on Saturday afternoons, specifically from 2 to 2:15, when 2,109,000 car radios were in use. This out-of-home listening factor was upheld in the ensuing Saturday hours.

Though weekend car listening peaked all other time periods, the Nielsen report showed that weekday mornings and evenings had "substantial" audiences in cars. The new Nielsen service, "Auto Plus," brings a large unmeasured radio area to national radio ratings.

Networks Gotta Begin Doing Something About New Talent: Red Buttons

Red Buttons laid it squarely on the line on his "Person to Person" appearance with Ed Murrow last week. The networks "are going to have to make an investment," Buttons said, in creating tv workshops for comics and writers, because that's the only way left to help them develop. "Burlesque is dead," vaudeville nearly so, there's little room in summer stock for comics, and the Catskills at the moment are no longer a training ground. The only place left is the networks themselves, and sponsors who will have to have the vision to string along with low ratings while a comic develops. The theories drew a vigorous assent from the usually noncommittal Murrow, particularly as to the workshops.

Buttons and his wife, Helene, provided a pleasant contrast from the plush, prepossessing environment of Conrad Hilton's 61-room mansion in Bel Aire, outside Hollywood. Putting Buttons after Hilton, though, was something of a tactical mistake in that it gave the redhead a chance to mimic in a friendly way the grandeur of the Hilton manse by comparison with his own four and a half room apartment (even if it is on Sutton Pl.). But 'twas all in good fun, including some closing jingles Buttons had written which seem to prove he can always make a living writing. All in all, a highly pleasant visit with a nice guy and his doll.

Perhaps it was the surroundings and the fact that the hotelier did more walking, as Murrow put it, than he would have in 18 holes of golf, but Hilton never really the family, some piano playing got to say much, except for a recital of his creed of faith, courage, honesty and enthusiasm. He did get a chance to plug his soon-to-open hotel in Istanbul, to deny a report he was planning to build in Florida, and to say "I'm afraid I can't say anything at this time" to a query about plans for Berlin and Amsterdam. A quick look at the family, some bad piano playing by Hilton, and a visit to the silver vault (he called it a room, but it opens by way of a safe) pretty much wrapped it up. Beautiful sets, but the potential of the plot and the character weren't realized.

WAR IN THE AIR
Producer: John Elliot
With Robert Harris, narrator
Music: Sir Arthur Bliss
30 Mins., Sunday, 1:30 p.m.
Sustaining
CBC-TV, from Toronto

This preems first North American telecast rights, secured by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. of the BBC's 15-series of 30 minutes documentaries dealing with the Allied and enemy air activities and inevitably invites comparison with NBC's "Victory At Sea." Exciting clips assembly is drawn from such sources as the British Air Ministry, U. S. Defense Department, the French government, German film archives, the photographic records of the Royal Canadian Air Force, plus clips from the British Commonwealth countries, the Imperial War Museum, and NATO. Claim is that 90% of this actual combat material was filmed during World War II. Interpolated commentaries are also spoken by Quentin Reynolds and other war correspondents. Series goes to 24 trans-Canada tv stations.

Bow sets the scenes leading up to World War II with plenty of shots of Hitler's speech-making warmongering to the Berlin stadium mass-meetings, the fall of France, the terrific aerial destruction of Warsaw and the similar treatment of Holland and Belgium, these from the Luftwaffe photographic records, and the captured "protection" of Norway and Denmark. Outstanding scenes are the deliberate wrecking of Warsaw, the goose-stepping of Hitler's temporary conquerors, the evacuation of women and children from London. Throughout are clips of Chamberlain and Churchill speeches.

Whole is harrowing but a magnificent historical record via tv. It's also gripping and exciting editing, punched by the shocking impact of man's inhumanity. This is one series that should keep set-owners at home.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

Sherman Billingsley, the Stork Club, N. Y., boniface, must have a terrific regard for his public. In his famed eastside bistro, he piles up gifts upon gifts on favored patrons. Everything from champagne sur-la-cuff to perfume and neckties come with the compliments of the host. The same technique applied to video, however, isn't as effective even though it does show his high regard for the viewers.

Billingsley in his 45-minute show plies up a lot of stars and a lot of activity during that time, but because of the brief activity of each of the participants, the impression is fleeting and not too substantial.

"Stork Club show" has shifted to a new time slot on ABC-TV network in moving to Sunday at 9:15, getting the benefit of an audience lured by Billingsley's friend, Walter Winchell.

Billingsley had a substantial talent lineup this past Sunday (20) which included partner in the perfumery business Morton Downey, along with Jack Whiting, Giselle MacKenzie, Jill Corey, harpist Robert Maxwell, and interviews with Peggy Ann Garner and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Along with this was a fashion show with dolls parading some of the latest in coutouriering and glimpses of the socialites in the Stork's various rooms. It sure does keep Billingsley hopping taking care of every item lined up.

However, the show does maintain the impression that this spot is still a citadel of the elite and a gathering spot of the tops in glamor set. The club is an institution, now getting the third generation of customers. Billingsley has seen the college kids come in and now their grandchildren, as the show pointed up on Sunday's edition. Maybe a few lapses of video technique can be forgiven. It may even be that Billingsley will become the Ed Sullivan of the saloon set; then his telestrategy will really pay off.

Andy Griffith drawled onto the set of the Theatre Guild's "U.S. Steel Hour" last week (15) and the ABC-TV dramatic showcaser was alive over the full route. Griffith's folksiness, a fillip in the specialty cafes like New York's Blue Angel, took over "No Time for Sergeants," the Mac Hyman bestseller, transplanted with keen regard for the home screens by GI Ira Levin. What they did, to Alex Segal's blueprint in the director's chair, was have the lanky Tarheel walk into the fray, away from it into an other set, telescope the offstage action by Griffith's sustained narrative and recap, and thus retrieve as much from the joybook as it was possible for tv to accomplish. What it accomplished was a series of high-larious incidents-sketches worthy of several hours of variety shows, while not getting off the main line, which was to lampoon what goes on in the Army in "small picture" capers.

As Will Stockdale, Griffith was particularly alert to his fun-raising mission, aided and abetted, willingly or not, by the Sgt. King of Harry Clark in a compelling portrait of a GI careerist going to pieces by degrees as a result of Griffith's straightface shenenigans; by the comic-faced Ben Whitledge of Eddie LeRoy, as Griffith's buddy in barracks arms; and nicely wrought bits by Arthur Storch as Irvin, Bob Hastings as Lucky and Alexander Clark and G. Albert Smith as the inspecting brass.

While script was loaded with laughs as Griffith lit out on his innocent escapades as spit-and-polisher of the latrine, in the psychiatrist's office (with the psycho reverting, of course, to dementia under the hillbilly's examination-in-reverse), in the barracks battles and in the finale collapse both of the physical surroundings and the topkick. It was quite a trick to turn, and done with speed and surefire comedy of the twang school.

Credit "Philco TV Playhouse" and scripter Robert Alan Aurthur with a major achievement on last Sunday's (20) show on NBC. Aurthur took a subject well hashed over by Hollywood—the fight racket and the people in it—and managed to make it look almost new again.

Title of the opus was "Shadow of a Champ," and if Aurthur, as associate producer of Playhouse, has predominated in recent months, this show was a strong convincer that Aurthur the playwright hasn't lost his touch. "Champ" had the same penetrating offbeat quality that has distinguished his past scripts.

Using a fine, sensitive touch, and aided and abetted by a standout cast directed in sock manner by Robert Mulligan, Aurthur drew a life-size, moving portrait of a "little man," in this instance the much-abused manager of a champion prize fighter, who lives on the illusion of his importance to "the champ." Then he meets a woman and is suddenly jolted into a realization of his loneliness and insecurity.

Out of this rather flimsy story line. Aurthur hammered a dialog piece that probed deep and carried a powerful emotional wallop. At the same time, thanks again to the cast headed up by Eli Wallach, the yarn never became maudlin and it never dragged. It was just plain good drama that spelled out entertainment to the hilt.

Wallach as the manager etched a touching and intelligent portrait of a man who suddenly realizes the futility of his subservient "friendship" with the fighter, Jack Warden, whom he idolizes. The scenes between the two, and the give-and-take between Wallach and Lee Grant, a shipboard romance that turns into real love, had real impact and were kept on a completely believable plane at all times. Warden was robust and ruthless, yet reluctantly understanding, as the champ, giving a great performance.

Miss Grant, a newcomer to the Playhouse, created a figure that had depth and beauty. Her performance, underplayed and yet highly sympathetic, was masterly in its restraint and the register of emotions displayed by mere expressions and tonefalls. Here is an actress of distinction and one hopes the Playhouse will bring her back again soon.

Rest of the cast were all fine. Robert Middleton as Warden's gangster mentor; Tony Canzoneri as the dazed trainer still re-living the war, and Val Avery as an assistant, all deserve kudos. Mulligan's direction, apart from giving the production a surprising feeling of scope alternating with intimacy, helped to make the show what it was. Mulligan is still a young man, so his handling of "Champ" Sunday with its many fine shadings, displayed a mature judgment that promises great things to come. His staging of the moving climax, and several other highspots, matched the expert scripting and performances. Show's musical background—bars of hot jazz punctured by frantic drumrolls—caught the mood of the play perfectly. Gordon Duff produced.

Ed Sullivan had a routine variety layout on his CBS-TV "Toast of the Town" last Sunday (20). It was a diversified bill, with strong individual entertainment values. But, familiarity of most of the acts lessened show's overall impact.

Program got off to a nice start with a flavorsome Latino number by Xavier Cugat's orch. Bandleader's shapely wife, Abbe Lane, then took over for some eye-appealing hip-swinging and ear-satisfying vocalling. Sam Levenson's homespun humor was good for a hefty quota of laughs, while Frank Marlowe's more robust comedy attack was occasionally funny.

Choralling by the Dartmouth Glee Club was impressive. Sarah Vaughan did a solid vocal job on two numbers, including a rendition of her latest record click, "How Important Can It Be." Number was effectively gimmicked up with an echo sound. Ballroomology by Tony and Sally DeMarco was suave and graceful, while the Wlades' trained doves were interesting to watch.

Bing Crosby was on the ameche and a couple of other Crosbys were all over the place. You'd-a-thunk it was homecoming week for the Crosby clan with Jack Benny just an incident (some incident!) on the CBSunday (20) Lucky Striker. The "39 Steps" comic handled Gary, Bing's eldest (he'll be 22 in June), as if he were the pappy, permitting the poised lad full play. Fulcrum was Bing's 10G fee for a Benny stint, but when JB heard Gary light out on "Got the World On a String" he wanted to set him up pronto for a guest shot at his $150 fee. This is where Der Bingle stepped in on the phone to tell his son the facts of financial life.

Bob Crosby was worked in for quickie repartee to add to the Crosby file, with Don Wilson serving as the fancy butler in the stimulated fabulous manse of the Groaner's, (Wilson came cheaper so he got the booking in the snapper.) Gary showed that he's been studying his father well, displaying savvy in the handling of lines, excellent timing, and with serviceable singing pipes to boot. That the youngster is a regular on Tennessee Ernie's CBS Radio show for Philip Morris was obviously not considered a sponsor conflict.

Whenever Jackie Gleason goes on vacation, the 8-to-9 p.m. slot on CBS-TV Saturday reverts to a routine vaudeo format. The Dorsey Bros. (Tommy & Jimmy) take over the stanza, which switches to the catch-all tag of "Stage Show" and refugees from "Toast of the Town" move in—at least that's what it seemed like on the hour last Saturday (19).

On tap for the singing were Nat (King) Cole and The McGuire Sisters; for the comedy, Roger Ray; for the juggling, Rudy Cardenas and for the acrobatics, Nita & Pepi. Although each was in good form, it added up to the kind of show that the constant viewer has seen and heard before. Except for a neat medley of old-time faves delivered by the Dorseys' orch, stanza lacked anything off the beaten vaudeo path.

Cole was in mellow form as he turned over his current disclick, "Darling Je Vous Aime Beaucoup" and "Sand And The Sea" with "It's Crazy, But I'm In Love" as an added fillip. The McGuire femmes got their plug in with "Sincerely" but weren't too successful with a special piece tagged "I'd Rather Lead A Band." Cardenas was in his usual flashy form as he whipped around pins, balls, hats, etc., and Nita & Pepi accomplished some attractive acro designs. Ray, a comic who works with xylophone, offered a monolog that was just par for the course.

"Colgate Comedy Hour" came up Sunday night (20) with a show that was well above par of some the stanzas recently presented on this series. Aside from the superior calibre of the entertainment, the session was noteworthy for its pace and smoothness, a couple of

Montgomery Presents 'Variety'

Lucky Strike paid the freight as plugs for VARIETY were dropped in at strategic points in "Robert Montgomery Presents," whose Monday (21) drama pitched "N. Y. to L. A." on NBC-TV. The title is a Page 4 fixture of this publication, so the plugs in exchange for the lift may be considered to square things, although it appears on reflection that VARIETY should still be billed for the super-billing. The hocus-opus, put together by Robert J. Shaw from an inspired idea with which every transcontinental travelin' VARIETY and show biz mugg is familiar, was in the "Decline and Fall of a Heel" groove. It kicked off with Charles Drake moving from off-Broadway work into a Hollywood screen test, working his way into the good graces and arms of production coordinator Lorefta Daye and doing everything within the realm of avarice and undisciplined ambition to make his way as an actor, even unto giving his agent a kicking-around.

Drake's immediate latch-on to the Chasen's-Romanoff's-Ciro's circuit seemed to be overstated, for one thing, and the other incidents, when not entirely reminiscent of some segments of the Broadway-to-pix gentry, were clearly recognizable as stock situations. The performances and the production itself (with Norman Felton directing) were competent. Drake played his double-dealing role with an alertness to the change of pace requirements and Miss Daye brought a quietly emotional study to her part. Pamela Rivers played Drake's actress-girlfriend with care and Edward Binns as the percenter led the roost.

VARIETY got the notices.

BURLESQUE
(Shower of Stars)
With Dan Dailey, Marilyn Maxwell, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Dick Foran, James Burke, others; David Rose, musical director
Producer: Nat Perrin
Director: Seymour Berns
Adaptation: Morton Fine, David Freidkin
60 Mins., Thurs. (17) 8:30 p.m.
CHRYSLER
CBS-TV, from Hollywood
(McCann-Erickson)

For nearly three decades "Burlesque" has been taking the bumps and grinds as a hardy perennial of the theatre and it was inevitable that it would one day reach the tube dwellers. In its telescoped version of CBS-Chrysler's "Shower of Stars," only the framework remained but it came off as an acceptable replica if not memorable in the collection of color specs. To take it out of its dotage and modernize the treatment a few borrowed musical numbers were integrated into the backstage drama of broken hearts and stolen bows.

For Dan Dailey, who played Skid Johnson in the 20th-Fox film, it was a leisurely romp without too great tax on his talents. He hoofed and sang but the "heart line" was cut and scenes that misted the eye in other versions had to be trimmed in the interest of timing. As if there wasn't enough talent aboard, Jack Benny was brought on (unnamed or unbilled) in a hokey bit with Dailey and Jackie Oakie, a brace of putty-nosed comics. It was little more than a walkon and would have meant points to the rating had he been billed and his part padded. But Benny insisted on anonymity.

Marilyn Maxwell, as the long-suffering wife and dance partner of Skid, gave a standout performance both dramatically and in her dance numbers with Dailey, one of the show's high spots. Fronting the burley line she was gay and spirited and avoided any bodily gyrations that might be criticized (as with the Sheree North incident). She's a solid trouper and the perfect prototype of the showgirl with everything it takes.

In supporting roles were Joan Blondell and Oakie, enlarged editions of their picture days; Dick Foran as the upright suitor; Helene Stanley, the scheming chorine; James Burke, suitably substitute for the ailing James Gleason as the burley producer, and Laurie Mitchell, a looker that wasn't around enough. Production team of Nat Perrin, Harold Conrad, Seymour Berns and Robert Adams gave the piece a good staging with zestful movement. David Rose's music was a strong plus.

TELERAMA
With Alan Scott
Producer-director: Cal Jones
30 Mins.; Sun., 3 p.m.
WPTZ, Philadelphia

"Telerama," with some interesting sessions to its credit under newsman Dick McCutcheon (since resigned), resumed regular sessions Sunday afternoon (20). Rolland Tooke, WPTZ general manager, says he intends the new series to offer "live telecasts, frequently with a mobile unit and a much broader scope." Preem did not evidence this broader scope, although it provided an informative discussion of a hot issue—wire-tapping. Format offers much the same setup as numerous other intelligent panels.

Philadelphia Bar Association sponsored the debate between such protagonists as Richardson Dilworth, former District Attorney and present candidate for Mayor, and Philip Price, former chairman of the Association's board of governors, who took the affirmative, and Louis B. Schwartz, of the U. of Pennsylvania law school faculty, and Wilfred S. Lorry, former FBI agent, who were against wire-tapping. C. Brewster Rhoads, chancellor of the Bar Association, stated his organization was opposed to all forms of intercepting phone conversations.

This was a well-mannered group—no clashes nor stepping on each other's words; and except for a few moments at the end moderator Alan Scott was able to rest in the background. Dilworth's contention was "that we wouldn't give police bicycles to chase bandits on motorcycles" and that organized crime was conducted by phone. His partner Price saw no distinction between wire-tapping and peeping through windows and keyholes to obtain evidence.

Schwartz called wire-tapping a police convenience, a device leading to breakdown of morale in law enforcement agencies and a means of encouraging blackmail. Lorry called the practice "unsavory." Scott closed the half-hour with the proper summary, that there was no attempt to convince the audience, merely to expose it to some enlightened viewpoints.

'BAIT & SWITCH' NAT'L DISEASE

Dailies Won't Bite on 'Bait'

One of the primary things that N. Y. radio and television stations would have liked before publicly announcing their seven-point program of "minimum standards for home demonstration advertising" would have been the open support of the metropolitan dailies, which, broadcasters said, were just as guilty as they of accepting "bait" and "switch" advertising. But a couple of N. Y. newspapers dissented, preventing others from going along. Objection was to Point Four, which said: If the home demonstration advertiser's policy is to offer additional models or types of the product or service advertised, then he must also advertise the prices of all articles or none at all.

John Glass, advertising chief at the N. Y. Daily News, summed it up for the dissenters. He said that his paper has for several years embraced the spirit of the seven-point broadcaster's program, but that he didn't feel it fair for one media to lay down rules for another. He added that the News had sufficient rules of its own to cover all the points mentioned, and that, at reader complaints, objectionable advertising would be dismissed or cleaned up. As for Point Four itself, Glass said; "Legally, you can't tell a man what price to advertise at." He drew an analogy to also stress how "impractical" point four was for newspapers: if a department store mentions a $9 dress, then must it mention a $15 dress it has on sale too? When asked how the analogy fits home demo advertisers, he replied that department stores have home demo departments too.

A N. Y. Times spokesman, though he would make no direct comment on the subject, implied that newspaper rejection of the "switch" plan was not necessarily final.

WPIX's 'Hey, Look at Us' As 'Rascals' Dominates Kid Strips

WPIX, N. Y. tele outlet, has put the clincher on the extraordinary rating payoff, market to market, of the Interstate - distributed "Little Rascals" ("Our Gang") comedy shorts. The current afternoon kidvid ratings on the Daily News station's celluloid clue a serious threat by syndicated-for-kids films to the longtime supremacy of the high-priced live network kid shows—NBC-TV's "Pinky Lee" and the rating giant "Howdy Doody."

At last reading—with the "Rascals" on (at 5:30) WPIX for less than two months in which to build an audience following—ARB and Pulse give the indie's stripped films a 12.8 and an 11.5, respectively; this against competing "Doody's" 7.6 and 11.1. Stacking the same ratings and rating periods against the NBC-Pinky Lee-at 5 p.m. (a time when other stations have slotted "Rascals") combination, "Rascals" far outrides it also. According to ARB and Pulse, in that order, Lee grabbed off 8.9 and 11.5. against the substantially higher WPIX figures.

On Jan. 17, like most other "Rascal" stations, WPIX launched the pix under a completely new program format and title ("Clubhouse Gang Comedies"). Within five days, the first local video ratings gave the show a 5.8—78% higher than the old show in the 5:30 time. This was substantially higher than the station ever got before in the time, and, incidentally, the N. Y. station had rarely, if ever matched, its current ARB

U. S. Steel's Repeat

Repeats of full hour live shows are on the ascendancy. This time it's ABC-TV's U. S. Steel going in for the repeat pattern.

Vehicle is the Ralph Bellamy-starrer, "Fearful Decision," which brought the sponsor one of its heaviest mail pulls of the season. Date for reprise is May 10.

Last repeat was "Patterns" on Kraft Television Theatre.

Guild Carrying N.Y. Vidpix Torch; Sets 'Mark,' 'Spy'

Guild Films looks to be waging a one-company campaign in support of telefilm production in New York. Firm is about to sign a new series, "Brother Mark," which Marion Parsonnet, who owns the property, will produce at his Parsonnet Studios in Astoria. Meanwhile, Guild put another series, the Raymond Massey-starring "I Spy," into production at the Parsonnet lot, and two weeks ago began production on "The Goldbergs" at Lou Klotz's Biltmore Studios in downtown Manhattan. Total of three half-hour series exceeds the efforts of any one company in the Gotham production picture thus far.

"Brother Mark" will be an adventure segment, with the principal character a European playboy who becomes a virtual monastic, coming out of his isolation to help people in trouble. Casting and scripts haven't been set yet, but Parsonnet will produce. "I Spy" will be turned out by another old Gotham production hand, Ed Montaigne, who did the "Man Against Crime" and "The Hunter" series in Bedford Park Studios in the Bronx for R. J. Reynolds. It's to be the stories of great spies of history. "The Goldbergs" is being produced by Guild itself, with Marc Daniels directing.

CBS-TV's Kiddeo 'Let's Take Trip'

CBS-TV's public affairs sector took a long look at the pilot of its upcoming Sunday kiddeo series this week and figured it has a potential hit in the moppet sweepstakes. Show, tagged, "Let's Take a Trip," is headed for 3:30 to 4 p.m. next month (the 17th) in the springtime reshuffle of the Sabbath day patterns. "Trip" is designed for the 6 to 12 group who'll be taken on live offbeat excursions around the country accenting the entertainment values. (Pilot used a firehouse as springboard.) Starting stanza will revolve around helicoptering, with subsequents to embrace tugboats, railroad yards, jet planes, a diary farm and an ocean liner.

There's a couple writers assigned (Bob Fenwick, Bob Allison) for the general framework, but show will actually be an ad libber with Sonny Fox and a couple of

WCBS-TV Taps Littell For City Editor Role

Sam Cook Digges, general manager of WCBS-TV, aiming to strengthen local (N. Y.) coverage, has assigned Blaine Littell as news bureau manager.

He'll function as the CBS flagship's "city editor," cover some stories himself and also assign cameramen.

N. Y. VIOLATIONS STILL RAMPANT

Signals have gone up around the country to prove that "bait" and "switch" advertising is not just N. Y.'s problem. Execs of the Better Business Bureau feel it is a national disease that seems prevalent in many of the larger cities. To the BBB and local vigilante groups this type of suspect advertising is prominent in newspapers as well as radio and television, despite the latter having come in for the biggest share of complaints lately.

The "bait" trend has been growing in the past seven or eight years, according to George Young of BBB. Victor Nyborg, prez of BBB, calls it "vicious, insidious and damaging," yet there has been comparatively little self-regulation by media. Most of the radio-tv'ers give out with "we won't cut it off unless there are complaints" or "caveat emptor." When there is self-regulation—as in the case of N. Y.'s 24 radio and tv stations—there is frequently seen a reticence to obey one's own law; N. Y. broadcasters have had rules in effect for nearly three weeks, but only a few days after the rules were publicly announced, there were heard and seen on local stations violations as flagrant as any before. So far, informed onlookers feel that many of the stations which are riding along with the rulings are merely doing so in fear of legal reprisals, perhaps from the Brooklyn District Attorney's office, where the matter was recently rekindled and where one advertiser and three of its execs have already been indicted. Other stations are slammed for their open hypocrisy — signing a preventive platform on standards and still airing objectionable "bait" and "switch" ads. It's said that the Gotham broadcasters' set of "mi imum standards" to combat b & s are quite clear and easy to follow, but some of the stations won't comply unless legal claws are added by the Government.

Few State Laws

The BBB reports there were b & s cases in 44 American cities, spanning several states, yet few states in the country now have laws to stop it. As of July '53, according to BBB spokesmen, only Massachusetts had any state law on the matter. There are perhaps six or seven others today, but a closer scrutiny shows that there are repeated violations in those states too and that, in some instances, the laws are viewed as impotent. Efforts are being made to bring some of them up to date.

A legal case, aside from N. Y.'s recent indictments, is against two L.A. used car dealers—and their tv announcers—for b & s frauds. It went before a judge last week.

BBB stated that San Francisco broadcasters, hearing of the Brooklyn Grand Jury investigation around early February, got an anti-b &'s campaign of their own going in anticipation of legal repercussions from the state, California being one of those with b & s legislation. It wasn't made clear whether S.F. papers were in on the drive as well.

In Akron, BBB reports a home demonstration advertiser has folded his company, "because things got too hot." Another Ohio store chain sold its Akron branch to local interest because of the drive against b & s. BBB says there are some cities, like Omaha, Amarillo, St. Louis, which won't tolerate any such fraudulent advertising in any medium. Another source adds that "clean" towns like this are at a scant minimum.

Who's Consulting Whom?

NBC consultants are now taking each other to lunch.

Seen at N. Y.'s 21 last week: John Royal lunching with Sol Hurok. Both are on the NBC consultancy roster, the latter pacted to frame some '55-'56 "Sol Hurok Presents" specs on the Monday night "Producers Showcase" series.

Looks Like 'Peter Pan' Started Something; 'S'west Corner' to TV As Sponsors Eye B'way Closings

'Bleecker St.' TV'er

NBC's "direct from Broadway" gleam — with "Peter Pan" the first in the legit-to-tv moveover — currently centers on "Saint of Bleecker Street." Menotti opera-drama has been struggling to get into the money and on Friday (25) goes from full week to four-performance weekend policy.

The web is aiming at a May 15 slotting at 3:30 to 5 p.m., and since that's a Sunday, it indicates either (1) that the show will omit a performance that day or (2) won't be around. At any rate, the "direct" billing would still hold, with "Bleecker" putting badly needed tv money into its till, just as "Pan" was $85,000 in the red on its Broadway run, a figure reduced when the home-screen coin was put into the pile. Menotti's musical was previously displayed on CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" as a 20-minute insert.

"Bleecker" will either be the legit or publication version. No decision yet.

The idea of transferring just-closed Broadway legit properties to tv, as in the case of "Peter Pan," is gaining momentum. This time it's "Southwest Corner," the John Cecil Holm play which recently folded after a brief run at the Holiday Theatre, N. Y. It'll be done on "Kraft Television Theatre" the night of March 30, condensed to an hour version, with the original cast, including Eva LeGallienne, Enid Markey and Parker Fennelly.

However, unlike the motive behind "Peter Pan," which was designed as a "one-nighter USA" to blanket the whole country and thus eliminate the necessity of a road tour to help recapture Broadway losses, "Southwest Corner" is being transferred to tv as a means of stimulating nationwide interest in the production as the prelude to a cross-country tour. In this respect the producers of "Southwest Corner" are taking their cue from Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town," where capsule presentations of just-about-to-tour legit attractions have created wide interest and subsequently proved a b.o. boom on the road.

The idea of transferring legit properties to tv, lock stock and barrel, is gaining momentum in video circles, working to the benefit of all concerned. It permits the tv producers to bring in a finished, polished presentation, with the only major headache the hurdling of the tv technicalities. On the other hand, the one-shot tv sponsor coin helps to get the legiter off the hook in the case of an early Broadway demise, not to mention the aforementioned interest it stimulates when a road tour is in the offing.

Hooper's AM-Only, ARB Restricted To TV in New Teamup

The ever-shifting research industry last week found one of the oldest and one of the newest of the rating outfits joining forces. C. E. Hooper Inc. and American Research Bureau reached an agreement under which Hooper will confine itself to radio, ARB to television, with the two companies maintaining their separate staffs and identities but cooperating in matters of consultation and special research, production and sales problems. Agreement involves an exchange of stock, with ARB prexy Jim Seiler getting Hooper shares and a place on the Hooper board, and Hooper's James Knipe dittoing on ARB.

Immediate result of the agreement is the abandonment by Hooper of its television service in some 55 cities. ARB overlapped in all but three of those cities, so that it will merely be left alone in the field, except where the still-competing Pulse flourishes. Hooper's radio service is currently in 90 cities, 55 of them on a regular basis. ARB has a roster of 70 cities, plus 10 more on a station-financed basis, plus its monthly national ratings. Neither service will be expanded immediately. Both firms will con-

Double-Talking Taxes

Maybe it takes a double-talker to take the double-talk out of the income tax. Al Kelly, one of the foremost of the breed (he's Joey Adams' partner, but sometimes it's hard to figure who's playing straight as they frequently go into reverse), will appear on a simulcast this Saturday (26) over WRCA and WRCA-TV, N. Y. (at 11:30 p.m.) to attempt to put some sense into the gobbledygook. The supporting cast will consist of 14 tax men and 14 models on an hour-long "Al Collins Tax Party." (Collins, known as Jazzbo, is better known as a disk jockey than a pitcher of financial legerdemain.) Phone lines will be set up to give the public opportunity to shoot questions at the internal revenuers.

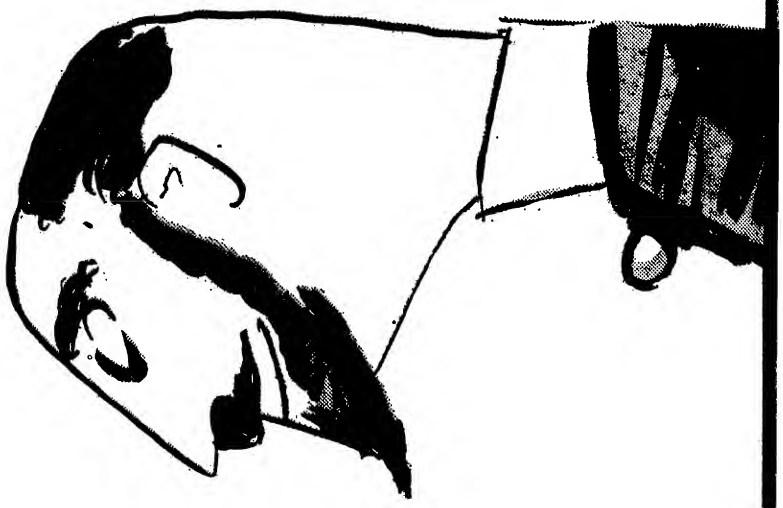
The NBC stations are sending out a followup press release on Form 1040.

WNBQ Caught In Equal Time Rift

Chicago, March 22.

Wild swinging charges and countercharges by Windy City politicians embroiled in the torrid city election campaigns, caught NBC-TV's WNBQ in the middle of an "equal time" hassle. On the grounds it would only add more fuel to the flames, the station last week nixed a script readied by State's Attorney John Gutknecht for use on time offered him to answer an earlier blast fired by Alderman Allen Freeman on WNBQ's "City Desk."

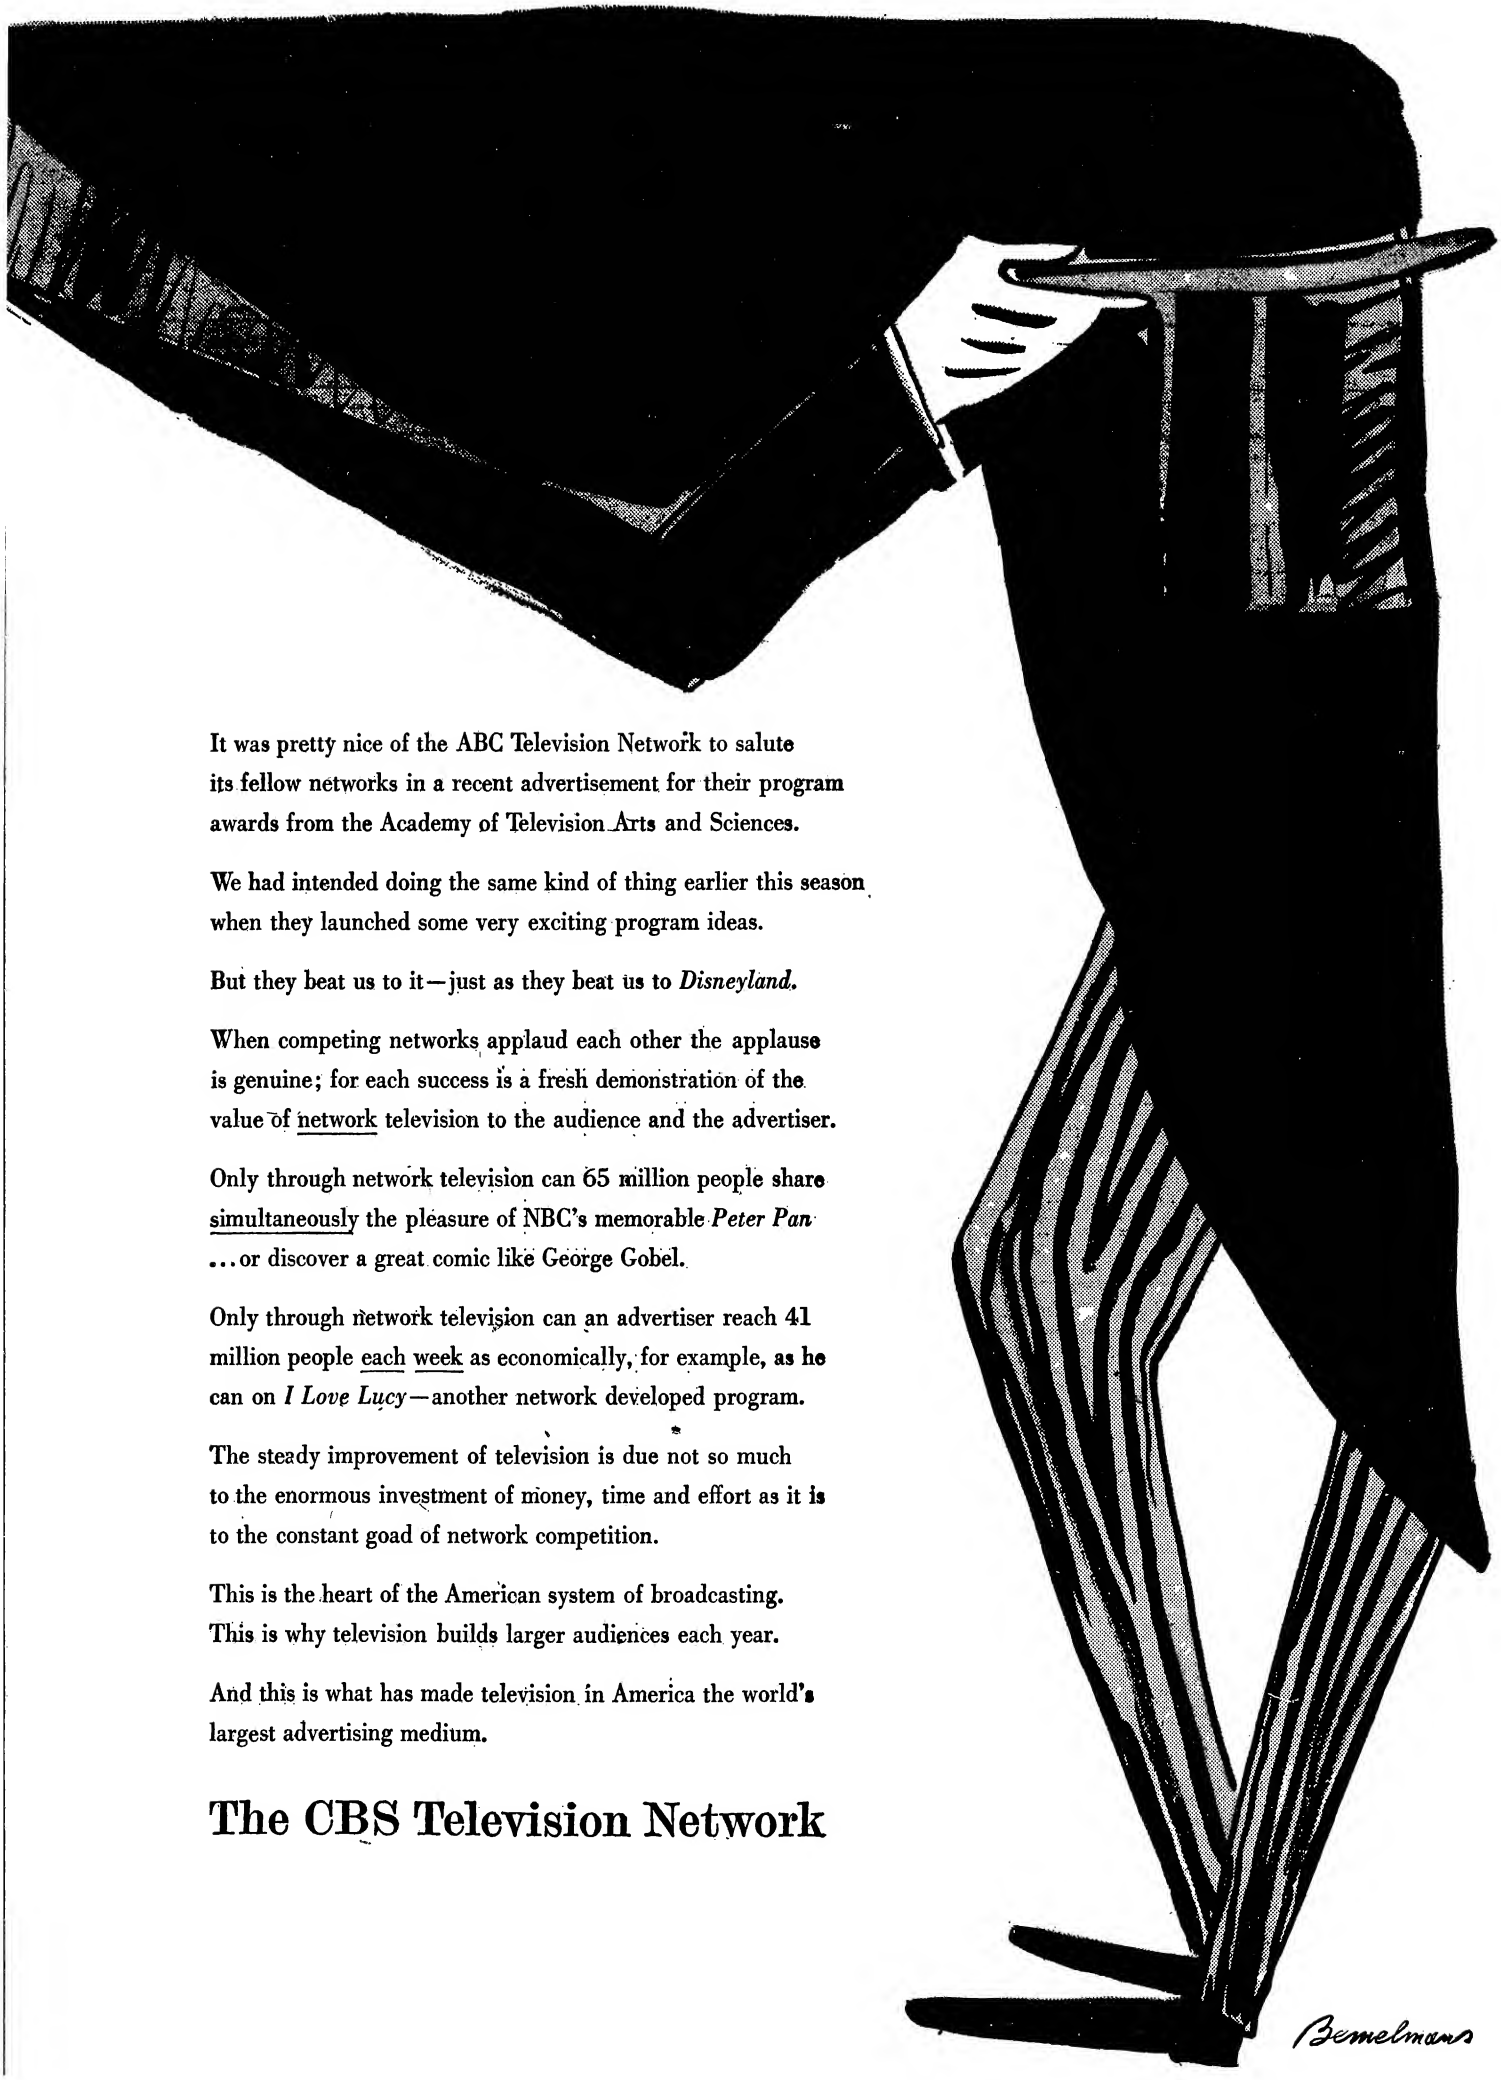
Gutknecht, a Democrat, left the impression in his subsequent comments to the newspapers that the station had denied him time to answer the Republican city council member. Henry Sjogren, WNBQ assistant general manager, pointed out immediately that the station did not withdraw its offer of free time to the state's attorney last Friday night (18) and that the offer still stands.



Sjogren argued that Gutknecht's script went considerably beyond answering Freeman's charges and introduced several new ones. "Introduction of new issues would obligate us to give Alderman Freeman, and perhaps others, time in which to reply to Judge Gutknecht. And this could go on indefinitely," the NBC exec stated.

Gutknecht was offered the Friday night 15 minutes when he turned down an invitation by NBC news director Bill Ray to appear on his "City Desk" show where the Freeman allegations were made.

Guy LeBow Capsules



Charles Basch (Basch Radio-TV Productions), has signed sportscaster Guy LeBow for "Fact or Fable," radio sports capsule with top guests.

Show is going into 39-episode production for syndication.

after you...

It was pretty nice of the ABC Television Network to salute its fellow networks in a recent advertisement for their program awards from the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

We had intended doing the same kind of thing earlier this season when they launched some very exciting program ideas.

But they beat us to it—just as they beat us to Disneyland.

When competing networks applaud each other the applause is genuine; for each success is a fresh demonstration of the value of network television to the audience and the advertiser.

Only through network television can 65 million people share simultaneously the pleasure of NBC's memorable Peter Pan ...or discover a great comic like George Gobel.

Only through network television can an advertiser reach 41 million people each week as economically, for example, as he can on I Love Lucy—another network developed program.

The steady improvement of television is due not so much to the enormous investment of money, time and effort as it is to the constant goad of network competition.

This is the heart of the American system of broadcasting. This is why television builds larger audiences each year.

And this is what has made television in America the world's largest advertising medium.

The CBS Television Network

VARIETY - ARB City-By-City Syndicated and National Spot Film Chart

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 top-rated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time — day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv.), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quiz; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors rep the national spot sponsor for whom the film is aired.

GE Coin Behind New Org to Help Faltering TV Stations, Both U & V

Plight of UHF stations and faltering V's has brought about the formation of a new corporation, the National Affiliated Television Stations Inc., comprising the equipment division of General Electric; the telefilm distribution outfit, National Telefilm Associates; and the Motion Picture Centre topper Joseph Justman. Purpose of the new company is to aid stations in trouble via the sale of NTA's film library and other product on "favorable" or even deferred-payment conditions, on-the-spot sales help both locally and on the national level, management consultation and if necessary, cash loans.

Reason for the organization, and its curious composition, is the common concern of the component personnel over the shrinking market for their individual products. At a press luncheon last week announcing the formation of NATS, all concerned—GE's Dr. W.R.G. Baker, NTA's Ely Landau and Oliver Unger and Justman—spoke of the need to keep television competitive by aiding both U's and V's in trouble through giving them saleable programming, sales and management help and cash to tide them through where necessary. For NTA and Justman, repping film distributors and producers, an expanding station market is vital; for GE and other equipment manufacturers, it's equally so. They stressed they couldn't do it alone, and called for aid from other sources. Presence of Hal Roach Jr., who flew in from the Coast, suggested they might get his help on the producer front.

Actual composition of NATS was left to be determined, however. Landau, in response to a question, said that a list of about 40 stations which qualify for membership was currently being screened by the officers of NATS. Terms of qualification were also left vague, but apparently NATS will determine just who can join, with the yardstick being the station's potential for economic recovery. "We won't try raise any station from the dead," Landau said.

Nor was the extent to which GE is willing to put up ready cash amplified, Dr. Baker declaring that the amount of cash advanced would be determined by the conditions which NATS met in the field.

WGAL-TV has a potent effect on the spending habits of over three million people with effective annual buying income of $5 billion—the one station that reaches this market.

and 10 p. m. on through the night to 6 a. m.

Portion of the plan has already been implemented. Renault has put the station on a 24-hour basis, effective Monday (21), with "Big Joe" Rosenfield and his "Happiness Club" having taken over the 3-6 a. m. slot in a moveover from WMGM. From 12 to 3, it's Bill Silbert and a disk-and-interviews show, with Milton Q. Ford, of WMAL in Washington, coming up to Gotham to spell Silbert on Sundays. From 11:30 to midnight six days a week, it's "11:30 Clubhouse," a half-hour sports show with Chris Schenkel.

Schenkel, incidentally, is replacing N. Y. Herald Tribune sports editor Bob Cooke, who was supposed to do the show, but was cancelled out in a policy decision by the paper. Program, which will aim at a general audience rather than an exclusively sports-minded one, is packaged by sports attorney (Willy Mays, Monte Irvin are among the clients) Howard Cosell, who has the "All-League Clubhouse" on the ABC Radio net. Program will have guests from the sports world, concentrating on controversy and human interest.

Next in line for the revamp is the vital morning period, with other segments to be filled in later. Renault would neither confirm nor deny reports that he's considering raiding other Gotham outlets for top talent for the ayem slot.

'Ideas' Peddled

ble of which of late is the availability of time on NBC-owned radio stations of the Southern Baptist Convention programs (with a television film series also worked up by the SBC). The Baptist "Hour" on radio is sponsored in New York, Cleveland, San Francisco and Chicago. Up to now religiosers have been granted slots as a public service at NBC and CBS. Question of extending the billings to the networks as a whole is still to be resolved. Some affiliate outlets would normally be expected to refuse such business, but radio is not in a position to let a "good thing" get away. (There have been occasional departures from the privately imposed ban; not sufficient enough to constitute more than a hop-skin-jump regional trend.)

With the armor of the network o&o's having been pierced by the entry of the National Tax Equality Assn., as well as by the Baptist "show," there is no telling how far the groups with an axe to grind will go before they are through.

WPIX

12.8 in any other time slot. "Ramar," which hits WPIX at 6 and is across the board (a novel approach for the half-hour skein) also did pretty well in the ratings sweepstakes: a 9.0 via ARB and a 7.4 on Pulse. These ratings went up from previously because of the preceding "Rascals," it's felt.

The setup has gotten WPIX an SRO bankroller status on both juve stanzas, with a much-envied "waiting list" handy. (Fred Thrower, WPIX boss—in deference to the power of Walt Disney among kids—intends pushing "Rascals" up to 6 p.m. next fall so as not to compete.)

In substantiation of that "look, see what we're doing to NBC" theory with regard to syndicated product, other towns report new highs on "Rascals": Los Angeles, 16.0; San Francisco, 13.5; Seattle 29.8; Detroit, 32.6.

P&G

den intentions were to become cock of the walk, moving up from joint to full sponsorship status, but this was not realized in the case of "Lucy," which, with Philip Morris moving out, goes to General Foods as co-backer though the suds company had visions of sole inheritance (a vision not in line with CBS-TV's commitments to GF that preceded P&G's entry).

On the other hand, Procter's gamble in becoming a shareholder on "Favorite Husband" starting last January will pay off in May when it assumes fullfledged weekly sponsorship. It could be that Young & Rubicam, which agents P&G, masterminded the Saturday night "Husband" deal for its "millions in tv" client as a sop for the ad house's fronting of General Foods (with an assist from CBS) as the alternator on "Lucy." And only last week P&G went for another eiggie's show (Brown & Williamson's "The Lineup") as skip-sponsor, which to go by precedent would hint at the weeder's moveout in the not too distant future. There being, of course, no current statistics that in any way equate soap with even minor diseases, much less the "cancer scare." In plainer words, where there's smoke there's soap.

WCBS-TV was represented at the planning sessions by general manager Sam Cook Digges, public affairs director Clarence Worden, assistant program chief Dan Gallagher and Ned Cramer, who directed the testcast and will also mastermind the closed-circuiter. In addition to Arthur Klein, the board of education has been represented by Joseph Jablonower, chairman of examining board; Jay E. Greene, who chairs the examiners' committee on public relations; James Macandrew, the board's director of broadcasting (and closely linked with WCBS-TV programs), and his assistant, Herman Haverkamp.

"Wristwatch Wrapup" gleam in his eye. "To subscribe to the expert-sounding theory that radio is doomed because it competes simultaneously for the same audience with television is as erroneous as to predict that the wristwatch business is doomed because it on some occasions competes simultaneously with the block on the livingroom mantle," Karol said. "The wristwatch, like the new-functioned radio medium, fills a very real personal need in a very busy and fast-moving American economy and society."

"veteran" kid actors as the pivots. Fox, although New York reared, has been working in St. Louis for educational station KETC where his "The Finder" was launched last September to mucho kudos. ("The Finder" is now hot on the trail of a successor to Fox on a cross-the-board show that's supported by a grant from Ford Foundation.)

"Big Brother" Fox's stablemates are Ginger MacManus and Pud Flanagan, who'll be pitching the questions and curiosity stuff as the cameras focus on the various vignettes. Hundreds of youngsters were auditioned before this mixed duo was picked out.

"Trip" is coming out of Irving Gitlin's hatchery at public affairs with Ted Sack producing.

Hooper, ARB

tinue to sell their services separately—that is, there will be no discount offered to clients of both services.

Entry of Hooper into the national radio field isn't expected, although the five-year term under which Hooper was disqualified from national ratings under its contract with A. C. Nielsen has expired. The late C. E. Hooper in 1950, after 12 years in business, had sold all national radio and tv rights to Nielsen with the understanding that he wouldn't reenter the national field for five years. The five years ended March 1, but a spokesman said no move into national radio was being considered. ARB, incidentally, up to a short while ago had a working agreement with Trendex, but this, without benefit of interlocking ownership, fell through.

Agreement has the virtue of giving ARB one less competitor in the local tv rating field. It's currently bucking Pulse, Nielsen (which originated its local service on a limited basis recently) and to a lesser extent, Videodex. In the national field, the situation is still unchanged, with Nielsen dominant and Trendex the mainstay in the "program popularity" field via its overnight 15-city service. In radio, Hooper's chief competitor is Pulse, which over the years has had some slam-bang battles with the Hooper organization and the late Hooper himself in particular.

TV's Fort Knox

with the inter-network rivalry, particularly between NBC and CBS, now hitting a feverish peak and with salaries, fees, etc., catapulted to astronomic figures, the webs appear to be right back where they started with their "come with me" supplications.

'Bestest For Mostest'

While the recent $700,000 splurge on "Peter Pan" (counting the Ford-RCA commercials the figure came nearer to $800,000) may have been the exception, it nonetheless is indicative of the "Fort Knox jag" that's seeped into the thinking and the economy of the major networks in their determination to get the bestest for the mostest.

But, some are asking, what assurance is there that an Ed Sullivan, a Jackie Gleason, a Ralph Edwards will still be delivering the same potent, rating-producing properties three, four or five years hence?

True, it's recognized, these are affluent days for tv, when choice segments are at a premium and when clients are holding on to their valuable time franchises. But the recent checkout of Philip Morris from its "I Love Lucy" sponsorship and relinquishing of the most enviable time slot in all video—Monday night 9 to 9:30 on CBS-TV—is regarded as the first major danger signal and a possible harbinger of things to come in the event of a soft market.

The Philip Morris retreat, of course, wasn't too surprising in the view of the general tv slackening that's afflicted all the ciggie companies following the '54 sales slump presumably induced by the cancer scare.

But whereas the ciggie sponsor once ruled the sponsor roost, today the automotives have inherited their place in the tv sun. Today it's the Buicks, the Fords, the Oldsmobiles, the Chryslers, the Pontiacs, the Dodges, etc., which are pouring countless millions into the medium. It's the Detroit boys and their flushed-with-riches coin who are primarily supporting the big network push of the spectaculars and tinted programming. And along with the auto boys, it's the same handful of major spenders (Procter & Gamble, General Foods, etc.) that dominate the bigtime programming, just as they did in radio years before.

Even a temporary labor disturbance (as witness the upcoming annual wage demands of the auto workers) or any temporary economic setback could easily upset the precarious, topheavy structure. And unless the networks have managed to resolve a financial plateau and set their houses in order, they may well find themselves engulfed in economic tailspin from which it could take years to recover.

BUNNY ROBERTS SHOW
Producer-Director: Fred Barr
15 Mins.; Sat. 10 p.m., Sun. 9:45 p.m.
WWRL, N.Y.

Bunny Roberts has one of the oddest positions in N.Y. radio. First, his gab is aired at hours completely out of accord with current indie radio principles. Then, he has the strange distinction of doing similar shows for two of the town's closest indie station rivals —WWRL, in this instance, and WHOM (stations, which aside from Roberts and a few other English language performers, are primarily after Latino fans).

To have slotted Roberts in a quarter-hour of what he thinks of as homey chatter at 10 p.m. on Saturdays and at 9:45 on Sundays gives him little chance to garner an audience. Here's what he has against him: Saturday he faces strong video from seven stations in a town where tv is a common household item; he faces a night-on-the-town with theatre, nitery, motion picture, etc., competition; with WWRL he's 1600 on the dial (near the very top) and with a station where most people expect to hear Spanish not English, and he's all talk instead of music. To compound the fruitlessness, his show itself is a slow moving, mushy affair. His aim is to knock out lots of beguiling bits and pieces. Though most of the anecdotal material used on his preem (19) was very old, he personally came across as a talent with a sometime subtle sense of humor. Art.

GILLETTE'S $300,000 'GAME OF DAY' TAB

Mutual got its second major sponsorship deal for the upcoming "Game of the Day" series in Gillette which takes on half of the Sabbath play-by-play. Sale represents about a $300,000 gross for the radio web.

Razor firm pact calls for over 400 MBS stations. The last bankroller to sign on for the actual game was Jackson Brewery for a six-day-a-week slate on some 70 odd stations at a gross of $350,000. Incidentally, former N. Y. Giant manager Mel Ott has signed on as one of the four gabbers for the baseball series. He'll mostly handle inter-inning commentary, with some game at-the-moment coverage thrown in occasionally.

Other Mutual baseball account to date is Camel on the post-game capsule.

Serialized TV Features As WRCA's Late-Niter

Some w.k. feature films are headed for serial exposure on WRCA-TV. The NBC key in New York has been experimenting with a variety of program gimmicks in the time slot following Steve Allen's NBC-TV show concluding at 1 a.m. and has gone back to a phase of its afternoon schedules for the night inspiration. Thus, "Night Cap Theatre" will make with 30-minute episodes on the cliffhanger technique. First of the pictures will be "Elephant Boy" in three parts, followed by "Foreign Correspondent" as a five-parter.

Roto-Broil has bought into the "celluloid opera" package and expectancy is to launch the serials the first week in April.

tinual stream of personnel, program and—most particularly—cable cutbacks made him decide finally to hand in his walking papers. He feels that the budgeting of the network was cutting the need for a station liaison right out from under him. The departure of Lyford, who will announce future plans in about two weeks, though not apparently motivated by direct DuMont action, would seem to fit the upcoming plans for a "telefilm network" which, according to reports, won't find a station lineup along a coaxial route very essential to operation.

Bob Coe, titled manager of station relations under Lyford, will handle his ex-topper's duties for the time being.

Milwaukee—Board of Directors of the Wisconsin Broadcasters Assn. met here last week to pick Jerome Sill, WMIL topper, prez of the organization to fill out the unexpired term of Harry Peck, formerly of WISN.

Radio Followup

Typical of the bombastic commercial spielers, but with a rather ironic if not completely reverse-English twist, was the Q. & A. attendant to Dr. John A. Springer's new book, "How To Live 365 Days A Year," which Prentice-Hall is publishing and which P-H is bankrolling with a direct-mail series of spots over WOR, New York. Dr. Springer's advocacy of don't blow your top, don't bust a gut, and all the persuasion towards temporizing one's temper seemed to go out the kilocycles when announcer Sidney Walton got into the sales spiel. First of all he sounded like the antithesis of what the calm, clinical Dr. Springer was merchandising, both in his own vis-a-vis interview approach and, of course, in his text. So intense was professional pitchman Walton and intent on reeling off the longwinded commercial that, apart from the obvious conclusion that he (Walton) qualifies perhaps as the first direct-order customer for the M.D., that much of the Q. & A. values were lost.

For one thing, instead of the studied manner in which Dr. Springer answered the obviously prepared questions, professional mikeman Walton didn't permit digestion of the A's before racing into the very next Q. It put a reverse AFTRA perspective on the M.D. whose natural pauses, as he seemingly weighed the question, indicating that the medico in this instance was a better showman.

But the Walton technique—and he's a pro, from 'way back over WOR-Mutual, and usually not the eager-beaver as manifested on this Sunday morning stint — is typical of the growing gripes against the professional brand of huckstering. Whether it's those kiddies from the Baltimore belt who sell the lanolin hair preparations; whether it's the "call Bigelow-something" brand of Jersey pressure-cookers; or whether it's the network commercial announcers — they're all of the same atomic pattern.

They're high-keyed, high-pitched and high-pressure in the sales pitch. They're obtrusive and intrusive. They are out of the key with the program's even tenor. They all operate as if they're in business for themselves—or maybe they think that if they scream their commercials high enough and fervently enough that's all the sponsor wants.

It goes for AM and tv alike. The listener-looker tunes his set for a certain program balance and boom! the middle and end commercials make you hop out of your seat before the neighbors squawk. No wonder the tuner-out, fader-out and non-commercial gadgets are a growing business. A good sales message in calm even approach is more effective than a bombastic, vibrant pitchman's strident tones. Better in fact. The higher the pitch the greater the irritant. It not only makes you nervous but doubly suspicious. The medicine men should get wise. It's about time—in fact long overdue. Abel.

MR. JOLLY'S HOTEL FOR PETS

"Mr. Jolly's Hotel For Pets" purports to be a 15-minute soaper for a late afternoon radio audience comprising both adults and juves. It's basically about a retired postman who found a home for stray animals, which, unbeknown to the humans in the story, talk among themselves (although the listener is supposed to hear them). There's also a love match between Mr. Jolly, the ex-postman, and a widow neighbor. Despite all this playing background—regardless of how immediately silly it may seem—the stanza caught (16) went absolutely no place for 15 minutes. There was a constant and suspenseless droning of incidental and major characters that seemed underground in the previous day's broadcast and certainly led to no desire to hear the next day's show.

Chief aim might have been for humor, but the conversational aimlessness took the edge off anything remotely funny that was said. There were no talking animals in the session heard either. Puss 'N' Boots sponsorship is on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, with NBC carrying the other two segments sustaining. Art.

MEET ETHEL BARRYMORE
(Biographies In Sound)
With Miss Barrymore, Vincent Sheean, Gregory Peck, Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, John Barrymore Colt, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Claudette Colbert, Richard Waring, Herman Shumlin, Helen Hayes, Lucile Watson, Billie Burke, Herbert Bayard Swope, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt
Producer-director: William Weinstein
55 Mins., Sun. (20), 7 p.m.
NBC, from N. Y.

NBC News distinguished itself anew last Sunday night (20), when it presented "Meet Ethel Barrymore" in its "Biographies In Sound" series. The 55-minute transcribed airer was a beautiful tribute to a grand lady and a great actress, put together with skill and showmanship. Never sugary, heavy or boorish, the program was always in good taste, light, witty and humorous.

This was no biog, but a random collection of reminiscences and tributes, from dead as well as living persons; scenes from plays, etc., that added up to a lusty portrait. Some of the tributes were formal and a little stiff, but most were warming, intimate and appealing. They didn't make Miss Barrymore out to be pompous or stuffy, but someone human, real and vital. And it made for a good show as well as a deserved tribute, too. (Fact that Miss Barrymore's book, titled "Memories," is to be published next month, was disclosed on the airer).

Vincent Sheean, who once wrote a play for Miss Barrymore (which flopped out of town), acted as narrator, introducing the participants, tying threads together and being a gracious host. Miss Barrymore's life, he said, was "a tremendous American success story." Gregory Peck, Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant paid brief tributes.

The past loomed up sharply as the voices of the late Alexander Woollcott, Lionel and John Barrymore spoke up. John's bit was a beautiful tribute to his sister Ethel's ability—and humility. The present took over as Miss Barrymore's children, John Barrymore Colt and Ethel Barrymore Colt, reminisced about their mother in gay, warm, revealing fashion.

Then, to show Miss Barrymore's high comedy sense, came a lengthy, amusing scene from Sidney Howard's "Ghost of Yankee Doodle," a comedy about a great actress who retires, with the late Dudley Digges playing opposite. The late Arthur Hopkins spoke of Miss Barrymore's sense of obligation to the character she was portraying (her own feelings never intruding); Helen Hayes dwelt on her warmth of interest and friendship, and Lucile Watson told how she learned from Miss B. "the art of beautiful listening." Claudette Colbert and Herman Shumlin added their tributes.

To show Miss Barrymore's dramatic sense, there came the fine closing scene from the play, "The Corn Is Green," as Miss B. talked Richard Waring out of his plans to marry a tart. Another scene later, from "White Oaks," with Miss B. as a 100-year-old dowager, showed still another facet of her acting prowess.

Billie Burke told how Miss Barrymore had sent her a dozen diamond diaper pins when her child was born, disclosing here for the first time (to Miss B. too) how Florenz Ziegfeld, Miss Burke's husband, had used two of the pins for tie clips. Herbert Bayard Swope was brief but cogent when he said that "Ethel has no age—only an unchangeable spirit." Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt remembered how Miss Barrymore, when invited to the White House, "was going to improve the speech of members of Congress."

Windup brought a lump in the throat even to battered reviewers, as Miss Barrymore ended the session memorably with the tribute she had read when FDR died, the 23d Psalm, "The Lord Is My Shepherd," etc. Bron.

SAGA
(The Tenderfoot Who Cleaned Up Skagway)
With Cliff Carpenter, Bob Dryden, others; announcer, Ed Michael Writer: Don Witty
Director: Martin Andrews
25 Mins.; Tues.-Thurs., 7:30 p.m.
Sustaining
ABC, from N. Y. (transcribed)

Red-blooded tales of adventure abounding with masculinity form the basis of "Saga," a new twice-weekly dramatic series which preemed over ABC Radio last Tuesday (15). A network presentation in cooperation with Saga Magazine, it's also beamed Thursday evenings. Material for the program is culled from the mag.

Series, according to an ABC publicity release, is "geared for family listening." This may be too broad an objective to shoot at if the initial installment is taken as any criterion. For the opener, "The Tenderfoot Who Cleaned Up Skagway," shaped up as fine listening for the male audience but with little femme appeal especially since there were no distaffer parts in the Don Witty script.

Cast headed by Cliff Carpenter and Bob Dryden made the story of a tyro prospector in the Klondike a lively one and ably caught the flavor of the turn-of-the-century times. Although the yarn was cut from a familiar pattern, the players gave it an exciting reading. Appropriate sound effects also keyed up the atmosphere. Withal, "Saga" rates as okay escapist fare for those with a yen for things vicarious. Gilb.

between live and film. Eire due to go on the air shortly with its first transmitter which will be located near Dublin.

France programs an average of 28 hours weekly for its 119,000 receivers. "The quality of the programs," says Department of Commerce study, "has been under constant and heavy attack by the French press. However, improvement would seem to depend on the overcrowding of budgetary and other difficulties." There are four transmitters.

West Germany has over 95,000 sets in use and is on the air two to three hours daily. Reacts enthusiastically to the Eurovision broadcasts. Northwest German network has five stations and there are five other regional stations.

Italy has eight transmitters and five channels and over 50,000 licensed receivers. Country is programming 32 hours weekly, and is pushing towards 50 hours a week of shows. Spain is on the air 3½ hours weekly for the audience of its estimated 600 receivers. Mostly the program is films.

Canada, with about 1,000,000 receivers in use, follows the American programming pattern and uses many popular U. S. shows. Argentina, with 30,000 receivers, is on the air 35 hours weekly, about half the time with films. Brazil's Rio transmitter operates 35 hours weekly and the three at Sao Paulo aggregate 98 hours weekly.

fundamentals that have not always marked the series.

With Gordon MacRae emceeing and also supplying a couple of vocals, the show's roster was highlighted by Caterina Valente, the Italian thrush who recently clicked on wax with her Decca version of "Malaguena." A shapely brunette looker, Miss Valente impressed with her solid vocal talent as well as her general show biz savvy. Beside "Malaguena," Miss Valente also scored on "The Breeze And I," her most recent Decca slice.

Legit and nitery songstress Kaye Ballard also hit the mark with her parakeet number, a cute piece of material in which Miss Ballard attempts to give a bird's eye view of life. Miss Ballard, however, was not so effective with her French chanteuse routine, a takeoff on the suffering Gallic songstresses.

Most disappointing was Bert Lahr who was stuck with a lame sketch about his income tax return. This was a one-joke routine in which Lahr had absolutely no scope to exercise his comedy talents. A reenacted scene from the upcoming Allied Artists' pic, "The Big Combo," with Cornel Wilde and Jean Wallace, also failed to make any dent.

Ziv-TV's 11 New Account Execs to Keep Pace With $9,000,000 Prod. Budget

In a quickie expansion of its sales department tuned to the $9,000,000 production budget it's allocated for this year, Ziv Television Programs has added 11 account execs, bringing its full-size sales force to 87, and upped several of its present salesmen to the positions of spot sales managers. Three new salesmen have been added to the western division, three to the eastern division and five to the midwest operation.

Western division appointments are William Andrews, formerly with KPTV in Portland; Spence Fennell, Medallion Productions and head of his own Coast agency; and John Forsythe, ex-Rockett Productions. Jack Gregory was upped to western spot sales manager under western sales chief Walter Kingsley. In the east, newcomers are William Dubois, ex-Atlas TV; Herbert Pierson, former manager of WOIC in Columbia, S. C., and Dan Bryan, formerly of Guild Films' southeast sales force. Leon Ray and Jack Gainey were upped to spot managers under eastern sales chief Al Gousten.

In the midwest, new men are Roy McGuire, former tv sales chief of WDSU-TV, New Orleans; John J. Hawley, ex-sales manager of KCEB-TV in Tulsan; Paul Miles, ex-Brown & Bigelow agency; James Delaney, ex-New York Herald Tribune ad staff, and Lynn Knox. Phil Williams and Joe Kotler are the new spot managers, reporting to division manager Ed Broman.

Emerson Drug, which last week bought Ziv's "Science Fiction Theatre" in place of "Janet Dean" in 20 key markets, was just an alternate sponsor short of renewing "Janet Dean" instead of buying the Ziv Package. According to Bill Dozier, head of Cornwall Productions, which owns the Ella Raines starrer, and Ed Madden, veep of Motion Pictures for Television, which distribbed it, Emerson wanted to okay second-year production of a new cycle of 39 of the pix, but wished to do so on an alternate-week basis only. William Morris office, handling the property, was unable to come up with the other skip-a-weeker on time, and the deal folded. Emerson, via Lennen & Newell, had sponsored "Janet Dean" for the past year, and had to get either some new "Janet Deans" or another show in fast to keep its its time franchises. With Morris unable to supply the alternate-weeker, Emerson bowed out.

Yet packager George F. Foley has closed down his production offices to return to the practice of law. He'll continue to concentrate on the television end of the business, managing such personalities as Rex Marshall and a number of corporations, but the packaging end is kaput. His legal partner will be John C. Hollahan, former v.p. of the package firm.

Foley's decision adds a reverse twist to the growing trend which sees attorneys taking an increasingly important place in the production setup at both networks and independents. Foley, long a packager ("Tales of Tomorrow," "The Herman Hickman Show"), provides an opposite number, going from production back to law.

In addition to the top honors—for WHAS-Louisville, KGAK-Gallup, N. M., and CBS radio-tv commentator Eric Sevareid, reported last week—two tv stations are cited by the duPont Awards, to be officialized Friday (25) by Washington & Lee U. at a dinner in Washington, D. C. Commendations go to WCBS-TV, N. Y., for such programs as "Camera Three," "On the Carousel," "Here Is the Past," "America in the Making" and "Our Goodly Heritage," wherein "talent and showmanship are called to the service of programs of unusual educational and spiritual value"; and KMJ-TV, Fresno, Cal., for "unusually comprehensive programming in fields of agriculture and education, including a novel and effective series to teach English to foreign-born residents of the region." CBS Radio will air the awards on the 25th.

Sheraton Hotels, noting the increase in closed-circuit business meetings in hotels, will equip all the major hotels of the chains with permanent closed-circuit units. Installations are expected to be completed by May 1.

Pioneers in hotel use of closed-circuit, with hotels in New York, Boston, Washington and Detroit already equipped, Sheraton has purchased 10 more units from the Fleetwood Corp. Equipment, which will produce a video picture of 9x12 ft., was especially designed for hotel ballroom use.

The American Women in Radio and Television have set up a charity affair for next Monday (28) night at the Hotel Lexington, in N.Y. Show bears a "City Fair With a Country Air" title, and will feature country-style crooner Oscar Brand and the Honey Dreamers. Proceeds of the fair go to AWRT's N.Y. chapter benefit fund.

Institute of Radio Engineers annual conclave opened Monday (21) at Kingsbridge Armory in the Bronx, with several electronic manufacturers on tap displaying their most recent technological advances. Sessions end tomorrow (Thurs.).

Extent of this year's exhibit is emphasized by the RCA booth. Over 160 of that one company's tube division products are being displayed under the title of "Color Television Comes of Age."

Dr. Lyman Bryson, chairman of CBS Radio's "Invitation to Learning," is cutting quite a figure these days. He's wading through the whole span of "Invitation" programs to come up with the three best guests, with idea being to pull an anniversary show. The egghead stanza was launched in 1940.

Magnuson indicated he would press for speedier action by the Commission when his Committee holds hearings on UHF problems. Date of the hearings will be announced, he said, in the "very near future."

He said he expects the Commission to take "specific steps" to aid UHF by the time its members appear before the Committee and to "spell out" in more detail what it plans to do. The public investment in tv receivers, which the Commission estimated at $10,000,000,000, is involved, he said.

The Senator asserted he will take "every step possible" to prevent "monopolistic trends" from developing in "this most important media of mass communications."

ABC's Get 'Em Young

the laggard in the ABC-TV rating picture. Via previous mismanagement, lack of high-grade programming, etc., it's occupied a relatively minor position in the seven-station Gotham market. In terms of programming particularly, it rarely received recognition or ratings among New Yorkers, and this imbalance extended into the network's nighttime periods, pulling its national ratings way down. With "Mickey Mouse Club" as the pivot, the station has mapped a fall programming lineup that looks impregnable, starting with "Hopalong Cassidy" at 4 p. m., moving into "Mickey," then into "Gene Autry" crosst-he-board at 6, follow i by another western at 6:30. Then it's "Kukla, Fran & Ollie" and the John Daly newscast, giving the kids a chance to eat, and that 7:30 powerhouse follows on the web.

Extend this sort of programming thinking to other weak links in the ABC lineup and it suggests how much of a role junior can play in the shaping of a network and its components.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Kay Starr: "Foolishly Yours"-"For Better Or Worse" (Victor). Since the indie labels are currently calling the tune for the music biz, everybody is rushing to cover "Foolishly Yours," a slow ballad launched on Sound Records by Lee Raymond and The Costello Sisters, a slice that has since been taken over by Decca. Kay Starr's forceful rendition for Victor, with Harold Mooney's orch and chorus supplying a solid background, sounds like it could step out quickly. Doris Day, for Columbia, has another slice, with a more relaxed sound, that will also garner a big share of the spins while Capitol has come up with an okay cut by the Four Knights. On the Victor flip, Miss Starr has another ballad with possibilities.

Caterina Valente: "The Breeze and I"-"Jalousie" (Decca). This Italian songstress' click on her first U. S. release, "Malaguena," was no freak. She has an attention-getting delivery that's again spotlighted on another Lecuona oldie, "The Breeze and I." She does it with English lyrics in a production that's bound to stir some noise. She gives a similarly effective workover to the standard on the flip.

The Sunnysiders: "Hey, Mr. Banjo" - "Zoom, Zoom, Zoom" (Kapp). What Crazy Otto did for the piano, the top side of this release could do for the banjo. It's a happy number with an infectious melody that's due for lots of juke spins. Flip is a cute rhythm & blues tune which fits into the current market pattern.

Lena Horne: "Love Me Or Leave Me"-"I Love To Love" (RCA Victor). Absent from the wax sweepstakes for a couple of years, Lena Horne still impresses as a standout stylist with her first effort for Victor. Her workover of the oldie, "Love Me Or Leave Me," indicates a form that few other current vocalists can approach. The flip material is not near the level of the top side standard. Lennie Hayton backs up with a small combo.

Patti Page: "Keep Me In Mind"-"Little Crazy Quilt" (Mercury). Patti Page has a swinging ballad in "Keep Me In Mind" which could move out fast. Miss Page handles with a light beat throughout. Flip is a delightful number with an offbeat idea. It rates spins.

Guy Mitchell: "Zoo Baby"-"Nobody Home" (Columbia). "Zoo Baby" is an attractive novelty entry which Guy Mitchell belts for maximum impact. The clever lyric gives this side considerable punch. Flip is a fair dialectic entry.

Eddie Fontaine: "I Miss You So"-"On Bended Knee" (Label X). Eddie Fontaine, who did well on "Rock Love," follows up with another typical r&b tune in "I Miss You So." Fontaine has an authentic delivery and he belts this slow ballad to a fare-thee-well. Flip is in a similar groove and Fontaine also rides this one in the rock 'n' roll groove.

Joan Weber: "Lover - Lover"-"Tell The Lord" (Columbia). The sequel to Joan Weber's "Let Me Go, Lover" is "Lover-Lover, Why Must We Part." Latter tune has a country flavor and Miss Weber renders it effectively with her simple delivery. "Tell The Lord" is an okay religioso entry which Miss Weber also handles appropriately.

Billy Eckstine: Give Me Another Chance"-"More Than You Know" (MGM). Billy Eckstine is likely to hit big on wax again suddenly when he gets material which fits into the current pattern. In "Give Men Another Chance," he belts a fine ballad with his customary smoothness. Eckstine is excellent on the oldie, "More Than You Know."

Lou Monte: "The Italian Wallflower"-"Dreamboat" (Victor). Lou Monte's Italo workover of a rhythm & blues number was practically inevitable and he turns up with the expected version on "Dance Me With Me, Henry" under the title of "The Italian Wallflower." The surprise factor, which scored so heavily for Monte on "The Darktown Strutter's Ball," is, of course, missing here. Equally inevitable was a rock 'n' roll yodel and Cathy Johnson fills this gap with her "Rockin' and Yodelin'" for Columbia. On the Victor flip, Monte energetically belts "Dreamboat," a good rhythm number.

Gordon MacRae: "You Forgot"-"Tic a Tye" (Capitol). "You Forgot" is another of Tin Pan Alley's attempts to get a song moving via prime tv exposure. It's still the material and not the showcasing that counts most and "You Forgot" is just standard ballad fare that lacks the force to create hitbracket excitement. Gordon MacRae does a slick job on it, however, and after the tele drive, it could develop into one of his best-selling platters. "Tic a Tye" is a cute novelty with an Italian flavoring. MacRae does all right by it, too.

The Four Coins: "My Anxious Heart"-"Oh Mother Dear" (Epic). "My Anxious Heart" has a noise-making chance, especially as delivered by The Four Coins. It's a tune with a driving beat and the boys belt it with impact. It'll get its best biz from the jukebox juves. "Oh Mother Dear" is an expendable.

Eydie Gorme: "Give a Fool Chance"-"A Girl Can't Say" (Coral). Eydie Gorme wins more attention each time out. She's in top form on "Give a Fool a Chance," a tune with a step-out chance. Melody and lyric are deftly welded and thrush handles it with a distinctive style. "A Girl Can't Say" is a novelty that doesn't come across despite Miss Gorme's vocal effort.

Album Reviews

Jack Pleis Orch: "Music From Disneyland" (Decca). Walt Disney has stirred up a lot of diskery attention since he moved into tv. Jack Pleis is first up with a salute to the "Disneyland" show (ABC-TV) and the 12-inch LP is due for a big rackup. Pleis has put together a dozen numbers from Disney's cartoon features with rich, melodic quality. Songs from "Snow White," "Pinocchio," "The Three Caballeros" and "Cinderella" are given warm, delightful workovers.

Steve Allen: "Music For Tonight" (Coral). Steve Allen, a tv performer who's also a legit musician, batons this highly listenable set of instrumentals in the typical "mood music" groove. It's sweet, melodic and executed with taste. Allen's piano is featured along with several other instrumentalists on a group of standards, including "Isn't It Romance," "It Can't Be Wrong," "For The Very First Time," "Long Ago," "I Fall In Love Too Easily," in addition to several numbers composed by Allen.

Eddie Fisher: "I Love You" (RCA Victor). Here's a natural from Eddie Fisher on a group of romantic standards that add up to the title of the set. Fisher, as usual, belts them with his natural, open-voiced style with Hugo Winterhalter backing up superlatively with a string orch. Repertoire ranges from "Love Sends A Little Gift of Roses" to "The Girl That I Marry," in a well-rounded program of dozen tunes.

Percy Faith: "House of Flowers" (Columbia). The fine score from the "House of Flowers" now turns up in a strictly instrumental version in this album. The absence of the lyric is felt in some of the numbers, but Percy Faith has dressed the tunes in richly textured orchestrations which project with considerable impact. If nothing else, this set can also pass as a "mood music" entry.

Hoagy Carmichael Orch: "Old Rockin' Chair" (RCA Victor). Victor has delved into vaults for some crackerjack jazz sides cut by a band led by songwriter Hoagy Carmichael more than 20 years ago. The vintage quality of this package adds to its appeal. In addition, Carmichael's orch featured some topflight sidemen, including Bix Beiderbecke, Benny Goodman, Dorsey Bros., Gene Krupa, Jack Teagarden, Joe Venuti and others of that calibre. Set includes several of Carmichael's best numbers, including "Rockin' Chair," "Georgia On My Mind" and "Lazy River."

JAZZ NAMES SET PARKER TRIBUTE AT BIRDLAND

Birdland, New York jazz nitery, is prepping a memorial concert for Charlie Parker April 3. Parker, founder of the modern jazz school, died last week of heart attack. Nitery got its monicker when it opened six years ago by contracting Parker's nickname "Yardbird."

Already set for the memorial bash are Sarah Vaughn, Dinah Washington, Dizzy Gillespie, Lenny Tristano and the Dan Terry orch. Boxoffice take will got to Parker's family.

BIG VISTAS FOR LOW-COST DISKS

Indie Labels Calling Tune For Music Biz in Setting Style Trends

With all the majors closely watching the indie diskers for potential hits to cover, Decca Records picked up the mastetr to a new tune, "Foolishly Yours," cut by Lee Raymond on the Sound label, a Philadelphia company. Immediately, Kay Starr and Doris Day covered the tune for RCA Victor and Columbia respectively, with the Four Knights etching it for Capitol. Shapiro-Bernstein Music is publishing.

Ever since the start of the rhythm & blues cycle, the major diskers have stepped up their surveillance of the lesser labels. If a tune starts to show some action with the small company, the top diskers rush in. Thus Perry Como's "Ko Ko Mo" and Georgia Gibbs' "Tweedle Dee" were derived from small label hits.

Periodically, the smaller labels seem to get hot at the expense of the big companies, who are not so immediately responsive to the variable musical trends. Even the No. 1 hit currently, "Melody of Love," which is not an r&b number, was launched by an indie company, Dot Records, with Billy Vaughn's version. It was subsequently picked up by David Carroll for Mercury and the Four Aces for Decca.

"The Ballad of Davy Crockett," similarly, was sparked by the Bill Hayes slice on Cadence and then covered by all the major companies.. In the last few months, in fact, Dot and Cadence have been among the top hit producers in the pop market.

Houston Radio Stations Ask Crime Commission To List Indigo Disks

Houston, March 22.

Alarmed by some disks being played over local radio stations, the Juvenile Delinquency & Crime Commission has begun preparation of a list of objectionable records it wants banned from the air. Radio station representatives themselves asked that such a list be drawn up.

It will be drawn up as soon as possible, according to I. Olshan, commission chairman, and will be mailed to managers and program directors of all the local stations. The list will probably contain at least 100 titles. It may even include several hit tunes, he said.

Meeting with representatives of five stations, members of the commission expressed serious concern of what they said were suggestive recordings being played over the air and asked the station representatives for suggestions toward a solution.

Davis Morris, general manager of KNUZ, proposed the list be prepared. It should include song titles, recording artists and recording companies, he stated. Morris said the list should be submitted to the station managers and program directors. Representatives of the other stations present, including KPRC, KTHT, KTRH and KUHF, agreed with Morris on the list.

The station representatives agreed that the responsibility for playing objectionable records rests upon individual disk jockeys who are allowed to play records of their own choosing. Jukebox operators, record companies and stores were asked to voluntarily cooperate in keeping objectionable records out of the city.

McGuire Sis' 'Sincerely' In 1,000,000 Circle

The McGuire Sisters have made the 1,000,000-seller circle with their slice of "Sincerely" for Coral Records. Tune was among the first rhythm & blues tunes to break into the general pop market.

Trio is slated to get a gold platter on the Arthur Godfrey CBS-TV show today (Wed.).

Irving Berlin on R&B

Editor, VARIETY:

Regarding your editorials, I don't know the situation as well as you do but I certainly agree it should be cleaned up from inside . . . As you know, there have always been lyrics with suggestive angles and some of our greats are identified with some of these songs. However, they were confined to theatres and to personalities who put them across so that they weren't "dirty."

I remember during the ragtime period when "Everybody's Doin' It" was a big hit, there were some comments that the title was suggestive but when they got to know the lyric they knew that it meant "everybody" was doing the turkey trot. Irving Berlin

Coast Jockeys Open Gab War On R&B Cycle

Hollywood, March 22.

A local deejay war seems to be brewing here on the Coast with various platter spinners taking up pro-and-con opinions on the current pop trend of rhythm and blues records. Latest outburst on the issue came from KFWB disk jock Zeke Manners, who accused KLAC deejay Peter Potter of "obviously talking through his hat" when he stated that "all rhythm & blues records are dirty and as bad for kids as dope."

Manners added that Potter should not take such a "biased and foolish view as to condemn a whole musical trend for a few numbers that may have a double meaning."

"I think that Potter is insulting the deejay profession by taking this obstinate stand that all r&b disks are bad," said Manners, who claims he has received hundreds of letters from parents and teenagers alike saying they like and play the r&b music because "of its danceable and happy beat." In fact, the disk jock thinks the trend should

'Rock 'n' Roll' Owes Him 6G, Moondog Claims

Moondog, the Broadway character who dresses in burlap, has hit Allen Freed, WINS (N. Y.) disk jockey, for a $5,950 judgment which was made in Moondog's favor last November. Judgment stemmed from a suit in which Moondog, whose real name in Louis Hardin, charged Freed with taking over his monicker for the latter's disk jockey stanzas. Abner Greenberg, legal rep for Moondog, said Freed has failed to pay and therefore he has launched a supplementary proceeding in N. Y. Supreme Court.

Freed has since dropped the Moondog tag in favor of "Rock 'n' Roll," which also designates the type of music he plays on his WINS show.

3 ASCAP Firms Sue Ballroom For Infringing

Three ASCAP publishing firms, William C. Handy, Harms and Rylan, filed suit for copyright infringement against the Rollaway Ballroom in Revere, Mass., in Massachusetts Federal Court last week, for alleged use of music without authorization. Complaint asks for the statutory $250 damages for each unauthorized performance, together with court costs and attorney fees.

Tunes involved were "The St. Louis Blues" (Handy), "I Cover The Waterfront" (Harms) and "Make Yourself Comfortable" (Rylan).

COLUMBIA EYES CAMDEN FORMAT

Although the major diskers cut their longplay prices drastically at the outset of this year, the top companies are still aiming at broadening the market with still lower-priced disk lines. Move is sparked by the increasing take of RCA Victor's Camden Records, a line of standard works selling at $1.98 for a 12-inch LP and pressed mostly from old numbers in Victor's catalog.

It's understood that Columbia Records, which also has a considerable catalog of oldies, is now planning to launch an operation similar to Camden's. Like the latter label, Col's operation would involve the release of old works by w.k. orchestras and conductors under pseudonyms. Camden uses such names as the Centennial Orchestra, New World Orchestra, Warwick Orchestra, etc., as pseudonyms for the Boston Symphony, Philadelphia Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski's baton, and other topline symphony organizations.

Primary target for the low-priced platters are the big department stores and chain operations which can use them as promotional lines. Camden, for instance, has been installed in the Sears, Roebuck chain for the past few months and several major department stores have also been focusing their disk operations on the Camden line.

Since, however, this market has hardly been tapped, industry execs feel there is room for a vast expension in this direction. Camden, for instance, recently launched an EP program of current hits, selling at 79c, and this project has been rolling as a supplement to Camden's longhair and semi-classical repertoire.

Local 802, WOR Near Deal On Year-Long Row

Settlement of the year-old hassle between N. Y. Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, and WOR, radio and tv, is due to take place within the next week or two. No live musicians have worked on WOR since collapse of negotiations between the union and the station early last year.

It's understood that the settlement will take place more or less on the same terms which WOR offered last year. At that time, WOR refused to accept a minimum quota of staff musicians, but agreed to allocate some $200,000 yearly for the employment of live musicians as needed.

Settlement of the labor row will open the possibility of some of WOR-TV shows getting live music as backing. It's expected that Ted Steele, who used live music on his previous WPIX show, will also use tooters on his WOR-TV series.

MGM Inks Arlyne Tye

Thrush Arlyne Tye has been added to MGM Records talent roster. She's an Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scouts" winner.

GOLDEN JUBILEE YEAR
VARIETY
1905 - 1955

Majors Cut EP Prices to Juke Ops To Smooth Switchover to 10c Plays

With the 10c play getting increasing circulation in the jukebox industry, virtually all of the major disk companies are coming up with cutrate extended-play merchandising plans for the coin machine operators. Latter are using the EPs in order to smooth the switchover to the 10c play, since the customer will be getting two numbers at the old rate of a nickle per tune.

The juke ops, however, want the EPs but don't want to pay for the jackets. As a result, the major companies are now selling the ops the EPs without packets at considerably lower prices. At the present time, only Decca and Coral Records are holding off from presenting special deals to the jukes.

RCA Victor, for instance, has made up two EP packages of 20 and 25 platters apiece. One package comprises the "Honor Roll of Hits," four hits from each year from 1926 to 1945. This will sell to the juke ops for $13.92, as against the regular price of $17.20 with the jackets. The other package contains 25 platters covering Victor's bestselling sides by their top artists. This will go for $17.40 as against the regular price of $21.50.

The EP package programs will be presented to the coin machine industry at the Music Operators of America convention in Chicago March 28-30. Execs of all the major companies are planning to attend the conclave.

Columbia Record EP pitch for the jukes consists of three separate packages of 10 EP platters each. Coin operators price for the packages will be $7.70. The packages have been categorized into "Sing and Dance," "Easy Listening" and

Col's 'Crazy' Kid

The barrelhouse piano style has a new exponent in Smile-Lee on Columbia Records. Smile-Lee is the "nom-de-Crazy Otto" for Liberace.

Disk, out this week, is a coupling of "Stumbling" and "Over the Waves."

Carmichael Gets Advance, Upped %, Mills' Gets Tunes

Hoagy Carmichael and Mills Music have patched up their differences over the renewal rights to over a dozen of the tunesmith's songs, including the standard "Star Dust." Suit, which was launched by Carmichael last year in which he challenged the copyright renewal assignment in the original contract, was dismissed last week in California Federal Court and the renewal rights were given to Mills.

It's reported that Carmichael was given an upped royalty deal and an advance for the reassignment. The suit was dismissed with prejudice and without costs to either party. "With prejudice" phrase means that Carmichael cannot reopen this case.

Carmichael had sued for the return of the copyrights in a case that loomed as spelling out for the first time the validity of the old renewal clause. Carmichael's lawyer, Mills' secretary and attorney Sam Buzzell, and Lee V. Eastman, worked out the agreement.

The first 28-year term on "Star Dust" runs out next year, while on several of the other tunes in the suit, the initial terms already have expired. Lyric to "Star Dust" was penned by Mitchell Parish, whose part of the copyright would have remained with Mills in any event.

Other tunes involved in the suit were "Boneyard Shuffle," "Washboard Blues," "Riverboat Shuffle," "What Kind of Man Is You," "Tell Me That You Love Me," "In The Still of the Night," "Manhattan Rag," "One Morning In May," "High and Dry," "South Breeze," "My Sweet Harvey" and "March of the Hoodlums."

Gibbs' 'Ballin' the Jack' Too Quick for Coral

Mercury Records has been forced to scrap Georgia Gibbs slice of "Ballin' The Jack" because of the five-year limit clause forbidding an artist to cut the same tune for a rival disk company. Miss Gibbs cut the tune more than four years ago for the Coral label.

A few weeks ago Merc issued a coupling of "Dance With Me Henry" and "Ballin' The Jack" but Coral squawked that the five year limitation period was not up until September. Merc pulled back the disk and recoupled "Henry" with "Every Road Must Have A Turning."

Cyril Simons to Head Lou Levy's Firm in Brit.

Lou Levy, Leeds Music topper who returned from England last weekend, has appointed Cyril Simons to head up his subsidiaries in London, Leeds and Duchess Music. Simons is currently in the U. S. for briefing on Levy's operation in this country.

Groundwork for Levy's firms in England was set by Sal Chiantia, Leeds' exec vice-prexy, who was in London for the past month. Leeds formerly was tied up with Peter Maurice Ltd. in Britain.

Cleveland Jocks Nix Platter Exclusives Given to Bill Randle

Cleveland, March 22.

Record company release of "exclusives" came in for a tea-leaf tempest by several of the disk jockeys who are threatening to refrain from playing any shellacs reportedly given "first" to WERE's Bill Randle. The tempest has banded together a group of the deejays including WHK's Bill Gordon, WJW's Joe Finan and WDOK's Big Chief Wain, who have told publishers they'll not play exclusives given to Randle.

Randle, however, denied he gets "first crack" from local distributors. He termed the attitude of the other diskers as "childish" and said they could get "firsts if they were alert." He said the only time he takes credit for making a record is a record has been released and has been played around, without too much success, "I pick it up, play it four times a day for over two weeks, and then when it really climbs to the top, then I believe I should take credit."

Hula Tune's U. S. Comeback Via New German Buildup

A unique saga of an Hawaiian tune making a comeback in this country via a German buildup is involved in Bing Crosby's latest "Jim, John and Jonas" side for Decca. Tune, written by folk cleffer Johnny Bond, was originally titled "Cherokee Waltz" but got nowhere until a German group, called the Hula Hawaiian Quintet, cut it for the Deutsche Grammaphon company several months ago. It has since climbed into a Reich bestseller.

Bond has now written new lyrics for the tune, fashioning it after the German theme of nostalgia for departing soldiers. Decca, incidentally, has been clicking with its Deutsche Grammaphon affiliations, having picked up the Crazy Otto and Caterina Valente disks from the overseas affiliate.

Lou Brecker, On Roseland's 37th Anni, Sez Mambo Is Hottest B.O. Beat of All

The dance has become more important than the band. That's the opinion of Lou Brecker, owner-operator of Roseland, now going into its 37th year at the same Broadway location.

Brecker claims that there haven't been many new terp innovations in the past 25 years but no new name band has done as much to boost biz as the mambo craze. "The b.o. take has more than doubled here in the past two years," he said; "and it's all due to the mambo."

The ballroom boniface has skedded special "Mamborama" nights and has tipped off his orchs to stress the Latino beat during the other nights of the week. For the "Mamborama" evening, Brecker has slotted cuffo mambo classes before the orchs take over. The hip-swinging instruction is laid down by Pedro & Olga and as many as 400 people crowd the dance floor to brush up on their shakes.

The rock 'n roll beat hasn't made any dent in the terp fashions at Roseland and Brecker doubts if it ever will. "It's strictly a teenage fad," he said, "and our clientele is made up primarily of couples in their 20's and over." Brecker's lineup of dance nights include polka, fox-trot, rhumba and tango —but the mambo beat dominates throughout.

One of the major changes in the ballroom biz since Brecker kicked off Roseland in 1919 has been the disappearance of the hostess. When Roseland opened, Brecker had close to 150 hostesses on tap, now he has none. "The 10c-a-dance girl has just evaporated," he added. "There aren't too many girls interested in that kind of work any more and I'm not interested in hiring them." He stated that about 60% of his take comes from couples, while the rest is made up of guys and gals who come in groups. He admitted that it's still possible for a loner to find a partner, but eight floor managers prevent any rough stuff.

There are still about a half-dozen "taxi-dance" halls operating around Broadway, but Brecker figures that they'll eventually become obsolete. The license given to the present owners are non-transferable and as soon as the buildings come down or the owners retire, the "taxi" terp biz will be washed up. The taxi-dance got its tag, according to Brecker, because the terp hostesses gave the 10c-a-dance buyers the shortest possible run for their money.

Roseland has had four facelift-ings since it opened. Teeoff motif was all roses, second period was Spanish, third design was southern and the current motif is modern. The dancefloor, largest in the east, holds about 750 couples while the room can accommodate close to 2,500 payees. Brecker also operates the Palladium in Los Angeles and The Gay Blades in N. Y. off Broadway.

Unlike the Palladium, its up-the-block ballroom neighbor, Roseland has maintained more decorum despite the torrid beat which predominates. The slap-happy mamboniks at the Palladium are a younger and more frenetic crew while Brecker's ballroom steadily attracts a more straight-laced breed of terp fans. Other major difference between the two spots is that the Palladium has become a gathering place for New York's Spanish-speaking hoofers and mixed couples on the dance floor are no novelty. Brecker has never made a pitch for this trade and Roseland continues as a "family-style" ballroom-cafe.

Gotham Recording Appoints New G.M.

In a reshuffle at Gotham Recording Corp. last week, Robert M. Volkell was upped to director of sales and service, a new post, replacing former general manager Harry Landon who ankled the company with former account exec Ed DiResta to form Studio Program Service.

Volkell's former post of comptroller will be taken over by Lawrence Lotto. Gotham continues to be headed up by Herbert M. Moss and Stephen F. Temmer, prexy and v.p., respectively.

Bill (Ink Spots) Kenny Shifts from Decca to X

Bill Kenny, longtime Decca Records pactee, is shifting to Label X, RCA Victor subsid. Kenny, who formerly helmed the Ink Spots, is now working as a single.

He'll cut his first sides for X when he returns to N. Y. from his current nitery tour on the Coast.

No Clicks From Hit Musicals But Diskers Like 'Em Anyway

Tunes from hit musicals have had tough sledding in the pop field so far this season. The diskeries, however, aren't cooling off to showtune entries and many of the major labels are prepping a big push on the songs from the incoming Dick Adler-Jerry Ross score for "Damn Yankees."

The "Damn Yankees" barrage will kick off over the weekend when Frank Music, which publishes the score, lifts the restriction on the release date. "What Lola Wants, Lola Gets" will be the first tune to hit the market. RCA Victor will have its Dinah Shore slicing in the stores Monday (28) as will Mercury with Sarah Vaughan and MGM with Ginny Gibson and Decca with Carmen Mac Rae. Victor has the exposure edge since it's already slotted a tele showcasing with Miss Shore on NBC-TV's specola Sunday (27). Rest of the score has attracted the disk company a&r men to such an extent that close to 30 diskings already have been lined up.

Diskery interest in the Adler-Ross product stems from the fact that the team came up with the last legitune to break through for a big payoff. Tune was "Hey There," from last season's entry, "The Pajama Game." The Rosemary Clooney waxing for Columbia was the first showtune in many years to rack up more than 1,000,000 disk sales. "Hernando's Hideaway," from the same show, also moved into the hit lists via Archie Bleyer's Cadence cut.

The diskers have had some strong material from this season's entries but only a couple are stirring up any noise in the market. "All of You" from the Cole Porter score for "Silk Stockings" and "Young and Foolish" from the Albert Hague-Arnold B. Horwitt score for "Plain and Fancy" are showing a hit potential, but the going is slow.

The tunes from such other of this season's entries as "Peter Pan," "The Boy Friend," "Fanny" and "House of Flowers" received slight diskery coverage and never got off the ground.

Boris Blacher, German composer and director of the Hochschrule fuer Musik in Berlin, will make his first visit to this country to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

RCA's Rome Plant Going to 500,000 Disks in 2d Year; Big Export Biz

Rome, March 15.

RCA will expand its local plant's record production to an approximate output of 500,000 disks for the coming year, the second of its new operation. Total for first year was about 300,000. RCA's Italian division is already exporting to such countries as Germany, Switzerland, Greece, Egypt, Portugal, Madagascar, India and Uruguay, with others to be added to the list as soon as production expands. Other markets would be taken over by the Spanish RCA plant, which is about one year behind Rome in setting up. First Spanish-mades go out onto the market soon, while Italo product has been selling for about one year.

Sales percentage averages about 70-30, with classicals outselling pops at about that ratio. Arturo Toscanini, according to a company official, "is our bread and butter," while popular pops are Marilyn Monroe (company expects a strong sale from her four-song "No Biz Like Show Biz" combo, coming up for release). Italo stars pacted to RCA are Nilla Pizzi, Katina Ranieri, Domenico Modugno (now on U. S. nitery tour), and orchestras of Trovajoli, Savina and Ortolani. Some of these contrib to the U. S. RCA catalog, while most local pressings of classical music originate from the Yank catalog. Extended play recordings of longhair items, especially by Toscy, are other good sellers. Italian LP prices range from $1 for a 10-inch 78'er to about $8 for a 12-inch LP platter. Quality, according to RCA experts, is equal to or better than corresponding U.S.-mades—a must where the public weighs its choice carefully before paying the high tab on records.

Video, with its 100,000-subscriber local net, is still a minor preoccupation for the local RCA distrib. Barely 300-odd sets are imported yearly, as there are many local manufacturers and a slow-moving market. Servicing for the limited number becomes a problem, especially in view of import problems on spares. Estimated that the Italo telenet would go up to a 500,000 total when the entire net is completed sometime next year.

Mills to Showcase New Tunes and Talent In Expanded Disk Setup

Hollywood, March 22.

"I'm not entering the recording business to compete with other diskeries," Irving Mills, Mills Music exec, commented on his new disk expansion. "All I'm trying to do is create more of a demand for our material.

"We will record only original numbers and not pick up tunes already waxed like other diskeries. Every tune I record I will send to other recording companies before I release mine, so they can duplicate my original if they wish."

Mills reported that his company will try to record material that's acceptable all over the world and not the type of tune that is played only in concentrated areas. He will exploit his own tunes, realizing that a major diskery could beat him on sales by coming out with a top-notch artist waxing the same tune.

"I plan on using unknowns as my recording artists," he declared. "In a way, it will be sort of a showcase type company for new talent. Of course, too, I'll benefit if a tune of mine becomes a hit on another label because I'll have the copyrights to the song."

He feels that his company, American Recording Artists, which was organized a couple of years ago to produce masters, may be paving the way toward the discovery of new artists by the employment of unknowns. He will use his publishing company as the agency for creating and finding new song material.

The day of having only sheet music to submit is over, Mills thinks. "Today," he said, "you need a recording to create an interest in a tune."

American Records, meantime, has sold four masters by a new group, The Sunnysiders, to Kapp Music.

SUNDAY MATINEE JAZZ

Quintet's Hour Jump Before Double Feature Bill

Birmingham, March 22.

Avon Theatre, Birmingham's art house, will experiment with a one-hour jazz concert Sunday (27) as an extra feature at 2 p.m., along with "Mad Wednesday" and "Hunchback of Notre Dame." Charlie Hudson's Quintet with Tim Jordan is the jazz group.

Manager Bob Dillon said he would hold regular Sunday afternoon jazz concerts as an extra attraction if the idea catches on.

NEWMAN KICKS OFF NEW H'WOOD DISKERY

Hollywood, March 22.

Hollywood composer-conductor Lionel Newman is kicking off a new diskery, Liberty Records, headquartering here.

Newman, who's musical director at 20th-Fox studios, cut two of his pic themes, "Conquest," from the pic, "Captain From Castille," and "The Girl Upstairs," from the forthcoming "Seven Year Itch."

New Indie Label

A new indie label, Cardill Records, moves into the disk sweepstakes this week. Plattery is headed up by Louis Cardillo with Lindsay McPhail handling the artists and repertoire and the musical director chores.

Already pacted to the label are vocalists Bob Richards, Midge Barber and Lee Lindsey.

Cumulative Vote Pitch Only Ripple On Upcoming Decca Stockholder Meet

Compared to last year's bitter fight for control, Decca Records' annual stockholder meeting in New York April 12 promises to be completely peaceful. While ex-board member G. L. Lloyd led to unsuccessful fight to take over the management last year, this year prexy Milton R. Rackmil's stewardship of Decca is going unchallenged.

However, two stockholders, Lewis D. and John J. Gilbert, each of whom owns 12 shares and claims to represent an additional 50, have proposed that Decca adopt a system of cumulative voting for its board of directors. Under this system, the stockholder would be entitled to as many votes as the number of shares held, multiplied by the number of directors to be elected. The stockholder would then have the right to cast all his votes for a single candidate or distribute them as he sees fit.

The management is opposing cumulative voting on the grounds that directors elected on this basis may tend to represent the stockholders who voted them in rather than the interests of the whole company. The management also stated that cumulative voting "also introduces the possibility of fraction and harmful interference with the orderly administration of the affairs of the company" and "it may open the door to the intrusion of interests which may be highly prejudicial to those of the company."

Nominees for the board include all the incumbents, who are Rackmil, prexy; Leonard W. Schneider, exec vice-prexy; Robert W. Lea vice-prexy of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp.; Harold J. Thorp, member of the Laurence M. Marks investment firm, and Samuel H Valance, vice-chairman of Industria Electrica de Mexico. The last three board members are also on Universal's board.

The proxy statement lists the top Decca salaries as follows: Rackmil, $42,500 from Decca and $80,000 from Universal, in addition to $18,200 paid by Universal as a flat allowance for expenses, and Schneider, $39,999. All directors as a group, including "Rackmil and Schneider, received $180,763 from Decca and $95,000 from Universal.

ACUFF-ROSE RENEWS WITH BMI UNTIL 1959

Acuff-Rose Music, top publishing operation in the country & western field with headquarters in Nashville, has renewed its deal with Broadcast Music Inc. until 1959. Fred Rose, co-founder of the firm together with Roy Acuff, died last December. Wesley Rose, Fred's son, is now heading the operation, with Acuff as the silent partner.

Acuff-Rose was organized in 1942 and was one of the powerhouses behind the upsurge in country music in the postwar years. Company, strategically located in the heart of the folk music belt, came up with one of the top sellers of all time with "Tennessee Waltz" a few years back.

Ellington Jumps At Carnegie Hall But B.O. Doesn't Swing

The Symphony of the Air, with an assist from Duke Ellington and his orch, played some hot licks to a cool b.o. in an "Excursion in Jazz" bash at Carnegie Hall (N.Y.) last week (16).

After a tedious opening segment in which Don Gillis, the Symph's conductor, led the orch in a number of his own pop-symphonic compositions, the concert came to life with Ellington on the podium and his sidemen relegating the Symph's longhair tootlers to straight-man roles. Initial Ellington excursion was the preem of a new piece tagged "Night Creature." Divided into three sections, the composition has contrasting moods and shows off Ellington's musical wit and fire to advantage. The maestro split his baton chores with some effective keyboard work and his sidemen were socko in the voicing and phrasing of the jazz notes. The symph excellently complemented the jazzters. "Night Creature" should develop into an integral part of the growing symphonic jazz catalog.

Second Ellington offering was his now-popular "New World A-Comin." Here pianist Don Shirley took over the ivories—and walked away with the honors. It's a somewhat pretentious piece but Shirley's keyboarding brought it down to size and he was mitted back for a standout encore of an Ellington medley, "I Let A Song Go Out of My Heart," "Don't Get Around Much Anymore" and "Jump For Joy." Ellington wound it up with another of his symphonic jazz efforts, "Harlem." Piece has some interesting jazz moods and once again his band led the way for a solid score. Gros.

VARIETY DISK JOCKEY POLL

This compilation is designed to indicate those records rising in popularity as well as those on top. Ratings are computed on the basis of ten points for a No. 1 mention, nine for a No. 2, and so on down to one point. Wherever possible, only records with two or more mentions are listed, even though their total points are less in some cases than those which receive only one mention. Cities and jockeys will vary from week to week to present a comprehensive picture of all sectors of the country regionally.

Remington Cuts LP Price ⅓, Guarantees Stocks Retroactively

Remington Records, low-priced disk operation, is slashing its prices by one-third from $2.98 to $1.95. At the same time, the diskery gave all dealers and distribs a retroactive guarantee on stocks on hand so that no dealer would be caught with inventories of Remington disks. Price guarantee extends for one year.

Bennett H. Korn, exec vice-prexy of Remington, criticized the way the major companies recently cut their prices without advance information to the dealers. He said that one dealer with a $15,000 stock closed his shop one night and found out the following morning that his merchandise was worth only $10,000.

Korn disclosed that Remington planned to open another plant, in addition to the one operating in Webster, Mass., in order to keep pace with the company's expansion in repertoire and distribution.

'R&B Show' Falls Flat With $4,200 Philly Take

Philadelphia, March 22.

Lou Krefetz's "Rhythm & Blues Show" laid an egg at both performances in the Academy of Music, Friday night, clocking up a meager $4,200 total gross.

Twin bills at Academy pay two evenings rental, and with $3.60 top gross didn't represent one full house. Featuring 12 top r&b names, program was sponsored here by Super Attractions, of Washington, D. C.

New Col District Mgr.

Columbia Records has named James Turnbull district manager for the midwest territory.

He's replacing Joe Broderick, now sales manager of Roskin Distributors, Col's Hartford area rep.

N.Y. Daily News' Vox Pop on Leer-ics

Jimmy Jemail, the N. Y. Daily News' Inquiring Fotographer, posed this question ($10 prize to reader Frank E. Williamson, 88-62 242d St., Bellerose, N. Y.) last Friday (18): "Abel Green, editor of VARIETY, says that the lyrics of many hit tunes are so suggestive that the music industry is on the brink of censorship. What is your reaction?" The answers in their published sequence:

Helen A. Cappiello, Brooklyn, saleslady: "The lyrics are not as suggestive as the manner in which they are sometimes sung. Some singers make them as suggestive as they can be. It's worse than poor taste and downright vulgar. After all, that isn't the sort of thing that kids should listen to."

Allan Flynn, Grand Concourse, Bronx, songwriter: "It's true. Most popular songs are not to blame. The suggestiveness lies in the new rhythm & blues vogue sweeping the country. Green has aptly described the rock and roll wordage as 'leer-ics.' It takes words and phrases out of the context and gives them dubious meanings."

Mrs. Harry Shapiro, Riverdale, Bronx, home: "I listen to the top hit tunes on the Hit Parade each week and I've never noticed any suggestiveness. . Maybe I don't put the same construction on some lyrics that kids do. If Green's observation is correct, maybe I'm just getting older."

John Scura, Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, owner, liquor store: "The suggestiveness goes beyond the mere lyrics and their renditions. You often see it on tv shows in the plunging necklines that leave nothing to the imagination. Older folks can laugh this off but it's not good for children."

Mrs. Henry Hirschman, 25 Beaver St., dress shop buyer: "I don't go along with Mr. Green. Evil is where you find it. You can put a double meaning on lots of things if your mind runs that way. How about the bunnyhug songs of a generation ago and the one that ran, 'Everybody's doing it, doing it'?"

Frank H. Foti, 76th St., Brooklyn, telephone recorder: "It's the manner of singing rather than the lyrics that's suggestive. The rhythm in blues, called rock and roll, is really suggestive. 'I want to HUG you' or 'I want to DANCE with you,' with the suggestive manner of saying 'hug' and 'dance,' is really offensive." (Italics are the News'—Ed.)

be called "rhythm & happies" since that's the effect.

On top of the Manners-Potter clash, other deejoys on the local scene had this to say: "I'm attempting to play less of the r&b records because I feel the trend is dying out. But if I must take sides on the issue, I agree with Zeke, because I don't really think the lyrics are all too bad in comparison with some of the lyrics of past accepted tune hits," said KMPC jock Ira Cook.

Johnny Grant of the same station observed, "My show doesn't feature any r&b music because my listening audience doesn't request it. As for r&b itself, if I did play it I think I would pre-judge on the records first before my audience heard it."

"Most of the r&b tunes today don't say anything," said Al Poska of KFI. "I don't play much r&b because my audience doesn't like it and if they did I'd play it."

Ralph Story of KNX had a different idea. He stated: "I don't play any of it. I think a good portion of r&b is dirty and as a deejay I'm responsible for my listening audience. If I did play it, I would have to censor it for good taste programming is important."

Stop Jumping on Our R&B, Sez Indie Label

Hollywood.

Editor, VARIETY:

I am taking time out, maybe it's a waste of time, to call your attention to the rhythm & blues business that you have been writing about and still not knowing how to get your feet wet.

For example, if you are looking for suggestive lyrics, I suggest you check some of your friends that belong to ASCAP such as a smittering (sic!) of titles as "Body and Soul," "All Of Me," "Teach Me Tonight," "Make Yourself Comfortable." At times ignorance comes in handy.

You are supposed to be an impartial newspaper. We made a living long before you started writing about rhythm & blues. In fact, if the major record companies and a few other people would stop jumping on our merchandise and use the ASCAP tunes that you constantly plug, I think it would be a much better world. Why make an entire country conscious of suggestive lyrics when you would have to tear up 60% of the ASCAP tunes. If you want anymore research, I will be glad to furnish same.

U.S. Jukeboxes Click Entries At Reich Fair

Frankfurt, March 22.

At the Messe, semi-annual international industry fair which is now the largest in Europe and was held last week at Frankfurt, interest ran high in jukeboxes, both those from the U. S. and those made in Germany.

For the first time in the Messe's history, one entire building of exhibits was devoted exclusively to the showing of jukeboxes, records, slot machines and coin-operated devices, separate from the displays of instruments for home music or for orchestras. The major U. S. names of jukeboxes and record companies were represented through their German distributors.

Seeburg jukeboxes, represented by Lowen Automaten of Brunswig, reported excellent sales at the Messe of their 50-record selection box. They showed up for the first time at the Messe one year ago and did big business, even though their boxes are the most expensive on display, running from $1,000 to $2,000 with the German import taxes added.

Germany is now the largest buyer of Seeburg boxes of any country outside the U. S., and the home office had feared that some of the jukeboxes were finding their way illegally into the East Zone and into Russia because of the large West German orders. Truth is, however, that the Iron Curtainites prefer a box with a German label and do not like those from the U. S., because of the political connotations.

Wurlitzer, through the German distributor, Gustav Husemann of Cologne, was housed separately with all its machines displayed in its own small building.

Wurlitzer had 14 machines on exhibit, most popular being the new 52-record selection box. But Husemann, contrary to the other exhibitors, reported making no sales at the Messe since he sells only to operators and prefers making sales at a later date when he can run a full credit check.

Like most of the U. S. major jukeboxes, Wurlitzer brings only the motors of the machines over from the States, and makes the cabinets and speakers here.

Among the European firms, Bergmand and Wiegandt of West Germany and Jensen of Denmark are the major names. The biggest sales of any company, however, were recorded by Tonicolor of Germany, which sold 1,000 boxes to an Italian jukebox operator.

Chappell Buys O'Seas Rights to 'Earth Angel'

Hollywood, March 22.

Dootsie Williams, Dootone Record topper, has just concluded a deal with Chappell Music for the foreign rights of his current r&b tune "Earth Angel." Territories involved include England and the Continent.

Dootone waxing with the Esquires, which kicked off about eight months ago, has sold 165,000 disks and still going strong.

"Country & Western" groups. Each group spotlights label's top artists. As an added lure, Col is dishing out a cuffo EP slice of Sammy Kaye's "Auld Lang Syne" and "Happy Birthday To You" for each package purchased.

Capitol also is moving into the EP act with three packages of 10 records each. Cap's classifications are "America's Favorite Dance Bands," "Songs of Your Time" and "For Your Listening Pleasure." Diskery's top talent are spread throughout each EP grouping. Cap has priced its package at $7.60.

Thus far Mercury Records is the only company to go into the EP push without a package deal. Merc is putting 95 EPs on the block for the coin ops to purchase singly at 60c a platter. Labels top-sellers are available in this special coin-ops promotion. The EPs will come without jackets but will be accompanied by the usual promotion material.

MGM is sticking to its previously announced EP package plan. Promotion consists of two packages of 10 EPs all in the instrumental category. Label also is supplying the juke ops with racks, posters and title strips.

Inside Stuff—Music

Robbins has just published "The Snowy, Snowy Mountains," music by Norbert Schultze, original (German) lyric by Kurt Schwabach, English lyric by Edrich Siebert. It came to America by way of Dix Ltd., London, subsid of B. Feldman Co. (which Robbins-Feist-Miller recently acquired), from the original (1953) copyright by the Wiener Boheme Verlag G.m.b.h., Wiesbaden, Germany.

Norbert Schultze came to attention during World War II as the Nazi composer of "Lili Marleen" (spelled "Marlene" in the American version) and also composer of the anti-British invasion song, "Der Vir Fuhren Nacht Engeland."

Buddy Ebsen, who co-starred with Fess Parker in Walt Disney's three "Davy Crackett" subjects which were shown on producer's "Disneyland" tv program, narrates the recording condensed from series, which Columbia Records will put out under the title "Davy Crockett, King of the Wild Frontier." For this chore, Disney had to sign Ebsen to a new pact, since his appearance in tv series didn't include any recording stint. Ebsen also sings and acts out a role in recordings, which Columbia, under deal set by Walt Disney Music, will put out April 7.

Folksinger Eddy Arnold was toasted by RCA execs last Wednesday (16) on his 10th anni with the Victor label. RCA prexy Frank M. Folsom presented Arnold with a plaque to highlight the dinner at the Essex House in N. Y. Late last year, Victor released an album, titled "Eddy Arnold, An American Institution," in which he delivered the 10 top country songs of the past decade.

Alan P. Merriman has come up with a comprehensive "Bibliography of Jazz" via The American Folklore Society. Tome contains more than 3,300 entries and is cross-indexed with jazz names and mags. Robert J. Benford assisted in the compilation. Book is priced at $6.

Allen Skeds Fastest TV-Disk Plug to Date With Epic Session

There's nothing the diskers won't do for that tele plug. Newest wrinkle in the tv-platter alliance is the slotting of an actual recording session on Steve Allen's "Tonight" show on NBC-TV tomorrow (Thurs.).

Session, which will be open to viewers between midnight and 1 a.m., will feature Dolores Hawkins cutting "Smoky Morning" for the Epic label. Marvin Holtzman, Epic's aritsts & repertoire chief, will be in charge of the session while Don Costa will conduct the orch.

Epic is gearing its pressing facilities so that platters will be available to retailers around the country within 24 hours.

Tune was written by Don George in collaboration with Steve Allen. It's being published by Carole Music, George's own pubbery operation.

4 Aces, in Glasgow, Mull London Palladium Date

Glasgow, March 22.

The Four-Aces, who teeoff in vaude at the Empire Theatre here Monday (28), are likely to be included in the Gracie Fields bill at the London Palladium for the two weeks starting May 9.

On completing its tour, group returns to the U.S. to appear in a new pic, "Weekend in Las Vegas."

Don Cornell Opens First British Tour

London, March 22.

Making his first visit to Britain, singer Don Cornell flew into London last Thursday (17), preparatory to starting his tour at Glasgow Empire yesterday (Mon.) Two days after arriving, he recorded two titles for the Coral label accompanied by the Roland Shaw orch.

Future dates on his tour include Edinburgh, Newcastle, Manchester, Liverpool, Hanley, Birmingham. The singer's manager Mannie Greenfield and his accompanist Jerry Carretta are here in Britain with him.

Ringling Score Due for Hefty Jockey Push

The circus is now hopping on the deejay bandwagon. Two tunes from the score of the 1955 edition of the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus, which was penned by circus topper John Ringling North (music) and Irving Caesar (lyrics), already have been cut by Columbia Records. The Big Top drumbeaters are lining up a hefty d.j. promotion campaign to promote the tunes in the 200 cities the circus is scheduled to play this season.

Tunes already sliced by Col are "Impossible" with Sammy Kaye, and "Honolulu Bay" with Mitch Miller. Other tunes from the score are "Your Birthday Is The Biggest Holiday of All," "Mamas In the Park" and "Rainbow Around the World." Last three are production numbers. Caesar returned to his New York base early this week from Sarasota, Fla., where the circus had been rehearsing. The circus opens at New York's Madison Square Garden next week (30).

New Tape Club

A recorded Tape-of-the-Month Club has been launched by Harold Beechman, a diamond merchant with an amateur's interest in the field. Beechman is selling standard seven-inch tapes to members at $5.95. Members will get a cuffo four-inch tape each month to preview the upcoming selections.

First selection for the tape club this month was Hans Lengsfelder's "Musical Notes From a Tourist's Notebook," played by the World Symphony Orchestra. Second selection in April will be "The Investigator," the CBC dramatic show which was turned into a bestseller on the Discuriosity label. Beechman plans to issue jazz, opera, poetry readings, etc., in his tape project.

Jones Sues AGVA Group for 300G; Claims Slander, Loss of Livelihood

Dick Jones, former eastern regional director of the American Guild of Variety Artists, has filed a $300,000 libel and damage suit against AGVA, officers and several members of the national board. Jones was dismissed by the union last September on charges of insubordination following a wire to the Associated Actors & Artists of America asking them to take over the union, while the then national administrator Jack Irving and president Jackie Bright were investigated.

Jones is seeking $200,000 in libel claims and $100,000 in loss of livelihood in being unable to find employment either as an actor or as a labor leader. He claims that prior to Sept. 1, 1954, when he was dismissed, he occupied a position of trust and confidence. At that time, he alleges he was improperly discharged from his post and put on the union's unfair list.

Named as defendants are Bright, Irving, Paul Dullzell, president of the 4As; Jimmy Lyons, editor of the union's house organ, AGVA News; Maggie Coate, head of the AGVA relief fund; and several members of the board, comprising Dewey Barto, Georgie Price, Billy Taft, Murray White, Peter Chan, Russell Swann, Mannie Tyler, Alan Walker, Jack Gilford, Archie Robbins, Sally Winthrop and Tom Melody.

Counsel Quirk

Just who will defend the suit for AGVA hasn't been decided as yet. Union at present has no national counsel, since Silverstone & Rosenthal resigned several months ago, and since Henry Katz was ousted as resident counsel. Harold Berg has a temporary appointment as AGVA counsel, but as yet isn't

Lucy Monroe Doing Tapei, Okinawa Dates

Lucy Monroe arrived at Tapei, Formosa, Sunday (20) for four days of entertainment for the troops stationed there. She's then slated for Okinawa for five days starting tomorrow (Thurs.), and will then return to Tokyo.

It's not known yet when Miss Monroe will return to the U. S. from this tour, which is now in its fourth month. However, she's expected to keep a date at the Yankee Stadium, N. Y., where she'll sing the "Star Spangled Banner" to open the season at the ballpark.

Exotic Dancer Sues For 725G on Cosmetic Firm Use of Her Photograph

Philadelphia, March 22.

Julie Gibson, exotic dancer current at the Wedge, has filed suit in U.S. District Court here asking $725,000 damages from the owners of the Gaby Co., cosmetic firm, for allegedly using one of her publicity pictures to promote the sale of their own products.

The figure of $725,000 was set as the amount of the compensatory and punitive damages. Miss Gibson thought was due her for "the humiliation, pain, suffering and loss of professional prestige" she claims to have suffered through the picture's distribution. Her complaint avers the publicity photo was reproduced on an advertising folder without her consent and an accompanying caption was worded so ambiguously as to carry an offensive connotation.

The circulars were distributed about March 1, the complaint states, and asks that the company be restrained from further distribution and ordered to collect and turn over to her all that have already been handed out. Named as defendants were Charles, Gaby, Max, Edward, Hilda and Rose Waxman, individually and trading as Gaby Co., and the Yardis Advertising Agency.

150G Facelift at Mont'l Paree; Bowing Mid-May

Montreal, March 22.

Chez Paree, grandpappy of Montreal niteries and currently in the midst of a $150,000 refurbishing, is slated to open in mid-May. Former two-story room will be cut in half, with the main events taking place on first floor and upper floor for private functions, et al.

Principal owners in the club will be Solly Silvers and Leon Tietelbaum, who also operate the Downbeat.

Chi Mayfair Sets 4-Day Trial Try

Chicago, March 22.

The Mayfair Room, long-shuttered topdrawer showcase of Chicago's venerable Blackstone Hotel, is slated for a four-day trial run opening in April which may presage the room's return to a star entertainment policy. Move is mulled by the hotel's new owners, the Sheraton hotel chain, who also changed the hostelry's name to the Sheraton-Blackstone.

The room has been used for private parties the last few years and has been the scene of many topflight society events. It had been hoped to open the room for at least five days running with a top attraction, but the first such available period is in July, with the room pre-empted for May and June wedding receptions.

Opening of the Mayfair room will, if an entertainment policy is decided upon hypo the local hotel nitery scene, which is currently suffering from anemia. Of the large inns, only the Conrad Hilton's Boulevard Room and the Empire Room of the Palmer House are showcasing entertainment. The Edgewater Beach Hotel's Marine Room closed this winter after almost 20 years with a talent policy.

Local observers question whether a four-day trial would be sufficiently indicative for a decision. The Sheraton booker would be competing with the Chez Paree, first echelon local nitery and the Palmer House for topflight attractions. Both these spots offer a minimum two-week engagement, the possibility of future bookings and habitue patronage. All the Blackstone has to offer at this time is a cold four-day stand. Savvy local vaudesters wonder if such an arrangement can attract top talent.

Cugat Musical Act, Sans Terp Chores, As Chi Chez, AFM Settle Hassle

Xavier Cugat was finally due to open at Chicago's Chez Paree last night (Tues.) after much behind-the-scenes wrangling between the American Federation of Musicians and the Chez's management over the conditions of the engagement. For a while the booking was a nip-and-tuck affair, with Cugat's appearance doubtful unless the AFM gave him the nod. Resolution of the wrangle further underlines the power wielded by the musicians union.

The now-resolved hassle got started when the Chez management sought the AFM's okay for the Latino aggregation to play a half-hour set of dance music in addition to playing a seven-day week. Chicago's bands are held to a five-day week by the union, but precedent here enables a band to play seven days if it appears as a musical act. An orchestra can be construed a musical act if it incorporates certain variety elements into its performance and refrains from playing dance music. Further, the AFM must agree that the band in question is in fact a musical act.

The Chez operators were planning on laying off one of the two house bands, the Brian Farnon orchestra, in the event the AFM agreed to Cugat's doing some dansapation. The management had given Farnon four-weeks' notice, which was legal under the Chez's contract with the union. The AFM wouldn't stand still for this and nixed any alternative proposals. The union decision was that Cugat either played as a straight band, five days a week, which would have forced the Chez to whip up another show for the two remaining days, or he played as a musical act without dance music chores. In the latter event, which the Chez had to accept, the Brian Farnon orchestra would be retained. And it was under these conditions that the booking has materialized.

Vermont Joins Jersey In Asking Upped Quaffing Age in N.Y.

Vermont has become the second state neighboring on New York's borders to request the N. Y. solons to increase the minimum legal drinking age from 18 to 21 years. In January, New Jersey asked that this step be taken in an effort to decrease auto accidents in its state. Newest request to N. Y. was made in the form of a resolution passed by the Vermont Legislature, copies of which were sent to the N. Y Legislature and Gov. Averell Harriman.

The Vermont resolution was made at the instigation of the mayor of Rutland, Vt., who declared that his state couldn't cope with the problem of teenage drinking as long as nearby New York permitted drinks to be purchased by 18-year olds.

Presently, Gotham's 52d Street niteries get a lot of the N. J. juve trade in the various spots. High-school prom kids motor over to N. Y. because Jersey spots won't cater to them. So far, N. Y. has taken no action.

SIEGEL QUITS FLAMINGO ENTERTAINMENT SPOT

Las Vegas, March 22.

Dave Siegel, who organized the entertainment department at the Flamingo when the new ownership recently took over, has submitted his resignation as entertainment director March 30. In his letter to Flamingo prexy Al Parvin, Siegel pointed out that the hotel is solidly booked with shows to 1956 and that he has accomplished what he set out to do.

Intimates of Siegel maintain he's stepping out because he does not see eye to eye with Parvin as to how the entertainment department should be run. Siegel, a 4% owner in the hotel, will retain his stock.

Heidt's 48G Take In 8 Concerts Down South

Chicago, March 22.

Horace Heidt's concert tour, in conjunction with his NBC-TV "Swift Show Wagon," grossed $48,436 from eight concerts in a seven-day tour of Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia.

The show grossed $5,287.62 for two shows in Sheffield, Ala., March 10. Other takes were: Nashville, March 11, $6,581.80; Chattanooga, March 12, $11,114.55; Gadsen, Ala., March 13, $4,279.30; Knoxville, March 14, $9,148.20; Atlanta, March 15, $6,505.60; Macon, Ga., March 16, $5,522.40. Local sponsors and the Treasury Dept. took a lion's share of the gates, however.

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

It contains three standout entertainers. First, Paul Gray. Here is a master of the always-difficult art of the monolog. Gray is a performer of experience, authority and intuitive timing. It's no small knack to wrestle with and make a blase Manhattan cafe audience, the kind that's seen everybody and heard everything, cry "uncle," but before he is through, after his calculatedly slow opener, Gray is a comedy wow.

HY GARDNER (New York Herald Tribune)
"Paul Gray stopped the show cold, heated up the ringsiders and lifted it, single handedly, into the potential hit class. He is supported by an enthusiastic cast of Guys and Dolls."

ROBERT SYLVESTER (New York Daily News)
"Of the whole new mob of slow-moving, slow talking, off beat comics, my favorite is Paul Gray at the Versailles. Sounds like the most original to me too."

WALTER WINCHELL
"The Versailles revue . . . Paul Gray's literate nonsense is the high spot."

BOB FARRELL (Brooklyn Eagle)
"Paul Gray, the Versailles addition to the list of new stars, simply terrific."

LEE MORTIMER (New York Daily Mirror)
"Gray is one of those slow-talking comics who have you so hysterical before they fi ish, you have to hold your tummy to keep from busting. He's never been funnier."

EARL WILSON (New York Post)
"Paul Gray smash hit at the Versailles, New York's Newest Nite Life Sensation. Tops a colorful revue."

ROBERT W. DANA
(New York World-Telegram and Sun)
"Paul Gray's very funny monologues are tremendously effective."

BOB FRANCIS (Billboard)
"Paul Gray's split second timing brings steady barrage of laughs. Smash hit."

Daniels Signs With ABC For 3 Yrs. in All Fields

Billy Daniels has signed with Joe Glaser's Associated Booking Corp. for a three-year term in all fields. Daniels' pact with the William Morris Agency expired several months ago, but office continued to represent him sans contract.

Deal with Glaser marks the second time the Negro singer has been with that office. ABC represented him prior to his signing with Morris.

New Noonan N.Y. Bow

Tommy Noonan, formerly teamed with Pete Marshall, will make his N. Y. bow with a new partner at the Latin Quarter on May 15. He's working with his wife, who is billed as Princess Pocahontas Crowfoot.

Noonan & Marshall had a long run at this spot several years ago before the team broke up during the period when Noonan worked in films. Marshall is now teamed with Tommy Farrell.

1-Niters for Lu Ann

Lu Ann Simms of the Arthur Godfrey shows will be doing a series of one-nighters. She's been set at Ohio U. starting April 2, and thence to the auto show in Marion, O., April 6.

Other dates are being lined up for her.

Columbus-Based Circus Set to Bow Next Month

Columbus, March 22.

The first Columbus-based circus in 40 years will make its debut in mid-April under the name of "The Great Fred J. Mack Three-Ring Circus." Fred D. Pfening Jr. is president of the company; Joe Flynn, secretary, and Don McCullough, general manager. Plans are to open winter quarters this month at the Ohio State Fairgrounds and get the show on the road in another month.

The circus was originally announced as "The Great Don Mack Circus" but changed its name when Don Mack, tv personality here and outdoor writer for the Ohio State Journal and national outdoor magazines, objected to use of his name.

Proser's New La Vie Now Due at End of May

Construction on Monte Proser's new La Vie, N. Y., in the Hotel Shelton, has started at long last. Spot was originally intended to be open last fall, but negotiations weren't finalized in time. Capacity of the new room will be 450, and it's expected to be ready by the end of May. Decor will be by Russell Patterson, and spot will have a Polynesian menu.

June Taylor, who does the choreography on the Jackie Gleason show, will routine the line. Proser plans a name policy.

Inside Vaudeville

The 55-year old Avenue Theatre building in downtown East St. Louis is being razed to make way for a retail merchant. Theatre was operated by the late Joseph Erber and Philip H. Cohn Sr. Eddie Cantor, Mae West, Fred and Adele Astaire, Bill Robinson, Dockstader's Minstrels were among attractions. The first double bill (vaude-feature film) shown west of New York was exhibited at the Avenue in 1917. The house was seized by Internal Revenue agents in 1951 to satisfy income tax liens. A Chicago realty company purchased the building and site for $285,000.

New Hampshire Fairs Group Sets 1955 Sked

Concord, N. H., March 22.

Dates for New Hampshire's 1955 fairs, most of which feature vaudeville acts and other entertainment, were set at the annual meeting of the N. H. Fairs Assn. at the Eagle Hotel here recently, with about 350 persons in attendance.

The new schedule is as follows: Cheshire Fair, Keene, Aug. 25-27; Contoocook Valley Fair, Hopkinton, Sept. 2-5; Coos & Essex Agricultural Fair, Lancaster, Sept. 2-5; Deerfield, Sept. 29-Oct. 2; Dover, Aug. 11-14; Mascoma Valley, Canaan, Aug. 26-28; Northwood, Aug. 12-14; Pine Granite Grange, North Haverhill, Aug. 5-7; Rochester, Sept. 18-24; Sandwich, Oct. 12; Union Grange, Plymouth, Aug. 17-20, Atkinson, Aug. 26-28. There will be two other fairs, Madbury Grange and Loudon Community, but the dates have not yet been chosen.

Wick Sets Up Deal For Stage Shows in Turkey

Charles Wick, telefilm producer and manager, plans a series of stage shows in Turkey. Wick, who just returned from that country, has completed arrangements with the Turkish government to bring British and American entertainers there.

Under terms of the deal, entertainers would be compensated with the currency of their countries and Wick would get Turkish goods which he can sell on world markets free of Turkish government restrictions.

Vagabonds to Preem Big 500 Club Room in July

The 500 Club, Atlantic City, will open its large room for the season on July 1, with the Vagabonds as the preem headliner. Paul D'Amato has also signed Eartha Kitt for July 29, and Sophie Tucker, Aug. 4.

Deals are currently in the works for Frankie Laine and other names. Spot has been operating all year in the smaller lounge in the front part of the house. The large room was opened for the banquet trade when needed.

Majors Relegate Smaller Acts To Indies; Too Many Headaches

Talent agencies have virtually reached the point where they won't represent any of the small earners unless some special situation is involved. The agents aren't particularly worried about the commissions involved in booking them, but few officers are prepared to spend the amount of time needed to properly service these acts or to assuage vanities.

The offices are reaching the tacit understanding that they'll relegate this category of act to the indie agents. When those acts are needed, it would be cheaper to get them from one of the outside offices.

Until recently, these smallies were a necessary part of an all-around agency operation. In setting up packages for their names, it was wise to have a batch of supporting acts on the lists so that they could be called upon when necessary. However, as fewer packages were being sent out, need for these turns diminished. Most of them have found refuge with the indies.

Of course, the agencies will take a vocalist of promise and they'll go after performers under management of the indies when they have reached some stature.

The majors say that they would still like to get a batch of the lesser acts, but they haven't the personnel to service them properly, and too many employment outlets have disappeared, so that they couldn't do right by most of them. It's matter of economy in letting others handle them.

7-Week Vaude Tour To Aid Can. Variety Clubs

The Variety Clubs in Canada will sponsor a seven-week vaude tour starting Sept. 26 in Montreal for the benefit of the various club charities. Ernest Rawley, managing director of the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, is in charge of the undertaking for the organization.

In the package will be Tessie O'Shea, Norman Evans, Alec Finley, Grainger Bros. and Betty Jumel.

MOVE TO DRAFT FAST FOR AGVA NAT'L SEC

Chicago, March 22.

A movement to draft Ernie Fast, midwest regional director of the American Guild of Variety Artists, for AGVA's top post, national administrative secretary, was launched by local AGVA branch members at a meeting held here last week. When asked about the projected draft, Fast told VARIETY: "I don't want the job. If it were offered to me, I would decline. I only want a stronger union. We could have it if we worked together instead of fighting each other all the time."

Dick Gale, pro-tem chairman of the local branch executive committee, led the move to put Fast in AGVA's top job in a speech at the membership meeting.

Pinky Lee Set to Probe Juve Market With Show

With kids proving to be potent boxoffice factors on circus and rodeo stands, an experimental probe into the juve market is being tried by Pinky Lee, topping a kiddie show. He signed with Cleveland promotor George Young for a one-day stand in that town on April 17 at the Arena.

If indications point to a big b.o. potential, it's likely that the NBC-TV performer will try stands in other cities. William Morris Agency set this exploratory deal.

Tough Hide

Pittsburgh, March 22.

Night club fraternity here looks upon their newest member, Jack Feldman, as a man of courage and complete honesty. A few weeks ago Feldman took over the old Belvedere, which was built right after World War II at a cost of $250,000 and has been a white elephant ever since under a flock of different managements.

Nothing daunted, Feldman decided on a change of name to—The White Elephant.

MILW. NITERY OP HIT WITH $55G TAX LIEN

Milwaukee, March 22.

A Federal tax lien for $55,535.68 was filed against James Fazio in Federal Court here last Thursday (10) for cabaret taxes Fazio allegedly owes from January, 1952 to December, 1954. The lien indicted Fazio doing business as Jimmy Fazio's Supper Club.

Brooke Tibbs, an attorney for Fazio, stated: "This matter is considered by Fazio's auditors to be an honest dispute as to the legal applicability of various provisions of the cabaret tax law during the period of the proposed assessment."

The club is directly in the line of relocated highway 141 and will be purchased by Milwaukee County for the state of Wisconsin.

Dandridge to Repeat Last Frontier Date

Hollywood, March 22.

Dorothy Dandridge, who closed at the Last Frontier Hotel, Las Vegas, recently has been inked for a three-week return engagement later in the year.

Singer, after guesting April 3 on Ed Sullivan's CBS-TV "Toast of the Town," opens April 11 at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y.

Talent Sez Agents Must Cooperate If They're to Hold On to the Acts

Spokesmen at the American Guild of Variety Artists are studying the question of whether the refusal of an agency to do business with another office is sufficient reason for release. Although nothing official is being done, it's expected that the reasoning at the union follows the line that any agency that doesn't want to do business through an exclusive booker isn't fully representing the artists, and that in itself is a reasonable ground for the abrogation of an agency contract by the artist.

The union has been getting these queries with increasingly greater frequency. Hitherto, the major cause for a break has been the failure of an office to supply a stipulated amount of work during any calendar period. However, this yardstick has been inadequate in recent months. Personal managers have been yelling that failure of an agency to represent an artist in certain fields of employment means that the agency isn't doing its best to further the career of the entertainer. For example, if an artist feels that a date in a certain cafe or a fair is necessary to establish him in a certain area, and the agency cannot negotiate with the exclusive booker of that spot because of policy or any other reason, the performer is in a position to argue that the agency isn't doing its utmost on behalf of the artist.

This argument is being used repeatedly at the union. For example, most of the fairs and national exhibitions have exclusive bookers. The booker wanting to buy acts frequently demands a 5% booking fee such as has been prevalent in the theatre circuits for many years, but if it's against the policy of the agency to share commissions, the booking isn't made. It has become customary for the percenteries to refuse sharing commissions with names and it's been extended to ordinary acts in many cases. Thus some turns cannot work this field. Chicago cafes with exclusives have long complained at their inability to get acts from some of the major agencies. It's believed that the latter are steaming up acts and personal managers against this practice.

PIAF GROSSES 52G FOR TWO STANZAS IN FRISCO

San Francisco, March 22.

Edith Piaf Show, during its two-week run at the Geary Theatre here, grossed $52,000. Theatre parties, along with discounts to matinee shows and balcony seats from college students, and a bus package party, helped the take.

Show moved on to the Selwyn Theatre, Chicago.

Mann Joins Dunes Staff; Set for Dual Capacity

Las Vegas, March 22.

Gene Mann, former operator of the Greek Theatre in Los Angeles, has joined the executive staff of the Dunes Hotel in a dual capacity. In addition to acting as exec aide to Al Gottesman, hotel owner, he will be production coordinator for the musical extravaganzas which Robert Nesbitt will produce for hostelry's Arabian Room.

"WHAT'S ON YOUR MIND?"

LUCILLE and EDDIE ROBERTS

Just Concluded—EMPIRE ROOM, Palmer House, Chicago

We Are Truly Grateful to
Miss Merriel Abbott, Director of Entertainment, Hilton-Statler Hotels and to the members of the Chicago Press, especially:

BENTLEY STEGNER:
Chicago Sun Times . . . Feb. 27th
Lucille & Eddie Roberts are a gifted team of comic mind-readers, amazement vies with amusement . . .

SAM LESNER:
Chicago Daily News . . . Feb. 26th
Lucille & Eddie, old acquaintances on the cafe circuit, are the show-stoppers in the Empire Room. These charming people have the good sense and good taste not to present their offering as supernatural. They show FINE SHOWMANSHIP.

GABE:
Variety . . . Feb. 23rd
The Roberts comedy duo have a clever sophisticated mentalist turn, act goes swiftly without a hitch . . . turn gets big applause . . .

CHARLIE DAWN:
Chicago American . . . Feb. 19th
In the Empire Room the Roberts delightfully mix fun with their amazing "mental telepathy" feats. Their comedy chatter about married life is realistic, their telepathy is "something special."

WILL LEONARD:
Chicago Tribune . . . Feb. 27th
The Empire Room has an extremely strong supporting act in Lucille and Eddie Roberts. They do a mindreading thing that has been done before but NEVER BETTER. The speed and skill of the Roberts is genuinely amazing . . .

HERB LYON:
"Tower Ticker," Chicago Tribune . . . March 8th
Most MARVELOUSLY MYSTIFYING act I have ever seen: Lucille & Eddie at the Empire Room. How do they do it? . . .

Ella Logan; Ted Straeter and Mark Monte orchs; $2 and $2.50 couvert.

Given a sock record or some standout legit show identifaction, akin to her w.k. "Finian's Rainbow," and Ella Logan will emerge as a truly important cafe name. As is, on her own, she's one of the more savvy exponent of talk-and-songalogs. The difference between the standard and extraordinary in this day and age is sometimes something as ephemeral as a truly mass identification; the disclick falls within that pattern.

The personality Scotch - Irish songstress—the hoot-mon tag lingers because of the "Finian's" motif—has developed an easy style of small talk that is offbeat and completely compelling. Her authoritative manner with a song is now more or less trade-accepted; the new fillip is the engaging chit-chat which rings like it's off-the-cuff and not too much a rehearsed ad lib routine.

Even in the tune recital she indulges in a completely "modern" treatment, be it the Jerome Kern oldie, "They Didn't Believe Me," Rodgers & Hart's "Little Girl Blue," "Strutters' Ball" or 'Bonnie Lies Over Ocean," with the inevitable "Glocca Morra" and other standards in between.

Always a pert personality, Miss Logan has trimmed down and is solidly big league in her stance and manner. She is also in complete command with the interlude palaver, done with intelligence and wit.

Per usual, the Persian Room's dansapators, Ted Straeter with the main band, and Mark Monte heading his versatile Continentals, give out with plenty of compelling hoofology. Per usual, also, maitre d'Fred, who looks like he's been "cast" for a Hollywood version of what the diplomatic custodians of the velvet rope should be, hovers over his regulars and charms the casuals so that the portal-to-portal service is not the least of this class hostelry room's appeal. Abel.

Statler Hotel, L. A.

Los Angeles, March 15.

Gene Sheldon, Peggy Sheldon, Micki Marlo, Skinnay Ennis Orch (12); cover, $2.

The atmosphere should be very pleasant for the next three weeks at Conrad Hilton's downtown Terrace Room. The buffoonery of Gene Sheldon, whose baggy-pants comedics have panicked audiences for years on the saloon belt and more recently on such tv programs as "Colgate Comedy Hour," is enough to maintain this same tenor during his 35 minutes onstage. With Capitol Records' Micki Marlo for an opener and Skinnay Ennis' music, the 50-minute show is a sure bet for anybody venturing out after dark.

Sheldon uses the tried and true pantomime routines he's found most receptive, and wisdom of his choice is seen in the fact that the opening-night crowd was in a constant roar. There's nothing subtle about his act. Mum for the better part of his turn in which he works first with a banjo and then his wife, Peggy, his antics are aimed for yocks, with both the 88'er and the drummer giving him sound effect assists. It's straight clowning, but the type born of long years of experimenting with popular taste, and results show in his hand. Finding his voice for the windup with three long stories, his true artistry as a pantomimist is even more fully revealed.

Miss Marlo comes on for seven songs, all well received. One of these is "Prize of Gold," her latest Capitol recording, but two outstanding are "Dark Town Strutter's Ball," attuned to her blue style of delivery, and "Just One of Those Things," encore number. Whit.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 15.

Frankie Laine, Bobby Sargent, Zippy the Chimp, Donn Arden Dancers (16), Carlton Hayes Orch (12); no cover, no minimum.

Frankie Laine headlines a well-paced show, with the tempo due mainly to the pair of neat Donn Arden productions. It plays here a month.

Laine dispenses for the most part a parade of his oldies and they're goodies to an audience still receptive to his special brand of song-stylings. "Shine," "Lucky Old Sun," "Jezebel" and "That's My Desire" haunt between the star's chatter, to which he devotes much too much time in his 30-minute stint. It's a paunchier Laine this time around, too. "I'd Give My Life To Have Your Love" is sung as a tribute to its composer, Carl Fischer, his late conductor. Laine beats out a novel jazz version of "Some Day" from Vagabond King" with good results. His most vibrant topper is "Granada," that rates prolonged applause. Pianist-conductor Al Lerner is a standout in support.

Bobby Sargent is a likable comic. Comedian's deejay character is still okay, as in the "Dragnet" version of his life story. His old jokes, however, are very old indeed.

Zippy the Chimp garners gobs of laughter as he rollerskates into the audience or climbs into his highchair from which vantage point he knocks out piano tunes accurately on a miniature keyboard. The simian tyke is a good crowd-pleaser, dancing the mambo or teasing the audience with a water gun, and goes off to a big hand.

Both Donn Arden numbers are spectacular. The first, a smalltown production idea, finds a flower-covered cottage as the setting, with the dancers disporting themselves around a huge replica of a record-player drinking icecream sodas. A swaying pirate ship garners big applause in the second number, involving the captive dancers. The routines, lighting and costumes are topnotch and production singer Art Johnson is a standout in both choreo numbers played neatly by the Carlton Hayes orch. Bob.

Latin Quarter, Boston

Boston, March 15.

Will Mastin Trio, featuring Sammy Davis Jr. (with Morty Stevens), Ray Royce, Beverly Fowler, Kurt Jons Dancers (3), Guy Guarino, Harry DeAngelis Orch, Zarde Bros. Trio; $5 min.

Biz is perking at the L.Q. for this one-weeker and the reason is Sammy Davis Jr. It's his first appearance here since his unfortunate accident a few months ago, but it's quickly apparent that he's lost none of his zest or enthusiasm, for he dishes out the slick type of entertainment that has long been his trademark.

Backed by his uncle, Will Mastin, and his father, Sammy Sr., who incidentally have less to do each time around, the junior Davis whips through a 50-minute sesh of topnotch dancing, vocalizing, mimicking and general kibitzing, building to a frantic sesh on the drums and trumpet. Guy appears to have cut down on his carbons, which are among the best, and is giving his straightforward vocalizing a bigger play, which is only natural, since a couple of his Decca platters have broken through fairly strong recently. However, it's a boffo sesh throughout and the guy's efforts nab socko spontaneous reactions from the customers.

Surrounding bill is okay, teeing off with the Kurt Jons Dancers, two males and a femme, who display some nifty Oriental steps, some of which are of the spoofing variety. Thrush Beverly Fowler shows to nice advantage in a varied song sesh. Gal looks nice and belts the songs across in okay style. Ray Royce, an adept juggler, nabs nifty yocks with his serio-comic tricks, winding sesh juggling three tophats while frantically pedalling a unicycle.

Harry DeAngelis and his boys cut a nice show, with Morty Stevens taking over the batoning, plus a bit of clarineting, during the Mastin turn. The Zarde Bros. Trio fills the lulls. Elie.

Eddys', K. C.

Kansas City, March 15.

Paul Gray, Three Cheers, Thurl Henry Orch (8); $1 cover.

Everything jelled on opening night of this one-weeker, and the show came off as a particularly sparkling evening. Comic Paul Gray is here fresh from the Versailles, New York, and was in fine form. It's his first stint here in about four years.

The Three Cheers have the opening spot for their story-song idea, in which they bring the entertainment norms of yesteryear up to date with their song interpretations and impressions. Trio of Sally Bremer, Gil Garfield and Bert Convy are attractive youngsters with a good basic idea in the pattern of vocal groups so popular today. Some rough edges show here and there, but their youthful verve and ambition should weed these out with more experience.

Gray is the epitome of the English professor, apparently, but soon lets the customers know he's in it just for fun. He registers strongly all the way with a wide variety of yarns, kidding of vocalists and songs, all with very broad satire. His big stock is his comedy chatter and personally flavored material, with just enough songfoolery to heighten the whole. Gray is making this week one of the big ones at Eddy's. Quin.

Palmer House, Chi

Chicago, March 17.

Celeste Holm, Jonathan Winters, Empire Eight, Charlie Fisk Orch (10); $2 cover.

The Empire Room has itself a winner in the current bill, featuring entertainment of the Holmspun variety. Capacity throngs turned out opening night and the rope should be up for the remainder of the run.

Headliner Celeste Holm woos, wins and wows 'em with graciousness and talent. Sweeping into the spotlight under gallant escort, femme displays an acute consciousness of the almost-defunct art of the grand entrance. Gowned in bouffant white, with a soon-doffed green cape dramatically draped over her shoulders, Miss Holm almost immediately has the audience in the palm of her hand and keeps it there.

Gal's ability to lose herself in a song, drawing the crowd into its mood, and yet endowing it with the unmistakable stamp of a personality, sells song and songstress. Naughtily flicking her ball gown skirt from time to time, Miss Holm allows a peek at shapely gams.

Opening with "Young at Heart," Miss Holm goes on to rib teevee and distaff Parisian imports in "C'est La TV," a howling bit of special material. In "Zip," she sings of the literary witticisms of a brainy stripper, while going through the motions. Occasionally she varies the mood with a torchy ballad. Gal goes off to salvos loud and long.

Jonathan Winters holds up the comic end here with several well-received impressions. Winters covers an island invasion of the South Pacific war with sharply defined characterizations of the briefing officer, platoon sergeant and downtrodden Pfc. Switching to darkest Africa, he ribs mad dogs and Englishmen in a hilarious safari bit starring Sir Trafalgar Whitney. Although the material is not startlingly original, Winters carries it off well for hefty yocks and good palms.

The Empire Eight intro the bill in a deftly-staged production number, "Yellow Ribbons and Spring," a terp expression of girls in the spring and young men's fancies turned to aisle-marches with music from "Lohengrin." Numbers are colorful and well executed.

The Charlie Fisk Orch provides smooth dansapation when not expertly backstopping the show. Gabe.

Beachcomber, Miami B.

Miami Beach, March 19.

Betty Hutton with Jack Regis & Herb Lurie, Morey Amsterdam, The Nov-elites, Len Dawson Orch; $3.50-$5 bev. minimum.

Ending what was probably the shortest "retirement" from show biz on record, Betty Hutton is happily back on the boards to again purvey her dynamics in song and patter at frenetic pace that would exhaust most performers in short order. No matter the period of absence, it's a triumphant return for Miss Hutton, testified to by the jampacked house for both shows on opening night.

The Hutton pattern is basically the same followed when seen here last, although there are two male aides instead of three and—as staged here last season—no teaming with Sophie Tucker, following buildup on her doing the Tucker story for films. Miss Hutton however has retained the dedication to La Tucker in song for arousing climaxer to a 45-minute stint that never lets up in pace or zest. New in the act is a howler anent the Dior fashion ideas, "Welcome, Mr. Dior," a lyric-narrative on the good he's doing for the types who do not possess the Marilyn Monroe sort of physical attributes. It's an inventive piece the tablers greet happily, the distaffers leading in the palming.

Aides Herb Lurie and Jack Regis spell Miss Hutton ably with vocalistics and hoofery, then provide smart backgroundings for her big numbers. The continuing build, walk-around bits with the ringsiders, add to the rapport established by entrance through audience, to sustain the hold into a resounding payoff at finish and resultant begoff.

Morey Amsterdam has never played this area before. He's a sock change from the many stand-up-and-belt-'em comics who are annual returnees come season-time. The pace set by the tv vet is a deceptively pedestrian one. The guy has himself a plentiful bag of material that is full of laugh-bait. Despite an occasional line that has been kicked around by others, he tosses off his stream of stories, anecdotes, one-liner barbs and comedy-songs with easy assurance that keeps the auditors in a yock-mood.

A good many of his inventions are off-trail to add to the ribtickle reaction. This is not too easy a room for a comic of his genre to click in, but Amsterdam overcomes the vastness of the 900-seater in short order to establish the warmth necessary for his brand of foolery to go over. It's a cinch he'll be added to the roster of comedians who play this town twice-yearly.

The Novelites can call this club their home grounds. They've played the biggery more frequently than any other act in the business. Completely at ease, they sock over a 20-minute session that sets a zingy tempo for the show. Although adept on instrumentals —bass, guitar and accordion—they concentrate on their hillbilly spoof, the accordionist setting up the howls via a plastic pan that takes to mugging perfectly their spoofs on operas and tv'ers. The act could easily fill a co-topliner spot in most clubs. Len Dawson and his crew rate kudoes for their backgrounds, as does Jack Latimer for his sound, on-the-ball accompaniment for Miss Hutton. Lary.

Park Sheraton, N. Y.

Mimi Warren Trio, Eddie Layton; no cover, no minimum.

The Mermaid Room of the Park Sheraton has a natural business draught. Patronage from the hotel, along with the fact that prices are reasonable enough to permit a lot of youngsters to dawdle over drinks, gives the semblance of a lot of trade.

Another factor that makes this a popular rendezvous like in the quality of the musical combinations playing here. Trios such as Jose Melis and Irving Fields generally hold long tenancy at this room. Now Mimi Warren indicates that she'll be eligible for the marathon-length runs that a good crew enjoys here.

Miss Warren, an attractive and personable lass, is an acccomplished musician. Pianist has the faculty of giving light touches to the classics for consumption in a drinkery and is similarly proficient at jazz efforts. Miss Warren puts a lot of coloring and imagination into her numbers. She gets away from the usual musical figures with colorful departures from the stipulated melody. The routines are varied and interesting and cater to a variety of tastes.

In a spot which gets such varied patronage as the Mermaid Room, one of the surprising elements is the prolonged applause that greets the middle and highbrow numbers such as "Malaguena," Schumann Concerto and others in that ilk. Electric guitar and bass background gives Miss Warren good support.

Other performer in this lounge is Eddie Layton at the electric organ. Layton, a longtermer here, is able to fill the room with the instrument. His efforts are amply appreciated. Jose.

Sans Souci, Havana

Havana, March 18.

Miguelito Valdes, Facundo Rivero Q, Sans Souci Ballet & Show Girls; R. Ortega & C. Rodriguez Orqs (for dancing); Rodney, producer; $4.50 minimum at tables.

Sans Souci is the only Cuban nitery run by Americans. One of its show's assets are the highly attractive Yankee showgirls. Strangely enough, even the Cuban chorus has femmes with faces and figures —too often such lines, in this country, have been made up of anyone the actors' syndicate happened to send around. Perhaps producers are becoming more discerning.

Rodney produced this show, as he did the one simultaneously playing at Tropicana. Not having the wide area he has at Tropicana, Rodney here exchanges width for pace. The show moves along as fast as a good mambo.

Afro-Cuban rhythm is the dominant note at both niteries (that's what the tourists seem to look for), but at Sans Souci the accent is more on vocals than on terps. Miguelito Valdes' powerful voice bellows out over the nearby palm trees, evoking the dark spirits of voodoism. "Babalu" and "Cumbaceiro" throb through the tropical night like echoes of secret rites, not meant to be seen by white men.

The Facundo Rivera Quartet is one of the liveliest hereabouts. The two couples seem to sing for their own joy as much as the audience's, and that of course makes for the best entertainment. The group tackles Cuban tunes with pep and personality, and they get into the swing of the music with uninhibited, hip-swinging "criollo" (real gone Cuban) terpsing. Jay.

Fontainebleau, M. B'ch

Miami Beach, March 16.

Dorothy Dandridge with Nick Perito; Al Bernie, Val Olman Orch, Lecuona Cuban Boys; $2.50-$4 bev. minimum.

This overwhelmery has been on a femme-songstress kick for the topliner spot in the swank La Ronde Club, the roster this season already including Patti Page, Helen Traubel, currently Dorothy Dandridge, with Kay Starr and Marguerite Piazza following in order on the two-frame booking policy. A glance at the names reveals intelligent pactings by Ben Novack—Ben Jaffe and associates, the type of vocalistic stylings varying to keep the patronage heavy.

In Miss Dandridge they've booked a thrush who's riding the crest, thanks to the click in "Carman Jones" and resultant Academy Award nomination. Exactly one year ago Miss Dandridge worked the Sans Souci Hotel at one-fifth the five-figure sum she's being paid for this stand. On the draw side, the huge increase in salary may be justified by the receipts at end of week. Results for the first few nights indicate a strong possibility that she'll make good on that all important facet.

The act Miss Dandridge is presenting is basically the same seen last time around. The classic features and lithe figure are plus values, although the gowning this time out is a bit disappointing, a matter easily corrected, it being a matter of the right colors to highlight her dusky looks. The compote offered is tailored for the stylings still reminiscent of Lena Horne. Shadings sometimes are lost, but overall the impact is sustained to keep and reaction building.

Al Bernie, working smoothly in a tough spot—he opened the show cold—comes through soundly to wind a solid winner. The droll guy has been seen in these parts before, but never to better effect in what has come to be regarded as the toughest room for comics in the area. The dinner contingent comes to quick attention for his series of one-liners that are in the main topical, intelligent and made to order for the upper crusters who rendezvous in this room. Bernie boasts a plentiful portion of new material. Standard stuff has been refreshened, and the tablers bring him back for more.

Nick Perito lends an able assist to Miss Dandridge at the Steinway, while Val Olman and his orch, per usual, handle the showbacks in highly efficient manner. Lary.

L'Amiral, Paris

Paris, March 15.

Roger Pierre & Jean-Marc Thibault, Gisele Robert, Dary Cowl, Puppet Stars (2), Rossignols (2), Jean Delbeco; $4 minimum.

Roger Pierre & Jean-Marc Thibault are a couple of bouncy, talented boys who brought the Left Bank brand of cabaret across the river, and established a beachhead here, off the Champs-Elysees, which has since become a regular for the arty and intellectual set. They brought sketches, movement and a point of view to nitery shows, and the club paid off and boys zoomed to popularity. They left the club for music hall and pic dates, and the club languished until their return this week. This ship-shaped cellar boite is now packed again, and looks to stay so as long as this twosome keeps up their fireworks.

Boys present a fast-paced hour of sketches; impressions, songs and dances, aided by a high-powered girl with plenty of s.a., Gisele Robert. However, though they have that rare thing among French performers, energy and movement, they have a tendency towards facility and loudness, and speed never replaces content. Miss Robert emerges as an undulating find who is stacked, can dance and has a taking sexy approach which may make her a future revue star. She is something that has been lacking in the Folies-Bergere and Casino De Paris orbit and will probably soon be snapped up by one of these two houses.

Dary Cowl brings his fey monolog into play for some yocks and can also use some sharper material, though his halting timing and insouciant verve make for plenty of laughs. Rossignols (2) make like a couple of birds and whistle their way through some musical bits for an okay offbeater. Puppet Stars (2) unstring a wooden-headed stripper, a solid trumpeter and an egg-laying ostrich for a fine opener. Jean Delbeco offers good piano accomp and dance music.

The club is now doing SRO. With his boys back, Maurice Mesle has one of the top pop offbeaters here. Mosk.

Hotel St. Regis, N. Y.

Jane Morgan, Milt Shaw Orch and Ray Bori Ensemble; $2.50 couvert; $4 minimum.

Garbed in a simple black strapless job, Jane Morgan walks out confidently on the floor of the St. Regis' Maisonette, approaches the mike and launches into her opening welcome specialty. Rapport is set immediately, for this blonde chirper has poise and personality and voice to go with these assets. Her manner is relaxed and her desire to please is obvious and there's no doubt that the eastsidery's clients are with her from the start.

Following the icebreaker, she caresses with Cole Porter's "All of You," from the current "Silk Stockings." Sticking with the Broadway wonder boys, Feuer & Martin, Miss Morgan clicks with a "Can-Can" medley in English and French, with "I Love Paris" as the framework.

Miss Morgan, an American chanteuse discovered in Paris, has dropped much of the Gallic influence since her many engagements in the U.S. She toys with occasional French lyrics and "merci, beaucoup" patter, but relies largely on the native idiom.

It's apparently becoming more and more common for nitery ringsiders to find themselves part of an act. Miss Morgan employs the gimmic this time out, strolling around the room with a hand mike to elicit different types of smiles from the customers in connection with her version of "Smiles." Thrush's friendliness overcomes the victims' embarrassment, although it's not the strongest number in her repertoire.

For a change of pace, she twangs the tale of the Kentucky hill gal who "learned" her way around Paris. It's pleasing, slightly risque stuff, good or chuckles at the quatrain clincher. It went over big on opening night.

Gal can sell a ballad with the best of 'em. Her next-to-closer and exit exposures — "Why" and "Loving"—are rendered slickly. Not the least of Miss Morgan's assets are her good looks and grooming. Milt Shaw's orch and Ernest Bragg, songstress' accompanist, back the performer to the hilt. Shaw's aggregation and the Ray Bari Ensemble alternate for dancing. Holl.

Beverly Hills, Newport

Newport, Ky., March 19.

Ben Blue, Beachcombers (4), Dorothy Dorbert Dancers (10), Dick Hyde, Gardner Benedict Orch (10); Jimmy Wilbur Trio; Larry Vincent; $3 minimum, $4 Saturday.

This layout is a ball of harmony and hoke comedy with a rich topping of line backing. Running time of 75 minutes, a quarter-hour over par, is without a dull moment. It's the third time at Greater Cincy's top nitery for both Ben Blue and the Beachcombers. Additions of new rooters bid more returns for them.

Blue and his two stooges, Sid Fields and Sam Wolfe, plus Siri, a blonde-looker foil, cavort in a 35-minute farce capsule, coated extra blue. The deadpan comic never misses a lick for suggestive buildups. His props are a cane and giddap of the Charlie Chaplin heyday. He fetches rollicking returns with a fumbled mindreading routine and climaxes in the old burlesque bit of the reformed skidrow church drummer.

Beachcombers, three tuxed lads and tiny and plumpish Hawaiian Natalie, register solidly with a half dozen vocals. Excellent arrangements and dramatic use of hands figure in the selling.

Dorothy Dorben Dancers earn a warm welcome as a line change after several months. They're handpicked for youth, beauty and grace along with talent for ballet and high stepping. Costuming and routines for three numbers are classy.

Gardner Benedict's combo continues to merit bows from the changing acts, also from the chorus with singing support from Dick Hyde. Jimmy Wilbur's trio fills intermissions and Larry Vincent, singing pianist, presides in the lounge. Koll.

Tropicana, Havana

Havana, March 11.

Darvas & Julia, D'Ruff Q, D'Aida Q., Solera de Espana Orch, Tropicana Ballet & Show Girls; A. Romeu & Senen Suarez Orqs (for dancing); Rodney, producer; $4.50 minimum at tables.

Possibly the biggest and most lavish nitery in the world, Tropicana stages big and lavish shows. Chorines dancing in trees, extravagant costumes and torchlight parades constitute Cuba's versions of spectaculars. Tropicana was once a large private estate, and foliage still stands in abundance around the nitery area. Full use of this natural background is employed by Rodney in his colorful voodoo shows.

Voodoo has long been a favorite theme at the big niteries here. This newest version, titled "Karabali," is the most flashy yet—and covers more area than CinemaScope, with the girls terping on catwalks in the foliage. Mirrors set in the walls in the back of the nitery give an added dimension, with the overall effect being that the show is taking place all around the customers.

The theme is the usual one: a gaudy, musical version of voodoo ritual. Climax is reached when a pretty victim is chased, caught, partially stripped and etc. (with suitable screams) by the masked witch doctors. After this, everyone parades away carrying torches, chanting a dirge.

Two quartets—D'Aida (all girls) and D'Ruff (two couples)—provide suitable Afro-Cuban accompaniment to the ceremonies. Getting into the 3-D spirit of things, the D'Ruff group gets up into a hut set in the trees during the voodooism. The D'Aida girls are content to stay on stage.

Tropicana bills Darvas & Julia as the "best dance couple in the world" (playing, of course, at the "most beautiful nightclub in the world").

Twisting herself like a pretzel, or being tossed 10 feet and landing in a perfect split, seem to have no effect on the girl's bones — or maybe she has none. The rough stuff doesn't even dim her smile. In one startling number, Julia wraps herself around Darvas like a human sash, and Darvas whirls like a dervish. They're great!

The Solera de Espana Orch provides lively, topight Spanish music. It is as bright and charming as Old Castille in the sunlight —and quite a contrast with the voodoo throwback music. The Solera expects to make its U. S. debut soon at Miami's Fountainbleau. Jay.

Blinstrub's, Boston

Boston, March 16.

Lu Ann Simms, Six Moroccans, Roly Rolls, Nickie Noel, Colleanos (4), Tommy Reilly, Michael Gaylord's Orch (10), Lou Weir; $2.50 minimum.

Rapidly becoming recognized as the nitery incubator for Arthur Godfrey's tv talent, Blinstrub's is currently showcasing Lu Ann Simms, the attractive thrush who won herself a spot on the Godfrey show a few years ago via the "Talent Scout" program. Chirp follows by about a month the record-smashing debut of the McGuire Sisters, but whereas the sisters were (and are) riding the crest of several disclicks, Miss Simms at present is sans a record smash. At this mammoth boite, where platter personalities are the rule rather than the exception, this reflects at the b.o.

However, the young singer, in this one-weeker, purveys a fairly competent job, although she's not too strong on the showmanship angle at this time — a condition that will undoubtedly be corrected when she gets the feel of the nitery circuit. Opening with "Don't Take Your Love From Me," she segues into a special material number, "Hello From the Arthur Godfrey Gang," for fair response, following with the lively calypso flavored "Hold Him Joe." For a change of pace, the thrush injects the barbershop fave, "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," aided by the rhythmical handclapping of the aud while she essays a few self-conscious dance steps. Gal winds her song sesh with a dixieland version of "Chicago Style," parading around stage preceded by a dixieland group from the house band. All in all, it's a pleasant sesh.

Supporting layout is okay, the Colleanos, two femmes and two boys, whipping through a lively juggling sesh for nice mitt action. Nickie & Noel, a youthful terp duo, score nicely with effective Oriental and Latino routines plus some snappy ballroom stepping. Pair makes a nice appearance and the routines are topnotch, climaxing with overhead lifts and fast spins.

Roly Rolls, the Gallic entertainer whose routines are more suitable for a more intimate room, manages however to click okay with his zany piano antics. The Six Morocans, a typical Blinstrub sight act, with the guys garbed in native costumes, dash through a series of hand-balancing tricks, double and triple cartwheels, pyramids and butterflies for strong ringsider response. Tommy Reilly, an Irish tenor added to the bill in deference to St. Patrick's Day, is okay in his spot, belting across a couple of Irish standards. Ellc.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 15.

Edgar Bergen, Teresa Brewer, Four Hurricanes, Saharem Dancers (12), Cee Davidson Orch (12); no cover or minimum.

Astute showman that he is, Edgar Bergen (on this three-weeker) must use all the ventrilo talents at his command and give full play to his progeny—Charlie McCarthy, Mortimer Snerd, Effie Klinker and Codine—to follow Teresa Brewer, for the thrush can headline now in snug fashion in her own right.

Not that Bergen is a lesser entity as an entertainer. He's not. It's just that Miss Brewer offers stiff competition for top honors. Bergen still has the master's touch when it comes to swaying an audience and can evoke laughs from gags or situations with equal aplomb. Bergen and McCarthy in their familiar doctor-patient skit, with Charlie getting the psycho treatment is very funny. Snerd, old maid Klinker and Bergen's dancing partner Codine earn good chunks of laughter and Bergen's live assistant, Darla Hood, is okay as the nurse and otherwise accuits herself vocally with a nice blending of "Sunny Side of the Street."

Miss Brewer is a vocal enchantress with roving eyes. With vibrantly clear tonal qualities, she proves she's come a long way since she played the Strip more than two years ago. Her faves, "Ricochet Romance" and "Lonesomest Gal In Town," garner heavy applause, as does the moving "Let Me Go Lover." Shrill and contrasting low tones bring good results in "A Good Man Is Hard To Find." The young warbler encores with a haunting version of "Teasin'," trills "Saloon" in interesting fashion, and winds with a rousing "Alexander's Ragtime Band," for a stint that's clicko all the way.

The Four Hurricanes provide exciting fare as the lone femme is tossed great distances by her powerful male partners. She executes mid-air splits and spins in a manner that evokes gasps.

George Moro presents his line of Saharem dancers in a novel fan number with the blacked-out stage making the multi-hued fans intriguing to the eyes as they weave in many patterns. The nicely-costumed dance finale finds the line performing a well-conceived tap routine that earns solid applause, with the Cee Davidson orch backing the entire layout to merit bows. Bob.

Crescendo, L. A.

Los Angeles, March 18.

Harry James Orch (19), Tommy Gumina, Corky Hale, Willy Smith, Juan Tizol, Bobby Marlo; $1.50 cover.

After a full life of playing every type of situation, Harry James finally gets around to the Sunset Strip. For the next three weeks he'll hold forth with his 18 crewmen at the Crescendo, which has a particular penchant for band names, and it's a cinch the James rep will draw briskly during his stay. Going on at 10 p.m., and hourly for the next three hours, his band also furnishes dance tunes in between the 30-minute shows.

Accent on brass makes for dinful music in the low-ceilinged boite, but the effect is there for jazz fans and other patrons who will find his hot numbers right in the popular groove. James allows his soloists plenty of room for expression, including Corky Hale, the lone femme member, who whips out a rhythmic "Jealousy" on the harp.

Best received opening night, and calculated to remain the favorite during the stand, is the leader partnering with squeezeboxer Tommy Gumina for "Flight of the Bumble Bee." Gumina, who had his own five-man combo at the Crescendo for the previous three weeks, also does a medley for rich fingering.

Willy Smith on the alto sax and Juan Tizol, trombonist, who solos his own composition, "Caravan," do singles along with Buddy Hays on the bass, who goes vocal with "Down the River to New Orleans." Among James' best numbers are such jazz favorites as "Trumpet Blues" and "Brave Bulks," the leader right in there pitching with every show. "Sleepy Lagoon" is another hit, one of his Columbia recordings. Bobby Marlo is his vocalist. Whit.

Old New Orleans, D. C.

Washington, March 16.

Jeanne Bal, Margie Robinson, Les Williams, Frank Coviello Orch; $1.50 cover.

The Sazarac Room, low-ceilinged cellar where Nick Gaston stages the nitery portion of his Old New Orleans Restaurant operation, currently is launching Jeanne Bal on her night club career. Femme, who played Nellie Forbush during most of the road tour of "South Pacific," looks good and will look even better when she gets her act into shape.

Miss Bal is a rangy brunet, well-stacked, good to look at and, what's more, she can sing. As things shape up now, she's a lot better than her material, which should undergo some revision before she moves into New York's St. Regis next month. More than anything else, Miss Bal comes across to her audience as wholesome as well as pretty, but her present material fails to parlay this for the best returns.

Only number which takes full advantage of her personality is the bouncy "Hi, Ho, Come to the Fair," and this she slams home for top applause. She does well, too, in her encore, "Sentimental Journey." Also definitely on the plus side is a ditty about a girl growing up to be a lady who loves to love. Some of her earlier numbers, however, including a wordy torch song, fail to show her at her best.

Miss Bal is prettier and more impressive on a night club floor than playing Nellie Forbush at the National Theatre here last summer, and has one thing that not many of her peers can boast. She has the voice to desert the floor mike and stroll around the ringside tables, singing her songs without any artificial volume assist.

Tap dancer Margie Robinson has a nice, easy style in her work, coupled with a full complement of curves where they ought to be, and the looks to top them off. The result is the kind of act which has given her holdover status for several weeks at this class spot. Gal wears sequined tights and long black net stockings better than most other dancers can do.

Opening number is Les Williams, sepia singer, who has set a longevity record for Washington. Williams has been playing Old New Orleans for the past 15 years without any complaints from the customers. His numbers range from the double entendre and very broad to such standards as "Black Magic" and "Ol' Man River." He is equally at home with the slow and easy and with fast swing numbers. His is a fine act for this room. Lowe.

Los Angeles, March 15.

Billy Snyder, Charlie Carlisle, Phyllis Inez, Skeets Minton, Larry Green Trio; minimum $3.

No better tribute to Billy Snyder's return to the Band Box he owned and opened 18 years ago could be paid any performer than the acclaim that greeted his entrance from a packed room on Monday night (14). Save for a stopgap billing when Billy Gray was ailing, he hadn't been on view in this Fairfax fun factory for 13 years. He seemed as glad to be back as his old admirers were to have him and gave them the full treatment that ran close to 45 minutes. The entire layout was a two-hour affair, much too long despite the high entertainment quotient.

He's still topflight in his impersonations and can belt a song with all the vigor and drive of Johnnie Ray. To his credit, his jokes are never blue and not racially distasteful, a claim that can't be made by Charlie Carlisle, who should have been told that Miami gags don't sit too well with the mixed trade in the Hollywood taverns.

Name any great singing or dancing star since the reign of Eddie Foy and chances are Snyder will toss off a fairly close replica of the original. He knocks himself out vocally and the pipes are still powerful enough to conjure up visions of Jolson and Richman. He also took a turn at softshoeing a la Pat Rooney and the dialectic Harry Lauder. He's a one-man show and could carry the bill by himself.

Carlisle, a cigar-smoking comic, got off on the wrong foot when he asided, "the smart lines die in this room." His material is sharp and he has all the knowhow of the standup technique but he should avoid the racial gags that are rousers in Florida but die here (like his smart lines). His Detroit routines would be better suited to this crowd. He has a fast delivery and an amiable approach that get all the laughs he needs without the offending insinuations.

Rounding out the layout are Phyllis Inez, a quaint stylist with a freewheeling manner of half-talking a song with special material tinged with humor, and Skeets Minton, a ventriloquist who socks over a song without any movement of the lips, a skilled technicism. Larry Green trio tends to the instrumentals wich workmanlike toil. Helm.

Mocambo, Hollywood

Hollywood, March 15.

Ella Fitzgerald, Don Abney, Paul Hebert (6) & Joe Castro (3) Orchs; $2 cover.

Easy does it with Ella Fitzgerald. She comes on singing "Like Being in Love" and with her it's like falling off a log. Even with less effort. Her styling is perhaps the most relaxed of any thrush making the nitery rounds and her entertainment technique of studied skill. (Show is in two weeks).

Let the others tear their larynx and rock with rhythm. Not she. Not even the lyrics make much sense to her. She improvises her own and the effect is unique and exhiliarating. She can make like Rose (chi chi) Murphy or level like Pearl Bailey. Either way it's sheer enjoyment, because there is no strain on the listener, who takes the jumps with her up and down the rolling scale.

To hear Miss Fitzgerald sing "Can't Give You Anything But Love" or her trademarked "Tisket a Tasket" is a rich experience in a Strip nitery. It is more generally considered the better part of showmanship to let go like a dervish with all stops out. What makes her act more attractively appealing is the small, at times childish voice issuing from such a spacious diaphragm. Few singers can boast better control and her easy glides up and down the scale in one breath is pure artistry. Whatever the song calls for she is accommodating; this is, if it requires little or no effort. She is also smart enough to know when to get off.

What she has made a life work of, others would call "toying." It's hard to describe, but easy to feel its soothing effect. Don Abney keeps up with all her vocal tricks at the keyboard, no sinecure. Paul Hebert and Joe Castro keep the music coming from the stand. Helm.

Downbeat, Montreal

Montreal, March 18.

Allen & De Wood, Verju Bros. (2), Gerick Twins, Kim Irwin, Dino Vale, Boots McKenna Line (6), Nick Martin Orch (7), Michel Sauro quartet; no cover or minimum.

With a rowdy show policy usually featuring a brace of comedians with materal on the Martin-Lewis line, a fancy, well-endowed chirper and a flash novelty act, the management of the Downbeat has stayed above water during all entertainment setbacks including Lent.

Current two-week layout is no exception and for better than 60 minutes, the racy, often blue, comedics of Marty Allen and Mitch De Wood, backed by the harmonica variations of the Verju Bros. and the twin acro feats of the Gerick sisters, keep this upstairs saloon rocking. Allen and De Wood are repeaters and apparent faves as they work at top speed through their impresh sessions, some good and some off-the-cob. Boys have an adaptable style; know their customers, and although in the headline slot know when to get off.

Baritone Kim Irwin, a local lad doing his first pro stand following several minor U. S. engagements, has possibilities, but similar gestures with most songs offered and routine arrangements take edge off production. The Gerick duo starts with a mirror bit, segueing to straight tumbling for just a fair reception. Low ceiling limits team but other than their enthusiasm, act is a standard. The Verju Bros. pick up hefty mitting for their harmonica varieties but overstay. Duo hit the top with their harmonica impressions but the second encore set kills overall effectiveness.

The Boots McKenna line sparks throughout and the Nick Martin orch plays a solid show. The Michel Sauro combo pleases for client hoofing. Dino Vale as the house emcee does vocals with the Sauro group and keeps show moving. Newt.

Arena Mgrs. Admit Roch., Winston-Salem Houses

The Arena Managers Assn. has admitted two more houses to membership in the organization. The Community War Memorial, Rochester, and the War Memorial Coliseum, Winston-Salem, were voted in at the AMA membership meeting recently in Buffalo.

Frank Kingman, who formerly headed the Brockton (Mass.) Fair, is managing the Winston-Salem spot, which will get the International edition of "Ice Capades" in September. Harold Rand is managing the Rochester spot.

Negro D.J.

r&b problem when the "fever had mushroomed outside of the Negro market and their pastures were being grazed on by the independent operators, many, on shoestring operations . . . So the big boys are worried and ready to go into action to do something to stop the steamroller of jingling jukebox and record store gold."

Bostic pointed out that the r&b trend broke out of the Negro market when some of the more enterprising indie labels "kept maneuvering around until they came up with the gimmick of the strange singing groups such as the Charms, Larks, Solitaires, Swallows and a couple of dozen more. The Negro disk jocks on the r&b shows gave them plenty of spins and the coins started rolling in. Then came the revival of the dirty blues wail with the real meaning thinly veiled by words like squeeze, roll, hug, 60 seconds, all night long and the rest."

In an obvious swipe at Alan (Rock 'n' Roll) Freed on WINS, N. Y., Bostic said the clincher came to the present r&b cycle when "they bypassed all the Negro disk jockeys to put a non-Negro on a 50,000 watt outlet and this stuff got the biggest push ever. It was off to the race now, daddy."

U. S. Returns

English version had been shot and that this would be the practice increasingly. He said there would also be more of shooting of close-ups in two languages to make eventual dubbing easier and better.

Hecht noted that Italian documentary producers, who're subsidized by the government if their films are picked by a special commission, now turn out about 400 reelers a year and he predicted that, under any new Italian film law this number would be cut inasmuch as the government's economic assistance also would be trimmed. The film law has currently been extended to the end of the year.

Prospects of this cutback were behind the Italian laboratories' move to force American importers to do part of their color printing for local release in Italy. The documentaries, most of them in Ferrania Color, which lends itself particularly to outdoor stuff, have been a source of considerable income for the labs.

Under the present law, theatres must play documentaries and approved shorts a minimum of 180 days out of the year. Under current arrangements, the producers of these reels collect from the government 3% of the total gross of a black-and-white subject and 5% for a tinter. The producers, in turn, kick back part of their take to the theatres to induce them to book their film. Exhibs, of course, play the films free. Hecht estimated that documentaries, with two or three companies in the field, today are a $4,000,000 business, this sum reflecting the extent of the government's aid.

Hecht said Documento was making Ferrania Color shorts for $5,000 a piece and noted that the government was using the shorts industry to turn out subjects designed to battle the Communists. Italo theatres don't hesitate to play shorts with political overtones, Hecht indicated. He added that the Reds' own shorts wouldn't obtain approval from the government commission and therefore don't get into the theatres. Commies make 16m propaganda pix which are shown mostly in their own meeting halls, etc.

Documento is busy with coproductions with French interests, Hecht said. Among them is "Le Rouge and Noir," which it made with Henri Deutschmeister; "Casa Ricorci," in Technicolor, which cost over $1,000,000 and rates as the biggest coproduction to date in Italy, etc. Documento also has "Too Bad She's Bad," with Sophia Loren and Vittorio deSica; "Tam Tam Mayambe," a tinter with Pedro Armendariz and Kerima, which locationed in Africa and took a year to make, and others. All of these are made for widescreen projection.

Interestingly enough, although Documento is an IFE member, only one of its pix has been released by IFE in the U. S. so far. Hecht said U. S. rights were dtermined strictly by the highest offers despite his IFE affiliation.

Coproduction, which makes sense only on big pix, actually favors the French, Hecht opined. He said this was so because the French market was more profitable on such films. He also thought that Italy, which last year turned out around 180 features, was over-producing and, as a result, was suffering from an excess of thirdrate pix.

Fotogs Dinner

ceeing when he announced at the start, "I have no political jokes of any kind, because the laughs are always at the expense of someone or some group of people." They liked that at the head table which which was loaded with both Republicans and Democrats.

The Amon Bros., risley act, sent the show off at a gallop. Howard Keel hit solidly with three numbers—"Great Day," "Old Man River" and "September Song." Song stylist Connie Russell, who followed, offered a slick change of pace with "Sunny Side of the Street," "Thrill Is Gone" and "Gonna Live Until I Die."

It was a strong buildup for Liberace playing his fourth correspondents' dinner before a President of the United States. Last year, Liberace made headlines during his fast Boogie number of coaxing Ike to shout "Hey" at one pause. Nothing daunted, the entertainer tried it again—and again the President of the United States obliged, for one of the hits of the evening. Liberace's act featured a new twist, a hillbilly number in which he kids himself. Pianist had to beg off.

Joe E. Brown dropped in his baseball pitcher pantomime immediately afterward. Skit combined both fun and nostalgia for the big audience which ate it up.

Lena Horne was next in a tight, strapless brocade gown. Hobble skirt effect chained her to a mincing walk and the wolf cries started right away. Gal poured it on—"Love Me Or Leave Me," a Rodgers and Hart medley featuring "The Lady Is a Tramp," and then proceeded to melt the microphone with her encore—a sultry, sizzling rendition of "Stormy Weather."

This was a tough act to follow, but Ray Bolger took it in stride. He opened with a smart tribute to Brown which got the audience with him immediately—"I have never seen a master of ceremonies handle himself with more wit, dignity and impeccible good taste." After that it was easy for Bolger. He did his dance pantomime of the Max Baer-Joe Louis fight and stepped up the pace with his "Sad Sack" routine, hooking in audience participation. Encore was "Once In Love With Amy." That wrapped it up.

Tony Muto, Movietone and 20th studio rep here, took over as president of the News Photographers Assn., and surprised with the scrappiest speech a new president has pulled at one of these affairs. Although House Speaker Sam Rayburn was at the head table, Muto indirectly slapped at the fact that the Speaker has barred tv and newsreel coverage of House committees, although even the President now permits such coverage of his press conferences. "We do not approach these barriers as supplicants, he added, "but as pictorial reporters entitled to all the rights inherent in a free press."

Austria, Satellite

recoup about 10% of its negative cost locally. The rest must come from Germany.

While in N. Y., Polsterer said he was discussing with Munio Podhorzer, prez of United German Film Enterprises, the possibility of UGFE repping Cosmopole Film in the U. S. Podhorzer is the agent for a number of other German production-distribution outfits, including Omnia, the German industry's export organization.

Two pix which Polsterer wants to place into U. S. distribution are "The Last Bridge," which stars Maria Schnell and which Columbia has worldwide outside this country, and "The Last Act," dealing with the last days of Hitler. Based on the book, "10 Days to Die," the film is likely to go to Col, which has an interest in it.

Last Days of Hitler

Polsterer said Cosmopole had decided to make the film "because 10 years are enough to get a proper perspective on Hitler without losing the feeling for the proper detail." He denied that the film had any "slant," stating he wasn't intending it as political material. Pic, which cost $350,000, shows Hitler as a madman and reconstructs the Russian capture of Berlin, including the drowning of thousands when the S.S. flooded the subway tunnels to delay the Russian advance for two hours.

That scene, Polsterer related, was reenacted at a Vienna public bath and four extras almost drowned during the shooting, which took place in a specially built tube.

To Try CinemaScope

The Austrian producer said he planned to launch in the fall production of a CinemaScope tinter which may have a part American cast. It'll have a historical theme. He's also skedding a tv film series of 13 to roll in Vienna this summer with a U. S. cast. If it's successful, he'll follow up with another 13, all along a "Foreign Intrigue" type of story line.

Polsterer said some of the Hitler-era pix had been released for showing in Germany and Austria, but stressed that they didn't include propaganda films. "The Adventures of Muenchhausen," ambitious German tinter made by UFA shortly before the collapse of the Nazi Third Reich, hasn't been shown in Austria yet. It's been acquired from the U. S. government by American interests for distribution in the U. S. However, UFA has the only available negative and negotiations are currently going on.

The Russians are very active in their big Rosenhuegel studios just outside Vienna, Polsterer indicated. The Reds have made some coproduction deals with French and Italian interests but have to pay very high wages to actors since local thesps are reluctant to take employment at Rosenhuegel. Polsterer said the Russian pix made at the studios run up very high budgets.

Brit. Pubs Ban

the English. As a result, American Forces Network, whose headquarters near Frankfurt and primarily intended to entertain GI's in Europe, is restricted from playing hit tunes from the current "Pajama Game" and "Silk Stockings" because some of the AFN listeners happen to be British.

The music from "Can Can," which U. S. disk jockeys have been playing for two years, has just been taken off the banned list because of the play's opening in London, and it is hoped that the "Kismet" tunes will also shortly be released for AFN and for the German stations when the play has its London opening.

The restriction applies until the British publishers release the records to coincide with the opening of the play in England, or until they decide that the play will probably never be produced for their viewers. "St. Louis Woman," for instance, opened in the States in 1946, and all the music from it has been restricted until two weeks ago, when just one song, "Come Rain or Come Shine," in a Capitol records version by Margaret Whiting, was finally permitted in England.

House Reviews

Palace, N. Y.

Billy & Ann, Nicoli. & Philip Knight, Ross Wyse Jr. & June Mann, Billy Shepard, Ben Beri, Estrellita & Raul, Frank Marlowe, Marvellos (3); Jo Lombardi Orch; "Tight Spot" (Col).

The new Palace bill has a stamp of solidity. True, the element of discovery is lacking, since nearly all the acts are familiar to the house. However, this is compensated by the fact that each turn delivers its quota of entertainment.

An unfamiliar name here is Ben Beri, but he has been seen in virtually every other house on the street. His juggling remains skilled and humorous and he has no problem in making the house take notice of his efforts.

A regular who does excellently here is Frank Marlowe, a big comic who gets a lot of humor out of the house in lines that would ordinarily be for the trade. Marlowe takes his prattfalls nicely, and delivers his lines with sufficient force to hit a hot mitt at his exit.

Billy Shepard, also on a return here, continues as a singer of promise. He exhibits a good theatre act that has excellent arrangements, which permit him to showcase his voice excellently. His tune catalogue is varied. His "Autumn Leaves" has a ring of sensitivity and the rhythm department is well taken care of by "Somebody Stole by Gal" and "Blackbird." Off to several bows.

Ross Wyse Jr. & June Mann hit a good stride with their comedy dancing. On familiar ground here, they exhibit their same act with usually good results. Estrellita & Raul make good in the flamenco department. Their terps are vigorous and picturesque, albeit of no especial depth. Routines are sufficiently commercial for a healthy hand.

Nicoli & Philip Knight have an unusual marionette turn, with the gal doing most of the manipulations while the lad serves mainly as an assist. The ideas are excellent and their manipulation is skilled. However, at several spots, they lose the point of a routine and efforts are dissipated. It's a matter of sharper editing with them.

Openers are Billy & Ann, a pair of lively Negro hoofers, who warm up the house effectively. Both solo and tandem work get good applause. The Marvellos, in closing, have a clever musical novelty which combines instrumentation and illusion for effective, interesting results. Man and woman assistants create some effective bits of deception which provide considerable amusement.

The musical support is by Jo Lombardi, who, as usual, gives the show a solid musical base. Jose.

Apollo, N. Y.

Drifters (5), Eddie Heywood's Band (12); Hillman Bros. (2), Varetta Dillard, Ching, Glenn Covington, Lang Troupe (6); "Forbidden" (UI).

The Apollo, contrary to what are generally accepted as Harlem ground rules, has assembled three distinct musical types for this week's card: the Drifters, Glenn Covington for pops and semi-classics and Eddie Heywood with a six-man subdivision of his band for some modern jazz. Not all tune presentations are uniformly high, and the Drifters give out with some of the poorest rhythm & blues in months. Varetta Dillard's versions of the same brand of music are in much better taste and infinitely better in delivery. There's good rounding out by the theatre management in bringing magico Ching, the dancing Hillman Bros. (in New Acts, along with Covington) and the Lang Troupe.

The Drifters, who seem to be very popular among the Harlem teenage set, pitch a generally tasteless group of numbers. Having lost leader Clyde McFadden to the Army temporarily, the vocal quintet is filling with David Baughn, who carbons McFadden's pseudo-soprano lead role. Outfit depends almost completely in the current card on a hyper-gimmicked delivery, one that appears to wow the highschoolers and weary older stubholders. Miss Dillard, on the other hand, is a bouncy chick, who belts home a nice r&b catalog.

To get through the r&b fog, Heywood breaks down his 12-man band into a six-sided (trumpet, trombone, sax, bass, drums and himself on piano) combo. His progressive at-the-keys stylings are pianissimo and intricate enough to please everybody. Of most particular note are his "Begin the Beguine" and "Let's Fall In Love."

The Lang Troupe and Ching are the other experienced performers in the present setup. The tumbling teetertotterers (three men and three femmes, all ofay) offer a gymnastic assortment of all sizes and shapes, but they don't embellish the normal doings of their type act with interesting sidebars or verve. Ching is a young Chinese sleight-of-hander, who has still to overcome some measure of self-consciousness facially. A number of his tricks are standard and are anticipated by payees, but he dazzles with some, as with his disappearing candles at the outset.

Art.

Casino, Toronto

Toronto, March 18.

Monica Lind, Jackie Bright, Donna Grescoe, Campbells (2), Margie McGlory, Archie Stone Orch; "Rainbow Jacket" (Rank).

Pleasant 70-minute stage package, but nothing to hypo the b.o. on name value, is current at the Casino, though all acts go over. The Campbells open proceedings with their juggling of rings, clubs and tennis balls. Jackie Bright is in and out as emcee, plus his fast-talking standard auctioneering act, with stooges from the audience, they doing most of the clowning and being paid off for their work with wallets and pen sets. Payees find nothing particularly funny in a carbon of "Truth and Consequences," this being dated.

Donna Grescoe, blond in salmon-pink evening gown, plays a mean violin for her opening "Dizzy Fingers," and then goes into the "High and Mighty" theme, a medley of gypsy airs, and a finale of "Hot Canary." But she could dispense with the interpolated, innocuous patter. Margie McGlory scores on her song-shouting of sex songs, ranging from Spanish tempo to her impersonations of singing stage and screen stars, with a wham gravel-voice finale of a Louis Armstrong takeoff.

Bright gets his innings later for his insulting of the customers and humiliating of audience participation onstage. But the only marquee lure is Monica Lind, a blonde, lissome lass, for her impersonation of a gal at the Mardi Gras who likes her champagne too much. Her dance of abandon as a ladylike lush holds plenty of showmanship drama, with gal revealing plenty of ballet training governed by her well-timed leaps and pirouets. Miss Lind was over to a begoff when caught. McStay.

Pavilion, Glasgow

Glasgow, March 12.

Aly Wilson, with Artie Mayne, Gene Dickson; Monte Rey, Nicky Kidd, Charles Stewart & Ann Mathew, Peter & Sam Sherry, Three Skylarks, Teal & Castle, 10 Jackson Girls, Billy Rose Orch.

Monte Rey, radio and stage romantic singer, makes a vaude comeback after being out for a while on his Essex, Eng., farm. Well-built singer scores with his vein of Spanish and other songs. He wins warm mitting for "Donkey Serenade" and for the Scot oldie, "Annie Laurie."

Rest of the month's layout is in the so-so category, with Aly Wilson, a Scot comedian, providing the fun slotting with familiar material. He is best in a sketch titled "Bob the Lodger," but this lacks a good tagline. Charlie Stewart, of the Stewart & Mathew act, scores with strong personality in this scene.

Wilson is supported by a strong foil in Artie Mayne and by Irene Dickson. Peter & Sam Sherry, garbed in smart brown suits, offer dancing and instrumental fodder, and Teal & Castle are an average xylophone pair.

The Skylarks are a trio of fairly attractive distaffers who harmonize, but don't stand out from normal run of this type of vaude act. Nicky Kidd garners mitting for songs at the piano, including in his repertoire melodies like "If I Give My Heart to You," "I Still Believe" and "Mr. Sandman," but he's running risk of becoming too frequent a visitor to this vaudery.

Charles Stewart & Ann Mathew, with eccentric terping and musical act, offer travesty of concert musicians in longhair wigs and comical garb, and gain solid mitting. Showbacking from Billy Rose house orch. Gord.

Bobino, Paris

Paris, March 22.

Annie Cordy, Pedro De Cordoba, Ballet D'Andalousie (8), Miguel Amador, Four Najarros, Felix Paquet, Tony & Johnny, Armand Andrieux, Morris & Johnny, Simonelli & Partner; $1.25 top.

With this show the Bobino goes off the music hall standard. It is to be replaced by a chansonnier opus which is purely patter and singing, and will probably change the clientele. Though this house was mainly local in appeal and attendance, it was a fine opening spot for newcomers, with warm auds, and also a launching spot for new headliners. It will be missed. Last star to be sent off by this house is Annie Cordy, who comes on like dynamite. This boff personality singer is now assured a name here, judging from the heavy aud response.

Hoydenish, bombastic and taking, Miss Cordy displays a zing, choice of numbers and a highly personalized style. She has bounce, audience savvy and a bounding voice with barrels of energy expended in a taking manner to songs about offbeat and irrepressible people. She looks ready for U. S. chances and her stormy manner should go big over there.

There is a preponderance of Latino leaning this stanza with dancer Pedro De Cordoba, Ballet D'Andalousie (8), and a charm singer from Mexico, Miguel Amador. De Cordoba has a dramatic stance and powerful dance interp, but allows his turn to be enveloped in a schmaltz envelope of an aged wreck thinking of his past triumphs. This should be eliminated. He breaks up the usual flamenco into personalized interludes and has the frenzy, suppleness and grace to gloss over a certain lack of fire and direction.

Ballet D'Andalousie is a young group with color and rhythm, but it still lacks the necessary training and knowhow. Miguel Amador is a short, handsome charm boy whose flashing teeth and embroidered costume back his standard carioca romantico rep. He is fine for the Gallic circuit, but somewhat hokey and passe for the more rugged demands of U. S. circuits.

Four Najarros make a lively filler or acro opener with fast acrobatics and a trump in a fat woman whose gyrations equal those of her younger brood. Tony & Johnny indulge in some fancy trampoline antics for big mitts and Morris & Johnny give out with a rapid-fire tap routine that is fine in precision. Simonelli & Partner is a good juggling act, and Armand Andrieux has some trained lovebirds who pull vehicles and seesaw for a taking offbeat entry. Felix Paquet is a storyteller with a weak rep and cloying mannerisms which do not help either.

This leaves the field primarily to the Olympia Music Hall, with the Empire bowing out of a proposed house switch to take on Cinerama, and the ABC still nursing its longrun musical hit, "The Flowered Way." Mosk.

Empire, Glasgow

Glasgow, March 17.

Bernard Delfont presents Frankie Vaughan, with Bert Waller at piano; Morecambe & Wise, Albert & Les Ward, Jerry Allen & Trio, Skylons (2), Jat Herod, Des O'Connor, Two Sterlings, Bobby Dowds Orch.

Vaude layout, headed by handsome young English singer Frankie Vaughan, is one of the most satisfying to play this vaudery for months. Each act has its individual appeal, and general effect is to send the customers home in happy mood.

Two Sterlings, femme duo, open the bill with acro work and graceful groupings, winding with series of fast somersaults. Des O'Connor is a pleasant young English comedian with relaxed style of delivery, and is reviewed in New Acts. Jerry Allen & Trio have no lack of energy or ideas in a musical offering, Allen himself seated at the electric organ, with Alan Grahame on vibraphone, Lionel Rubin on drums and Ken Ingarfield on bass. Allen introduces a novelty touch by making his organ produce unusual sounds, such as the Scotch bagpipes.

Morecambe & Wise, fast-paced comedy duo, offer two spots, scoring to greater effect in their second. Crosstalk is bright and amusing, and timing is a model. Act is among the best in current United Kingdom vaude comedy doubles.

Albert & Les Ward, who finish the bill's first half, are well named as the "Harmonious Discords." Welsh-born brothers come up with a zany musical act and impressions that please the stubholders. Travesties of Mary Ford & Les Paul and of Jerry Colonna, are particularly good.

The Skylons are two males who score in trapeze chores, the elder of the pair in a series of one-arm twists. The younger has the customers holding their breath as he swings high and into auditorium on trapeze, letting himself go almost at last moment. Act is a honey for U.S. markets.

Jat Herod, newly in from the U.S. and making his British bow, pleases in a string of gags and more particularly in his playing of the violin. His British bow here, minus barrage of publicity that usually attends American acts, is in the pleasant category, and he impresses with his own amusing personality.

Frankie Vaughan, assisted by pianist Bert Waller belts out pops in lively style, and has the younger element with him. Black-haired singer scores with extreme vitality, and is best in "Give Me The Moonlight." Bobby Dowds orch showbacks effectively. Gord.

New Acts

GLENN COVINGTON
Songs-Impressions
12 Mins.
Apollo, N.Y.

Glenn Covington is a husky Negro baritone who had to fight a noisy teenage audience plus the normal vagaries incident to an initial vaude appearance and a sometimes defiant rhythm & blues milieu. Nevertheless, in the current Apollo sesh, a strong personality and a big voice come through, particularly in his "Great Day" and "I Believe." He has a great range, but his voice isn't completely under control.

Covington takes to the piano in one part of his act to click on vocal interpretations of the top voices in pops and r&b. The overall mimicries of Nat Cole, Bing Crosby, Bill Kenny, et al., aren't perfect carbons, because Covington's deep voice intrudes, but the styles are exactly duplicated. His accompanying chatter is brief and cheery.

The big man's "Old Man River" bowoff shows that his voice is at times in the precincts of the bass range but that his style lends itself more to the popular frame, rather than the semi-classical. Good for vaude, layouts and smaller bistros. Art.

GILLIAN GREY
Songs
20 Mins.
The Barclay, Toronto

Gillian Grey is a tall, blond vocalist in black, most notable for not only her lady-like stage appearance but for a three-octave range, plus echo effects, that takes her from G below middle C to G above. Girl was recently in the background chorus of "John Brown's Body" and is now offering a mixture of musical comedy, grand opera and pop ballads, all over big to the customers for encores, when caught.

Opens with neat "Can't Help Singing," the a switch to "Cara Mia," and then a breakup of the lady-like style to a lowdown "I Want to be Evil"—which she can immediately drop because it doesn't fit her deportment. For second set, Miss Grey has an African chant, "Wim-Hway," for high contralto effects; a sweet "Poor Butterfly"; "Granada" and a wham finale of "Open Your Heart" from "Carmen." Singer makes her own arrangements.

Youngster has plenty of class for the top bistros or any other entertainment medium, this prompting one tablesitter to observe: "A Grace Kelly who can sing."

HILLMAN BROS. (2)
Dance
11 Mins.
Apollo, N.Y.

The Hillman Bros promise and deliver a great deal in the way of class hoofing. This Negro brace, which for a change actually look like brothers, is handsomely attired in white tie and tails, and depends for its marked success on the novel and knowledgeable twists to hoofing which by itself is good but not exceptional.

Precision duoing, a solo terp takeoff on Bill Robinson, incidental chatter and song are all charming. The Apollo aud mitts extraordinary appreciation. This, however, does not limit the act to such vaude turns alone, least of all to such vaude layouts. Hillman brand of intimacy and glitter fit all situations, with posheries high on the list. Art.

SALLY SWEET
Songs
Hotel Radisson, Mpls.

When the Twin Cities' leading bistro, the Hotel Radisson Flame Room, recently needed an act for one night between the engagements of chirper Jane Morgan and pianist Carmen Cavallaro, local songstress Sally Sweet was pressed into service. Her pinchhitting success has landed her a future regular booking in the spot.

A distinctive offbeat vocal offering makes Miss Sweet a likely prospect for the tonier supper clubs. Nitery femme folk song and ballad singers are a rarity, at least in these parts. Strumming her own accompaniments on the auto harp, a tiny instrument, she gives out gently with much finesse.

Miss Sweet has a fine set of pipes and her songs seem made to order for them. She projects a dramatic flair and comedic inspiration that aid in carrying off the stint.

Especially boff are a pair of chucklesome melodics, "A Most Delicate Air," that tells of a girl who made the most of her physical charms, and a spoof anent "An Old Lady Who Swallowed a Fly." While her Irish and Scotch numbers register strongly, they're along conventional lines, and more of the humorous contributions to diversify the recital would seem to be in order.

The dinner audience was held in rapt attention that night throughout the entire 30-minute performance. Rees.

Jones Sues AGVA

too familiar with AGVA affairs. Jones' attorney is William J. Walker.

One of the citations by Jones is an article in AGVA News which stated that Jones was a "traitor to AGVA" and a "doublecrosser." Article also charged that Jones was "using the technique of the big lie, telling it over and over again, screaming hysterically, making wild accusations to gullible members. Jones started to capture AGVA as his own." Article also said, "We were aware of his background and unorthodox tactics, but we thought could channel his activities to make him an asset to AGVA. We tried, we had long talks. Jones promised to turn over a new leaf, but a leopard doesn't change his spots." He also charged that defamatory matter in the AGVA News was distributed and sent out to 15,000 members.

Events leading up to Jones' discharge started with a meeting attended by Jones in Philadelphia, where he was originally top organizer, which resulted in the telegram to Dullzell which demanded that the then current tiff with the American Federation of Musicians be settled and Bright and Irving investigated. Wire was sent to Dullzell with copies to George Meany, head of the AFL, and James C. Petrillo, AFM prexy. Subsequently, Jones was charged with exceeding his authority in calling the Philadelphia meeting that resulted in the telegram, and the national board was polled by wire on ousting him. He was subsequently dismissed with severance pay.

Following his dismissal, Jones went into business for himself and organized the now moribund Actors International Union.

Push Fight Network

All units will be installed in theatres on a temporary basis.

With 100 theatres in the country equipped with permanent closed-circuit units and 50 mobile ones available, TNT hopes to top the record lineup of 71 theatres it pacted for the second Marciano-Charles bout.

Terms for theatres for the closed-circuit Marciano-Cockrell fight May 16 will follow the same pattern as those asked by Theatre Network Television for last September's Marciano-Charles bout.

For seats selling up to $2.99, TNT's bite will be 50%; from $3 to $3.30, TNT's take will be $1.50; from $3.31 to $3.50, $1.60; from $3.51 to $4, $1.75; from $4.01 and over, $2.

Barn Ops Trying to Organize Again; Equity Stock Switches Bring Beefs

Another move to organize the strawhat producers is in the works. A prior attempt to unite silo entrepreneurs via the formation of the Stock Managers Assn. several years ago hasn't panned out. Org actually fell apart a year ago, although several managers have continued to stick together as SMA members.

It's these managers who are now trying to revitalize the association, which hasn't had an official president or board of governors for approximately a year, as all terms had expired and no new election was held. However, meetings have continued to be conducted under the SMA banner, with the prexy status of Thomas G. Ratcliffe, of the Sea Cliff (L.I.) Summer Theatre, unofficially extended.

Last conclave was held this past March 15 at the Hotel Woodstock, N.Y., to discuss the new Equity stock contract revisions raising rehearsal pay from $40 to $55 per week and hiking overtime rehearsal pay from $1 to $3 an hour. Another major bone of contention is the requirement that the barn operators pitch in $1.50 a week to Equity's Welfare Fund for each actor employed by them.

Slim turnout for the meet of approximately 50 barn operators prompted the revitalization move. Cards calling for a conclave next Tuesday (29) at the Woodstock were sent to around 300 managers throughout the country. Mailing included non-Equity groups also, on the theory that a number of these operations eventually switch to professional status.

Plans for getting SMA functioning again include election of a new slate of officers and the setting up of three separate divisions covering musical stock, regular stock and star stock. Meanwhile, several barn managers attended an Equity stock committee meet yesterday (Tues.). Equity, incidentally, has never officially recognized the SMA.

Touring 'Teahouse' Pays Off Full 65G Outlay In 13th Week on Road

Repayment of the full $65,000 capitalization on the touring edition of "Teahouse of the August Moon" was completed March 10, during show's 13th week on the road. A $32,500 distributing was made on that date. Other half of the investment had been returned to the backers early last month.

Separately financed from the New York company, the Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse production is currently at the Curran, S. F., for an indefinite run. A tour of the northwest is skedded to follow, after which bookings haven't been set yet.

Backers of the touring company include Howard S. Cullman, $10,400; San Francisco financier Louis Lurie, $5,200; A. Gerald Renthal, son of theatrical accountant Charles H. Renthal, $3,900; Emmett Rogers, production manager for original co-producer Maurdee Evans, $1,300; Sidney Phillips, Metro's legit liaison in New York, $1,950; Warren O'Hara, Alvin Theatre, N. Y., house manager, $3,250; Herman Bernstein, general manager for Lindsay & Crouse, $650; William F. Wolff Jr., trustee for Crouse, $1,300; Crouse's wife Anna, and sister, Mildred Crouse, $650 each.

Also, Lindsay's sister, Bernadine Boyd, $650; Luise Silcox, representing the Author's League Fund, $2,600; Abe Cohen, company manager of "Peter Pan," $650; theatrical attorney Henry Jaffe, $2,600; agent Irving Lazar, $1,300; Louis J. Lotito, City Playhouses prexy and general manager of the Martin Beck Theatre, N. Y., $650; his daughter Therese, $650; pressagent Sol Jacobson, $1,300; Mrs. Robert Rapport, wife of the general manager for producers Evans and George Schaefer, $1,300.

Also, playwright Patrick, who adapted "Teahouse" from the Sneider novel, $5,200; literary agent Miriam Howell, $650, and talent agent Gloria Safier, $650.

The Portland (Ore.) Symphony has engaged Theodore Bloomfield as its conductor next season.

Margo Sets 5 New Plays For Dallas in Summer

Dallas, March 22.

Margo Jones will produce five new scripts, each in a two-week run, in a new summer season, June 13-Aug. 21, at Theatre '55. Last summer Miss Jones staged five preems, but gave each a three-frame showcasing.

Co-producer with Herman Shumlin of the Jerome Lawrence-Robert E. Lee drama, "Inherit the Wind," Miss Jones goes to New York March 31 to assist in staging the Scopes "monkey trial" play, which she preemed here in February. "Wind" has a tryout March 31 in Philadelphia and opens April 21 at the Colonet, N. Y.

Full 40G Nick In Schwartz Foldo

Abrupt closing last Sunday (20) of Maurice Schwartz's three-play series at the Downtown National Theatre, N. Y., represented an approximate loss of the venture's full $40,000 capitalization. Presented by Russell-Farrow Productions Co., in association with Cy Metrick, the series began last Feb. 15 and was to have run 16 weeks.

Schwartz was director-star of the operation, which was in its second production when the management called it quits. Initial presentation, Sholom Aleichem's "Grass Is Greener," had a four-week run, with Moliere's "Miser" taking over last Thursday (17) for a brief six performances. "King Lear" was to have been the windup bill, beginning April 28.

Biggest financial stake in the operation was held by Harold Rubin, with a $19,000 investment. Rubin, who's with Universal Pictures, is also an author, writing under the name Harold Robbins. His novel, "A Stone For Danny Fisher," was adapted by Lenard Kantor for presentation earlier this season at the National, as the theatre's first play in a switch from Yiddish to English language productions.

Rubin was also a general partner in the Schwartz series, along with Yvonne Russell-Farrow, who put up $1,000 of the capitalization.

GAXTON MAY RETURN TO STAGE IN OWN 'QUEEN'

William Gaxton, who co-authored the book of an upcoming musical, "If I Were Queen," from an original by Polan Banks, with whom he collaborated, may also make his professional reappearance therein. Right now Gaxton will limit himself to the co-scripting and direction.

Banks, former screenwriter and novelist, will produce. "Queen" is based on his unpublished novel, which may see publication coincidentally with the legit musical, which has lyrics by Ogden Nash and music by J. Fred Coots.

Banks' bankrolling calls for $250,000, of which 200G is in the till. Tom Kilpatrick is his general manager.

Colleges Remain Legit's White Hope, Sez Eaton

Greensboro, N.C., March 22.

The hope that remains for the American theatre is in the colleges, Walter Prichard Eaton, for more than 50 years a critic, teacher and playwright, declared here in opening the drama program of the Women's College Festival of the Arts.

The retired Yale professor decried the modern mechanizations of the stage, declaring that actually all that is needed is "two or three planks and emotion."

No matter how great a play reads, Eaton said, it fails if the actor fails. "All mechanical productions of art are substitutions," he said. Television drama, he declared, is spoiled by the interruptions of commercials.

Atlantic Beach Stock

The Capri Theatre, a stock operation, will preem this summer in Atlantic Beach, L. I., N. Y., under the production auspices of Helen Waren, Nina Graboi and Stanley Waren. Season, which will run 10 weeks, is skedded to begin June 28, with Waren directing.

House will employ a star policy, with a permanent resident cast. Waren, incidentally, was director at the Cragsmoor (N. Y.) Summer Theatre for the past two years.

Tallu Feuding On Salary Slash?

Chicago, March 22.

Tallulah Bankhead and "Dear Charles" producers Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers have reportedly been feuding over demands that she take a salary slash. It's understood the star has been getting around $3,000 net after taxes, but has agreed to a straight $3,000 to keep the show running.

There have been rumors that the play may close next Saturday (26) if the actress refuses to take the requested cuts. According to the management, there's no closing schedule until June 18, when show winds up its tour in San Francisco, with Miss Bankhead moving to Las Vegas for a nitery engagement.

It's an Animal's Life On And Off Broadway This Season, Real & Fancied

Stanislavsky may wind up taking a back seat to Clyde Beatty. If this season's rash of animal roles continues, the possibility of a classroom-'o-zoo actor movement looms probable. However, it'll be a case of boning up on animal behavior for possible stage employment rather than a fondness for the jungle road companies.

Although live fauna have been used in several Main Stem productions this semester, a variety of animal roles for actors have been available on and off Broadway. Performers in lion, crocodile, kangaroo, ostrich and dog costumes were spotted in "Peter Pan." "Wayward Saint" also had an actor in lion skin, as does "Flowering Peach," while the off-Broadway revue, "Once Over Lightly," has a sketch in which three performers make like a dog, cat and squirrel.

Among the live animals on the boards this semester was a horse in "One Eye Closed" and a cat in "Southwest Corner." "Tonight in Samarkand" had a tiger cub who caught pneumonia and was unable to appear during the show's last week on Broadway. Cub didn't have an understudy and the role remained vacant.

Still to hit Broadway this season is a real monkey in "Inherit the Wind," which opens April 21 at the National Theatre. Not to be overlooked among the live animal contingent is the goat in the long-run "Teahouse of the August Moon." However, in this case there's little possibility of an actor moving in, since the goat has an understudy of the same breed.

Carolina 'Thunder' To Sound Off in June

Greensboro, N.C., March 22.

An original outdoor musical drama entitled "Thunder Over Carolina" will open a four-week run at Lincolnton, June 10, it was announced by the author, Charles W. Loveland, program director of WLON, Lincolnton.

The drama, depicting the battle of Ramsour's Mill there 175 years ago between Whigs and Tories, will have showings Friday, Saturday and Monday evenings, ending July 4.

Handy Hallow

Management of "Anastasia," currently at the Lyceum, N. Y., is keeping actor John Hallow active. At last Saturday's (19) matinee performance he subbed for Michael Strong and earlier in the week he went on for William Callan.

He's actually Hurd Hatfield's understudy.

Legit Bits

Tubthumper Bill Doll hit the jackpot with picture layouts and features on different clients in Life magazine running in succession for five of the last six weeks. These included "Anastasia," "Saint of Bleecker St.," "Plain And Fancy," Spike Jones and the Joel Sayre profile on Mike Todd.

Martin Schwartz, currently associate to Barry Hyams, leaves New York April 4 to travel ahead to "Kismet." . . Mary Ward is press representative at the Papermill (N. J.) Playhouse until she leaves for England on April 29 . . . Anne Sloper replacing Al Jones as company manager for "Plain And Fancy" during latter's illness. Jones is recuping at home after hospitalization and ought to be back in a couple of weeks.

St. John Terrell will package his production of "Three By Thurber," which had two Monday night only performances at the off-Broadway Theatre de Lys this season, for a strawhat tour next summer . . . "Tonight At Noel Coward's," a collection of Coward's songs, sketches and scenes from his plays, is slated for production next season by David Brooks . . . Howard Liebling's "The Porcelain Clay" is planned for off-Broadway production by a group tagged "Stage Society," with the venture capitalized at $8,500.

Arthur Sircom will direct the musicals at the Iroquois Amphitheatre, Louisville, next summer . . . Operation of Brooks Costume Co. is detailed in the April issues of Esquire mag in an article labelled "Glamour for Rent" . . . Solly Pernick, business agent of Theatrical Protective Union No. 1, chairmanning the Legitimate Theatre Group of the United Jewish Appeal's Motion Picture and Amusement Division.

Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa., kicks off its summer season May 13 with Kim Hunter, Biff McGuire and Jerome Cowan in "King of Hearts" . . . Music Circus, Lambertville, N. J., begins its seventh season June 4 with "Merry Widow" . . . Production staff for "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" includes Ben Rosenberg, company manager; Robert Downing, production stage manager; Daniel Broun, stage manager, and Richard Durham, assistant stage manager.

Correct gross on "Anastasia" for the week ending March 12 was $19,600 . . . Fairfax Burgher has exited the cast of "Lunatics and Lovers" to join "King and I" on the road, replacing Leon Shaw . . . Richard Aldrich returned from Florida last week and this month planes to Europe with Julius Fleischmann . . . Group 20 Players begins its third season of classic repertory at Wellesley (Mass.) College June 27, with a 10-week run skedded . . . Henry Duffy is anything but "late" or dead, as erratumed in a letter in last week's issue.

Gross for the two-week run of "Kind Lady," with Fay Bainter starred, at the Miller Theatre, Milwaukee, was a little over $12,700 on a potential capacity of $14,101.

Richard Collett, Swedish baritone who will play Emile de Becque in "South Pacific" at the City Center, N.Y., beginning May 4, will be featured on Ed Sullivan's CBS-TV'er Sunday, (27) in a tribute to Rodgers & Hammerstein.

Morton Da Costa took off last Monday (21) for a two-week vacation in Haiti . . . Lewis Harmon, who went into St. Luke's Hospital, N.Y., last Thursday (17) for surgery, is due to get out today (Wed.) . . . John Effrat planes to London next Sunday (27) after winding up jury duty Friday (25).

Anthony Buttitta, due back in New York April 4 aboard the Ile de France from Le Havre, has completed the manuscript of a new novel, "Bright Horizon," which he wrote during five months in Mallorca, off the coast of Spain. Following his N.Y. arrival, he'll plane to the Coast for another season with Edwin Lester's San Francisco Light Opera Co. . . . The Jay Gorney-Lionel Stander musical revue, "Meet the People-1955," is scheduled for New York production April 13 at the Cafe Theatre, formerly the Diamond Horseshoe nitery.

A $2,458 suit against John Carradine goes to trial today (Wed.) in the N. Y.'s First District Municipal Court. Action was instituted by director Peter Glenn and is for rent allegedly due on the N.Y. apartment that he leased to Carradine from Oct. 15, 1949 to Oct. 15, 1951.

Hollywood

Irwin Parnes will present the eighth annual International Folk Dance Festival Saturday (26) at Philharmonic Aud, L. A., narrated by Harlow Wilcox, radio-tv announcer . . . L. A. Civic Light Opera auditions dancers for "Kiss Me Kate," first presentation of season, tonight (Wed.), girl singers on Friday and boy singers on Saturday . . . Carthay Productions moved back opening of "Anniversary Waltz" from Easter to April 11 at Carthay Circle Theatre, L.A. . . . Dick Erdman set for one of leads in Stage Society's "Misalliance," opening April 27 in L. A. . . . Benay Venuta opens with Fernando Lamas and Arlene Dahl in "Liliom" at Sombrero Playhouse, Phoenix, March 28 . . . Rod Steiger contacted by Broadway producer Cheryl Crawford with a view to his making a musicomedy bow in "Reuben, Reuben," to be staged next fall from Marc Blitzstein's book, lyrics and music.

Chicago

Chicago Actors Club, which folded a couple years back, has been revived with new quarters in the Mike Fish Cafe. Vet actor Phil Lord; Ralph Bellamy, who has been starring in "Oh Men, Oh Women" at the Harris, and Sun-Times columnist Irv Kupcinet spearheaded the reactivation of the club . . . William Marshall has been signed to play the title role in Chicago Playwright Theatre's production of "Oedipus Rex" starting March 31 . . . Touring "Tea and Sympathy" plays a special matinee benefit March 31 for the Actors Fund . . . Pressagent Joe Flynn in Chicago advancing dancer Escudero's stand, which opens at the Great Northern Monday (28).

London

London, March 15.

Jack Weller's "Sailor Beware," by Philip King, broke the house record at the Strand Saturday (12). Previous record was held by Vernon Sylvaine's "Any Gentleman Please," done at this theatre in 1950. Weller has created another record for a West End manager. He gave the entire cast a raise in salary four days after show opened . . . Tom Arnold, who recently purchased (through Harry Foster) Richard Waring and Francis Essex's intimate revue, "Blame It On Adam," which was tried out at the Lindsey Theatre in January, has called in several writers to inject new items in the show before starting to cast it. Show is expected to go to the Ambassadors sometime in May . . . Peter Daubeney's presentation of Antonio and His Spanish Ballet has proved such a hit at the Palace that it is being transferred to the Saville, where it stays a further six weeks. After which George & Alfred Black's American show, "The Tender Trap," by Max Robert Paul, goes there, with cast including Brian Reece, Phil Brown and Geraldine McEwan. Early May is opening date.

After year's moneymaking run, George & Alfred Black's "Wedding in Paris" closes April 2, and immediately starts provincial tour, staying three to four weeks in each town. New show going in there two weeks later is Joseph Hayes' Broadway hit, "The Desperate Hours." Sigmund Miller, American playwright, is here to supervise the production of his play, "One Bright Day," which is being tried out at the Connaught Theatre, Worthing, April 18.

Paris Stock Company Guesting in Montreal

Montreal, March 22.

Le Theatre de Paris, the first French stock company of any calibre to play here in several years, is currently appearing at the Arcade Theatre. The cast, with few exceptions, is direct from Paris and most are reputable legiters with a few film headliners being used in leading roles. The stars are brought in every two weeks, as the shows change, to appear in the five plays being presented until April 7. Project is being bankrolled by Film France.

Idea is the brainchild of Eloi de Grandmont and Andre Roche, both familiar with legit. Pair took over the Arcade, a 755-seater in the east end of Montreal and are offering the series at a $2.50 top. Venture has produced some excellent stagecraft, but has failed to measure up to b.o. expectations.

First offering, "Le Captaine Smith" with Alexandre Rignault, was a opening choice, drew a general pan from critics and few customers.

Andre Clave has directed all shows, with decor by Francine Galliard-Risler.

'Tories' Win Almost Clean Sweep For Equity Membership Nominating Reps

Conservatives won a virtually clean sweep in the election of membership representatives to the nominating committee in the Actors Equity quarterly membership meet last week. Of the six reps chosen, five ran on the "Tory" ticket.

That gives the conservatives at least a five-to-four margin on the nine-member committee that will select the official slate for the annual election next June. With union's seven officers and 12 council members due to be elected, this sticks up as a blow to Equity's liberal forces, with prospects of a conservative regular ticket an odds-on favorite.

Quintet, considered conservative, are Lief Erickson, Peggy Wood, William Tabbert, Alexander Clark and David Orrick. Other membership rep, regarded as liberal, is John Kerr. The three council members of the committee previously selected are Lois Wilson, chairman, and John Emery and John Drew Devereaux. They're regarded as more or less middle-of-the-roaders.

Due to be elected next June are the union's president, four vice-presidents, treasurer and recording secretary, and 12 council mem-

Love and Peace Prevail Between Mpls.-St. Paul; 'Pajama' Going to Both

Minneapolis, March 22.

As result of the theatrical peace that has been brought about between the Twin Cities, "Pajama Game" will play both Minneapolis and St. Paul. "The Pajama Game" was originally booked for two weeks here, then cut to 10 days, then further reduced to seven days.

Bennie Berger, operator of the local Lyceum, prevailed upon the show to allot two of the finally-decided seven Minneapolis days to St. Paul, which was extremely eager to have it. Accordingly, show will play St. Paul May 2-3 and here only from May 4-8.

Formerly, all efforts were put forth to obtain Broadway legit offerings for Minneapolis exclusively, and these were largely successful. St. Paul was so resentful over the shows passing up the city that its newspapers refused ads for them and city officials and business leaders protested to influential New York theatrical folk. It was a case of theatrical war between the two towns.

Berger took over the Lyceum late last season and decided it would be to the best interests of all concerned for the two cities to cooperate in trying to bring more attractions here. Ed Furni, manager of the St. Paul Auditorium, was more than willing and St. Paul newspaper heads also approved.

In addition to "The Pajama Game," Berger also is voluntary giving up part of "The King and I" and "Kismet" time to St. Paul, although these shows, too, were originally intended for Minneapolis exclusively and would be sure sellouts at the Lyceum here for much longer engagements than can be assigned to it.

GUTHRIE IN STRATFORD TO START FEST PLANS

Stratford, Ont., March 22.

Tyrone Guthrie arrived here Saturday (19) to start work on the 1955 Shakespearean Festival, in which he will direct "The Merchant of Venice" and a revival of last year's "Oedipus Rex." Although rehearsals will not start until May, Guthrie has a drama school set up and a number of speaking engagements to fill.

His last production before leaving Europe was the new Sean O'Casey play, "The Bishop's Bonfire," which surprised everyone by failing to start riots in Dublin. After he gets the Festival rolling here, Guthrie will return to Britain to stage Thornton Wilder's "A Life in the Sun" at the Edinburgh Festival.

Michael Langham, the English director who will stage "Julius Caesar" here this summer, is in Toronto, where he is directing for the "Crest" repertory theatre.

Map Roadshow Tour For Corwin Lincoln Debate

Chicago, March 22.

Paramount Attractions, booking agency headquartered in Chicago, is planning a national roadshow tour of Norman Corwin's play, "Tonight! Lincoln vs. Douglas." An eight-month tour of one and two-night stands is planned for late September. Paramount is currently negotiating for several top name stars to play the leads and other prominent historical figures.

An itinerary of 235 separate engagements has been worked out for the roadshow and a $750,000 gross is hoped for.

73G Profit On N. Y. 'Rainmaker'

New York production of "Rainmaker," which closed last Feb. 12, made a $73,638 profit, according to a March 1 accounting. On the basis of the regular 50-50 split between backers and management, this gives the former a 50% profit on their $75,000 investment. Payoff, however, will be staggered, since the figure includes $67,500 in deferred income from the sale of the film rights to Hal Wallis and Joseph Hazen.

Coin from the picture deal is to be paid out at the rate of $22,500 per annum for three successive years beginning next year. According to an earlier accounting, production had already received $58,500 from the film sale. As of March 1 accounting, backers had been repaid their full contribution.

The Ethel Linder Reiner-Hone Abelson production dropped $2,316 during its last three weeks on Broadway, according to the statement, with closing expenses totalling another $6,344. Income included a $360 advance for German language legit rights and a $205 refund of sundry production costs. As of the March 1 report, balance of cash available was $5,730.

Additional income on the N. Richard Nash comedy is expected from other subsidiary rights and royalties from the touring edition of the show, which was financed as a new venture under the sole sponsorship of Miss Reiner. Geraldine Page, who starred in the Broadway production, is dittoing on the road.

Yorke-Savage Ready New Equity Barn in Toronto

Toronto, March 22.

New summer theatre setup, with partnership of Jack Yorke and Alan Savage, latter trans-Canada radio-television topper on the Cockfield-Brown advertising agency here, tees off May 16 with first showing in Canada of William Inge's "Picnic." On government's new decision to wipe out the 12½% amusement tax if legit casts are all-Canadian—but tax to apply on imported stars from the United States or Britain—"Picnic" cast has not been selected. But director will be Henry Kaplan, television director for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Tagged the Garden City Centre Theatre, the 423-seater is a modern, air-conditioned situation, complete with balcony, and will be run in conjunction with the Garden Centre Hotel, this having a motel, swimming pool and restaurant-bar. Theatrical venture will be run 100% Equity and scale will be $2.25 top.

Radio Serial to Reopen Bronx Yiddish House

The Elsmere Theatre, Bronx, N. Y., will resume Yiddish productions next month. House, dark since early last February, will reopen April 8 with Louis Freiman's dramatization of his latest Yiddish radio serial, "Eternal Bride." Rights to the play were acquired by Israel Rosenberg, Elsmere actor-director.

Presentation, with music by Philip Laskefsky, will be given nightly for an indefinite run, with Saturday and Sunday matinees.

Tryout to Oblivion

Attorney L. Arnold Weissberger recently sent an unproduced legit script, authored by one of his clients, to playwright Jean Kerr, with the suggestion that she might be interested in adapting it as the book for a musical show.

A week or so later he received it back with a polite but definite note of refusal. "I just don't like fantasies," Mrs. Kerr wrote. "I'd be afraid that any fantasy that opens in Heaven would close in New Haven."

Bendix to Top New 'Caine' Dixie Tour as Paul Douglas' Sub Following 'Incident'

Hollywood, March 22.

Paul Gregory has formed a new "Caine Mutiny Courtmartial" company to pick up dates previously cancelled when he disbanded a former troupe of which Paul Douglas was a member. Starts a seven-week tour of the South April 11, at Amarillo, Tex. William Bendix is taking over the former Douglas part as Captain Queeg; Robert Lowery as Greenwald, and a newcomer discovered by Gregory named Jim Bumgarner as Lt. Maryk.

Original Southern trek was cancelled following alleged slurs made on the South by Douglas, which stirred up quite a fuss. Douglas denied making the derogatory remarks.

STEVENS' ANGELING SPREADS OFF-STEM

A frequent investor in Broadway shows, producer-realtor Roger L. Stevens also spreads his backing to off-the-Stem productions. His latest contribution is a reported $1,850 investment in Theatre 12, which will operate at the Provincetown Playhouse in Greenwich Village this summer. Group has taken a five-month lease on the theatre beginning June 1.

Bert Greene is producer of the operation, which is capitalized at $10,000. Opening bill will be "A Month in the Country." Outfit was active for three weeks last season at the Cherry Lane Theatre, also in the Village, with a production of Sartre's, "The Flies."

Proser Files Suit Over New Hope Inn Contract

Doyletown, Pa., March 22.

Monte Proser, dropped last fall as president and manager of the Playhouse Inn at New Hope, Pa., has filed suit here for $310,650 against the Inn and Ben Snyder, its treasurer. Proser says he has a contract for $250 a week and 10% of the profit and that Snyder persuaded him to sign a waiver, cancelling the profit-sharing clause, and promised to give him as much stock in the project as was then outstanding.

After he signed the waiver, Proser claims, Snyder became "cool and distant" and refused to issue the promised stock. He valued the stock at $250,000. Plaintiff also seeks $50,000 for "wrongful termination" of contract and $10,650 he says he laid out in endorsing loans at the establishment and buying stocks and bonds.

The directors said, when they fired Proser, that he had broken his contract by not spending enough time at the Inn, which was opened adjoining the Bucks Playhouse last spring.

Steiger-Crawford Talk 'Reuben' Musicomedebut

Los Angeles, March 22.

Rod Steiger and Broadway producer Cheryl Crawford are talking a deal for the actor to make his musicomedebut in "Reuben, Reuben," from the Marc Blitzstein book, lyrics and music, which Bobby Lewis will stage next fall.

Duo also is discussing the production of two other projects, including three one-act plays, "The Tenor," which Steiger adapted from the Franz Wedekind property, and in which he would star. Second is Leslie Stevens' "The Award," to star Eve Marie Saint, who appeared with Steiger in "On the Waterfront."

166% Gain For 'Camera' Backers

"I Am a Camera" paid another $24,000 dividend last month, bringing the total profit on the 1951-52 Gertrude Macy-Walter Starke production to $216,160. On the basis of the regular 50-50 split between management and backers, that represents a 166% profit for the latter on their $65,000 investment.

Distribution was made following an accounting last Feb. 15. According to the statement, British royalties totalled $7,453, while other royalties came to $1,017. Show's share of its $50,000 film sale accounted for another $18,000, bringing the total income since a prior May 1, '54 accounting to $26,470.

Deducted from that sum was 10% of the profits due John van Druten, who adapted the comedy-drama from Christopher Isherwood's "Berlin Stories." He also directed the play, both in the U. S. and London. After the van Druten lopoff, profit for the May 1, '54-Feb. 15, '55 period was $23,823. A $392 balance from the previous accounting brought the amount of cash available for distribution to $24,215, of which a $24,000 dividend was issued, leaving $215 available for future dispensation.

Broadway production of "Camera," with Julie Harris starred, opened Nov. 28, 1951, and ran for 261 performances at the extinct Empire prior to moving to the road in September, '52. West End edition, presented by Donald Albery, in association with play's Broadway producers, preemed March 12, '54, at the New Theatre, and wound up last Jan. 8.

Celluloid version, with Miss Harris repeating her starring assignment, was filmed recently in England.

No Bright Hopes For 'Misery' in London Bow

London, March 22.

Indie film producer Daniel M. Angel entered the legit arena last week when, in partnership with E. P. Clift, he presented "Misery Me!" by Denis Cannan at the Duchess Theatre.

Play, which preemed on Wednesday (16), was directed by Alastair Sim, and stars Yvonne Mitchell, George Cole and Clive Morton. A comedy about suicides, piece received lukewarm notices and has only modest hopes of survival.

Rev. Hartke Taking Vt. Group to O'Seas Bases

Burlington, Vt., March 22.

Players Inc., resident repertory company at St. Michael's Playhouse, which is returning here for its fifth season on the St. Michael's College campus, will begin an eight weeks' tour of Europe starting April 5.

Rev. Gilbert V. Hartke, founder of the Players, will be in charge of the 14 actors and actresses who will visit American Armed Forces installations under auspices of the Dept. of Defense. Company manager will be Joan Delehaunty, leading lady last summer.

Playwright Robert Anderson, his wife, Phyllis Anderson and Music Corp. of America have been vindicated by withdrawal of the $500,000 suit filed against them over authorship of Anderson's "Tea and Sympathy." Action, which didn't charge plagiarism, but clamed breach of agency function and agreement, and appropriation of ideas and material, was dropped in N. Y. Supreme Court last Friday (18) by the plaintiffs, Joseph Heller and Robert S. Mason. There was no cash settlement.

Heller and Mason, radio-tv writers and U. of Penn instructors, had charged that "Tea" was based on a scenario written by them and submitted to Mrs. Anderson, an MCA script agent, who was supposed to have arranged for a legit adaptation, which didn't materialize. They had alleged she turned the material over to her playwright-husband, who used it for "Tea."

Pair withdrew their complaint on the basis of pre-trial testimony of Anderson and others and after reading a prior version of "Tea," penned by Anderson in 1948, four years before they had written their scenario, labelled "The Time for Trial."

Plaintiffs' attorney stated that after the plaintiffs had read the pre-trial testimony of Anderson and others and had read a prior version of "Tea And Sympathy" written by Anderson four years before they had written their scenario, the plaintiffs were convinced that "Tea And Sympathy" was an original work by Anderson and that for that reason there was no basis for proceeding with the case. Anderson, through his attorney, acknowledged the good faith of the plaintiffs in originally filing the lawsuit and in dropping it after they had learned of the above facts.

Attorney for the plaintiffs was Rudolph Halley, while Edward E. Colton represented the Andersons.

Central City Opera Gets Control of Play in 10G Denver Post Contest

Denver, March 22.

The Denver Post is sponsoring a $10,000 original play contest, with the Central City, Col., Opera House Assn. getting full control of the winning property. Both the Post and Opera House will have the right to present play at any time in Central City or Denver without payment of royalties. However, if produced elsewhere in any medium, royalties set by the Opera House will be charged, with income split equally between the playwright and the Opera House.

Plays submitted have to be based on the discovery of gold in Colorado in 1858. Winning entry will be produced at the Central City Festival in 1958, centennial year of the gold discovery and the founding of Denver. Contest is open to amateur and professionals and will run until June 1, 1957.

Entries will be judged by New York Daily News drama critic John Chapman, legit producer Cheryl Crawford, legit-film producer Paul Gregory, radio-tv scripter Ben Draper and Chester M. Alter, U. of Denver's Chancellor.

LUCILLE LORTEL TAKING OVER THEATRE DE LYS

N. Y.'s Theatre de Lys, major off-Broadway outlet, will switch ownership next May. Taking over operation of the theatre at that time will be Lucille Lortel, founder-director of the Westport (Conn.) White Barn Theatre, a strawhat venture. Property was given to her last year by her husband Louis Schweitzer, who purchased the house from Ralph N. Voohris.

Miss Lortel's actual takeover was delayed because of a prior reptal commitment to John Post, who's been booking shows into the theatre since 1953. New owner intends to pattern the operation after the Arts Theatre Club in London. She'll present her own productions and also lease out the house.

Ankles Aweigh

New Haven, March 19.

Howard Hoyt, Reginald Hammerstein, Fred F. Finklehoffe production of musical comedy in two acts (10 scenes). Stars Betty and Jane Kean, Sonny Tufts, Lew Parker; features Gabriel Dell, Thelma Carpenter, Mike Kallin, Betty George. Book by Guy Bolton and Eddie Davis; music, Sammy Fain; lyrics, Dan Shapiro; choreography, Tony Charmoli; scenery, George Jenkins; costumes, Miles White; vocal and orchestral arrangements, Don Walker; musical and choral director, Salvatore dell'Isola; dance music devised by Roger Adams; additional dance music by Donald Pippin; assistant to director, Edward Clarke Lilley; staged by Finklehoffe. At Shubert, New Haven, March 19, '55; $3.50 top.

Following a pre-Broadway shakedown cruise, with Boston and tentative Philly listed as ports of call, "Ankles Aweigh" should steam into Gotham in good shape and tie up at the Hellinger for extensive shore leave.

Preem shows plenty of rough edges and a half-hour span of overboard running time. However, there's a plenitude of okay material in the production's basic setup and it looks like only a matter of channeling it in the right direction.

Storywise, book reverts somewhat to the old style of musical recipe wherein a rather hackneyed tale serves mainly as a source of tune-and-dance cues. There is no integration of dialog and song, such as has been prevalent in past decade or so of musicals. Theme of the improbable situation of smuggling a femme on board a Navy plane carrier, with attendant frantic pursuit of a purloined code book, and the inevitable scene of sailors on shore leave frequenting a brothel, is hardly a Pulitzer prospect for originality, but it lends itself to laugh fodder in the burlesque skit manner. On occasion, comedy bits seem to have been tossed into the hopper strictly on their own, which is okay once the audience has brushed off the story per se.

In the songsmith department, "Nothing at All," "Kiss Me and Kill Me With Love," "Headin' for the Bottom" and "His and Hers" sound headed for the pop acceptance. "Honeymoon" gets delightful treatment by lovely femme charmers backgrounding a rendition by Betty Kean. There are chuckles in "Old Fashioned Mothers" and "Here's to Dear Old Us." "Ready Cash," with sumptuous scenic support, makes a class opener for stanza two. Salvatore dell'Isola's contribution as master of the baton is a noteworthy one.

Choreography is topdrawer stuff, especially in its execution. Heavy emphasis on gymnastic gyrations has a telling effect, and the jet pace lifts terps to a knockout classification.

Betty and Jane Kean are on a treadmill binge that keeps them jumping throughout a good share of the proceedings. They sing, dance, mimic, chatter, and in general deliver a full package of entertainment knicknacks. In brief, they click.

Sonny Tufts comes through in a sort of diamond-in-the-rough way. As a good-natured lummox, he registers okay. Lew Parker (taking over the original Myron McCormick assignment at comparatively short notice) and Gabriel Dell establish themselves as a good comedy team. Good featured support is turned in by Thelma Carpenter, ace vocalizing brothel madam; Mike Kellin, an efficient male heavy, and Betty George, his bustily attractive counterpart. Ray Mason adds a pleasant "Festa" vocal; Hank Brunjes and Skeet Guenther team well with principals and girls in hoofing a "Walk Like a Sailor" routine. Mark Allen and Will Hussung fill Naval officer roles satisfactorily; and there's a fresh, youthful ensemble of femme pipperinos whose chirping-terping rates with the best.

Colorfully mounted settings, and extravagant costuming, provide visual treats. Fred Finklehoffe's staging has produced a prime requisite of a musical of this nature—speed. Bone.

Champagne Complex

Wilmington, March 16.

Gayle Stine production of comedy in three acts by Leslie Stevens. Costars Donald Cook, Polly Bergen, John Dall. Directed by Michael Gordon; production designed by Charles Elson. At Playhouse, Wilmington, Del., March 16, '55; $3.85 top.

Hellmes Bell Harper	John Dall
Allyn Macy	Polly Bergen
Carter Bowen	Donald Cook

This new Leslie Stevens comedy should find little trouble in making the grade on Broadway. It's witty and fast-moving and contains enough hilarious moments to disguise the thinness of plot and a tendency to be overly cute at times.

However, the basic ingredients for a laugh show are in evidence, and the combination of goofy situations, sparkling dialog and ace performances draw solid audience reaction.

It's grade-A spoofing, with the emphasis on sophisticated nonsense. The slight plot revolves around a career girl whose habit of discarding her clothes under the influence of champagne is disconcerting to her fiance, a stuffy business executive. He calls in his psychiatrist uncle to set her straight and things go merrily on from there.

With only three in the cast, it's up to the actors involved to keep things moving top speed. The role of the bewildered psychiatrist is tailor-made for Donald Cook, a past master of the double take. He milks every line and situation for maximum comedy effect, especially the scenes wherein he psychoanalyzes the heroine.

Polly Bergen, tv entertainer, displays genuine talent as a comedienne in the lone femme role. She brings just the right touch of wackiness to the role, whether she is fondling her dog or dumbfounding her fiance and doctor with her weird behavior and feminine viewpoints. Miss Bergen's striptease scenes add a bright touch to the proceedings.

John Dall holds his own in fast company as the fiance. He has his share of laugh lines, in addition to serving as a foil for the shenanigans of uncle and fiancee.

The swift pace from opening curtain to the smash finale is a tribute to Michael Gordon's direction. Charles Elson designed the tasteful single living room set.

"The Champagne Suite," composed especially for the show by Jerry Stevens, is featured between the acts.

Miss Bergen's understudy, Monica Lovett, filled her role at the Saturday night (19) performance. Klep.

Editor, VARIETY:

Once again I come to you with the request that stage managers be included in the credits that VARIETY publishes at the top of its reviews of plays.

VARIETY is the weekly of show biz and of show people; and the contribution of stage managers to the theatre should not be ignored, when every extra and walk-on is listed.

Of course at this time I am particularly aware of the effort required of a stage manager; but this is an old crusade of mine, and I hope you will give it consideration.

In theatre evolution, the s.m. was once a button-pusher: now he is a creative force in bringing a production to life and in maintaining its level during a run. I think the stage manager deserves a nod from the weekly that has always championed the rights of showfolk.

Off-B'way Shows

Once Over Lightly

Cuadro Productions presentation of revue in two acts. Direction, Stanley Prager; sketches, Melvyn Brooks, Ira Wallach, Philip Loeb, Zero Mostel; lyrics, Marshall Barer, Dean Fuller, Wallach, William Engvick; music, Fuller, Ralph Strain, Murray Grand, Alec Wilder; production design, Warwick Brown; choreography, Lee Becker; conductor, Peter Matz; musical arrangements, Matz; additional music, Samuel Matlovsky.

Cast: Zero Mostel, Sono Osato, Jack Gilford, Lee Becker, June Erickson, Joe Lautner, George Mills, Victor Reilly, Joe Sargent, Royce Wallace, Patricia Wilkes. At Barbizon-Plaza Theatre, N.Y., Feb. 15, '55; $4.60 top.

Off-Broadway has taken over a neglected phase of Main Stem activity. The smallseaters are putting on revues, of which there have been none on Broadway so far this season. Most recent of these song-and-sketch shows is "Once Over Lightly," which opened last week at the Barbizon-Plaza Theatre.

Present-day legit economics are one of the major factors attributed to the lack of Broadway revues. The negligible cost of off-Broadway production makes a gamble on such shows more feasible. However, the payoff is still dependent on quality material. The current Barbizon-Plaza tenant doesn't meet that requirement.

Show's sketches and lyrics are generally mediocre. Production has some okay music, while the performers for the most part are more impressive than their material. This is especially notable as concerns Zero Mostel and Jack Gilford who, with Sono Osato, head the talent lineup. All three have Broadway credits, as do most of the other cast members. Gilford, incidentally, is becoming an off-Broadway regular, having appeared last season in "World of Sholom Aleichem" and earlier this semester in "Passion of Gross."

Mostel and Gilford, the show's comics, are completely opposite types. Former uses a brash approach, while latter delivers in a meek manner. Mostel shows up best in a skit labelled "Foreign Affairs," while Gilford kills a good bit as an orch conductor with some lowbrow actions.

Production's top segment is Miss Osato's terp interpretation of "Peter Pan." Dancer also portrays a cat in a weak second-act entry with convincing feline grace. In this guise she appears opposite Mostel and Gilford, who are amateurishly and ineffectually garbed as a dog and a squirrel respectively.

June Ericson and Lee Becker show up well in the vocal and dance departments, respectively, while Patricia Wilkes demonstrates a stage savvy in both comedy and song situations. Jess.

The Miser

Russell-Farrow Productions Co. (in association with Cy Metrick) presentation of comedy in two acts (six scenes) by Moliere, English version by Louis Jergan. Stars Maurice Schwartz. Direction, Schwartz; scenery, Sam Leve; costumes, Ruth Morley; musical direction, Emanuel Fleischman. At Downtown National, N.Y., March 17, '55; $3.95-$3.45 top.

Cast: Joan Copeland, Douglas Watson, Martin Brooks, Fred Vogel, Maurice Schwartz, Farrell Pelly, Betty Garde, Lulu Belle Clarke, Nat Burns, Roger Hamilton, Alan Rich, Sheila Copelan, Michael Tolan.

Maurice Schwartz isn't feathering his cap at the Downtown National Theatre, where he's director-star of a three-play series. The vet Yiddish actor-producer-director has been up to bat twice, first with Sholom Aleichem's "The Grass Is Always Greener" and now with Moliere's "The Miser."

"Grass" was a weak opener. The Moliere revival is an even weaker followup. As burlesqued at the National, "The Miser" is dull, lacking in humor and amateurish in performance. On the last count, Schwartz's direction is a contributing factor. In an attempt to guarantee laughs, he's gagged up the performances, but to no avail. Louise Jergan's English translation doesn't do the trick either.

Only in the show's final sequence is there a flash of humor. It's strictly a farcical bit in which a whole family is reunited after years of separation and all the play's problems are solved in one fell swoop. The comedy here stems from the ridiculousness of the situation and not from any sweeping gestures, deformed characters or other similar pitches for laughs as employed in this production.

Besides Schwartz, who plays the title character, other major roles are handled by Joan Copeland and Martin Brooks, both holdovers from "Grass." Also importantly cast are Douglas Watson, Betty Garde, Fred Vogel, Nat Burns and Sheila Copelan. The acting, however, is generally undistinguished, with Miss Garde registering as one of the more agreeable performers.

Sam Leve has provided an okay setting. Jess.

(Closed last Sunday (20) after six performances.)

Play Abroad

My Three Angels

Glasgow, March 18.

H. M. Tennent Ltd. and George & Alfred Black (by arrangement with Saint Subber, Rita Allen and Archie Thomson) presentation of comedy by Sam and Bella Spewack, from the French play, "Cuisine des Anges," by Albert Husson. Stars Ronald Shiner, Nigel Stock, George Rose. Directed by Wallace Douglas. Decor, Rolf Gerard. At King's Theatre, Glasgow, March 14, '55; $1.30 top.

Cast: Cyril Luckham, Jane Aird, Patience Collier, Lucy Young, Nigel Stock, George Rose, Ronald Shiner, Hugh Manning, Peter Barkworth, Clifford Elkin.

Ronald Shiner, English comedy actor, is cast as the lively, boisterous convict No. 3,011 in this new British production of the N. Y. play success. He has already clicked in the long-running "Worm's Eye View" in the United Kingdom, and looks set to add marquee name value to a mildly amusing comedy.

Shiner, with acute timing sense in comedy lines, shines brightly, along with Nigel Stock and George Rose as his fellow-convicts. The trio's thesping is topdrawer, and the play belongs to them. Yocks are not strong but steady and penetrating, with shafts of Gallic philosophy reflecting French origin of the play in attitude to life and love.

Rolf Gerard has achieved a good effect with his setting of a bamboo-built store and verandah. He secures a warm tropical effect via slick lighting, and offstage playing of a harmonica by Tommy Reilly (incidental music is by Leslie Bridgewater) adds to the atmosphere.

Cyril Luckham portrays the good-hearted but inefficient storekeeper satisfactorily. Jane Aird, Scot-born actress, is good as his femme, and Lucy Young as the young daughter with love problems. Patience Collier plays a know-what-she-wants visitor. Hugh Manning's villain is strong.

Gord.

bers, including 10 for full five-year terms, one as a four-year replacement and one as a one-year replacement.

Votes for the winning membership reps were as follows: Erickson (334), Miss Wood (331); Kerr (309), Tabbert (308), Clark (307) and Orrick (302). Other votes went to Patsy O'Shea (273), Pauline Myers (267), Sam Liff (262), Stanley Prager (259), Watson White (252) and Jane Hoffman (246). Of those six, all are considered liberal except Miss O'Shea, who's regarded as a conservative.

Although the slate selected by the nine-member committee will represent the "regular" ticket, Equity rules permit nomination of independent tickets by petition.

65% Turnout

Around 65% of the membership turned out for the quarterly meet which was held last Friday (18) at the Sheraton Astor Hotel, N. Y. Besides selecting the nominating committee, the membership rejected by an almost two-one vote a revised version of a previously rejected constitutional amendment. Measure, which the council was opposed to, required that all union contracts be subject to membership approval.

Membership also voted in favor of condemning the action of certain Equity and American Federation of Television and Radio Artists members in cooperating with and supplying information to Aware Inc., a private group claiming to be fighting the "Communist conspiracy in entertainment communications." Vote was 170 for the resolution, 60 opposed to it and 33 abstentions.

Proposed merger with Chorus Equity will be submitted at a special meet to be held at an as yet unspecified date.

HUROK SETS U. S. TOUR FOR OLD VIC IN 1956

London, March 15.

Prior to his recent return to New York, Sol Hurok closed the deal with the Old Vic Trust for a 25-week tour of the U. S. and Canada in the spring of 1956 by the full Old Vic company. Troupe will appear in a repertory of three Shakespearean plays to be chosen from the 1955-56 lineup.

Tour will embrace New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Toronto, Montreal and other key cities. The Old Vic cast for its 1955-56 season will be chosen later this year.

Hurok also set the details for a new coast-to-coast tour by the Sadler's Wells Ballet, to open next Sept. 11 with five weeks at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., with Margot Fonteyn in the "Sleeping Beauty." The terp tour will be for 12 to 15 weeks.

Among other Hurok importations to the U. S. will be the Comedie Francaise, which will be making its first North American visit with three plays from its repertory.

Chi Legit Biz Runs Spotty Again; Tallulah $19,100, Deborah 29G

Chicago, March 22.

Chi legit biz was spotty again last week although "Tea and Sympathy" scored a smart gain in its second week.

Only definite spring bookings are "The Rainmaker," Erlanger, April 11, for four weeks on subscription, and "The Tender Trap," Harris, April 12, for a run.

Estimates for Last Week

Dear Charles, Erlanger, (2d wk) ($5; 1,300) (Tallulah Bankhead). Almost $19,100 (previous week, $19,300).

King and I, Shubert, (17th wk) $5; 2,100) (Patricia Morison). Under $48,200 (previous week, $45,200); Yul Brynner exited for a film commitment, with understudy Leonard Graves replacing.

Oh Men, Oh Women, Harris, (15th wk) ($5; 1,000) (Ralph Bellamy). Nearly $14,400 (previous week, $13,500); folds Saturday (26).

South Pacific, Civic Opera, (2d wk) ($3.30; 3,600) (Iva Withers, Allen Gerrard). Almost $22,700 (previous week, $21,400); closed Saturday (19).

Tea and Sympathy, Blackstone, (2d wk) ($4.50; 1,500) (Deborah Kerr). Nearly $29,000 (previous week, $26,400.

'Honeys' $22,300 In Boston Loner

Boston, March 22.

With the legit field to itself, "The Honeys" wound its first week at the 1,200-seat Plymouth a virtual sellout nabbing almost $22,300. House is scaled at $3.85. Final week is current.

Lone newcomer this week is "Champagne Complex," which opened a two-week engagement at the Wilbur last night (Mon.). "Ankles Aweigh," slated to bow into the Shubert March 29 for two weeks, is reportedly creating lively advance b.o. activity.

'Rainmaker' Nice $16,800 For Its Second D.C. Week

Washington, March 22.

"The Rainmaker" drew almost $16,800 for its second and last week at the Shubert Theatre last week. House is currently dark but relights Monday (28) with a single week of "Pajama Tops."

The Escudero Spanish dance troupe, though whooped on by ecstatic reviews, grossed only $13,600 for its one-week stand at the National. Playing to a $3.30 top, the aging Escudero and his dancers proved to be strictly a carriage-trade attraction, and drew the bulk of their payees from the Spanish and Latin-American embassies here. "Seven Year Itch" opens next Tuesday (29) for four weeks at the National. Play has a big advance and will squeeze in a twilight matinee the first Friday to make up for missing an opening Monday performance.

'Dolls' $9,700 for Three

Daytona Beach, March 22.

"Guys and Dolls" took in over $9,700 in a three-day stand at the Peabody here last week from Tuesday (15) through Thursday (17).

Musical moved to the Bell Auditorium, Augusta, Friday (18) and the Memorial Auditorium, Macon, Saturday (19).

'Champagne' Bubbly 12G For Five in Wilmington

Wilmington, March 22.

"Champagne Complex," new Leslie Stevens comedy, chalked up a sturdy $12,000 gross in five performances March 16-19 in the 1,223-seat Playhouse here at a $3.55 top. Show was well received here, and absence of Polly Bergen from the cast Saturday night, due to a tv commitment in New York, failed to affect show's drawing power. Monica Lovett, Miss Bergen's understudy in the lone female role, took over for the evening performance.

Next show here has Martha Wright starring in a Romberg Song Festival April 26-27.

'Caine' Smash $15,600 (5), L.A.

Los Angeles, March 22.

Legit got a shot in the arm last week with "The Caine Mutiny Courtmartial" off to a smash start which looks to hold through its skedded eight-week run.

American Savoyards closed their slated eight-week season two weeks early due to poor business for their Gilbert & Sullivan repertoire at the Las Palmas Theatre, racking up only a very disappointing $21,559 for the five weekly offerings before repeating "The Mikado," the final show.

As usual, both "This Is Your Life, Mendel," seventh week, and "Finian's Rainbow," 12th, continued to show a profit.

Estimates for Last Week

Caine Mutiny Court Martial, Huntington Hartford (five performances) ($4.95-$4.40; 1,032) (Lloyd Nolan, John Hodiak, Barry Sullivan). Smash $15,600.

This Is Your Life, Mendel, Civic Playhouse (7th wk) ($3.30; 400) (Leo Fuchs). Good $4,000.

The Mikado, Las Palmas (six days) ($3.30; 400). Poor $4,100.

Finian's Rainbow, Hollywood Repertory (12th wk) ($3.30; 276) (Charles Davis). $1,700.

'Tops' Nabs About $13,500 In Three-Way Split Week

Toledo, March 22.

"Pajama Tops" nabbed around $13,500 in a three-way split last week. Twofer production played Shea's, Erie, Monday-Tuesday (14-15); Shea's, Ashtabula, O., Wednesday (16), and the State here Thursday-Saturday (17-19).

The Diana Barrymore starrer is on a two-stand split this week.

Booth 8G, St. Louis

St. Louis, March 22.

The American Theatre relit last night (Mon.), after a dark week, for a stanza of "The Tender Trap," with Kent Smith, K. T. Stevens and Russell Nype in the top roles. The piece is scaled to $3.36.

"The Vinegar Tree," with Shirley Booth as guester with the house stock cast, wound up its second and final week at the Empress Theatre with a fair $8,000. The house is dark currently.

'ITCH' OVER $18,000 ON 7 IN 3-WAY SPLIT

Kansas City, March 22.

"Seven Year Itch" got over $18,000 in a three-way, seven-performance split week. The Eddie Bracken starrer played the Memorial Hall, Salina, Kan., Monday (14); High School Auditorium, Topeka, Tuesday (15) and the Playhouse here Wednesday-Saturday (16-19).

Current week is company's last on the road, prior to switching with the original N. Y. edition of the show at the Fulton Theatre next Monday (28).

'Cat' $44,544, Philly, New House Record

Philadelphia, March 22.

Tennessee Williams' new drama, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," played to standees at every performance last week. Heavy advance sale plus solid rave notices had the second stanza virtually sold out before the week started. Heavy pull of tickets by the Playwrights Co., said to run 60 pairs a performance for visiting firemen, was a factor in holding down gross.

All legit houses are dark this week, but future bookings include March 28, "The Honeys," tryout, Walnut, two weeks, and March 31, "Inherit the Wind," tryout, two-and-a-half weeks, Forrest.

Estimate for Last Week

Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, Forrest (D) ($4.80; 1,760) (Barbara Bel Geddes, Burl Ives). This one was in from the teeoff setting new house record with $44,544.

'PAJAMA' SOCK $47,500 FOR 3D CLEVE. FRAME

Cleveland, March 22.

Road company of "Pajama Game" wrapped up a rip-roaring $47.500 on its third and final week at the Hanna with $5 top. Only the Wednesday matinees went under capacity figures in the 1,515-seat house.

With Fran Warren, Larry Douglas, Fran Warren and Pat Stanley heading cast, musical set a new record for three week runs here, with $45,000 the second week, and $46,000 the first.

'Cadillac' Hits Strong Pitt Finish, $21,300

Pittsburgh, March 22.

"Solid Gold Cadillac" finished strong last week at the Nixon after a so-so start and got $21,300, more than half of that coming in the final three performances. Comedy was presented here under subscription auspices of ATS-Theatre Guild and that gave it a substantial lift.

It looks like an early season at the Nixon this year. "Rainmaker" is current, then house will be dark for a week, reopening April 4 with "Pajama Game" for a fortnight engagement. After that, nothing is in sight except the two-day stand April 22-23 of the Janet Blair-Richard Eastham "Broadway Highlights."

B'way Up; 'Seed' $28,600, 'Hours' 27G 'Anastasia' $21,700, 'Lunatics' 25½G 'Fancy' $50,200, 'Boy Friend' $36,200

Broadway continued its upward swing last week. Biz was off for only a handful of entries, mostly musicals. Current lineup of shows includes six sellouts, the most recent being "Bus Stop" and "Silk Stockings." Others in that category are "Fanny," "Pajama Game," "Teahouse of the August Moon" and "Witness for the Prosecution."

There were no closings last week. Sole preem this week is "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof," opening tomorrow night (Thurs.).

Longhair Disk List Isn't Exhausted, Sez Col Exec, 'But We're Tiring It Out'

Question whether the multitude of recording companies will soon, or eventually, exhaust the classical repertoire—and hence the customers—pops up perennially, and in every conversation with a recording exec. According to David Oppenheim, director of the masterworks division at Columbia Records, the repertoire isn't being exhausted. "But we're tiring it out," he says.

Repetition of a composition in a catalog, and the saturation danger, he adds, are offset by technical advances in recent recordings, by new performers coming to the limelight, and by new audiences arising to buy these platters. Promotion also helps. "It's kind of chic to own a recent recording," Oppenheim states.

Repertoire is also helped by the fact that what was new, with limited appeal, a decade or two ago, is now more understood and more palatable to the general public. This furnishes some fresh material for disking.

As for Columbia itself, it goes its even way, re-recording the masters with top orchs and maestros, or putting out unusual, offbeat or modern stuff. Org will issue 12 to 15 modern music works this years as "prestige" rather than commercial disks. It has inked composer Igor Stravinsky to a new contract, to record all of his works under his own conductorship, including his new ballet, "Agon," due in the fall. Columbia will tie in with the Stravinsky Festival of the N. Y. City Ballet at City Center, N. Y., this autumn.

Beginning in the fall of '55 and running through '56, Columbia will mark the Mozart Bicentennial (composer was born Jan. 27, 1756) with many definitive works, according to Oppenheim. Sir Thomas Beecham, Bruno Walter, George Szell, Robert Casadesus, Rudolf Serkin, Joseph Szigeti and the Budapest Quartet, among others, will participate.

Columbia is also readying for release a new Albert Schweitzer Bach collection, recorded in the past year by the vet philosopher-doctor-musician, with his own annotations.

NCAC Suit Vs. Dutch Orch For 15G in 1950 Touring Snag Settled for $1,000

A $15,300 suit against the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, brought in N. Y. Supreme Court last October by the National Concert & Artists Corp., was settled out of court last week for $1,000.

Case came about when the Dutch orch visited the U. S. on a tour last fall, booked by Columbia Artists Mgt., NCAC's rival. NCAC claimed it had made arrangements for the Holland symph's tour in 1950, when negotiations were broken off, costing the bureau $15,300 in expenses. When the orch came here last fall, and NCAC entered suit, $10,000 was placed in escrow by Dutch authorities here unofficially to prevent any trouble with the tour.

The 1950 negotiations were carried on by Het Concertgebouw N. V., which ran the orch then as well as the hall where they play. Since then, in 1952, Het has quit the symph biz, sticking to its real estate, and the orch is a separate organization. It was the new org that set up the 1954 tour with Columbia.

N. Y. attorney Albert B. Gins, repping Het, offered $1,000 originally to settle the old claim, and held out successfully against several counter-offers to the settlement figure. McAloon & Hirschberg repped NCAC.

Amer. Opera Skeds Four, In Pairs, for 1955-56

The American Opera Society, which concluded its second annual subscription season last night (Tues.) at Town Hall, N. Y., with Monteverdi's "Coronation of Poppea," has set its schedule for the '55-'56 season. Outfit, headed by Allen Sven Oxenburg, as artistic director, and Arnold Gamson, as music director, will again do a series of four operas, in pairs, presenting them at Town Hall, preceded by a performance in Brooklyn or nearby. Herbert Barrett is presenting.

Town Hall dates are Nov. 8, Dec. 13, Jan. 10 and Feb. 21. Opener will probably be Cherubini's "Medea." Second is Purcell's "Dido And Aeneas," with Elena Nikolaidi. Third is Offenbach's "Perichole," with Jennie Tourel and Martial Singher. Last will be Bellini's "Puritani" or Mozart's "Abduction From The Seraglio."

Local Fund Drive Saves Can. Ballet's N.Y. Dates; May Walk Out With 6G

National Ballet of Canada is making its first N. Y. appearance this weekend, dancing at the Brooklyn Academy of Music Friday-Saturday evenings (25-26). Troupe, headquartered in Toronto, ventured on its first comprehensive tour this season to disappointing results, and almost didn't make the N. Y. stop.

First part of its tour, in Canadian cities, was successful, but takes in a few U. S. towns that followed were n.s.g. and troupe cut its tour short for lack of funds, and returned home. It might have had to cancel in Brooklyn too, but funds for the N. Y. trip were raised in part by the Canadian Dance Teachers Assn., with balance provided by the Cadillac Contracting & Development Ltd. of Toronto.

It's believed that about $10,000 had to be raised to insure transportation, hotels, etc. On the other hand, the Academy has had a nice advance on the Canadians, with about $4,000 already in the till 10 days before the event. Troupe is likely to walk out with $6,000 as its share, it's estimated, on the basis of the expected good houses.

Troupe of 34 dancers is headed by Celia Franca, as artistic director and lead dancer, and managed by Walter Homburger. It will present a full-length "Swan Lake" Friday night, and three works the next night, "Lilac Garden," "Offenbach in the Underworld" and "Barbara Allen." Latter two will be new to New York.

Israeli Symph Set For 60-Day European Tour

Edinburgh, March 22.

The Israeli Philharmonic Orchestra will visit here in June on a large-scale tour of Britain and seven other European countries.

In all, 46 concerts will be given in Denmark, Sweden, France, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium, Britain and Holland during an eight-week tour. Paul Kletzki and Paul Paray will be the conductors. Tour opens in Copenhagen May 3, and will end in Holland July 2.

The Israeli orch was launched 18 years ago by the late violinist, Bronislaw Huberman, to provide work for Jewish musicans persecuted by Nazi Germany. Half of the 85 musicans are still original members. Orch includes three women, one from Hungary, one from Poland and a third born in Tel-Aviv.

Concerto for Tap Dancer As Little Orch Highlight

The Little Orchestra Society, which finished its eighth season in Town Hall, N.Y., last week, has already mapped most of its '55-'56 schedule. Conductor Thomas Scherman plans a Mozart opening-concert in honor of the composer's bicentennial, and a season's closer with the rarely-done Schubert Mass in A Flat.

Arne's "Comus," a masque never played in N.Y.; an all-Ravel program featuring a concert version of the opera-ballet, "L'Enfant et les Sortileges," and the U.S. preem of a Christmas Cantata by the Chilean composer, Juan Orrego-Salas, are also skedded.

Also, and unique for Town Hall, Scherman will present a dance-concerto, with Danny Daniels as soloist in Morton Gould's Concerto For Tap Dancer And Orchestra.

Symph of Air Fools 'Em; 200G Season

Symphony of the Air, the ex-NBC Symphony that wouldn't quit when the web dropped it last year, finished its first season in N. Y. with its Kirsten Flagstad performance at Carnegie Hall last night (Tues.) Including eight tv stints ("Omnibus," NBC-TV Opera, etc.) and a few benefits, orch appeared publicly 24 times.

Starting with $250 in the kitty, the group (sans sponsor, subsidy or outside backing) earned over $200,000 for its players, and wound up with about $1,200 in the bank. Its opener, and a Goodman-Bernstein concert, plus two Flagstad dates, were sellouts, but an Ellington program was only fair, a Sibelius concert poor, and four modern American music programs badly attended.

Orch is playing in Miami April 3-4-5, at the invitation of a local civic group. Latter is trying to enlist support for moving the symph to Miami as a permanent setup, on a year-round basis. Guido Cantelli will conduct two and Izler Solomon one of the Miami concerts.

Following this, the orch is leaving April 28 for a seven-week tour of the Orient, mainly Japan. Impresario A. Strok is handling, but the State Dept., via ANTA's International Exchange Program, is guaranteeing deficits. Orch is mulling a summer festival, and hopes to continue in existence next year.

Longhair Disk Reviews

Tchaikovsky: Swan Lake (Mercury). Sumptuous reading of the original and complete score by the Minneapolis Symph under Antal Dorati. Onetime Ballet Russe maestro has a feeling for this music, and results are firstrate musically. Handsome de luxe set, with booklet, pix, etc., is a must.

Mendelssohn: Elijah (London) Dramatic, moving rendition of the w.k. oratorio by English artists and London Philharmonic under Josef Krips, who brings out some fine choral and orchestral ensemble effects. Leads, too, are clear-voiced, superior and appealing.

Brahms: German Requiem (Capitol). Long, somewhat drawn-out masterwork is however stately and quietly impressive, especially in this sober, compassionate performance by a Frankfurt orch and chorus under Georg Solti.

Brahms: Quartet No. 3, B Flat (Angel). Brahms' last quartet, a light, fragrant, warming work given a deft, well-integrated reading by the talented Quartetto Italiano.

Franck: Symphony in D Minor (RCA Victor). Forthright reading by the NBC Symph under Guido Cantelli that doesn't drag or sentimentalize.

Beecham Plays Wagner (Columbia). Sir Thomas Beecham and the Royal Philharmonic in choice, expressive excerpts from "Meistersinger" and "Gotterdammerung," the Good Friday Spell and "Flying Dutchman" Overture.

Spirituals (Westminster). Mezzo-soprano Lucretia West sings about 18 varied Negro folk songs in attractive arrangements, using a rich, expressive voice and singing with beautiful simplicity. "I Want Jesus To Walk With Me," for instance, is very affecting. "Ol' Time Religion" has an unusual, intriguing accomp. Choice disk.

A Flagstad Saga

Trade talk this week has centered on the two appearances of Kirsten Flagstad with the Symphony of the Air (ex-NBC Symphony) in N.Y.'s Carnegie Hall Sunday (20) and last night (Tues.). Former Met Opera soprano, now living in Norway, came out of retirement to appear with the orch, as her bit towards keeping the symph organization alive. She not only contributed her services for both concerts, but got no expenses or other remuneration from the group. She paid her own passage. At a $7.50 top, orch grossed $14,750 Sunday, with 300 standees, and about $14,000 last night. Org, after paying musicians and other costs involved, should clear over $15,000 on the concerts.

The 59-year-old diva received rave reviews in Monday's papers, making all the more remarkable the fact that she hasn't sung in concert in over 16 months, or since she retired. She had never sung with the NBC Symph before, either, making her gesture to the orch all the more noteworthy. But she says that word of its efforts to keep going, after being dropped by NBC, has spread all through Europe, even to small hamlets in her native Norway.

Orch approached Mme. Flagstad's longtime accompanist and friend, conductor Edwin McArthur, last September to seek the diva's assistance on a benefit appearance. McArthur hesitated at first, knowing she had retired and didn't want to sing again. Mme. Flagstad, however, answered that she'd like to do it, but wanted to wait till December, when she'd be in N.Y., to see "if I can still sing." Soprano was coming to the U.S. to see her daughter, married to an American in Montana. She and McArthur ran through a program, decided she could do it, and the concert was on, with McArthur conducting.

Orch players last Saturday held a cocktail party after rehearsal and presented Mme. Flagstad with a plaque, electing her the first honorary member for life of their organization.

U.S. Steps Up Cultural War

is assisting them to complete tours, to extend bookings, or giving them additional aid to what is essentially their own private enterprises. The coin, according to Robert C. Schnitzer, sparkplug and hub of all this activity, is seed money, helping the cultural activities to spread and grow.

The $2,250,000 is to be expended in 15 months by the State Dept. and U. S. Information Agency. The State Dept. has called on the American National Theatre & Academy, through its International Exchange Program, to handle the details. Schnitzer resigned as general manager for Gilbert Miller to be g.m. for IEP on a fulltime basis.

Old Hands at the Biz

ANTA's IEP activity isn't new. It goes back to 1949, when ANTA sent a "Hamlet" company to Elsinore, Denmark. This was IEP's first largescale overseas action. Schnitzer was the troupe's general manager. It was a private venture, legit producer-angel Blevins Davis footing the bill.

In 1950, Ballet Theatre went to Europe. Tour involved a $100,000-plus loss. ANTA found the funds to underwrite the loss, again calling on Davis. Schnitzer was g.m. of this tour, too.

In 1951, IEP really got going. A Cultural Festival was set up in West Berlin to offset the effects of a huge Russ Youth Rally in East Berlin. Schnitzer organized U. S. participation, which included "Oklahoma" and "Medea" companies, Hall Johnson Choir, Juilliard Quartet and Angna Enters. The Hall Johnson Choir also toured West Germany. The Army's HICOG (High Commission of Germany) financed the whole venture. Schnitzer didn't use up all the funds, 18% of the allotment being turned back.

The 1952 Berlin Festival saw U. S. participation repeated, still on HICOG funds, with "Porgy and Bess," N. Y. City Ballet, Eugene Ormandy, Astrid Varnay and Polyna Stoska presented. Schnitzer took "Porgy" on from there to Vienna, and elsewhere. In 1953, with Ballet Theatre already in Europe, HICOG laid out a small sum to bring the troupe to the Berlin Festival. In 1954 there were no more funds for Berlin fest participation.

A Paris fest got U. S. participation in '52, privately-financed, when the Boston Symphony played at the 20th Century Masterpieces display and ANTA sent over "Four Saints in Three Acts."

State Dept. Mandate

This year, with the State Dept. getting a mandate (and funds), the U. S. has really been at it. ANTA, to keep its artistic nose clean, appointed three advisory panels to make sure the attractions going overseas measured up in quality. A music panel, for instance, includes such names as Olin Downes, William Schuman, Virgil Thomson; the dance panel has Lincoln Kirstein, Doris Humphrey, Emily Coleman, Walter Terry; the drama panel includes Alfred Lunt, Vinton Freedley, William Hawkins, among others. Schnitzer first gets panel approval on each venture, then a D. C. okay.

The Jose Limon modern dance troupe was sent to South America this winter for a month, appearing there during two important conferences. Last summer a Philadelphia Orch unit, then Blanche Thebom, and more recently Isaac Stern, were sent to Iceland — a sensitive spot cultivated industriously by the Russians.

"Porgy and Bess," overseas on its own, was picked up in Paris by IEP, where it was floundering; sent behind the Iron Curtain to Yugoslavia, and on to Italy (La Scala), Egypt, Greece and Israel. The "Porgy" venture had a three-way result in (1) the cultural and propaganda benefits, (2) keeping the troupe going by giving it this extra work, and (3) troupe now has another overseas tour lined up as result of the IEP project.

Although IEP won't release figures, it's understood that about $25,000 went into the Limon tour and around $200,000 into the "Porgy" venture.

America is participating in a Salute to France in Paris this May and June, when "Oklahoma," "Medea," "Skin of Our Teeth," the Philadelphia Orchestra and N. Y. City Ballet will be presented. Private funds raised through Robert Dowling will subsidize the project. But IEP is handling the Paris administration details then picking up the various attractions and getting them around Europe.

The Philly Orch is going beyond Paris by aid of IEP, which is shelling out about $50,000, the orch raising another 50G on its own to take up balance of the expected loss. Similarly, when the N. Y. Philharmonic goes overseas on a four-week tour this fall, the IEP will kick in with about $50,000, the orch raising 100G on its own for balance of the anticipated deficit.

Symphony of the Air (the ex-NBC Symphony) is going to the Far East for seven weeks in May-June, to Hawaii, Korea and Japan. The IEP is sustaining the major part of this venture, although the symph is being booked commercially in the Orient by impresario A. Strok. The IEP hopes to get military transportation for the orch, but it may cost IEP from $100,000 to $200,000 for the project.

Ballet Theatre is going to South America on a tour this summer. The IEP is joining in to cover the transportation, around $40,000. Incidentally, administrative costs for the IEP setup are less than 5%.

Schnitzer feels that the IEP program has thoroughly justified itself already, by reports coming back to the State Dept. or published in the newspapers relative to the success of the various troupes, "Porgy" especially. The Iceland concerts were very effective. Schnitzer also feels that there will be a continuing need for American cultural efforts abroad for quite some time, due to Russia's activities on what he calls "a fantastic wide scale." "But the Government should continue these efforts even if we love each other," he added.

Time Inc.'s New Coin High

Coin intake at Time Inc. in '54 totalled $178,155,775, the figure setting a new high for that company for the fifth consecutive year. It was an increase of approximately 5% from the previous year's $170,448,966. Net in '54 was $8,056,905 or $4.13 a share.

Company's expenses increased $10,578,000 by the inception of Sports Illustrated. Some of the company's profits were derived from film rentals and sales, and radio-tv broadcasting. Life had a $3,500,000 increase in revenue over '53.

114-Year-Old Eagle Suspends

The strike-bound, 114-year-old Brooklyn Eagle, only daily newspaper left in the borough, won't resume publication under its present management, publisher Frank D. Schroth insisted last week. He has put the publication up for sale. Schroth's decision not to resume publication was based on the Newspaper Guild strike of the newspaper, supported by other craft unions, which has shut it down for the past seven weeks. He has been interested in selling the newspaper for some time; he almost had a deal a year ago with the N. Y. Herald Tribune, but it fell through at the last minute.

Thus far, there are no prospective buyers, according to Schroth, but the Guild announced it had been approached by four potential buyers, one or two of them in the newspaper business in the vicinity of New York, for information regarding the value of the Eagle plant. Citizen groups in Brooklyn have been formed to try to establish a syndicate to take over the paper, but without success thus far. Meanwhile, negotiations with the Guild, via the State Mediation Board, apparently have come to a standstill since the board executive director, Arthur Stark, appeared convinced that Schroth is determined never to publish the paper again. Guild has filed a demand for arbitration with the American Arbitration Assn. over its $750,000 in severance pay and other monetary demands.

Schroth's decision hasn't left the other New York dailies napping, editorially or business-wise. Hearst's Journal-American already has expanded its Brooklyn news Brooklyn pictures. The World-Telegram & Sun also is publishing a daily Brooklyn section and hired several former Eagle staffers. It's anticipated that others with Brooklyn sections (News and Mirror) will do the same.

The News, meanwhile, lamented the loss of the Eagle editorially, captioning its March 12 comment "Unhappy Event." "The Brooklyn Eagle," it said, "for 114 years has been a superior newspaper, an influential and constructive citizen of that great borough, a forum or springboard for many a distinguished newspaperman and man of letters. It is a matter of deep regret to The News that the Eagle has at last felt compelled to discontinue publication."

N. Y. Times' Yalta Deal

New York Times set a publishing record and at the same time got a virtual exclusive last Thursday (17) in printing the entire text of the Yalta Conference record. The exclusive angle was marred by the Chicago Tribune, which got a 32-page section out for the final editions of its Thursday papers carrying the text of the conference, but the Tribune couldn't get the section into all copies of its final editions and therefore placed the special section on sale separately. On the other hand, The Times' 92-page paper (32 of them text) carried the text in all but early editions, which had only 20 of the 32 pages of the text.

Times, in a story the following day, related that Washington Bureau chief James (Scotty) Reston learned Monday night (14) that he probably could get copies of the text, since it had been removed from the top secret category and was being offered by the State Dept. to members of Congress. He conferred with the Times execs in New York, who decided it would have to be printed in full. Reston got the papers Tuesday, a day before the State Dept. released them. He started transmitting the text Tuesday night, continuing all day Wednesday, via the Times' leased wires, with at one time 18 teletype circuits and two phone circuits in use.

With 84 linotype machines at work, the text still wasn't set in time for the first edition Wednesday night. First edition went to press at 10:02 with 20 pages of the text set, in order to meet its train schedule. Rest of the text was set at 10:30, and 670,000 copies of the paper went out thereafter with the complete text. Three planes were chartered for special deliveries to Washington, and 18,000 additional papers were printed in anticipation of orders from schools.

Meanwhile, the Chi Tribune claimed credit for initiating Congressional pressure that caused the State Dept. to release the papers. Trib accused the State Dept. of planning to leak the text to "one favored eastern paper" (the Times), and claimed it got Illinois Republican Senator Everett Dirksen, who in turn got other legislators, to get a member of its Washington staff two copies and to press for general release. Trib man got the copies at 4 p.m., Chi time, and reached Chicago by plane at 7:35 p.m. Tribune published the text in unconventional style, pasting up newspaper-size photostats of the pages of the record and photoengraving them in full-page size.

Official record was released at 9 p.m. Wednesday, in time for wire service stories to the Thursday morning papers, but not in time for any other publication to carry the text.

N.Y.'s Comics Probe Winds

After winding up a three-year probe of sadism and obscenity in comic books this week, a committee of the N.Y. State Legislature recommended that a law be passed that would make the publication of "evil" comic books unlawful.

In a report to the Legislature, the committee stated that self-censorship in the comic book industry is a failure and that the industry's "seal of approval" is worthless.

Reader's Digest 960G Ads

Adless for 33 years, the Reader's Digest hit the stands yesterday (Tues.) with 32 pages of advertising in its April issue which added up to a fat $960,000 gross for the DeWitt Wallace publication. A notice to readers explains that the mag's no-ad policy of 33 years was sacrificed due to rising production costs. If this new source of income were not tapped, management notes, the Digest's 25c per copy price would have been upped. Price has been unchanged since the mag's founding in 1922.

It's estimated that on the basis of the April take the Digest will gross around $11,000,000 annually from its advertisers. These, incidentally, are the creme de la creme of American business. Such companies as Ford, American Telephone & Telegraph and Eastman Kodak plunked down $31,000 for four-color ads in the April issue. Besieged by would-be space buyers, Digest could afford to be choosy and it forthwith banned beer, liquor, tobacco and medicinal advertising.

But along with the hefty revenue accruing from abandonment of the longtime adless policy, there were certain disadvantages. For one thing the move caused the Digest to forfeit a low mail rate which the Postoffice grants to publications that print editorial content exclusively. Glossy coated stock for the ads, color and distribution add up to a bigger production bill. All things considered, however, that whopping $11,000,000 annual gross will go a long way toward offsetting the extra expense involved.

Scully Flips Publisher

Arrival of the first volume of the Scully saga entitled "Cross My Heart," an autobiog with spiritual overtones, in the Greenberg: Publisher menage, caught Jae Greenberg in midst of packing for a trip to Europe but editor's reaction was so sharp publisher dropped everything to read it before sailing. General view is they have the mugg nobody knew.

Greenberg has wanted this book for 20 years and once signed Scully, only to have Simon & Schuster step in with a prior claim. Both parties agreed to cancel the Greenberg contract, but when Kip Fadiman, then of S & S, balked on certain material being included as reflecting on perfection of the boy publishers, the S & S project was shelved too. Then in 1951 J. P. McEvoy signed with Henry Holt & Co. to do the Scully story. Mac took sick and that one was washed up a year ago. Meanwhile Greenberg, who knew the story he wanted, waited and finally got it.

First reaction from Elliott W. McDowell, Greenberg editor, ran: "Congratulations on a witty, delightful and deeply moving book. Every chapter of 'Cross My Heart' drew laughs, amazement, and even a tear or two. It's a terrific story and you've told it superbly."

Though planned as for one volume, publishers are now mulling about building it to two volumes, one for this fall and the other for the spring of 1956. They feel that Scully has discovered the lost pole to "Positive Thinking."

Meanwhile the mugg keeps tilting windmills in the desert, where they are hard to find. Just the same old mugg.

Book on Buffalo Bill

Dr. Elizabeth Jane Leonard and Mrs. Julia Cody Goodman, the oldest sister of William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, have done a biography of the showman under the title "Buffalo Bill: King of the Wild West," which Library Publishers is bringing out. It includes some rare family illustrations.

James W. Hoffman, a foremost scholar of western Americana and formerly on the University of Wisconsin faculty, edited and did the introduction. Dr. Leonard is the poet laureate of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Curtis Gross Dips

Although the Curtis Publishing Co. reached an alltime high in the number of magazines printed and distributed in 1954, gross operating income dipped to $173,366,019 from $174,773,718. The number of magazines manufactured totalled 376,000,000 copies, an increase of 2% over 1953.

The annual report noted that while 1954 earnings were lower than 1953—$4,516,682, or 52c a common share, as against $4,868,027, or 61c a share, in 1953—they were higher than for 1952.

W. D. Fuller, board chairman, and R. E. MacNeal, president, reported that "advertising lineage in 1954 failed to maintain 1953 levels because competition for advertising revenue and for media audiences continued to increase during the year, with consequently higher selling costs in both advertising and circulation."

CHATTER

Huntington Hartford Enterprises Inc. has named Dreyfus & DeLynn as New York and Los Angeles publicity reps.

Gordon Reid new weekly show biz columnist of Scottish Daily Mail in place of Philip Purser, switched to London end of journal.

Alfred Frankstein, music critic of the San Francisco Chronicle, has the lead article in the April issue of Dance Magazine, a salute to the San Francisco Ballet.

Publisher-panelist Bennett Cerf (Random House; "What's My Line?") to toastmaster the Peabody Radio-TV Awards at the Roosevelt Hotel, N. Y., April 20.

Pocket Magazines has added Pocket Celebrity Scrapbook to its string, a 64-page mag devoted to a single celebrity. Initialer covers Frank Sinatra. Next up is Rosemary Clooney.

Ex-President Harry S. Truman wrote a commentary on the new Columbia Records album, "The Confederacy," which is being published in the March 26 issue of the Saturday Review.

Coming up in April Mademoiselle is "Peanut Butter Sandwiches and Dreams," in which Geraldine Page pays tribute to her alma mater, Circles-in-the-Square, N.Y., and to the off-Broadway movement in general.

John Roeburt's next whodunit for Simon & Schuster is "The Cold Space." Jarrold's (London) has just published his previous chiller, "The Hollow Man." Roeburt authors "Barrie Craig, Confidential Investigator" (William Gargan) now in its fourth year on NBC radio.

Sheldon Meyer appointed an associate editor at Grosset & Dunlap, to assist managing editor Norman Hoss on adult nonfiction titles. He'll also edit the boys' series books. He was previously in editorial dept. of Funk & Wagnalls, in charge of manuscripts and worked on both adult and juvenile titles.

William Randolph Hearst Jr., who spoke at a civil luncheon arranged by The Albany Times-Union and the Variety Club, stayed at the Executive Mansion Sunday night as guest of Governor and Mrs. Averell Harriman. His associates on the recent trip to Moscow, Kingsbury Smith and Frank Conniff, also were Mansion guests.

Festival of Narrow Film In New York April 4-8 For Golden Reel Awards

The product of 16m filmmakers in 21 different categories, ranging from citizenship and government to education, history, industry and mental health, will compete for attention and prizes at the second American Film Assembly and Golden Reel Festival at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., April 4-8.

The first American Film Assembly was staged by the Film Council of America in Chicago last year. At that time, narrow-gaugers in 12 categories were screened and rated for Golden Reel awards.

Program this year is considerably more elaborate than last year's. Apart from a meet of film societies, which will explore the possibilities of federation, the Assembly also will feature a film users' workshop, post-screening discussions and one major session constituting a historical review of American society in, on and through film.

At the general opening session April 4, Bosley Crowther, film critic of the N.Y. Times, will speak on "The Role of the Sixteen Millimeter Film in American Society." This will be followed by a panel discussion. At the second general session on April 5, James Card, film curator for the George Eastman House in Rochester, will present "The Sixteen Millimeter Film in Historical Perspective," using materials from the film library of the Museum of Modern Art.

At the Golden Reel award banquet April 6, the keynoter will be Paul Rotha, head of the documentary department of the BBC's television service and a documentary film producer of renown. The banquet is planned as a tribute to makers of 16m pix.

Film Societies

mentary production is probably as high as ever, if not higher, the type of subject now being made differs from those that were turned out in the thirties and that tackled social and other problems. Recalled in this connection are "The Plow That Broke the Plains," "The River," etc.

Theatrical market for documentaries today has almost dried up with exhibs refusing to book such reelers. Example of a documentary series that went down before theatre indifference and mounting costs was The March of Time.

Prime purpose of the film societies is to study the history and artistic development of the celluloid medium. Types of films shown most often, in order of their popularity, include foreign features, U. S. films, documentaries, silent pix and experimental projects.

While more than half of today's 258 film societies were formed within the past two years, it's pointed out that the mortality rate among them is high. Federation is seen as strengthening the bonds between the groups and allowing a livelier interchange of pertinent information.

Abroad, in Canada, some 40 societies are in a federation and they share one another's program notes. In Britain, where there are some 255 societies, "Film," a mag devoted to their interests, went on sale last year and, with a printing of 13,000 copies, was sold out. In Scotland, the "Film Forum" works in close collaboration with local theatres which are used for screenings and in France the Cine Clubs are flourishing, according to Cecile Starr, N. Y. rep of the Film Council of America. Latter serves to promote the interests of the 16m film in the U. S. generally.

N. Y. Film Council Forum

"Film societies" and their programs, plans and problems are the topic today (Wed.) at an open meeting of the N. Y. Film Council at the Carnegie International Centre.

Speakers will be Mrs. Robert Osborn of the Salisbury, Conn., Film Society, and Armine T. Wilson, M.D., of Film Perspectives, the Alfred I. duPont Institute at Wilmington, Del. Cecile Starr will moderate.

Loos-Sale

dependents the market was wide open.

"Today, with the exception of Universal and Metro, every studio in the industry is financing and releasing independent production on almost every continent. And big names are travelling.

Paris As 6th Star

"'Gentlemen Marry Brunettes' cost a fraction over $2,000,000, with a cast headed by Jane Russell, Jeanne Crain, Alan Young, Scott Brady and Rudy Vallee, and shouldn't have been made anywhere but Paris. We used the city like a sixth star. Had it been made in Hollywood, it would have had to cost twice as much and would not have had the production values.

"Sure, Arthur Krim, Bob Benjamin and Max Youngstein were risking a lot of money, more than UA had ever put up before for an independent foreign production. But this was a calculated risk and based on the rise of importance of this kind of film-making in the countries of other currencies."

No single country appears to have the edge on this overseas production-financing plan, although England remains the traditional leader. A survey disclosed that Columbia is the leader in the field, with 22 out of 24 announced projects abroad being put together by indies. The exceptions are "The Gentle Wolfhound," a studio project now filming in Japan, and "Joseph and His Brethren," which exteriored in Egypt.

Warwick Productions has delivered three of 10 contracted films to Columbia, and a fourth, "Prize of Gold," has June release. The other six will be completed within the next 18 months. Mike Frankovich has six to deliver, including "Matador," starring Jose Ferrer. David Rose contracted for three, including the already-delivered "End of the Affair." Tyrone Power's Copa Productions has a pact for two, "Lorenzo the Magnificent," to be done in Rome, and "The Stalk," located in Rio de Janeiro.

Columbia's Leadership

Columbia, following the lead of UA which established Richard Condon as a publicity liaison in Europe for producers abroad, on April 1 is sending Walter Shenson, of its studio publicity dept., to London, to work also as a clearing house for all production publicity from Europe. Paramount also is reported about to make such an appointment.

United Artists, with "Brunettes" skedded for negative delivery in the States this week and the Katharine Hepburn starrer, "Summer Time," set for summer release, has also on its upcoming release schedule: Hecht-Lancaster's "Trapeze," and Joseph Mankiewicz' "Eyeless in Gaza" and "Pride and the Passion." Mankiewicz did "Barefoot Contessa," with UA financing.

Paramount's foreign schedule is entirely indie, including Ponti-de Laurentiis' "Mambo," "Ulysses" and "War and Peace." Other productions on which company is a financing-distributing partner are Alfred Hitchcock's "To Catch a Thief" and "The Man Who Knew Too Much;" C. B. DeMille's "The 10 Commandments" and Perlberg-Seaton's "The Bridges at Toko-Ri."

Sy Bartlett provides the lone indie entry at 20th-Fox with "That Lady," filmed in Spain. Studio sticks with Metro in the balance of its seven films in foreign production, all studio-produced.

Warners reverts to the indies with John Huston's "Moby Dick," Howard Hawks' "Land of the Pharaohs" and Leland Hayward's "Mister Roberts."

RKO All-Outside

RKO is all indie in its releases. Grouped here are Sol Lesser's "Quest for a Lost City," King Bros.' released "Carnival Story" and their upcoming "Boy and the Bull" and Edmund Grainger's "Treasure of Pancho Villa." Firm also purchased outright the African film, "Wakamba," from the Museum of Natural History.

In addition to easier financing from more major companies, according to Sale, "the independetns are beginning to make better distribution percentage deals on many foreign productions. This has come about because the producer who works abroad has a better knowledge of foreign sales and distribution than ever before. The day of 65% going to the distributor on foreign sales is past."

Broadway

New Broadway expression (coined by Earl Wilson): "He lived the life of Toots Shor."

Playwright Paul Vincent Carroll returned to London Saturday (19) on the Ile de France. Also sailing was actor Michael Lewis.

Brandon De Wilde reads "The Children's Bill of Rights" March 24 at Town Hall as part of benefit for National Nephroptosis Foundation. Disease is often fatal with kids.

Paul Gallico due in N. Y. this spring wearing a beard. U. S. Consulate at Zurich called him in for new passport pictures. Author lives in the Principality of Liechtenstein.

Songwriter L. Wolfe Gilbert and his brothers, vaudevillian Bobby Gilbert and video producer Ed Wolf, gathering in N. Y. this week to be with their critically-ill 88-year-old mother.

When Arthur L. Mayer and his wife visit Athens for the first time May 1, on their current European o.o., they have promised Spyros P. Skouras to "check up on the town where I was born."

Eddie Miller, ex-vauder and now voice teacher, leading the Friars' glee club, was omitted from last week's story on the roster of talent who participated at the Martin & Lewis testimonial dinner.

Paul Hartman's wife, Ann Buckles, currently touring with "The 5th Season" where its road tour opened this week in Detroit, flies to Paris in two months when the show folds to start a vidpix series based on the U.S. Government girls working abroad.

Leeds, the theatrical clothiers on West 46th St. (Max, "the boy genius of 46th St." and Harry, his pard), wiped out by fire. There was $30,000 coverage; two months ago they had cancelled an additional $25,000 policy. Building owner is rebuilding a new atelier for them—look up that "atelier" yourself.

Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, whose "Inherit The Wind" is slated to open on Broadway shortly, are making it a package deal by incorporating a theme song, of their own authorship, titled "Nobody Knows." It will be played as background music in the course of the play which is due to open April 21 at the National.

Billy Goodheart, one of the original three founders of MCA, with Jules C. Stein and the late Billy Stein, and now a practical farmer in Indiana, comes to New York periodically for business and pleasure. Last week he visited the Music Corp. of America offices and discovered (1) a staggering total of manpower due to vidpix sales, and (2), a situation where some of the people say "we don't know half the people here," due to the large selling force.

All Knew Duchin

teach him more about Chopin. (Iturbi also was a celebrated professor in Europe).

"I refused," Iturbi told Sidney, "and I explained why I wouldn't teach him Chopin. 'You are king in what you do,' I told him."'

On Sidney's recent trip to Gotham, he made an effort to locate the old Casino and hauled out his camera to snap a couple dozen shots of the present housing, as a guide for picture. The taxi driver was one of those who came up as a past associate of Duchin, when Sidney answered his query about all the picture-taking.

"Used to drive him every night," he insisted. "Wouldn't take any cab but mine, and sometimes I'd drive around all night, just talking."

A maid at the hotel where Sidney and his wife stopped in N. Y., also remembered Duchin, how he and his wife, Marjorie, would walk at night in Central Park. Duchin's old valet, Randolph, also was a veritable fount of background material during director's stay in the East. Averell Harriman, Governor of the State of New York, and a trustee of Duchin's estate, one of his closest friends and guardian of his son after his death in 1951, was still another anxious to assist, according to Sidney.

The city fathers of Brookline, Mass., have been in communication also with Sidney to make certain that any mention of Duchin's birthplace be their fair town, rather than Boston, where he was raised. Duchin was BORN there, fathers are emphatic, even though his parents moved away while he was still young.

That there can be no scarcity of anecdotal material in the scripting of the film is seen in the avalanche of incidents which have descended upon Sidney. There's the time The Chief held up departure at Albuquerque for 40 minutes when Duchin found a piano in the station and started to play; the part Duchin played in the Russian exchange of prisoners in the Orient after World War II, when his piano-playing led to a Russian officer throwing the technical book out the window and agreeing to their immediate release, as recorded by one letter to the director.

Tailors, waiters, maitre de's, confidence men, cops, all have come up with yarns about Duchin, and the material of every nature is still coming in, according to Sidney. After the picture comes out, he figures, he'll be on a lot of people's blacklist for not having used their suggestions.

No decision has been reached yet whether Duchin's recordings will be used as his music in picture, or whether someone will be selected to play them directly for the film. Sidney, too, has been deluged with recordings from people who claim, "I played just like Eddy."

Director himself is right in there with Duchin background material. "I used to take piano lessons from him," he confidfied.

Miami Clubs

big Saturday nights enabled the majority to keep going.

The hotels put the big bite in this year. The new Fountainebleau, in itself an attraction that equalled anything the clubs offered, kept its 500-seater well filled; the Saxony, despite going in for name dance-show units (Cugat, Ted Lewis, Dorsey Bros.), saw fair first-show biz but sparse seconds, much like the niteries, illustrating the fact that even in this result, the pub-crawling public is early-to-bed minded.

Smaller hotel cafes, such as the Sans Souci and the Nautilus, topped last year's business. The new Balmoral, after trying for some weeks with the smarter femme acts, gave up the show idea, but this week started a one-week policy featuring young talent (Rosette Shaw current) on a modest budget. The Empress Hotel has held to the same idea.

Then there's the plethora of one-nighters all along the oceanfront hotel string to add to club ops' headaches. The Isle De-Capri made a try with the booking for one week of Hope Hampton, who drew fair biz, then decided to return to their three-act policy with Gene Baylos holding over for his 10th week.

The Beachcomber is due to shutter following Miss Huttons' engagement, but there's a strong possibility that the biggery will reopen for the summer, with Louis Armstrong teeing off the season. Copa City's Weinger also is planning on a July return wth a popular-priced production-show format. The Fontainebleau is continuing its "get the best" policy while the Saxony is ready to inaugurate a line plus one act idea. The other hostels will hold to their one act-changed weekly plan.

But, if the competition was fierce this season, '55-'56 looks to be even tougher. The Eden-Roc, a 350-roomer being erected next to the Fontainebleau, will feature a cafe setup, as will the Seville, another 350-room edifice due to open Dec. 15. The in-the-know boys insist the clubs will have to go to a one-show nightly policy next year, looking for a downward adjustment in payoffs for the name and savings on overhead. The Beachcomber has been mentioned as already mulling such a change.

Juke Ops in Chi

some 15 years ago in opposition to ASCAP.

Another proposition before the juke ops is the formation of a music publishing firm which would be controlled by themselves. This firm, according to its proponents, would affiliate with both ASCAP and BMI and would get a cut of the overall licensing coin which could be rebated back to the juke ops. This plan has not been enthusiastically received by the juke ops since it implies a capitulation to the music licensing idea.

Another major focal point of interest at the MOA confab will be the spreading adoption of the 10c play. Most of the major companies will be pitching up EP paekaging programs to tie up with the dime spins (see separate story in music section).

while, toppers of both the clients and their agencies planed to the Coast over the weekend along with ABC officials to get a gander at first rushes of the "Mickey Mouse Club" footage already shot. Production on the series, which starts Oct. 3, is already in the works, since Disney will be shooting a total of 100 hours of programming on the show for next season, comprising 20 weeks' worth at five hours per week. Also on the agenda is the advertisers' commercial campaign, from on-the-air plugs which Disney will produce to merchandising efforts involving the Disney characters.

films in his entire life," Ratoff said. "One was 'Scarface' back in 1930 and the other 'The Merry Widow' with Lana Turner. Anyway, he's intrigued with picture making."

The Egyptian army cooperated to the hilt, making available rolling armor for the film, Ratoff related. Trouble came only when Egypt's ruling clique came to a parting of the ways and Naguib was forced out. Another handicap was that Ratoff didn't get to see any of the rushes until after the picture was finished.

Film features Sidney Chaplin, Alex D'Arcy, Kay Kendall and Marina Berti. Regelia has the Egyptian rights with Ratoff selling distribution rights for the rest of the world. Columbia is said to be interested. "Abdullah" bows in Egypt next week.

Ratoff's next pic, to be shot in N. Y., is "The Fifth Season" for United Artists release. Ratoff has tabbed comedian Phil Silver for the lead but latter is tied up under a tv film commitment with CBS. Producer expects to huddle with CBS topper William Paley on the matter.

ANTA Album Writes Stage History Despite Mixed B.O.; Key to Future?

By ARTHUR BRONSON

A good deal of legit history was written Monday night (28). A wondrous new market may have opened too—financially as well as artistically. For the first time a stage presentation (or excerpts from legit attractions and varied bits) was televized over closed-circuit from N. Y. to a "web" of filmhouses in 31 cities as far west as Frisco. Legit was being seen for the first time on Broadway and the stix simultaneously. It could prove a revolution as well as revelation for Broadway.

After a four-year lapse, an ANTA Album was staged again, this time from the Adelphi Theatre, N. Y., home of DuMont tv shows, in a one-shot, two-hour (no intermission) program starting at 10:30 p.m. The American National Theatre & Academy (ANTA), which undertook production of the show, and the Cooperative for American Remittances to Everywhere (CARE), which underwrote the estimated $250,000 cost of the production, were the co-sponsors and beneficiaries.

Potential attendance was about 80,000, with possible intake as much as $400,000. The Adelphi, where the first four rows of the orchestra were scaled at $100 a ticket, and balcony low at $3, had a capacity crowd. In the other cities (N. Y. had one other house, the RKO Fordham, in the Bronx), where ticket scale was $2 to $10, attendance was half the house, or less. (See separate story).

Novelty of the feature; fact that it wasn't a straight play or musical but a potpourri, and the late-hour

SALK SERUM SYMPOSIUM TO DOCS VIA CLOSED-TV

Physicians throughout the country will get a first-hand report via closed-circuit television on the results of the use of the Dr. Jonas E. Salk serum in combatting infantile paralysis. Telecast, being handled by Dumont, will be beamed to theatres, hotels, studios and medical auditoriums in 65 cities in the U. S. and Canada on April 12.

Occasion marks the first release of the report relating to tests in the use of Salk vaccine conducted by Dr. William Francis of the U. of Michigan. The telecast is being jointly sponsored by Ely Lilly & Co., a pharmaceutical firm, and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. It will originate from three points—the U. of Michigan where Dr. Francis will give his report, Indianapolis, home of the Lilly company, and Dumont's television center in New York.

Deal was set by Dumont's Morris Mayers, head of the web's closed-circuit department, and Medical Communications Inc., a division of the Paul Klempner advertising agency of Newark, N. J.

Video Wants Garbo, She Still Wants to Be Alone

In keeping with the current tv network philosophy that "nobody, but nobody is so big or so important that they can't be talked into a video deal," there's been a lot of jockeying and rivalry among the webs in recent weeks to snare Greta Garbo, at least for a one-shot.

Unsuccessful efforts were made last week to entice Miss Garbo to hand out some of the film Oscars on tonight's (Wed.) tv'ing of the Academy hoopla via NBC, but that's as far as it got.

A couple of weeks back Miss Garbo was closeted with CBS board chairman William S. Paley at the latter's office, with Paley sounding out the retired actress on her future plans—if any. Nothing came of that, either.

Disk Biz Likes The Continental Artists' Touch

The disk biz is a study in contrasts. At the same time that rock 'n' roll is one dominant tendency, there's also a definite wax trend to the Continental touch. Increasingly, English and European performers are getting the wax spotlight in the U. S.

Decca has been singularly successful in recent months with its European imports via the Deutsche Gramaphone tieup. From the latter label has come the songstress Caterina Valente and the Crazy

Acrobatic Team Dies When Stranded in Snow On Way to Quebec Date

Montreal, March 29.

Wallace & Gale, together with their six-year-old daughter, died of carbon monoxide poisoning in their snowbound automobile stranded during the storm on Saturday (26) while on their way to an engagement in Quebec. In private life they were Mr. and Mrs. John Robert. She was the former Edna Reiby.

The acrobatic team had concluded an engagement at the Seville Theatre, here, when they were caught in the blizzard near St. Etienne de Lauzon, across the river from their destination. Apparently, they had kept the motor

HIT HITLER BUT EXTOL MILITARY

After a period of some eight years during which the Germans more or less refused to look themselves in the face, German studios are returning to the multi-faceted subject of Hitler, the war and the whole tumultuous era that witnessed the nightmare and the destruction of the Nazis' "Thousand Year" Reich.

Observers in N. Y., who within recent weeks have seen screenings of at least three such imports—"The Devil's General," "The Last Bridge" and "Canaris"—have been impressed with this new German determination to put on the screen what, for the most part, are personally painful and politically embarassing subjects.

At the same time, indie importers whose job it'll be to sell these themes to American audiences, are somewhat concerned over their boxoffice appeal at this late date, even in the arties. For while they readily acknowledge that, particularly in this latest crop of Teutonic features, there is proof of the extent to which the Germans have improved the technical side of their postwar film productions, they're also aware that the slant of the stories is strictly a German one. Being designed primarily for German audiences, the pix frequently take a point of view that'll

TV One-Shot Puts 'Pan' Into Black

Scarlet Channels

A singer who has been prominently mentioned as one of Pat Ward's lads during the Jelke court proceedings in New York, has been capitalizing on his notoriety by references to his lovelife during his floorshows.

However, it became very unfunny last week, when a deal for a guestshot on a tele show was cancelled because of his connection with Miss Ward.

The Jelke trial may start off another volume of proscribed names in video and radio to be entitled "Scarlet Channels."

Par's TV Marriage Vows: To Produce 3 Colgate 'Comedy' Hours Per Month

Hollywood, March 29.

The parade of major picture studios to tv this week picked up another marcher when Paramount fell in line and raised the highest banner of them all. Under an arrangement with the William Esty agency for Colgate, now at inking stage, the studio will provide a full hour's tv entertainment three Sundays every month. This new format supplants the present "Comedy Hour" on NBC-TV next fall.

The most revolutionary of any studio-tv alliance to date, Par will make available its star roster, upcoming young players, properties, musical scores and clips of pictures both in release and in the preview stage.

Other major pic plants are making entries into video more gradually. Warners and 20th merely are to produce half-hour and hour subjects for tv from old properties with an occasional in-person appearance to plug current releases. Disney's ABC tieup involves only a small part of his studio operation; Columbia and Republic produce half-hour subjects both for sponsorship and the open market; two Culver City studios—Hal Roach and RKO Pathe—largely are rental plants but with Roach also rolling his own.

Par deal would call for the Esty agency to supervise production with a coordinating unit to be named, by Par. As a collary to this, the Ted Bates agency, currently producing the Colgate "Comedy Hour" series, will be replaced both this summer and in the fall on production supervision.

Still undecided is whether the "Comedy Hour" title will be retained. It's understood only few minor details remain to be ironed out before contracts are signed.

Colored, White Models At Schenectady Show

Schenectady, March 29.

Negro and white fashion models mingled here last week at the Van Curler Hotel. Colored beauties were led by Sara Lou Harris, who has her own radio program on WLIB, New York, and also does a vaudeville turn with her husband, Billy Bowser, as Hall & Bowser.

Schenectady Fashion Guild (a store) cooperated with the Everest Club, a Negro organization, in staging the mixed-models affair. Audience was mostly colored.

Elaine Drooz, women's program director at WPTR here, served as mistress of ceremonies for the fashion parade.

Judy May Bring Vaude Back To Winter Garden

New York's Winter Garden, which played bigtime vaude in the Al Jolson era when that singer performed on the runway of that house on its Sunday night showings, may again house a two-a-day vauder in the fall, if negotiations with Judy Garland come through. Miss Garland, who reinaugurated bigtime vaude at the Palace, N. Y., several seasons ago, had been dickering with that house as well, but Palace negotiations have been suspended, and talks with the Shuberts on the Winter Garden are now current.

Rev.'s Dry Lecture Holds Dakota Bistro Stage; Biz as Usual Follows

Minneapolis, March 29.

Eukens' night club, at Bismarck, N. D., copped nationwide publicity for itself with probably the most unique attraction in bistro history —a preacher's temperance lecture.

The Rev. Kyle Thurman, Kentucky evangelist, is conducting a revival campaign in Bismarck and the nitery allotted him 30 minutes to deliver a sermon to patrons on th evils of drink today.

Subject of his brew-blasting sermon, to which a full house listened attentively, was "When God Serves the Drinks." After he finished, there was "business as usual" and, according to the management, the bartenders were as busy as customarily.

COCA-COLA FRESHENS CHERRY BLOSSOMS

Washington, March 29.

This week's Cherry Blossom Festival is developing into a winging civic showmanship come-on. Stretched from the usual four days to six, with a two-day outdoor pageant expected to draw at least 50,000 spectators, if the weather is benign, Coca-Cola is picking up the tab for professional entertainers headed by Morton Downey. Heretofore, the Cherry Blossoms have blossomed to the accompaniment of amateurs of community quality.

Performers will include: Joan Roberts, of "Oklahoma" fame; magician Russell Swann; and comedy terpers, Helene & Howard. First segment of show will consist of a half-hour Air Force Symphony Orch concert.

Radio-tv cooperation has taken the form of plenty advance tub thumping, guest appearances and previews, etc. In addition, virtu-

Networks Facing $5,000,000 Rap On DST Extension; Hits All Show Biz

Bulk of the entertainment industry is worried about the effects of the extra month of New York daylight saving time starting the last Sunday in April and which will extend to the last month in October. Theatre operators and nitery bonifaces generally look forward to October as the period when the patrons start going out in full force. The extra daylight hours generally retard attendance in those spots. There's always a business drop when the extra hour of daylight starts and the earlier sunset at the close of the time switch is a signal for increased attendance in those fields.

However, the major rap of the extra daylight time will be borne by the radio and tele networks. Its already estimated that they'll take a $5,000,000 rap by the new legislation extending daylight hours through October.

The networks knew they would be in trouble from the start but

WB Owns 'Maltese' But Not 'Spade' Character, U.S. Supreme C't Rules

Washington, March 29.

After 25 years the caper of Sam Spade, the private eye, has finally reached terminus. The United States Supreme Court has refused to hear an appeal from Warner Bros. against lower court decisions which favored CBS, Dashiel Hammett and the Wildroot Hair Tonic Co.

Warners has long resisted the right of author Hammett, and the radio network, to make with the character of Sam Spade, the ungenteel detective in "The Maltese Falcon," a novel acquired in 1930. Creator and CBS long contended, and the Authors League of America cheered them on, that Sam Spade was a continuing character in many of Hammett's works and that in buying screen rights to one book Warners had no vested interest in the character.

Top court refusal to listen apparently ends all further chance of Warners making its theory stick. The decision is certain to be hailed as a great victory for private authors as well as private eyes.

Jessel Toastmastering Gould's Hospital Dinner

George Jessel is flying east to toastmaster the $100-a-plate annual dinner this Saturday (2) at the Waldorf-Astoria for the Beth David Hospital which industrialist Harry E. Gould, former owner of the Belasco and Lyceum Theatres is sparking. Gould, w.k. in show biz as a legit backer, annually takes over all arrangements for his pet charity. Sammy Davis Jr., the DeCastro Sisters, Sophie Tucker, Cardenas, Harry Hershfield, Dick Shawn, the Blackburn Twins and others will be in the show, emceeded by Jessel.

FILMS HIS OWN OPERATION

Irwin Gielgud Challenges Jim Moser of 'Medic' to Beat That!

Hollywood, March 29.

Screenwriter Irwin Gielgud won't just be able to talk about his operation—he'll be able to show it on film, and in color.

Gielgud, who underwent an operation on his Achilles heel at St. John's hospital, was star-producer of the venture, filming operation as a documentary. Archie Dalzell was cameraman and Tom Curtis directors, presumably with assists from Drs. D. H. Leventhal and David H. Harmon, performing the operation.

Writer plans to show the documentary before medical groups and will discuss operation after the screening, also will release it for the documentary market. Gielgud, who suffered injuries when involved in a traffic accident in Detroit Aug. 21, 1953, said he's not trying to outdo "Medic" for realism, but noted "Medic's" creator, Jim Moser, has yet to film his own operation. Sound track will be dubbed in on the Gielgud operation.

FISHER TEES PALLADIUM TO SOCK SEASON BOW

London, March 29.

The Palladium season opened in socko style Monday (28) with the show headlined by Eddie Fisher. Singer attained a terrific personal triumph not only on his own, but with some aid from his fiancee, Debbie Reynolds, who contributed the offstage vocal for "A Man Chases a Girl Until She Catches Him." Fisher's act is loaded with smash tunes delivered with mature showmanship and expressive singing.

George & Bert Bernard, record pantomimists, rose to new heights with a new turn, and comic Myles Bell, formerly with Christine Jorgensen, built to a strong reception. Negro tapsters McHarris & Dolores scored with a slick terping routine.

Others on the bill include Beverly Sisters, a British close harmony team; impressionist Eddie Arnold; Six Flying De Pauls, Aussie femme acro troupe; John & Suma Lamonte, jugglers; and the George Carden Dancers, new resident line at the Palladium comprising six males and 10 girls.

British Block Fields' London Palladium Date

After being okayed both by the British Musicians' Union and the American Federation of Musicians, the Irving Fields Trio can't keep its April 11 date at the Palladium, London, because the British Ministry of Labor refused the necessary permits. It was a two-week booking. The Fields Trio, just closing at the Park Sheraton Hotel, N. Y., was set as an act, and not as musicians, but the William Morris agency cleared it first with both national unions. The Palladium's Val Parnell personally got the OK from the British opposite to the AFM.

The Labor Ministry rejected the trio simply on the "foreign labor" principle.

Hearst Favors Exporting Yank Films to Soviet

Albany, March 29.

Because any cultural exchange between the U. S. and Russia is certain to tip the balance in our favor, "I think such exchanges should be encouraged within limits," William Randolph Hearst Jr. told a Times-Union and Variety Club sponsored luncheon here last week (21).

Frank Conniff editorial assistant to Hearst, told VARIETY after the luncheon that Hearst intended to recommend the export of American films to Russia. This, said Conniff for Hearst, would involve certain risks, but they were worth taking in the light of the likely impact and penetration of Hollywood pix on the Russians.

Hearst's assistant suggested that

WABD, Col. U In Educ'l TV Tie?

Columbia U. is probing a plan to utilize DuMont's N. Y. o&o during the morning hours for accredited educational programming. A meeting, described as "exploratory only," was held between Dean Louis Hacker, of the School of General Studies, and Ted Bergmann, managing factotum of the network.

The university and the video web were brought together by Max Wylie, story editor for the Ford Foundation Radio-TV Workshop and author of "Clear Channels." General aim of the meeting was to find out whether the school could take over WABD from about 8 ayem each day since the o&o doesn't go on the air until 11:30.

Wylie described the attitude of Bergmann as sympathetic to the proposal. However, both Wylie and Leon Levine, of the Columbia U. radio-tv department, were careful to point out that the powwow, last week, was the first with DuMont and that neither side had come to any definite decisions.

A move into the WABD channel by the school would constitute the first time in the N. Y. area, at least, that a commercial tv'er was used in part for bringing accredited courses to be paid for by enrolled viewers. Levine said that study by tv would be limited, but that points would probably go toward overall graduation credit.

JAIL LAWRENCE SHEA

Los Angeles, March 29.

Lawrence Shea, onetime ASCAP western division manager and board director of Hollywood Bowl, was sentenced to a prison term of one to 10 years on two grand theft charges growing out of a Beverly Hills model's charge that he bilked her of $13,000. He was also former manager of Bing's Things, owned by Bing Crosby Enterprises, which markets household items.

Before coming to the Coast, Shea was associated with Fred Waring.

Variety's' Old 'New Acts' File

A history of American show biz could practically be written from one source alone: the New Act files of VARIETY, a fact which becomes vividly evident as research proceeds for the special text which will commemorate our 50th Anniversery Edition at year's end. It's not saying anything that won't be sunclear when the time comes, but this Golden Jubilee Number is going to be a goldmine of rare and racy theatrical lore.

Some of the New Act notices were, in a phrase of a bygone era, "darbs." Joe Bigelow (Bige) caught a very nervous Walter Winchell playing B. F. Keith's Palace and billed him as a "toedancer." The late Jack Pulaski (Ibee) catching Fred Allen at the Colonial, N. Y., deplored the comic's use of a sign placed under a spotlight before his entrance reading: "Mr. Allen is deaf. If you care to laugh or applaud, please do so loudly."

Will Rogers was reviewed at the Casino in Philadelphia in 1906, doing his lariat act mounted on a horse. He was a much-reviewed turn in the decades which followed. Returning from Hollywood in 1921 Rogers quipped at the Winter Garden that "he had the same wife which he started with" in pictures. "They tell me there was never a Christian to make good in this house but I have been working for three years with Goldwyn and now speak the language."

On another occasion, the late Hardie Meakin, VARIETY's longtime rep in Washington, quoted Rogers as saying he hoped there would one day be a President "who can't play golf nor go on a weekend cruise that lasts from Thursday until the following Wednesday."

Sime Silverman, the founder-editor of this sheet, travelled to the Astoria Theatre in Long Island to catch Eddie Cantor in 1921. The nabe house was paying the comic $1,500. Sime commented that depite the wisecracks about doing the owner of the house (Mike Glynn) a favor, Cantor's motive was to break in new material. Excerpts:

"Cantor sang songs and told stories, some songs new, others not, but stories all new for vaudeville. He had the audience completely with him. . . .

"Eddie Cantor under his blackface has a galloping personality. When he's moving about, his magnetism increases, although there when standing still. His system of song delivery is movement, rushing, swinging arms and action, while the arms keep working when he stands quiet to talk. He tells a story as well as he sings a song, a rare combination. Perhaps because he picks carefully his story.

"Cohan, Cantor, Jolson, et al., should spend a season now and then in vaudeville to show how bad their imitators are.

"But it will be likely quite a while before vaudeville gets Cantor, if ever, for musical comedy can and will pay Cantor more than vaudeville could afford, on the theory that when a star can draw at $2.50 or $3 or more by himself, though extensively supported in a production, he can make more salary and create a much greater prestige than by headlining a bill on the vaudeville wage to a $1.50 scale.

"There's something romantic almost in a way in the rise of blackface comedians, or reputation, of current times, from their meagre start, whatever it was, to stardom, in an age that now seems to want them more than ever."

KIRK DOUGLAS A WOW IN IZZY DEMSKY ROLE

Albany, March 29.

Kirk Douglas, at a local Variety Club dinner-dance and in the presence of Mayor Erastus Corning, his 73-year-old mother, his five sisters, former teachers and friends, made a speech which is the talk of the area.

Speaking as "Izzy Demsky, the kid from nearby Amsterdam," Douglas sketched his early days of poverty and the gradual climb to success "with the loyal support of family, and the wise guidance of teachers in Amsterdam and at St. Lawrence University." He brought tears to the eyes of women, and cheers from the 300 diners. Demsky is his original name.

Douglas was "home" for two days to promote the opening of "Man Without a Star" at the Strand.

Phil Gerard, Milt Livingston and Paul Kamey, of the Universal publicity-exploitation staff, came here with a delegation of trade and lay press writers.

N. Y. Daily News' Chapman Readies O'Seas Theatre Tour at $1,875 Per Head

Tom Duffy, a Syracuse (N.Y.) travel agent, who is promoting the "John Chapman Theatre Tour of Europe" this summer, is going abroad in mid-April, in advance of the June-July junket which the N. Y. Daily News critic will mentor. Chapman's show stint will embrace London, Paris and Rome with possibly a Madrid (Rouben Mamoulian shooting there) and kindred film location detours.

Besides taking the 25 paying guests, at $1,875 per head, on a personally conducted tour of the key city legits, there will also be opportunities for sightseeing. This phase, however, will be handled by a professional tourist guide, under the Duffy agency's auspices. Part of the Rhine country, Naples, Milan (a possible slot at Las Scala) and Switzerland will be in the straight tourism orbit. Group is utilizing KLM (Dutch airline) services, all firstclass.

Mrs. Chapman will accompany her husband.

Sic Transit Gloria Free Press

Washington, March 29.

Filming of President Eisenhower's press conferences for use on television, hailed only recently as a great step forward for a free press, is turning out to have as many "bugs" as a new model airplane. For one thing, it's proving a headache and even a menace for some Washington correspondents, and is turning others into stage-struck hams.

Seems many top editors of newspapers around the nation watch the shows on tv at night. Some have been writing to their Washington correspondents along this line: "How come you don't attend the President's press conferences? I watched for you during the past two weeks on television, but I didn't see you or hear you ask a question. Are you loafing on the company's time?"

Certain editors demand that their correspondents ask questions to advertise the papers nationally. Explanation is that before a reporter asks a question, he must introduce himself and give the name of his paper or news service. The editors like the idea of having the dear old "Bluebell Bugle" or "Coraophills Chronicle" mentioned coast to coast on the air. It's free promotion at the expense of the networks.

The result is that the Presidential press conferences are becoming plagued with a host of silly questions, most of which are fortunately edited off radio and tv.

Finally, and this could become the worst of all, some of the newsmen themselves are becoming stagestruck to a real hambone degree. They stand in line, half an hour before the doors to the conference room open, so that they can scramble for preferred seats where they can be seen and heard.

They pop their questions and, that night, head for their radios and tv sets to find out whether they made the network bigtime.

CRASHING FILM GRAVY TRAIN

NICHOLSON FINDS PLAYDATES EASIER

America's independent exhibitors are now gradually overcoming their prejudice against indie-produced features and are starting to book them on reasonable terms, according to James Nicholson, American Releasing Corp. prexy, in N. Y. last week.

He said that, in the past, it was this exhibitor reluctance to give the indie product a chance that had deprived the small producer of the opportunity of breaking into the field at a time when the theatres themselves were raising a howl over product shortage.

Nicholson maintained that the formula pic, if properly planned as to title, type and story, still had an important place in the smaller houses even with moderate names. American Releasing, a new producing and producers-financing outfit that releases via states righters, will specialize in low budgeters that cost no more than $200,000 (in color), Nicholson stated. He said a tinted western on that basis could break even at around $500,000 and actually stood to gross up

20th to Splurge $100,000 on Its GE (Tint) Shows

With its General Electric deal for a one-hour filmed television show virtually settled, 20th-Fox is aiming at a one-a-month shot on each of the three networks, a 20th top exec disclosed in N. Y. this week (28). The GE programs likely will be slotted on alternate Wednesday nights on CBS.

The GE stanzas will be produced in color at $100,000 per show, which makes them the most expensive of any of the film company produced and/or planned packages to date. The Disneyland show runs to about $65,000, also in color. Each of the productions for GE will include a nine or ten minute segment designed to plug upcoming 20th product via "behind-the-scenes" footage and advance clips.

While the basic idea is to turn out three major shows on a once-a-month basis, this doesn't preclude different arrangements, such

WATCHING DENVER FOR 3-D B.O. PERK

Denver, March 29.

Are the prophets in the wrong and does 3-D still have a b.o. potential?

Universal execs aren't taking any bets, but they're keeping a close eye on the Paramount Theatre here where their "Revenge of the Creature" 3-Der is doing surprisingly good business.

This is the first 3-D release in a year and even at U they weren't too sanguine over its prospects. But the Denver b.o. showing has sales execs perking up and wondering. "Perhaps the public is again ready for something new," was one comment.

Final proof of whether or not 3-D has some unexpected life left in it will come this week when "Revenge" gets going in other theatres. Opens tomorrow (Wed.) at the Broadway-Capitol in Detroit as the first of three prerelease saturation kickoffs. Some 400 houses will play the film in April, some 200 of them in 3-D.

Month of May, when "Revenge" goes into general release, will give U an opportunity to test the appeal of a "horror" show. Exhibs are coupling "Revenge," which is available in 3-D and flat, with "Cult of the Cobra," also a May release.

Who-Gets-What: New Chapter

Have truly independent film producers (as distinct from indies releasing through major distributors) gotten a systematic brushoff from the motion picture exhibitor side of the American industry?

To the producers' complaint, "We couldn't break through," some theatremen have countered, "Say rather you couldn't make the kind of pictures that would break through." But the independents won't accept that answer, and indeed resent it as adding insult to injury. They assert that the issue is not quality of product but a combination of inertia, fear, caution and snobbery. The snobbery enters through exhibitor and circuit awe of the majors' prestige.

Currently Steve Broidy of Allied Artists is talking blunt talk. What he is saying, in part, is that for 10 years he's been trying to crash the party and not having too much success. Now he's got major capital at stake and major producer-directors on the line. Does this qualify him for membership in the "magic circle"? He wants to know.

While Broidy has his questions, James Nicholson of American Releasing Corp. has his cheerier footnotes (see separate lead-off) based upon better playdate response from exhibitors. Nicholson is not trying to crash the bigtime, as is Broidy, but rather seeks to get a break from the smaller situations which need, he argues, the kind of indie formula and low-budget product which assures them against product shortage.

Meanwhile circuit-operator Fred Schwartz finds he can't be a producer of films "on the side" and has elected to give up his administration duties as a theatre man to concentrate on getting those new DCA features rolling. Meanwhile, too, Hal Makelim's troubles in getting airborne, with exhibitor blessing, would make a novel, as long and as tortured as Tolstoy's "War and Peace."

In this "showdown of the independents" and in the simultaneous rising storm over home-toll television, the shape of things to come in the film industry is obviously being moulded.

Guild Deal; WB Gets $600,000 Against TV Gross

Deal between Warner Bros. and Guild Films for the group of shorts going to television calls for WB to receive an advance of $600,000 against 60% of the gross and 50% of the profits.

This is one of the films-to-tv arrangements pixites are eyeing in determining the value of properties in their vaults. Film companies are also watching the negotiations involving the possible sale of some of the old Pine-Thomas pictures released through Paramount. Price being talked is said to be $33,000 per picture.

Save Your Confederate Money, South Rises Anew In Upcoming Features

Hollywood, March 29.

Down South the college kids sing, "Save Your Confederate Money for the South Will Rise Again." Movie-wise, this seems to be the case. Hollywood is turning to Dixie for a handful of upcoming films, and already has completed several below the Mason-Dixon Line.

Hecht-Lancaster shot "The Kentuckian" for UA release in the Cumberland Gap area of the bluegrass state; "Kentucky Rifle" was filmed by indie producer Carl Hittleman in central Kentucky; and Warners aims at using the same region as the H-L pic for "Daniel Boone," conjectured as a Gary Cooper starrer.

Twentieth-Fox sent camera crews to Atlanta for "A Man Called Peter," locale of the yarn, and Hal Wallis took his "Rose Tattoo" troupe to Key West, Fla. The Walt Disney bunch carpet-bagged to Tennessee for three segments in the "Davey Crockett" tv series starring Fess Parker and Buddy Ebsen, and shortly will head back for four more.

Sam Bischoff and Dave Diamond are about to lens their "Phenix City" in that Alabama city, and RKO used the Marine Gardens in Florida for its "Underwater." Republic recently hopped to Bracketville, Tex., for "Texas Legionnaires," and part of "Cinerama Holiday" was backdropped in Oklahoma.

Texas is growing in popularity. George Stevens also will go there for Edna Ferber's "Giant," and Sam Katzman is readying "The Hquston Story" for shooting in that city. Katzman likewise shot "New Orleans Uncensored" in the Mardi Gras hamlet, a site stipulated by Tennessee Williams for any filming of his new play, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Elia Kazan, who directed, "Roof," and Paul Osborne have bought rights to an original story by novelist William Bradford, "The Florida Story," and will shoot film in the natural locale.

Kramer's Thesis: Big Terms, Big Gross, UA Destiny

Is United Artists prepared to move into the really bigtime? That is, send a film in the $10,000,000 domestic grossing class. The distributor and Stanley Kramer "are mutually faced with this challenge," maintains Kramer.

The indie producer and UA are aiming for the tall stakes with "Not as a Stranger," which has Robert Mitchum, Olivia de Havilland and Frank Sinatra in the leads. William J. Heineman, UA distribution v.p., and George J. Schaefer, Kramer's N. Y. associate, have set the exhib licensing terms at a 70-30 split, representing the highest in UA's history, Theatremen also

Ajax Will Reissue 'Champion' and 'Home of The Brave'

"Champion," Kirk Douglas starrer, and "Home of the Brave," starring Frank Lovejoy, both produced by Stanley Kramer in association with Robert Stillman, have been sold outright to Ajax Pictures Corp., headed by Robert M. Savini. All rights were taken by Savini in the deal that reportedly involved total price of $265,000.

"Champion" and "Brave" will be marketed by Savini first as theatrical reissues and this will be followed by tv distribution.

Jack Cummings' Own Co.

Hollywood, March 29.

Jack Cummings Enterprises Inc., has been established by the Metro producer. With approximately 18 months remaining of his Metro pact, Cummings is seeking release.

Failing this, will go into indie production after pact expires.

Unseasonable Cold Chills Biz; 'Girl' No. 1 Again, 'Untamed' 2d, 'Battle', 'Jungle', 'Horse' Next

Snow and unseasonable cold put the chill on film grosses in most key cities covered by VARIETY this week. Lack of fresh product, save for Metro's smash newcomer, "The Blackboard Jungle," also tended to keep prospective filmgoers by the hearthside. Number of houses is merely marking time with available pix awaiting the end of Lent before putting their best films forward.

Again the champ is "Country Girl" (Par). It wound up in the top spot three times previously this month. Runnerup is "Untamed" (20th) which held down third last week. "Battle Cry" (WB), showing fine stamina, nabs third place. It was second a week ago. "Blackboard Jungle" (M-G) has a firm hold on fourth by dint of terrific biz it's racking up in the few houses it's played.

"Chief Crazy Horse" (U) again is fifth followed by "Long Gray Line" (Col). Cinerama, a trade phenomenon, continues smash with Spring tourists in such keys as Washington and N. Y. pushing it into the capacity bracket. It rates seventh position this week. "Man Without a Star" (U), another newcomer, is finishing eighth followed by "Hit the Deck" (M-G) and "East of Eden" (WB), respectively.

Runnerup films are "Gate of Hell" (Indie) and "Underwater!" (RKO). "Hell," a Japanese import, is pleasing in Baltimore, solid in Chicago and big in Denver. "Underwater!", is neat in Chi although tending to dip in extended runs. "Racers" (20th) is virile in Minneapolis but dull in Chi.

Showing particular b.o. promise is "Doctor in the House" (Rep). This British import is good in L.A., lively in Philly, good in Denver and solid in San Francisco. "Glass Slipper" (M-G) is another likely contender by virtue of smash biz it's pulling at the Music Hall, N. Y., sole site it's played in keys covered by VARIETY.

"Conquest of Space" (Par) is average in Providence, ordinary in Cleveland and mild in Buffalo. "Bridges of Toko-ri" (Par) is light in Baltimore and hefty in Toronto.

"Revenge of the Creature" (U) is big in Denver. "White Feather" (20th) is okay in Cincinnati, mild in Boston and fair in Denver. "Camille" (M-G) (reissue) is light in Baltimore, fine in L.A. and good in San Francisco.

"Stranger on Horseback" (UA) is disappointing in its Portland, Ore., world preem but shapes firm in Frisco. "Purple Plain" (UA) looks to be heard from on basis of its hefty showing in Chi. "Big Combo" (AA), snappy in L.A., is mild in Buffalo.

BROIDY IN CANDID PLEA FOR DATES

With more than two weeks on the road behind him to sell the "new" Allied Artists to exhibitors, Steve Broidy is picking up firm support for his company's $25,000,000 production program over the next 18 months. Following the AA chief's product announcement before some 175 industryites in New York last week, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres prexy Leonard Goldenson pledged his own aid and urged fellow theatremen to help aid AA in its bid for major company status.

Similar sentiments were expressed by exhibs to Broidy in Detroit Fri. (25), in Milwaukee the following day, and during a three-day Broidy stopover in Chicago which wound up yesterday (Tues.). General attitude of audiences facing the AA head was reflected by Ben Marcus, former National Allied prez who operates some 26 Wisconsin houses.

Marcus, who attended the Milwaukee meet, told Broidy that "movie patrons today are more se-

Broadway Legit Hit Fears 20th's Premature Release of 'Bus Stop'; Stage-Film Overlaps Now Common

With most hit shows on Broadway being snapped up for filming, the release date of these screen versions is shaping up as an increasingly important bone of contention.

Latest example is "Bus Stop," the William Inge play, which 20th-Fox acquired on a pre-production deal. Pic is slated for summer production but the producers and the studio are now in a hassle over the release date of the popular legiter.

Property was acquired by 20th on the basis of an advance against payments scaled to the success of the play on Broadway. Since it's a hit, 20th is apt to shell out some $250,000 for it. Under the original contract, an early release date for the film was agreed on. Now that the play looks set for a long Broadway stand, wrangling is going on over the skedding of the film version.

20th, which is considerably interested in play properties these days, and has money in several of them, is an investor in "Ankles Aweigh," the Howard Hoyt-Reginald Hammerstein-Fred F. Finklehoffe musical comedy which is heading for Broadway following a shakedown cruise via Boston and Philly. This doesn't give 20th any automatic rights to the property. However, it's certainly first in line.

Legit producers' sensitivity vis-a-vis the release of film versions of their plays is understandable in that the impact of a pic on the b.o. of the stage version has never been clearly established. "Desperate Hours" is one hit that's currently on the main stem. Paramount has the film version already in the can. "Sabrina Fair" was still on Broadway when Par cameras were already turning on the film.

"Desperate Hours" carries a 1956 release date in its contract with the play producers. This may well be postponed if—as did "Seven Year Itch" in the case of 20th—the legiter shows unexpected staying power.

While it's felt that early release of a pic version may not have too much of an impact on Broadway, it's seen severely hurting the road.

Goldschmidt to India On Franco Coproduction

Paris, March 29.

Gilbert de Goldschmidt, whose company, Madeleine Films, has made three pix in collaboration with Stuart Schulberg and N. Peter Rathvon, is off to India to study possibilities of a Franco-Indian coproduction. Goldschmidt feels that lowering of production output of Hollywood makes it a more vital market for films with an international slant. His recent pic, "Embassy Baby," made with Joseph Cotten and Eva Bartok as a Franco-German coproduction with an English version also, will be distributed worldwide by Columbia. His previous two pix, both Franco-German, "No Way Out" and "Double Destiny," are also set for U. S. arty release.

Goldschmidt feels that U. S. films have great international scope not only because they are dubbed but have a subject lending itself to this process. This makes American stars known throughout the world and he has tried, whenever possible, to get U. S. stars interested in making pix abroad. He has big hopes for Indian production for he says it is the biggest in the world today, with 300 features per year, all from four to five hours long. He feels there is a market for more tailored films there and besides, the natural aspects of India are filmically of high production value. He also has plans for a future Franco-Japanese production which he will look into on his present eastern trip.

Ray Murray, publicity department staffer at the Columbia homeoffice, has been named assistant exploitation manager, to work under Al Rylander.

JANE RUSSELL'S NEXT

'No Return' Rolls (For Columbia) Before 'Portofino'

Hollywood, March 29.

Howard Hughes sold "No Return," a yarn with a gypsy theme, to Howard Welsch, who will produce it as a musical starring Jane Russell. Nicholas Ray will direct and Columbia will release.

Purchase of "No Return" means the postponement of "Portofino," originally slated for Miss Russell under the Welsch Productions banner.

French Shy From Routine American Features As B.O. Improves—Hakim

By GEORGE GILBERT

Hollywood's trend toward fewer and bigger pictures is posing a problem for French distributors which generally have one or more licenses that permit them to release American films in the Gallic market. Top Yank product, of course, is distributed in France by the majors themselves and what's left over is often looked upon by native distribs as not good enough to warrant handling.

"Product shortage" faced by those French companies with licenses available was pointed up in New York this week by Gaston Hakim who recently set up a Paris office as an American producers' rep. Although attendance at French theatres has taken a sharp upturn, he asserted that even with the current healthy b.o. the native distribs are unimpressed with much indie American pix whose sponsors are clamoring to make deals.

Aside from his role as producers' rep, Hakim also distributes foreign films in the U.S. and is readying separate production ventures for tv and theatrical release. On his film-making slate is the tentatively titled "Nature Girl," a full length feature which would be lensed on the Riviera late this summer. It's described as a romantic comedy. Financing is said to be assured from private sources. Vidpix project, titled "International Frauds," is due to roll in Paris next August as a 13 part half-hour series.

Hakim, who is a brother of producer Andre, Raymond and Robert, recently returned from Paris where he acquired U.S. distribution rights to the Daniele Delorme starrer, "Cage Aux Fillies." (Cage for Girls). He may retitle the Maurice Cloche production as "Women's Reformatory" when the film moves into release. In addition, Hakim is handling American distribution of three Arthur Davis Swedish imports, "Illicit Interlude," "Monica," and "The Naked Road."

Its 'Away All Boats' Studio's All-Time Budget High

Hollywood, March 29.

Universal will make "Away All Boats" in VistaVision, the first studio aside from Paramount to use that process. Howard Christie production will be shot in Technicolor on location in the Caribbean Sea.

According to production veepee Edward Muhl, "Away" carries the highest budget in the histsory of the studio.

Omaha Junket A Serious, Sobering Sell on Air Arm

By GENE ARNEEL

Omaha, March 29.

Strategic Air Command wing of the U. S. Air Force skied close to 100 newsmen and radio-tv characters to this Nebraskan location over the past weekend to join in SAC's celebration of its ninth anniversary. The visitors, who came via Corsair from N. Y., D. C. and L. A., were impressed with, (1) the message about SAC's position as the nation's monumental striking force, incessantly holding to wartime standards of security and alertness; (2), the expert manner of "sell" engaged in by SAC brass, eloquent in explaining the outfit's functions and seeking to lure and hold new personnel, and (3), the showmanship values put to use in collaboration with Paramount, which happens to have a picture titled "Strategic Air Command."

This was largely a hitchhike for Par; at least, ostensibly, it was all SAC inspiration and the film company was invited to take a free publicity ride for its film. Which is as it may be. The fact remains that both SAC and Par came out on top—SAC forcefully getting its message across to the important name newspapermen and videoites, and Par focusing a spotlight on its Samuel Briskin production. Screening was an Omaha holiday for public and press alike at the Orpheum Theatre in full-scaled VistaVision.

The color was there, Hollywood providing Briskin, June Allyson, James Stewart and Frank Lovejoy, director Anthony Mann and writers Beirne Lay Jr. and Valentine Davies. Gen. Curtis LeMay, four-star commander of SAC, led the militaristic contingent, almost constantly with a stogie aflame to the delight of Cigar Institute of America tooter Lynn Farnol, and video had its Tony Marvin on hand to onceover the layout, and participate in a theatre stage ceremony, in behalf of the Arthur Godfrey shows for which he's announcer. (Godfrey has a close interest in winged travel and Par's hopeful of some hefty plugs.)

That this was an important mission for Par was reflected in part by prez Barney Balaban's special trek to the area for the "SAC" unveiling, plus the full complement of ad-pub spellbinders beginnning with Jerry Pickman and including Sid Blumenstock, Herb Bullfighting and the art of painting go hand in hand in the King Bros. production, "The Boy and the Bull," currently filming in Mexico City. Producers have taken out a $1,000,000 insurance policy on valuable works of art in the Chapultepec Palace, where part of the picture is being shot. In addition, 20 additional security guards have been hired to keep an eye on the treasure.

Pathe Lab (Chesapeake) Has Millions Of Capital Invested in Films

Indie producers are finding an increasingly important source of financing in the various labs which in turn are eager for their print work.

Most active among the processing plants in extending financial aid to indie filmmakers is Pathe Laboratories with plants both in N.Y. and on the Coast. According to J. L. Wolcott, the lab's exec v.p., the printing outfit is currently an investor in 25 to 30 features and has "several million dollars" either tied up in films or committed.

Loans to producers, amounting to anywhere around 30% to 40% of negative cost, are made actually by Chesapeake Industries, which owns Pathe, and the lab doesn't participate in the profits. Loans usually include deferred costs of printing and materials, an important item in the current tint age.

CANADA TO PRODUCE FEATURES

Bad Ticket Coordination, Blurry Images Mar ANTA Album on Closed-Circuit

By HY HOLLINGER

If legit shows are to be presented to film theatre audiences via closed-circuit television, they'll have to be turned over to the professionals, with the established closed-circuit producers and/or theatremen handling the promotion, the sale of tickets, and the arrangements for the technical aspects. The ANTA Album telecast Monday (28) night to theatres in 31 cities, jointly sponsored by the American National Theatre and Academy and the Cooperative for American Remittances to Everywhere (CARE) was much less than a success.

Not all the returns are in yet, but on the basis of early reports, it appears that the boxoffice take will fall far below the expected $400,000. Judging from attendance figures from different sections of the country, the return will be less than half of the anticipated goal.

The show, as seen over closed-circuit, did not lack entertainment values. In fact, a good deal of it was excellent. Properly promoted and sold, it might have been a b.o. click. Mitigating against the attraction's success were a number of factors—the high tariff, the low key selling job by CARE committees, and the late (10:30 p.m.) starting time in the eastern zone—and on a Monday night, at that.

Technically, it lacked a great deal. The pickup, as seen at the RKO Fordham in the Bronx, was

MGM Nixes BBC

London, March 29.

Tonight's (Tues.) BBC-TV production of "The Unguarded Hour" has been withdrawn because Metro, which holds the rights, refused to give permission for the presentation. The players were advised of the decision after they had been rehearsing for a fortnight.

The gap in the BBC program will be filled tonight with a kinescope of the recent production "For Dear Life."

Rank's Canadian Sideline: Screen Advertising Co.

J. Arthur Rank org is aiming to expand the advertising film field in Canadian theatres via the establishment of J. Arthur Rank Screen Advertising Services of Canada Ltd. Leonard W. Brockington, head of the JARO interests in Canada, heads up the new outfit.

John D. Ralph is coming from London to take over as v.p. and Robert Wallace and Neil Sneyd have been named joint general managers. They formerly operated Publicity Film Distributors Ltd., on Toronto. Company has been absorbed into the new Rank unit.

According to Brockington, all of the sponsored films will be shot in 35m color and color. He added that production facilities of the Rank org in the UK and elsewhere would be at the disposal of the new company.

Ralph said that the first project would be called "Tips," a magazine-type of film series. Three advertisers will be featured in each edition. "Tips" cast will be headed by a well-known film personality, supported by Canadian actors.

In the U. S., ad films play about 14,000 houses. That branch of the film biz has been hurt by television, which has snapped up sponsor coin. Theatres are paid for running the ad trailers.

Lichtman to Face Allied Meeting

Minneapolis, March 29.

Al Lichtman, 20th-Fox general sales manager, has consented to put himself on the spot as a target for hot shots from officers and members of North Central Allied at its annual convention here May 2-3.

After he delivers his talk he'll attempt to answer questions to be fired at him by NCA officers and members, including president Bennie Berger, who is always on the war path against film companies.

Berger says Lichtman will be asked why his promised roundtable conference designed to bring film rental relief to small exhibitors hasn't materialized yet. The plan called for participation by distributor heads and exhibitor leaders.

Also, Berger says, Lichtman will be pressed to put himself on record regarding the Berger's insistence that film rentals be based on individual exhibitors' "ability to pay," toll-tv and arbitration that includes film rentals.

The convention will be attended by Abram F. Myers and Rube Shore, national Allied States general counsel and president, respectively. It'll be followed by Metro's ticket-selling workshop May 4.

Top Pentagon Figures Give Ear to Complaint Post Theatres Are Unfair

Washington, March 29.

Top Pentagon brass sat in for the first time last Thursday as film industry reps explained why they are seeking to eliminate the pre-release status of low tab theatres on military posts in areas where nearby smalltown theatres are hurt as a result.

The industry has been seeking to eliminate this preference for military theatres since last fall and indications are that the drive may be successful by the end of next month.

Among those present for the first time at the Pentagon session were Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Defense Robert B. Anderson, Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott, and Thomas Gates, Under

20TH SETTLES J. J.'S $3,000,000 A-T SUIT

Long-pending $3,000,000 anti-trust suit filed against 20th-Fox and Skouras Theatres by J. J. Theatres, N. Y., has been settled out of court., Basis of the accord was a cash payment by 20th of an undisclosed amount to J. J. plus earlier availability of its product to J. J.'s Luxor Theatre in the Bronx.

Case first went to trial in February, 1953, with J. J. claiming that 20th gave Skouras' Plaza Theatre an unfair product advantage over the Luxor, N. Y. Federal Court dismissed the suit but the U. S. Circuit Court, hearing J. J.'s appeal, reversed the dismissal and remanded the case back to the Fed tribunal. Under the settlement, the Luxor will be given 20th pix day and date with the Plaza and RKO houses in the area.

Loew's 2d Ozoner

Loew's Theatres, which recently acquired the Twin Drive-In in Oak Park, Ill., is dickering for another ozoner in Jacksonville, Fla. Circuit topper Joseph R. Vogel is currently in Jacksonville to handle the deal. The name of the outdoor theatre Loew's is eyeing is being kept under wraps.

The theatre chain apparently has received Dept. of Justice permission to make the purchase as was required in the acquisition of the Illinois property.

GOTTLIEB-COPLAN PRIMED TO START

By ROBERT A. McSTAY

Toronto, March 29.

Confirming recent grapevine reports, David Coplan, managaing director of Canadian Film Industries Ltd., today (Tues.) said that his company plans the immediate production of made-in-Canada feature films, with construction of a new sound stage to get underway in 60 days.

His partner is Arthur Gottlieb, president of Canadian Film Industries and Audio Pictures Ltd., companies which have previously been turning out sponsored shorts and television commercials. (Gottlieb is husband of Gladys Glad who reputedly owns the property rights to some 4,000 short stories written by her late first husband, Mark Hellinger, when he was a Broadway columnist).

Coplan has just returned to Toronto from consultations in New York on distribution facilities and in Hollywood where he has been lining up picture stars and principals, whose identities he is unable to immediately divulge because of pending negotiations.

Company has a present $2,000,000 plant here and plans an immediate $750,000 expansion to include a sound stage 100 by 150 feet and 32 feet high, with RCA equipment to match international sound requirements. Said Coplan: "Our pictures will be made in color and CinemaScope, with big budgets."

Coplan was previously general manager in Canada for Columbia Pictures until he left a decade ago for Britain where he established International Film Distributors Corp. Long a believer in possible Canadian film production, Coplan returned to Toronto a few months ago on invitation of Gottlieb.

Coplan's determination, of course, is to compete in world markets, he having made a study of these during his recent 10 years in Britain. He pays tribute to the calibre of Canadian acting groups, plus the talent developed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and intends to use these in secondary roles, but importing Hollywood and British names.

FIRST CINEMASCOPER IN BLACK-AND-WHITE

Hollywood, March 29.

First CinemaScope production ever filmed in black-and-white is "Rebel Without a Cause," James Dean starrer, currently in work at Warners.

Metro will follow with another untinted C'Scoper on April 1 when "Trial" gets the gun with Glenn Ford, John Hodiak and Arthur Kennedy on top roles.

Be Smart: Send Screen Stars To Japan for Personals, Protect U.S. Films—Bob Ryan's Advice

By WHITNEY WILLIAMS

Hollywood, March 29.

The easiest way for the American film industry to maintain its export leadership in Japan is to encourage top Hollywood names to make periodic personal appearances in that country, according to Robert Ryan, just returned from several weeks of locations there for 20th-Fox' "House of Bamboo."

Actor pointed out that in various talks with both Japanese exhibitors and distributors, who accorded the troupe a warm welcome wherever it trekked in the island empire, he was continually being asked:

"When will Hollywood begin sponsoring Japenese personal appearance tours for its stars, just as it does to aid the different annual European film festivals and Britain's Command Performances?"

"Probably the most important factor in the growth of Far Eastern business for American-made films has been the increasing number of high quality Hollywood productions that are being imported into Japan," Ryan reported. "Grabbing off the lion's share of this business, however, is no longer a pushover.

"For one thing, originally aided by American know-how directly after the war, Japanese-made films have almost trebled in the past two years. This product now claims about 40% of all available exhibition time in that country.

"American films come next, using up 30% of Japan's available screen time, while British films pick up about 15% of the playdates. The balance is divided among pictures emanating in India, France, Italy and the Soviet Union."

Ryan stressed that political drumbeating in behalf of a resumption of trade with Red China and the constant wooing by Russian agents could very easily switch the balance of power in

Segregated 'Carmen'

San Antonio, March 29.

"Carmen Jones" the 20th Century-Fox musical with an all-Negro cast has been booked for a week's run here at the Texas Theatre opening on Thursday (31).

Throughout the week, the mezzanine and balcony will be reserved for Negro patrons.

Chile Finds Way To Unloosen $ For U.S. Films

By EDYTHE ZIFFREN

Santiago, March 29.

Prolonged negotiations by American film distributing companies forming the local Film Board reached successful conclusion last week when agreement was reached for remittance of $500,000 to New York headquarters of Colombia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Republic, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner Bros.

Film Board's negotiations were aided directly by Robert Corkery, vice-president, Motion Picture Exporters Association, who visited Chile twice to back up distribs' efforts.

Remittance represents royalties that accrued since 1952, with a

'Itch' Still on Boards, So 20th Withdraws July Release of Film Version

Film version of "The Seven Year Itch," starring Marilyn Monroe and Tom Ewell, has been yanked from the July release sked of 20th-Fox to conform with contractual obligations with the producers of the play. Latter is now in its 124th week on Broadway.

Film was skedded for July preeming under the apparent impression that the legit hit would quit the N. Y. boards by that time. Under the original deal, the film couldn't be released until Jan., 1956. Understanding was that it could open in N. Y. once the legit version had faded.

Says George Weltner of Paramount: Foreign Exhibs Tops in Sell-Manship

By ABEL GREEN

"Maybe more people in the picture business should be traveling overseas," is the laconic observation of George Weltner, recently appointed worldwide sales veepee chief of Paramount. Heretofore he was ditto of the foreign distribution arm.

Weltner's elevation to the top sales berth, of course, follows the growing awareness among the majors of the important foreign market which has gone from 25% to 40%, and in some instances as much as 50% in sales returns for certain pictures. It's no trade secret that virtually every picture depends on the foreign revenue for the gravy profit.

Weltner, now on the Coast, is positive of one thing: that showmanship on the exhibition level is more socko overseas than domestically. Some of his observations, when detailed to prexy Barney Balaban and the other Par echelon, determined sending pub-ad veepee Jerry Pickman on a foreign o.o. as soon as it's feasible.

Weltner cites, for example, a stunt in a Sydney theatre when "White Christmas" was playing. For one thing, snow is just unknown in Australia, so when the local exhib churned up a prop "snowstorm" inside the lobby of his theatre, that was almost as big an attraction as the film. The Down Under public had never seen a snowfall.

In Bombay, India, as another example, when the local theatre showed "Rope of Sand," which has to do with diamond mining, the exhibitor whipped up a stunt, with cooperation of a local jeweler, whereby diamond chips—actually of small intrinsic values—were scattered in a diamond "mine" (full of sand, of course, to tie in with the picture) situated right in the lobby. The scavenger hunt made for P. 1 news all over again.

But apart from this brand of

Eastman Kodak's 1¼c Cut Foreseen

While there hasn't been any official announcement, labs in N. Y. expect Eastman Kodak to come through with another price reduction of one-quarter of a cent per foot on its color positive this summer.

Cut would bring the cost of the tint print stock to 3.65c per foot compared to the current 3.9c. Eastman dropped its price 0.25c per foot last December from the former 4.15c.

Even as Kodak, responding to the volume increase of color footage sold, is reducing its price, the labs still must add a minimum of 2c per foot for processing, etc., and more than that when it comes to printing with magnetic stereophonic sound, it's said. Thus the minimum price per foot for Eastman color isn't likely to drop much below the 6c a foot level.

PANAMINT (NEW) SETS 'BENGAZI' WITH RKO

Panamint Pictures, new indie company formed by Sam Weisenthal and Gene Tevlin, is set with its first film plus a tieup with RKO.

Unit will make "Flight from Bengazi," a World War II story, for RKO release. In the cast so far are Richard Conte and Victor McLaglen. It's to roll April 15 with John Brahm directing.

Florida Retailers Resolve Against Parlor Boxoffice

The Florida Retailers Assn., meeting in Orlando last week, passed a resolution expressing unqualified opposition to toll-tv and calling on Congress and the Federal Communications Commission to "keep the air free in line with the philosophy on which American broadcasting has been established."

The Florida businessmen stated in their resolution that pay-as-you-see would add to a "stay-at-home" trend of present consumers and would further result in the lessening of the large listening audience of free radio and tv presently integrated with important advertising programs which are definitely helpful to retail business."

The Association acted in line with the FCC's request for comment on various aspects of fee-tv. The deadline for such briefs is May 9. The exhib-sponsored Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV is working hard to corral anti-coinbox tv groups into a large and vocal protest movement against subscription video. One of the exhibs' arguments has been that authorization of pay-as-you-see would adversely affect the downtown theatres and with them the downtown stores.

Federal Check-Rein On Distributor Demands, And Toll, Twin Gripes

Oklahoma City, March 29.

Top brass of National Allied came here to expound their ideas on federal regulation of film rentals and home-toll video before the annual convention of Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma. Latter had previously voted to go along with National in the battle for federal rental controls and in the fight against parlor boxoffice.

Top speakers scheduled included National president Ruben Shor, Cincinnati, general counsel Abram F. Myers and Wilbur Snaper, co-chairman of the anti-toll TV campaign committee.

A film clinic to kick around grievances was set up by Siebert Worley, Shamrock, Tex., vice president of National Allied.

The final day (Wed.) of the three-day convention will be devoted to the Metro Ticket-Selling Workshop. The convention date was postponed by two weeks to coincide with the Workshop.

Shor, just returned from a three-week Arizona vacation, said his off-the-cuff speech would concentrate on Allied efforts to "press for government regulation of film rentals."

"As far as I know we are going to press for it by contacting congressmen and other means," he said. "I think the public ought to know about it. They should be informed of how their entertainment is being operated."

Myers is drafting the bill for National Allied which they hope to have introduced in congress, Shor said.

PARLOR BOXOFFICE ON MILWAUKEE'S AGENDA

Milwaukee, March 29.

Three-day conclave of Allied Theatre Owners of Wisconsin got under way here yesterday (Mon.) at the Schroeder Hotel, with exhibitors concentrating on toll-tv, adverse legislation, licenses, print shortages, film rentals, lack of sufficient top first-run product, advances in projection equipment, and concessions.

Opening business session, following registration, was devoted to Metro's Ticket Selling Workshop. Today's (Tues.) session, presided over by prexy Sig J. Goldberg, preceded closed forums on small town theatres, large towns, and city subsequent runs, with William Charboneau, Russell Leddy, and Edward Johnson heading each group.

Bennie Berger, prez of North Central Allied, will be the prime mover at the open forum on film discussion at tomorrow's (Wed.) closing day business meeting.

Home-Toll Hearings: Facts Versus Fears

[Pressagentry Put Under X-Ray]

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

Stand by for a slugging match in May when the Federal Communications Commission opens its hearings in Washington on the issue of authorizing the use of television channels by home-toll operators. Fee-tv will put its best foot forward and enemies propose to step on it with spikes.

Advance intimations of strategy hint that the home-toll advocates are going to be accused of bamboozling both the public and the FCC. They will be charged (1) with hiding their true motives, described as 100% commercialism, under a phony pretense of interest in education. They will be charged (2) with misrepresenting pay-as-you-see as adding to existing services of entertainment and information, whereas it immediately proposes to secure a franchise for converting part of existing service to a different financial base, and little more.

The cry that home-toll has been "hypocritical" in professing a devotion to "public" and "social" values while actually being more royalist than the king in terms of commercialism, mass appeal programming and advertising sponsorship will, naturally, not go without counter-counter-attack. Home-toll, and especially the Zenith Phonevision camp in Chicago, has already characterized motion picture theatre interests as self-serving obstructionists trying to stop the incoming tide of progress.

Meanwhile, pressagents for Phonevision have been trying hard to line up "liberal" bodies in support of the thesis that home-toll will broaden the base of communications in America. Groups such as the American Civil Liberties Union have long been concerned by the tendency of fewer and fewer organizations and/or powerful individuals to control more and more of the newspapers, magazines, broadcasting facilities, film companies and other means of reaching the people. Committees of Congress have echoed this concern. Educators have been expressing alarm for years at their annual conventions. Right here is where public relations spokesmen for home-toll have attempted to move in.

'Liberals' Not Enchanted

Present information suggests that "liberal" groups are refusing to buy the blanket claim that home-toll tv adds to "diversity" in communications. What seems to have been emotionally disillusioning to citizen groups is their belated discovery that home-tollcasting does not mean an end to advertising sponsorship, as many had thought (and rather appreciated) it would. Home-toll would, it appears, add a boxoffice in the parlor to pay for deluxe events and the rest of the time, or at least much of the rest of the time, it would operate in tandem with advertising, or in alternation.

Something else which has also come up, again belatedly, and which worries ACLU and other social-viewpoint bodies, is the "news" that 141 American cities have only one tv station and 112 more have only two tv stations. That means that giving either local station, or a substantial portion of its prime hours, over to pay-see, deprives the public in that community of some part, and perhaps a large part, of existing free-see service. How does this "expand" or "diversify" communications in the United States, is the question being asked and, thus far, not being satisfactorily answered for such groups. The argument is bound to loom large in Washington: that pay-see takes away from, and does not add to existing facilities. However, home-toll expects to move into channel allocations not yet assigned by the FCC.

On their side, subscription advocates will also argue that pay-see would develop talent of its own and by confronting advertising with formidable high powered competition for the attention of viewers in their homes, will stimulate healthy competition. But it is economically profitable for subscription systems to operate only if the Government grants a license to use tv channels. These are already muddled, some think hopelessly. Even if there were no home-toll complication, a reorganization of the spectrum may well be a necessity in the next year or two, owing to the current mess of very high frequencies as against ultra high frequencies, the one representing desirable space to occupy, the other not-so-desirable. Home-toll thus brings a typhoon in the wake of a flood.

No More Popcorn Cracks

Subscription spokesmen are preparing to assert at Washington that pay-see offers no real threat to sponsored video as it now operates, even if a substantial portion of the public should ultimately spend a great deal of time—and money—patronizing the programs of pay-see. Another counter-argument is expected to amount to this: that motion picture exhibitors, the noisiest of the opponents, are falling down in a faint before they've been struck. It's expected that pay-see will avoid further cracks of the kind made by Eugene McDonald of Zenith, who recently declared "exhibitors never created anything but popcorn."

One argument that is also sure to be advanced at the Washington hearings is this: under no circumstances should the FCC sanction home-toll on anything but a brief and cancellable experimental basis. "Nobody really knows yet—you certainly can't take the pressagents' claims at face value," is the credo. Coupled with this point of view is the feeling that glib and hazy mental pictures of what home-toll service would bring the American people must be replaced by statements, in writing, and promises, backed with means.

One suspicion which home-toll proponents will have to remove is that people will only pay for programs of the highest popularity or the greatest impact and that in consequence, pay-see simply robs Peter-sponsor for the benefit of Paul-paybox.

Already the battle lines are fairly clear for Washington. Not so clear is what aid, if any, the networks or advertising interests, with millions of dollars invested in time franchises of known value only under status quo, will render those fighting pay-see. Exhibitor interests are now lining up Main Street merchants, transportation companies, all who cater to a mobile public. A stay-at-home public is bad business, the exhibitors are telling their neighbors.

One thing seems certain: it ought to be possible after the Washington hearings to sift fact from fear.

DOPE TRAFFIC FEATURE GETS PENNSY OKAY

Philadelphia, March 29.

The 20-month battle to prevent showing of "She Should'a Said No," film dealing with the dope traffic, ended with declaration by Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the State Board of Censors, that she would issue a seal of approval for the disputed production.

The Censor Board turned down the film June 8, 1953, as "immoral, indecent, not proper and tending to corrupt and debase morals." The ensuing court fight by Hallmark Productions of Hollywood, resulted in the State's 40-year-old censorship law being declared unconstitutional.

While the appeal on this decision was carried to the State Supreme Court, the State administration set about rewriting the censorship law to meet the objections of Common Pleas Court in Philadelphia.

At the time of the lower court's decision the Pennsylvania Attorney General's office obtained a supersedeas preventing judgment from being enforced pending the disposition of the appeal. Two weeks ago the Attorney General's office withdrew the supersedeas and the lower court ordered the Censor Board to issue its seal of approval.

Mrs. Carroll, who consistently maintained that she would not approve of the film except by court order, stated: "With the same in hand, the seal must be issued." The film is a reissue, with some changes, of a production outlawed here five years ago. At that time it was variously titled "The Devil's Weed" and "Wild Weed."

Bob Hope to make a series of personal appearances in Texas cities with Paramount's "Seven Little Foys."

Films Must Carry Fight

Oklahoma City, March 29.

Addressing the Oklahoma Allied convention today (Tues.) national counsel Abram F. Myers laid it on the line about home-toll television. "Film exhibitors must bear the present burden of the fight against subscription television." Other businesses, slow in awakening to the danger, may provide support at a later date, he predicted.

Myers thought that the film industry was handicapped, that the pay-see public relations had a half-mile start.

'ANGRY MEN' DEBUTS AT OSAWATOMIE, KAN.

Kansas City, March 29.

Allied Artists is holding the world preem of its Raymond Massey and Debra Paget starrer, "Seven Angry Men," in Osawatomie, Kans., tomorrow (Wed.). Unveiling there will kick off a string of more than 160 bookings in this area within a fortnight.

Film also opens in four Fox Midwest houses in K. C. Thurs. (31) as part of the heaviest saturation booking AA has had here to date. Gov. Fred Hall has declared "Kansas Movie Week" in tribute to the picture. Osawatomie was the scene of much of John Brown's activities, the subject of the film.

Earl McEvoy's Company

Sacramento, March 29.

Incorporation papers were filed here for a new indie film company, Earl McEvoy Productions, designed to make theatrical films and telefilms.

McEvoy, president of the firm, is a former director at Columbia. Other officers are Mrs. Miriam McEvoy, veepee, and Robert Sands, secretary.

NATHAN GOLDEN TO CANNES FESTIVAL

Washington, March 29.

Nathan D. Golden, director of the motion picture division of the U. S. Department of Commerce, has been selected by the Government Interdepartmental Committee for Film Festivals and State Department as official U. S. delegate to the Cannes Film Festival, April 26-May 10. Golden previously repped the U. S. at the 1949 and 1952 Cannes Festivals, and was American delegate at the Venice Film Festival in 1953.

The Commerce Department official has also been invited by the French Photographic Society to participate in the Biennale de la Photo et du Cinema, the international photographic show to be held in Paris May 4-16.

New Orleans Allied Stressing The Danger at April 3 Rally

New Orleans, March 29.

Toll-tv, the product and print shortage, the price of film, and declining theatre attendance will be among the subjects to be weighed by the Allied Theatre Owners of the Gulf States at its annual convention April 3-5 at the Edgewater Gulf Hotel, Edgewater Park, Miss.

Speakers include Julius Gordon, of the exhibitors' national toll-tv committee, and Herb Greenblatt and Dave Prince, RKO sales executives.

Yank Engineers Work Out Stand For Stockholm

Society of Motion Picture & Television Engineer's delegation to the international standards meet in Stockholm this summer will gather in full force at SMPTE's Chicago convention next month to hammer out the American position.

Boyce Nemec, SMPTE exec secretary, who may join the U. S. group in Sweden, said this week that no particular problems were expected to arise in connection with the film standards work. The SMPTE committee, working within the framework of the American Standards Assn., will be headed by Axel Jensen, director of tv research for the Bell Telephone Co.

Need for new international standards in the film biz has arisen as the result of technical innovations within the industry over the past year and a half.

Nemec said the Society was planning a campaign to double its membership which now stands at 5,000. He also hoped to be able to raise from the current 7,000 to between 10,000 and 12,000 the print order on the SMPTE Journal which is now accepting paid ads.

Exhibs Rap Pix First Seen on Television And Oppose Home-Toll

Pittsburgh, March 29.

Walt Disney's "Davy Crockett," and any other picture previously shown on television, will be boycotted by members of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania. That was the final action taken by organization at the closing session of its 33rd annual convention here last week at the Roosevelt Hotel. "Crockett," televised in three installments on "Disneyland," is now being assembled as a feature picture and Allied says it positively wants no part of it.

Swing at tv was the No. 1 resolution adopted by Allied at the wind-up. Second resolution asked Pennsylvania State Legislature for immediate remedial legislation to "end the discriminatory" 10% city amusement tax. It was an action by Assembly, permitting cities to levy on anything State didn't tax, that permitted the amusement bite.

Third resolution opposed home-toll "over the free airways" of the nation. A fourth opposing state censorship was tabled. Going along with the theatre owners in their demand for an end to the city tax was the Moving Pictures Machine Operators, Local 171.

Elected without opposition were Charles Blatt, Somerset, president; Ray Woodward, Franklin, vice-president, and Harry Hendel, treasurer. Following directors were named: Theodore Manos, Greensburg; Ernest Stern, Pittsburgh; Fred Fisher, Clearfield; George Tice, Munhall; Rudy Navari, Penn Township, and Ted Grance, Everett.

ARTHURS MAKE PEACE, AGAIN PLAY PARAMOUNT

St. Louis, March 29.

Hassle between the Fanchon & Marco circuit and Paramount over the price of pictures has been patched up. The local F&M deluxers are booking Par product for the first time in six months. First film to be shown, under a new deal set by F&M execs Harry C. Arthur Jr. and Edward B. Arthur, is "Knock On Wood" which teed off at the St. Louis in midtown.

Battle over rental fees held up the showing of pix such as "Country Girl," "White Christmas," and "Sabrina," resulting in a shortage of available pix and causing the closing and occasional use only of the Missouri, another midtown deluxer. Also affected by the ban on Paramount were subscquent-run houses operated by F&M. In addition to Par films in release for at least six months, F&M has also booked the company's upcoming product.

REISSUE: VIA THEATRES OR TV?

Charity Foundation Financing For 'Braille' Feature Excites Biz Interest; Angle OK Legally

If Laurence Schwab can turn his plans into reality, the tv producer will have a film financing setup unique in show business. His project is picturization of "The Story of Louis Braille" and the money sources he's aiming for are ordinary investors plus the American Film Foundation.

Schwab and an associate, Burton Vaupen, have established the Foundation as a non-profit organization and it's already approved by the N.Y. Supreme Court and the Office of the Attorney General. The two have been working on the overall plan for the past two years.

Regardless of the chances of his success, Schwab's undertaking has become a source of interest among film men because of the unusual angles. The son of the famed theatrical producer, Schwab is pitching for straight charitable donations to the Foundation. The capital thus raised is to be invested in the pic and the returns, including all profits, will be channeled to any agencies benefitting the blind which the contributors designate. Schwab will have no voice in administration of the Foundation and will receive no coin from it.

The second capital source is Laurence Schwab Productions, organized by Schwab as an ordinary production company. Investors in this will collect profits, according to the plan, commensurate with the amount of investment. Schwab will cut in on this end for his services as producer but he's not to receive anything until the full investment money has been recouped.

In a "general information" sheet being circulated by Schwab, various important names in show busi-

'Mom & Dad' Film Calls Censor Fees Unconstitutional

New legal twist involving a test of the constitutionality of N. Y. censorship fees is being employed in the battle to win a reversal of the N. Y. censor's ban on the film "Mom and Dad."

Pic was originally nixed by Hugh M. Flick, the N. Y. censor. His decision was upheld by the Board of Regents, his superiors in Albany. Suit was filed in N. Y. Supreme Court this week by Ephraim S. London, attorney for Capitol Enterprises, which owns "Mom and Dad," questioning the legality of the ban mostly in terms of the legality of the N. Y. censor board itself.

Brief was drawn by London who had also successfully fought the ban on the Italian "The Miracle" before the U. S. Supreme Court some years back. The High Court's decision rocked the legal foundations of all state censors and forced an overhaul of the N. Y. statutes. "Mom and Dad" was nixed by Flick as "indecent."

London maintains that the statute in respect to banning a film on the basis of its being "indecent" is "so vague and indefinite that its enforcement and application in this case deprived petitioner of

BOOK 'LEAGUES' HEAVILY DURING SCHOOL BREAK

Aiming for the kid trade during the Easter vacation period, Buena Vista, the Walt Disney distribution company, has booked "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" into 81 theatres in the New York area and in more than 100 in metropolitan areas throughout the country.

Among the circuits in the N. Y. metropolitan zone which have booked the film are RKO Theatres, Loew's, Skouras, Randforce, Brandt, Interboro, Fabian, and Island.

In the New England territory, where "Leagues" was booked in a saturation pattern in 49 cities during the winter school holiday period in February, it will be seen in 12 additional cities during the coming spring vacation week.

'Jedda' from Australia Handled by Baker-Brill

Australia, which has made several bids to crash the U. S. market with feature films, is set to make another try with "Jedda," a Gevacolor picture filmed in the almost unknown northern territory of the island continent. Western hemisphere distribution rights to the film have been picked up by Sam Baker-David Brill Associates in association with Berkson & Mills.

Pic is being distributed in Australia by Columbia and is currently being released in England by John Woolf's Independent Film Distributors. Baker-Brill outfit is currently dickering with a number of U. S. distribs to set the pic's national release.

'Holiday' Into Dallas

Dallas, March 29.

"Cinerama Holiday" will open April 27 at the Melba Theatre, after a 10-month run of "This Is Cinerama."

Managing director William W. Lewis had skedded a shutdown of "Cinerama" on April 2. Capacity biz at the 1,800-seat house rated a three-week extension.

WARNERS SALES REPS MEET MAY 1 IN TOKYO

For the first time in the company's history, Warner Bros. International will hold a far eastern sales conference, bringing all its sales executives in the territory to Tokyo May 1 for a week's session. Wolfe Cohen, International topper, will preside at the meet. John J. Glynn, v.p. of WB's foreign operation, will also attend.

Jack Degal, general manager for Japan, will be host to the delegates, including Berry Greenberg, field supervisor for Australia; Stanley Higginson, Australian general manager, and Bruce Kennedy, sales manager. Also attending the conclave will be the sales chiefs from India, Indonesia, Singapore, New Zealand, Hong Kong, Formosa, and the Philippines.

Exhibitor Max Cohen On Boro President's Comm.

Veteran Gotham exhibitor Max A. Cohen, prexy of Cinema Circuit Corp., has been made a member of Manhattan Borough President Hulan Jack's Permanent Advisory Committee, a group made up of business leaders in commercial and industrial fields. Cohen was sworn into the post on Friday (25).

As a member of the committee, Cohen will confer with the Borough topper on problems, and possible solutions, in the fields of traffic, housing, highway improvements and other situations affecting the welfare of Manhattan's 2,000,000 people.

EXHIBS STILL BEST PROFIT

Major film companies in the United States will manufacture films directly for television advertisers or syndicators, will rent studio space or put their production know-how up for hire; also deals for old shorts may multiply as per the current transaction between Warners and Guild Films (see separate story, this issue); but there are few omens that the major studios have any immediate intention of unloading old features to video interests. A clear distinction still is drawn between shorties and full-lengthies

This is not to say that the majors would not like to sell features to television. During the past year, the top film firms have been bombarded with numerous offers and they have listened attentively, weighing all the pro and cons. Every company is keeping a dossier on the offers, the prices paid for available features, the attitude of stockholders, and most important—the reaction of theatre exhibitors.

'Crockett' Case

Although some industryites feel that exhibitors' opposition may be waining, none of the majors has seen fit to serve as a test case. Every time there's a sign that theatremen have left their guards down, a new situation comes up to demonstrate forcefully that the exhibs are ever on the alert. Most recent indication was the resolution passed last week by Allied of Western Pennsylvania. The organization voted to boycott any and all pictures previously shown on tv, specifically mentioning Walt Disney's "Davey Crockett" which is being readied as a feature film.

The question of exhibitor beefs and boycotts, while an important

C'Scope Impact Shows in Data; 20th Up 76%

Reflecting the continuing impact of CinemaScope in 1954, 20th-Fox last year reported a net of $8,044,524 for the year ended Dec. 25. This was the equivalent of $3.04 per share on the 2,644,486 shares of common outstanding.

Comparable figures in 1953 were a net of $4,560,887, or $1.65 on the 2,769,486 share of common then outstanding. Thus the 1954 earnings represented an increase of 76% over the prior year.

Fourth quarter earnings in 1954 didn't quite hold up, running to $2,312,461 as against $3,127,850 in 1953. First quarter of 1955, handicapped by two slow grossers, is

Denver Hosts General

Denver, March 29.

Theatre operators from this area are playing host at luncheon Thursday (31) honoring Maj. Gen. Charles W. Christenberry, former deputy chief of staff of the Eighth Army in Korea and president of the American-Korean Foundation.

The general will give a report on the activities of the Foundation to the theatreowners who have been cooperating in raising funds for the organization.

Return of Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th-Fox production topper, from Europe will cue a renewed attempt to settle the status of Marilyn Monroe at the studio where she is currently under suspension.

While the future plans of the star are a matter of speculation in N. Y., 20th exec appear unperturbed by her prolonged absence. "She'll come back when she's ready," observed a company spokesman. "We're in no hurry if she isn't."

With "The Seven Year Itch" now yanked from 20th's 1955 release sked, Miss Monroe will round out the current year with a single pic, "There's No Business Like Show Business," which went into release actually in late 1954.

It's expected that, with Miss Monroe now in the MCA fold, the agency will initiate talks with Zanuck in an attempt to get him consent to a new arrangement. Miss Monroe, who has set up Marilyn Monroe Productions but hasn't activated it, wants a new deal under which 20th would finance her own unit to make films which would then be released via 20th.

Reps of the star are pointing to the large number of other players who have set up their own producing companies and who function as indies, primarily for tax purposes. Spokesman for Miss Monroe termed the studio's refusal to go along with the idea as "unreasonable." Miss Monroe's contractual status at 20th awaits clarification. The studio says she has a binding contract. The star holds that her old deal had been abrogated and that she had never signed a new one so that she's at liberty to do anything she wishes.

Repeated suggestions in gossip columns that 20th would offer a

CANNES FESTIVAL BIDS TO 'ROCK' AND 'JONES'?

Metro's "Bad Day at Black Rock" and 20th-Fox's "Carmen Jones" are expected to be tabbed by Cannes festival authorities to compete as invitational entries when the fest launches April 25.

The official American entries are Paramount's "Country Girl" and United Artists' "Marty."

Under the Cannes regulations, the most any country can enter in the festival is two films. However, the organizers of the event reserve the right to invite a number of pix from various countries and these films are considered full-fledged entries.

Favre Le Bret, Cannes fest prexy, returned to Paris last week from the U. S., stating that both Grace Kelly and Marilyn Monroe had accepted invites to the shindig. Gary Cooper, Burt Lancaster and William Holden also may show and Dorothy Dandridge is a possibility.

Sues to Force Nudist Film Playdate at Tabor, Denver

Denver, March 29.

Excelsior Pictures of New York, distributors of "Garden of Eden," a nudist film, sued Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres in an attempt to force the theatre company to show the film at the Tabor as per contract. Fox Inter-Mountain claimed that showing the film would force them to run afoul of the law.

Both parties asked District Judge Robert H. McWilliams Jr. to view the film and render a decision as to the propriety of the film. The judge dismissed the suit and refused to view the film, saying the city would not necessarily be bound by his opinion, and might or might not prosecute in spite of his views. The judge said the distributor had recourse through a civil lawsuit, since the contract provided for computing damages if it was breached.

British Producers' Parliamentary Plea Tells of Yanks' Big Global Lead

By HAROLD MYERS

London, March 29.

The economic problems of British producers compare unfavorably with those of American film makers, according to a memorandum submitted last week to a selected group of Members of Parliament. The memo has been drafted by the British Film Producers Assn. in support of the all-industry campaign for admission tax relief.

According to the 14-page document, American play dates give American producers 60% of the total world market to start with and they are largely able to recover production costs in their home territory. Rentals in Britain and other overseas countries thus provide the gravy. On top of that, Federal admission tax in the U. S. was last year cut in half.

The British producers emphasize many world markets are more readily available to American than to British producers. In Japan only 16 licenses a year are available for the sterling area compared with 121 for the dollar area. In the U. S. itself, after a long and hard struggle, British features are beginning to get a footing but the "playing time is infinitesimal compared with the dominating position of American product in British cinemas."

Effect of the continued attack on the American market is shown in the statement that five recent British films have brought back more than $2,250,000. Films are "The Cruel Sea," "Duel in the Jungle," "Genevieve," "Happy Ever After" and "The Million Pound Note." These earnings are not as much as might have been expected from such a large market but are an indication of the improved earning powers of British films in the States.

The industry is appealing to Parliament for almost $17,000,000 to be hacked off the annual tax toll of more than $100,000,000. The producers argue that such relief is essential unless the government is prepared to leave them in a precarious financial position. A breakdown of receipts shows that out of over $280 collected at the box office just over $19 finds its way back to the British producer. Foreign producers collect about $30.

Strategic Air Command

This picturized updating of the wild blue yonder looks sure to make quick contact with tall money. Always interesting, often spectacular and, in some instances, photographically spellbinding, "Strategic Air Command" also establishes VistaVision as a major contender in the bigscreen derby.

Credit the real-life U.S. Strategic Air Command with a very large assist. Concerning Air Force technicalities, the film is on the beam. Operations of the SAC, which cooperated with Sam Briskin's production company, have full appearance of authenticity, resulting in a pic that's important document and distinguished from run-of-the-heroics service epics.

Briskin's production widens the scope of its subject material, and audience appeal, beyond the confines of strict military aeronautics. This is via interludes of SAC's influence on the intimate family life of a pilot, his wife and comes baby to make three. Some of this suggests cliche but keen dialog in the Valentine Davies-Beirne Lay Jr. script keeps it above formularized rut.

Audience mitting likely will be evoked—as it was at the Omaha preem—with some of the in-flight footage. "SAC" is at its best when off the ground. Two giant ships engaging in a refueling operation and sweeping views of a B36 with its jet engines skywriting long hyphens in blue smoke—this is visually stirring stuff. The aerial work was supervised by Paul Mantz and the tinting by Technicolor, unusually sharp, gives it more power.

Screenplay, from a story by Lay, presents James Stewart as a hot-shot third baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals who's beckoned back to the Air Force, this time with the nation's great, long-range striking force. Stewart shows his usual professional competence, stirred by the enormity and alertness of SAC, becoming increasingly enraptured with its meaning to America's welfare and finally conveying belicvable sincerity in trying to convince his wife that SAC is his lifetime calling.

June Allyson scores as the wife, rebelling as the SAC takes hold on her mate and then showing sympathy and understanding. She's warm and appealing.

Frank Lovejoy fits in splendidly as the commanding general, brisk, forceful and unyielding in his demands for efficiency and security. Barry Sullivan is ingratiating as a SAC lieutenant colonel and lesser parts are handled without flaw by Alex Nicol, Bruce Bennett, Jay C. Flippen, James Millican, James Bell and Rosemary De Camp.

There's no Korea, no guns popping or bombs away in "SAC." Briskin didn't want a "war picture." It's a film backgrounded with up-to-the-minute fact and as such provides good insight on U.S. retaliatory vehicles capable of getting half-way around the world with the Sunday punch of on atom or hydrogen bomb.

Anthony Mann's direction keeps "SAC" well on the move, seguing smoothly from ground operations to the high altitudes. For an actionful highlight, he wrings out good excitement particularly from Stewart's forced pancake landing in Greenland when his big jet bomber catches fire. Editing is sharp mostly, but appearing too abrupt in a couple of spots. More loitering views of the B36 and B47 on the move would have been welcome.

Victor Young's score is fitting throughout and a march, "The Air Force Takes Command," by Young (music) and Ned Washington and Major Tommy Thomson Jr. (lyrics) has the color and beat to warrant much reprising at any kind of military pageantry.

"SAC" screening was at Omaha's Orpheum Theatre which was specially rigged for V'Vision showing from a horizontally-fed projector on kingsized curved screen. The definition and lighting both were brilliant. A last-minute hitch in equipment installation caused a little screen quivver at the start but this soon disappeared.

The audio was standard but directional sound will be made available with conventional format prints. (Only a relatively few very large theatres expectedly will play "SAC" in the double-frame super-V'Vision fashion).

Gen. Curtis LeMay, four-star commander of SAC, has given the film his endorsement to the extent that his outfit will join in exhibitor promotion — providing military bands or equipment displays for the bally. This is a sell factor that shouldn't be overlooked. Gene.

The Prodigal
(C'SCOPE-COLOR)

The Biblical parable of the prodigal son. Lavishly treated but long and dull. Lana Turner's name to help but prospects spotty.

Hollywood, March 29.

Metro release of Charles Schnee production. Stars Lana Turner, Edmund Purdom, Louis Calhern; features Audrey Dalton, James Mitchell, Neville Brand, Walter Hampden, Taina Elg, Francis L. Yet another in the Biblical cycle, Metro's treatment of the Parable of the Prodigal Son (from Luke XV.) is a bigscale spectacle, making overwhelmingly lavish use of sets, props, CinemaScoped Eastman Color and a well-populated cast. End result of all this flamboyant polish, however, is only fair entertainment due for a mixed reaction from viewers. With Lana Turner heading the cast, and on the ticket play usually accorded religioso pix, it can be figured to get some coin initially, but there isn't much to indicate any sustained draw.

The brief 22 verses in Scripture which tell the story of the prodigal who wanders from his home in pursuit of the high priestess of Astarte have been stretched to one hour and 57 minutes. Producer Charles Schnee has filled the picture so full of scene and spectacle that Richard Thorpe's direction is hard put to give it any semblance of movement, or to get life and warmth into the characters and incidents.

With rather empty characters to portray in the screenplay by Maurice Zimm from the adaptation by Joe Breen Jr., and Samuel James Larsen, the performances by Miss Turner, as the high priestess; Edmund Purdom, the prodigal; Louis Calhern, the high priest of Baal, and most of the others in the huge cast are hollow and generally uninteresting. Almost the only note of character warmth is to be found in the romance between the mute, runaway slave, James Mitchell, and the high priestess' slave as played by Taina Elg.

Most of the screen plot takes place in pagan Damascus, where the prodigal is busy spending his third of his father's wealth trying to win the priestess away from her pagan gods to be his wife. It's a standoff, though, because he will not give up his God, Jehovah, and she cannot renounce her dedication to Astarte. The pagan revelry and temple maidens dedicated to love give an exploitation angle for selling but actually come off tamely in the film. So do the love scenes between Miss Turner and Purdom.

Return of the prodigal to his home after having squandered his fortune and gone through the adventures of love, slavery and battle, and the open-handed welcome he receives is no more believable than what transpires in the preceeding footage.

Thorpe is able to wrap up most of the final 20 minutes of film in an action key, starting with the flinging of Purdom, believed a dead slave, into the vulture pit. Here he fights off a frightening carrion-eater, frees other slaves, and leads them and citizens tired of the rule of their pagan gods into a revolt that ends with the destruction of the heathen temples, the idols and the priests and priestesses that served them.

Seen briefly is Audrey Dalton, the prodigal's betrothed. Neville Brand, a menacing, shavened scalp henchman to the high priest; Walter Hampden, the Hebrew patriarch who welcomes his son back; Francis L. Sullivan, gross, conniving moneylender, and Joseph Wiseman, overplaying a Damascus beggar, are among others more prominently involved in the story.

The C'Scope lensing by Joseph Ruttenberg does a thorough job of the pictorial values furnished by cast, settings and art direction, while Bronislau Kaper provides a background score suggestive of the period. Brog.

Interrupted Melody

Biopic treatment of singer Marjorie Lawrence's life. Done with beautiful music, movingly romantic feeling. Word-of-mouth potential should bolster b.o. prospects. Eileen Farrell dubbed the operatic voice.

Hollywood, March 25.

Metro release of Jack Cummings production. Stars Glenn Ford, Eleanor Parker; features Roger Moore, Cecil Kellaway, Peter Leeds, Evelyn Ellis, Walter Baldwin. Directed by Curtis Bernhardt. Written by William Ludwig, Sonya Levien; based on her life story by Marjorie Lawrence; camera (Eastman Color), Joseph Ruttenberg; Paul C. Vogel; editor, John Dunning; dramatic score adapted and conducted by Adolph Deutsch; operatic recordings supervised and conducted by Walter Du Cloux; musical supervision, Saul Chaplin; operatic sequences staged by Vladimir Rosing; music adviser, Harold Gelman; Miss Parker's singng by Eileen Farrell. Previewed March 18, '55. Running time, 103 MINS.

Dr. Thomas King	Glenn Ford
Marjorie Lawrence	Eleanor Parker
Cyril Lawrence	Roger Moore
Bill Lawrence	Cecil Kellaway
Dr. Ed Ryson	Peter Leeds
Clara	Evelyn Ellis
Jim Owens	Walter Baldwin
Mme. Gilly	Ann Codee
Himself	Leopold Sachse
Comte Claude des Vigneux	Stephen Bekassy

A fine romantic drama with beautiful music is offered in this biopic based on the career of Marjorie Lawrence. The appeal to the discriminating is excellent, and all who go for stories told from the heart will find in "Interrupted Melody" plenty of worthwhile entertainment. For the marquees it has the names of Glenn Ford and Eleanor Parker. Add to that a class ad-pub exploitation campaign and a good word-of-mouth potential.

Jack Cummings' production supervision has smoothly coordinated the many factors in the film, which has an inspirational quality in recounting how Miss Lawrence, struck down at the height of her singing career by crippling polio, was able to fight back and sing again by drawing on the strength of a devoted husband's love. Miss Parker, as the singer, and Ford, as her doctor husband, are socko, with deftly shaded performances that come to the fore under the understanding, sympathetic direction by Curtis Bernhardt. Latter had a topflight piece of screen writing to work from in the script by William Ludwig and Sonya Levien, based on her life story by Miss Lawrence.

From winning a local singing contest in her native Australia, Miss Lawrence moved on to long, hard study in Paris, then operatic success on two continents and marriage to an American doctor, with a subsequent limiting of her engagements to New York so she could be near him. However, he persuades her to accept a South American tour, and it is while fulfilling this engagement that polio strikes. Up to this point the film is full of operatic montage of nine arias, all beautifully and thrillingly staged. Among them are O Dom Fatale from "Don Carlos," The Habanera from "Carmen," the Immolation Scene from "Goetterdammerung" and Un Bel Di Vedremo from "Madame Butterfly."

Remainder of the picture is given over to the singer's struggle to overcome the depression and lack of confidence that sieges her after the illness. Here the playing and direction will wring tears, but the lump-in-throat drama has such a sensitive, honest feel that audiences will join personally in what is transpiring. How Miss Lawrence finds the courage to again face the public, after singing for the sick and mained of World War II in farflung camps, climaxes in a special Metropolitan Opera performance of "Tristan And Isolde."

Adding measurably to the musical thrills of the production is the flexible soprano of Eileen Farrell, who does the actual, offstage singing for Miss Parker's character. Great credit also is due Vladimir Rosing for his staging of the operatic sequences, the musical supervision by Saul Chapin, the supervision and conducting of the operatic recordings by Walter Du Cloux, and the contribution Adolph Deutsch makes with his adaptation and conducting of the dramatic score. Along with these musical credits, including Harold Gelman's music advising, the recording supervision by Wesley C. Miller figures importantly.

Roger Moore, as Miss Lawrence's brother; Cecil Kellaway, as her father; Peter Leeds, as a doctor friend; Evelyn Ellis, as the nurse; Walter Baldwin, Ann Codee, Leopold Sachse and Stephen Bekasay are all good, but interest seems to be concentrated almost entirely on the two stars, so thoroughly do they dominate the footage.

The picture gains in pictorial splendor from the CinemaScope lensing in Eastman Color by Joseph Ruttenberg and Paul C. Vogel. Other firstrate contributions including editing by John Dunning, the art and set direction and the costumes. Brog.

Good western filmfare for general outdoor market playdates.

(Aspect ratio: 1.85-1)

"Shotgun" is good western filmfare, slated to find favor with the outdoor fan generally. Familiar plot angles of vengeance and chase are freshened and the characters believeably established in a script that wastes no time going about its business. Names of Sterling Hayden, Yvonne De Carlo and Zachary Scott also go with release intentions so this one should fare satisfactorily in the action market.

Colorfully rugged outdoor locales provide the setting for the John C. Champion production and his supervision, plus good direction by Lesley Selander, a properly valued script by Clark E. Reynolds and Rory Calhoun, and competent performances by the cast, lift the offering a cut above the level of the usual program western. The action gets rugged at times, but not objectionably so because the roughness is part of the story and not just dragged in to fit the actioner rating.

When a marshal is blown in two by a double blast from a shotgun, deputy Hayden takes up the killer's trail, packing his own sawed-off, double-barrelled weapon to use on his quarry. He also totes a rifle for some Apache troublemakers along the trail and a sixgun for personal arguments. In the pursuit of the killer, Guy Prescott, Hayden is joined by Miss De Carlo, whom he rescues from an Indian stakeout, and the pair is soon joined by Scott, a bounty hunter who wants the reward on Prescott's head. The adventuring the trio is put through has a familiar ring, but under the expert freshening in the script plays well. The action climaxes when Hayden and Prescott meet in a shotgun duel to the death, and you know who rides off into the sunset with Miss De Carlo.

The three stars and Prescott are assisting on the acting end by Robert Wilke, Paul Marion and John Pickard. Angela Greene gets short shrift as the girl who didn't want Hayden to ride off on his mission of vengeance.

Ellsworth Fredricks' photography does right by the action and scenery, but the print by Technicolor used at the preview was not consistent in its hues. John Fuller's editing, Carl Brandt's score and other behind-camera credits are good. Brog.

Jump Into Hell

Routine programmer, based on the French-Communist fighting in Indo-China. For lower-case bookings.

Hollywood, March 29.

Warner Bros. release of David Weisbart production. Stars Jack Sernas, Kurt Kasznar, Arnold Moss, Peter Ven Eyck; features Marcel Dalio, Norman Dupont, Lawrence Dobkin, Pat Blake. Directed by David Butler. Written by Irving Wallace; camera, J. Peverell Marley; editor, Irene Morra; music, David Buttolph. Previewed March 15, '55. Running time, 92 MINS.

Sgt. Talke	Marcel Dalio
Lt. Andre Maupin	Norman Dupont
Maj. Maurice Bonet	Lawrence Dobkin
Gizele Bonet	Pat Blake
Jacqueline	Irene Montwill
Major Riviere	Alberto Morin
Capt. LeRoy	Maurice Marsac
Capt. Darbley	Louis Mercier

The dramatic stand of the French at Dienbienphu in Indo-China has been transferred to the screen in a singularly uninspired potboiler that will best serve in the programmer market as the lowercase half of the dual bills. Real and reel scenes are intermixed to depict the defense of the French fortress but it fails to come off as a graphic or exciting account of warfare.

The original screenplay by Irving Wallace, as directed by David Butler, doesn't give the affair much credibility so the viewer is never caught up in what's transpiring on the screen. The human problems posed and the dialog the players are given to speak are strictly formula. So is the production supervision by David Weisbart and the technical support, from lensing on down.

Picture gets into its story when the beleaguered fort commander sends word to France for four volunteer officers to help him defend Dienbienphu. The volunteers are Jack Sernas, Kurt Kasznar, Peter Van Eyck and Norman Dupont. Before they arrive via parachute, footage is devoted to their reasons for attempting the dangerous and abortive mission, thus permitting the display of two femmes, Pat Blake and Irene Montwill, in the flashback scenes. Otherwise, femmes mean nothing to the plot, which shows how the Communists breached the French defenses after 56 days of battling. At the windup, only Sernas and Dupont of the volunteers escape, taking with them dispatches on the defense.

Arnold Moss plays the fort commander, but he, and such others as Marcel Dalio, Lawrence Dobkin, Alberto Morin, Maurice Marsac and Louis Mercier, fare no better at making this believeable than do the leads.

The footage is long at 92 minutes. Brog.

Cult of the Cobra

Well-done horror chiller with good b.o. potential in exploitation dates.

Hollywood, March 22.

Universal release of Howard Pine production. Stars Faith Domergue, Richard Long, Marshall Thompson, Kathleen Hughes; features William Reynolds, Jack Kelly, Myrna Hansen, David Janssen. Directed by Francis D. Lyon. Screenplay, Harry Davis, Cecil Madden, Richard Collins; story by Davis; camera, Russell Metty; editor, Milton Carruth. Previewed March 16, '55. Running time, 81 MINS.

Inspector	Walter Coy
Dance Team	The Carissons
Major John Fielding	Olan Soule
Mrs. Weber	Helen Wallace
Army Nurse	Mary Alan Hokanson
High Lamian Priest	John Halloran
Captain Williams	Alan Reynolds

(Aspect ratio: 1.85-1)

This Universal release is one of those offbeat chillers that can be promoted to good returns in the exploitation market. Additionally, it is a strong entry for double bills elsewhere. Story premise is sufficiently imaginative and novel enough to build better than usual suspense and, while some may quarrel with the topic, the dramatic license taken is well done and served up for the entertainment of the horror fan.

Plot gimmick here is fashioned around an Asiatic cult of snake worshippers who believe humans can change into snakes and back again. When six American GI's disrupt a secret ceremony, the high priest places a curse on them, vowing the Snake Goddess will kill them all.

As developed in this Howard Pine production, the story line immediately knocks off one of the six and then goes after the others upon their return to New York upon Army discharge. After the violent deaths of two of the lads, each with snake venom discovered in the autopsy, the police begin to believe the theory propounded by Richard Long, one of the GI's, that a strange young woman, Faith Domergue, with whom his roommate, Marshall Thompson, has fallen in love, actually is the Snake Goddess come to exact vengeance. Windup shows Thompson pushing a cobra about to attack Kathleen Hughes, Long's fiancee, in her theatre dressingroom out of the window, and the snake transforming into Miss Domergue as she dies on the street below.

Francis D. Lyon's direction is responsible for plenty of eerie moments, further heightened by interesting optical effects as the camera becomes the eye of the striking cobra whenever Miss Domergue changes into the snake. Script by Jerry Davis, Cecil Maiden and Richard Collins realistically develops the plot, in which the femme star is a standout in an exotic role. Thompson lends conviction to his part in a well-enacted characterization, and Long is okay as the man interested in the transformation theory. Miss Hughes delivers as his fiancee, and capable support is provided by William Reynolds, Jack Kelly, David Janssen and others.

Russell Metty's photography is firstrate. Whit.

Socko science-fiction thriller, one of best outer-space film entries to date. Plenty of ballyhoo angles and large b.o. prospects.

Hollywood, March 29.

Universal release of William Alland production. Stars Jeff Morrow, Faith Domergue. Rex Reason features Lance Fuller, Russell Johnson, Douglas Spencer, Robert Nichols, Karl L. Lindt. Directed by Joseph Newman. Screenplay, Franklin Coen, Edward G. O'Callaghan; based on the novel by Raymond F. Jones; camera (Technicolor), Clifford Stine; editor, Virgil Vogel; special photography, David S. Horsley and Stine; music supervision, Joseph Gershenson. Previewed March 22, '55. Running time, 87 MINS.

Exeter	Jeff Morrow
Ruth Adams	Faith Domergue
Cal Meacham	Rex Reason
Brack	Lance Fuller
Steve Carlson	Russell Johnson
The Monitor	Douglas Spencer
Joe Wilson	Robert Nichols
Dr. Adolph Engelborg	Karl L. Lindt

(Aspect ratio: 2-1)

Special effects of the most realistic type rival the story and characterizations in capturing the interest in this exciting science-fiction chiller, one of the most imaginative, fantastic and cleverly-conceived entries to date in the outer-space film field. It may be exploited for boffo returns both in the general and exploitation markets.

Impressive use is made of Technicolor in catching the full values of these effects, which give off sometimes frightening qualities in the William Alland production, which receives vigorous direction by Joseph Newman. Also, film is a particular achivement for David S. Horsley and Clifford Stine, who handled the special photography assignment, as well as for the entire list of studio technical departments who collabbed on all its eerie ingredients.

Plot motivation in the Franklin Coen - Edward G. O'Callaghan screenplay, based on the novel by Raymond F. Jones, is derived from the frantic efforts of the men of the interstellar planet, Metaluna, to find on Earth a new source of atomic energy. This is needed to set up an isolation layer completely around Metaluna to protect it from the continuous attack by forces of the more powerful planet, Zagon, both lying beyond the constellations known to earth scientists. For the accomplishment of this goal, the outstanding scientists in the field have been recruited by a character named Exeter, who has set up a completely-equipped laboratory in Georgia.

Two of these scientists are Rex Reason and Faith Domergue, experts in nuclear fission. Becoming suspicious of the true motives of Exeter they try to escape in a small plane, but the craft is drawn up into Exeter's giant space ship (a flying saucer) and they are flown to Metaluna to complete their experiments. They arrive too late, the enemy having nearly destroyed this planet, and they barely make their escape back to earth in the space ship.

One of the most thrilling sequences occurs as huge meteors attack the space ship as it is working its way to Metaluna. Ingeniously-constructed props and equipment, together with strange sound effects, also are responsible for furthering interest, which is of the edge-of-the-seat variety during the latter half of the film. For an added fillip, there's a Mutant, half human, half insect, which boards the ship as it escapes from Metaluna.

Jeff Morrow enacts the role of Exeter in a most credible fashion, and Miss Domergue and Reason likewise are excellent. Newman handles his characters very persuasively to make them convincing, never missing a trick in the building up of his subject. Strong delineations also are registered by Lance Fuller and Douglas Spencer, both Metalueans, Russell Johnson, as a scientist, and Robert Bichols as Reason's assistant.

Technical credits are tops and meriting high mention are: Alexander Golitzen and Richard H. Riedel, art direction; Russell A. Gausman and Julia Heron, set decoration; Joseph Gershenson for a particularly atmospheric score; Virgil Vogel's fast editing; the sound by Leslie I. Carey and Robert Pritchard. Stine also handled the film's regular lensing. Whit.

(Aspect ratio: 1.85-1)

Writers of this Johnny Weissmuller jungle starrer borrow generously from H. Rider Haggard for plot material, but film fits into the groove of past offerings in the Sam Katzman series and should do the same type of biz in program situations.

Weissmuller this time becomes involved with a high priestess who discoverd the secret of eternal life during her existence with the ancient Egyptians and has lived down through the ages. Now she's queen of a tribe of Pygmies known as the Moon Men. Johnny meets her when he and a femme writer doing research on a white civilization supposed to have flourished in the region centuries before, force their way into the temple to rescue a white man taken to be her high priest.

Star is up to the usual demands of his title role, and Helene Stanton attractively portrays the priestess, afraid to leave the temple for fear that Ra, the Sun God, will destroy her the same as he killed all her people in ancient times. Finale shows her emergence into the open and crumbling to dust when Ra beams his rays upon her. Jean Byron does a good job with the writer role, and Bill Henry is the kidnapped victim. Myron Healy is in as a heavy out to get the diamonds from the temple, killed by guardian lions, and Billy Curtis handles his Pygmy leader role in okay fashion. Kimba, of course, appears for usual amusing footage as the star's chimp companion.

Charles S. Gould had his work cut out for him to bring any realism in his direction to the Dwight V. Babcock-Jo Pagano screenplay, but manages occasionally in between unintentional laughs. Whit.

The Night My Number Came Up
(BRITISH)

Tense Ealing production of aircraft passengers who've been warned, via a dream, that their plane is doomed to crash. Sturdy b.o.

London, March 22.

General Film Distributors release of Ealing Studios-Michael Balcon production. Stars Michael Redgraye, Sheila Sim, Alexander Knox, Denholm Elliott. Directed by Leslie Norman; screenplay by R. C. Sherriff; camera, Lionel Banes; editor, Peter Tanner; music, Malcolm Arnold. At Odeon, Leicester Square, London, March 22, '55. Running time, 94 MINS.

Air Marshal Hardie	Michael Redgrave
Mary Campbell	Sheila Sim
Owen Robertson	Alexander Knox
F/Lt. McKenzie	Denham Elliott
Mrs. Robertson	Ursula Jeans
Wainwright	Ralph Truman
Lindsay	Michael Hordern
Pilot	Nigel Stock
Soldier	Bill Kerr
Soldier	Alfie Bass
Bennett	George Rose
Engineer	Victor Maddern
Co-Pilot	David Orr
Navigator	Dave Yates
Miss Robertson	Dorcen Aris
Wireless Operator	Richard Davies

A variation of the time theory, this Ealing production poses the question: can the future be foretold? A highly competent piece of filmmaking, it is packed with suspense and excitement and looks geared for hefty grosses in most situations.

The plot is based on a dream in which a naval officer sees a Dakota aircraft crashing at a remote point off the coast of Japan. In the dream there are eight passengers, one of whom is a girl and another a VIP. The story is told to an air marshal who is due to fly the next day to Tokyo with his personal assistant, but there's no real similarity, as their plane will be a Liberator carrying only two passengers.

By takeoff time, however, the situation is radically changed. A Dakota is substituted for the flight, and there are eight passengers, including one VIP and one female secretary. And from the moment the plane becomes airborne, the yarn unspools with almost unrelieved tension as all the events anticipated in the dream come to pass.

R. C. Sherriff has fashioned a taut screenplay which allows for mounting tension as the plane runs into an electric storm, has a radio blackout and then gets lost high above the clouds while the passengers are gasping for breath because of the lack of oxygen. Leslie Norman's incisive direction sustains the tension and Liones Banes has lensed the production with commendable skill.

With the yarn keyed to suspense, the cast refrain from overemphasis. The standard is set by Michael Redgrave's impressively quiet portrayal of the air marshal who cannot alter course to suit a dreamer, yet remains uneasy. Sheila Sim has only a modest role as the secretary but fills it with her usual competence, and Alexander Knox gives a standout performance as a civil servant scared out of his wits as he sees the dream pattern taking shape. Denholm Elliott impresses as the air marshal's aide, and there is sterling support from a fine team of British performers. Myro.

That Lady
(BRITISH-COLOR)

Olivia De Havilland and Gilbert Roland starred in historical Spanish romantic drama; spotty returns likely.

London, March 15.

20th-Fox release of Atalanta production. Stars Olivia de Havilland, Gilbert Roland; features Paul Scofield, Francoise Rosay, Dennis Price. Directed by Terence Young. Screenplay by Anthony Veiller, Sy Bartlett from novel by Kate O'Brien; camera (Eastmancolor), Robert Krasker; editor, Raymond Poulton; music, John Addison. At Carlton Theatre, London, March 15, '55. Running time, 100 MINS.

Ana de Mendoza	Olivia de Havilland
Antonio Perez	Gilbert Roland
Philip of Spai	Paul Scofield
Bermadina	Francoise Rosay
Mateo Vasquez	Dennis Price
Don Inigo	Anthony Dawson
Cardinal	Robert Harris
Diego	Peter Illing
Don Escovedo	Jose Nieto
Captain of King's Guard	Christopher Lee
Fernando	Andy Shine

(Aspect ratio: 2.55-1)

"That Lady," the film that ran into trouble with the Spanish censorship, is quite an innocuous entertainment. It follows the convention established for historical romantic dramas. Its lavish mounting, picturesque settings and high acting standards are the pic's main assets. Strong marquee values should give it b.o. emphasis, although spotty results seem likely in most situations. Its British quota tag will be a valuable asset for local theatre owners who are wired for CinemaScope.

Filmed on location in Spain, with studio work at Elstree, the film is notable for the screen debut of Paul Scofield, a British legit actor of repute, whose performance as King Philip is one of the acting highspots. He brings a dignity and sincerity to the characterization and succeeds in surmounting the ineptness of the dialog.

Adapted from the novel by Kate O'Brien, the plot descfibes the intrigue at the court of King Philip as two private secretaries jostle for power to become first minister. Centrepiece of the story is the one-eyed princess (Olivia de Havilland) whose late husband was the unofficial ruler of the country. At the behest of her king, she extends a welcome to one of the contenders (Roland Young) but the scandal which ensues lands them both in jail.

Although handsomely lensed in Eastmancolor, this anamorphic entry moves only at a leisurely pace and the dramatic incident is frequently marred by banal conversational passages. The direction rarely gets to grips with the subject, and the editing looks all too casual.

Nevertheless, there is a consistently high standard of performance. Miss de Havilland's interpretation of the widowed princess combines vitality and charm. Gilbert Roland looks right for the role of the great lover but doesn't quite act up to it. Dennis Price gives a sterling portrayal as his rival for power. Francoise Rosay contributes a touching cameo as the princess's faithful servant while Robert Harris displays a full measure of dignity as the cardinal. Myro.

The Impostor
(JAPANESE)

Lightweight Nipponese import with below par art house b.o. values.

Brandon Films release of Shochiku (Shigeki Sugiyama and Koichi Takagi) production. Stars Utaemon Ichikawa. Directed by Tatsuo Osone. Screenplay, Hyogo Suzuki, based on original story by Mitsuzo Sasaki; camera, Aaaruo Takeno; music, Seiichi Suzuki. Previewed N.Y., March 3, '55. Running time, 90 MINS.

Baron Mondonosuke Sotome	Utaemon Ichikawa
Kyoya	Chikako Miyagi
Kikuji	Keiko Kishi
Jokai	Kokichi Takata
Naizen	Fijiro Yanagi
Matsudaira	Kodayu Ichikawa
Hagino	Kuniko Ikawa
Kojiro	Minoru Oki
Nanae	Ayuko Saijo
Tokugawa	Jogi Kaieda

(In Japanese; English Titles)

While a few Japanese pictures have won a niche of late on the American entertainment scene due to their charm and pageantry, "The Imposter" fails to measure up to the quality of its predecessors. Hampered by a rambling and often confusing story, this Shochiku Film production appears destined for a lukewarm reception in the art houses.

Moreover, the picture contains little on which an exhibitor can draw for exploitation material. Cast is peopled with several stars of the Kabuki, Japan's native theatre, but it's questionable whether their presence will impress the average art house patron.

Based on a story by Mitsuzo Sasaki, the film unreels a 17th century tale of rivalry for the throne of Japan. Two aspirants claim to be sons of the ruling Shogun. One is a genuine heir while the other is a pretender. There's much swordplay, chicanery and comic opera touches before the phony is exposed and the rightful claimant installed in the palace.

Under Tatsuo Osone's direction, the players make an earnest attempt to bring realism and movement into 90 minutes of footage. But possibly they were trying too hard for serious scenes frequently verge on the satirical and heavy drama takes on comedy proportions.

Star of this Brandon Films import is Utaemon Ichikawa. A Kabuki theatre veteran, he portrays a shrewd samurai of the imperial guard. Although believable when wielding a sword, there are times when his thesping, by Yank criteria, borders on the droll rather than dramatic.

Miss Chikako Miyagi, however, is effective as a spy and Keiko Kishi is sweet and demure as a kidnapped sister of Ichikawa. Other performances are best described as routine including those of Kokichi Takata and Minoru Oki, as the pair who aspire to the Shogun's mantle.

Black-and-white photography of Aaruo Takeno is fair. Seiichi Suzuki's music is adequate and physical values supplied by producers Shigeki Sugiyama and Koichi Takagi are on par with the average Japanese picture. Judicious editing could have safely trimmed at least 10 minutes from this import in the interest of getting to the point faster. Gilb.

Contraband Spain
(BRITISH—COLOR)

Modest British actioner of U.S. Federal agent unmasking smuggling and conterfeiting gang. Okay dualler.

London, March 16.

Associated British Pathe release of Diadem Films (Philip Gartside) production. Stars Richard Greene, Anouk, Michael Denison; features Jose Nieto, John Warwick, Philip Saville. Directed by Lawrence Huntington; screenplay, Lawrence Huntington; camera, Harry Waxman; editor, Tom Simpson. At Pavilion, London, March 15, '55. Running time, 82 MINS.

Lee	Richard Greene
Elena	Anouk
Ricky	Michael Denison
Pierre	Jose Nieto
Bryan	John Warwick
Martin	Philip Saville
Marcos	Alfonse Estella
Lucien	Antonio Almorros
Juan	Conrado San Martin
Preventive Officer	Arnold Bell
Colonel Ingleby	George Mulcaster
Mrs. Ingleby	Olive Milbourne
U. S. Embassy Official	Robert Ayres

Although lavishly staged and expertly filmed in Eastmancolor, this British pic rates only as a modest entry, but should serve as a good action dualler in most situations. It's quota tag is a prime asset for the local market.

Set on the Franco-Spanish border, the plot describes the methods of an American Federal agent (Richard Greene) in rounding up a gang of smugglers and counterfeiters after his own brother, himself one of the smugglers; is murdered. Aided by a nitery thrush (Anouk) and a British customs official (Michael Denison), his inquiries take him through France on to a cross-channel ferry, leading to the final roundup in Dover harbor.

Action moves vigorously against attractive continental backgrounds, compensating largely for weaknesses in plot structure and for slight confusion in story development. Direction is bogged down by overplus of dialog in opening sequences, but is otherwise standard. Greene gives an energetic performance as the agent and Anouk contributes a dash of glamor as the enigmatic singer. Denison portrays the Englishman abroad in the style of a caricature. Subsidiary parts are adequately filled and technical credits are up to average. Myro.

Napoleon Bonaparte
(FRENCH)

Paris, March 22.

Cinelde production and release. Stars Albert Dieudonne. Directed and written by Abel Gance. Comera, Kruger, Hubert; editor, Marguerite Beauge; music, Henri Verdun. At Studio 28, Paris. Running time, 135 MINS.

Napoleon	Albert Dieudonne
Danton	Samson Feinsilber
Marat	Antonin Artaud
Charlotte	Damia
Josephine	Annabella
Saint Just	Abel Gance

Although this pic was made in 1927, as a silent vehicle and revamped in 1934, it is reviewed again for it has just been reissued here before the recently completed Sacha Guitry panoramic of the life of Napoleon and "Desiree." Film also has a 15 minute segment which utilizes the tryptych, three screens akin to presentday Cinerama, for massive effects. Thomas Brandon has this for the U.S., and may also give it a special reissue in the arties. There is no doubt that it packs a load of curio value in its resources, treatment and technique. Film may well turn out to be a grosser in the offbeat arty spots here and in the U.S.

Original pic ran for eight hours, but this has been hacked down to 135 minutes by director Abel Gance himself. Except for a few scenes, photo quality is fine. Story is told by a group of Bonapartists during Napoleon's imprisonment on Elbe.

As sprawling and gigantic as is the subject, Gance was able to transfer its feel of grandeur and sweep to the screen plus the essence of the greatness of Napoleon. Even in its cutdown version, this transcribes the intensity of the young Napoleon, the tumbling tumbril terror of revolution, and the men who worked and tried to transform it into a meaning.

Although this beats patriotic drums blatantly, it is interesting in story and aim. Such morsels as intercutting between Napoleon trapped in a small boat, after his escape from Corsica, with the seething unrest of the Assembly by having the camera swooping over the crowds, the rapid cutting of crowd scenes and orgies, and the final use of the triple screen with its intercutting in each section for a rousing finale, makes this of interest for film patrons looking for the unusual.

Here it also marks the belated recognition of one of the great film pioneers—Abel Gance—now making pix again after a 15-year hiatus. Acting in pic is surprisingly acceptable today. Albert Dieudonne's sharp, commanding Napoleon hits sterling heights despite a few tendencies to exaggeration. Mosk.

H.O. Tide Ebbs L.A. Biz; 'Combo' Crisp $64,000 in 10 Sites, 'House' Neat 7½G, 'Eden' Good $32,000, 2d

Los Angeles, March 29.

Firstrun film biz is at a low ebb the current week with only two newcomers to offset the down drag of holdovers and extended runs. Both new bills kicked off on the good side with "Doctor in the House" seeing $7,500 at the small Four Star while "Big Combo" is a snappy $27,000 in three firstruns, plus a possible $37,000 in one nabe and six ozoners.

Reissue of "Camille" is also booming at the small Canon, with a fine $6,500 expected. Among the holdovers "East of Eden" sees a good $32,000 possible in its second week at two locations and "Hit the Deck" is rounding up a nice $10,500 in second frame at one site. Of sureseater fare, "Hulot's Holiday" is holding to a nifty $5,000 in its ninth week.

BALTO SLUGGISH; 'STAR' OKE 9G, 'CRASHOUT' 7G

Baltimore, March 29.

Middle of Lenten season with a high ratio of Catholics here finds most exhibs marking time with new product until Holy Week. Medium grosses predominate with the third week of "Country Girl" topnotch at the Hipp. "Man Without A Star" is okay at the Century. "Crashout" is mild at the Stanley. "Gate Of Hell" opened nicely at the Playhouse.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-UA) (3,000; 25-65-95)—"Man Without Star" (U). Okay $9,000. Last week, "Many Rivers To Cross" (M-G) (2d wk), $6,500.

Film Centre (Rappaport) (960; 50-$1) — "Glass Slipper" (M-G). Starts tomorrow (Wed.). Third week of "Romeo And Juliet" (UA) was mild at $3,000.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,100; 50-$1)—"Country Girl" (Par) (3d wk). Still sturdy at $11,000 after $15,500 in the second.

Keith's (Fruchtman) (2,400; 25-$1)—"Bridges At Toko-ri" (Par) (4th wk). Fading to $6,000 after $7,500 in the third.

Town (Rappaport) (1,600; 35-$1) —"Long Gray Line" (Col) (4th wk). Fairish $7,000 following $8,000 for the third.

'Deck' Trim $14,000 As Pitt's Lone New Entry; 'Star' Bright 7G, 2d

Pittsburgh, March 29.

Only new picture downtown is "Hit the Deck" at Penn and it's getting most of the gravy. Musical, however, was hurt some along with everything else by snowstorm and freezing cold weather over the weekend. Harris had to rush in weak twin bill of "Destry" and "West of Zanzibar" at last minute when "Long Gray Line" failed to hold up. "Cinerama Holiday" continues strong at Warner.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 65-$1)— "Man Without Star" (U) (2d wk). Still cashing in on brisk getaway, launched by Kirk Douglas' personal on stage. Shooting for $7,000 and may hold. Last week, better than $7,000, very big.

Harris (Harris) (2,165; 65-$1)— "Destry" (U) and "West of Zanzibar" (U). Slim $4,500. Last week, "Gray Line" (Col), bit over $6,500.

Guild (Green) (500; 65-$1)—"Camille" (M-G) (reissue) (3d wk). Likely to end at about $1,900. Last week, $3,100.

'Untamed' Rousing 11G, 'Horse' Fast 10G Despite Sub-Zero Mpls. Weather

Minneapolis, March 29.

Below zero "spring" temperature apparently are chilling theatregoing inclinations and the boxoffice suffers accordingly. However, such newcomers as "Untamed" and "Chief Crazy Horse" should end up respectably in the money. Likewise, the quartet of holdovers continues to prosper in the face of the weather handicap.

Estimates for This Week

Century (S-W) (1,140; $1.75-$2.65) "Cinerama" (Indie) (50th wk.). There's no slowing up this boxoffice wonder. Amazing $15,000. Last week, $16,000.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; 65-85) "Abbott & Costello Meet Keystone Kops" (U). Youngsters flocking to this one. Fair $3,300. Last week, "Big Combo" (AA), $3,500.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 65-85) "Gang Busters" (Indie). Moderate $5,000. Last week, "3 Ring Circus" (Par) (2d wk.), $4,200 at 85-$1.

Radio City (Par) (4,100; 85-$1) "Untamed" (20th). Mixed opinions regarding this one's merits, but its marquee names spell moolah. Good $11,000. Last week, "Hit the Deck" (M-G), $12,000.

RKO-Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 85-$1) "Chief Crazy Horse" (U). Sturdy $10,000. Last week, "Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk.), $7,500.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (2,800; 85-$1) "Long Gray Line" (Col) (m.o.). Here after a prosperous Orpheum fortnight. Healthy $6,500. Last week, "Southwest Passage" (UA) and "Khyber Patrol" (UA), $4,000 at 65-85c.

State (Par) (2,300; 85-$1) "The Racers" (20th) (2d wk.). Virile $6,500. Last week, $11,000.

World (Mann) (400; 65-$1.20) "Country Girl" (Par) (6th wk.). Hefty $5,000. Last week, $5,100.

Washington, March 29.

Despite an almost completely holdover situation, the annual influx of tourists is beginning to have an upbeat effect on main stem b.o. All holdovers and long runs are steady, and several have topped last week's take. In latter class is "Cinerama." A weekend cold wave helped hypo biz by driving visitors and natives indoors. "Americano," sole newcomer, shapes okay at the two Warner houses, Ambassador and Metropolitan.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (SW) (1,490; 60-85) —"Americano" (RKO). Okay $6,000. Last week, "New York Confidential" (WB), $4,000.

Cold Crimps L'ville; 'Americano' Fair 11G

Louisville, March 29.

Return of winter weather, with damaging winds and a low of 12 degrees, put a tremendous crimp in weekend biz at the firstruns. Rialto billing "Americano" and "Fast and Furious" while the State is showing "Black Tuesday" and "Golden Mistress." Kentucky is holding "Country Girl" for a fourth stanza.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,000; 75-$1)—"Country Girl" (Par) (4th wk). Likely $6,000 after last week's nice $6,500.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,000; 75-$1)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (7th

'Jungle' Smash $23,000 Tops Chilly Philly; 'House' Tall 10G, 'Horse' 12G

Philadelphia, March 29.

"Blackboard Jungle," helped by an extensive ad campaign and controversial subject matter, is drawing strong notices and heavy attendance at upped prices. "Crazy Horse" never got started at the Mastbaum while "Doctor in the House" gave the Trans-Lux a hypo. Elsewhere, biz is off due to record low weekend temperatures and holdovers as houses marked time for the Easter splurge.

Estimates for This Week

Arcadia (S&S) (625; 99-$1.49) — "Blackboard Jungle" (M-G). Terrific $23,000. Last week, "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) (4th wk), $6,000.

Boyd (SW) (1,430; $1.25-$2.60)— "Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (6th wk). Great $27,500. Last week, $29,000.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 90-$1.40) — "Untamed" (20th) (3d wk). Mild $13,000. Last week, $16,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 65-$1.30)—"Man Without Star" (U) (2d wk). Down to $13,000. Last week, $23,000.

Trans-Lux World (T-L) (604; 99-$1.50)—"Go, Man, Go" (UA) and "Khyber Patrol" (UA). Poor $3,200. Last week, "Stranger's Hand" (DCA), $3,000.

B.O. Slump Grips Chi; 'Plain'-Gibbs Hep $50,000, 'Underwater!' Hot 29G, 'Horse' Fast 21G, 'Racers' Dull 17G

Chicago, March 29.

Enigmatic b.o. slump continues here and is only partially attributable to Lent, bad weather and long runs of many pix. "The Purple Plain" at the Chicago, with Georgia Gibbs topping vaude, shapes a nice $50,000 in the first week, and "Underwater" at the Woods looks headed for a tall $29,000 in the same frame.

"Chief Crazy Horse" and "Land of Fury" combo at the Roosevelt should get a neat $21,000 in the first session as "The Racers" and "The Atomic Kid" twin-bill does a dull $17,000 in the same round at the McVickers. At the Grand, Smoke Signal" and "Ma and Pa Kettle at Waikiki" twin-bill looms a slow $6,500 opener.

"Doctor In The House" at the Esquire stays strong in the second week as "Holiday for Henrietta" at the Ziegfeld holds well in the same stanza. "Long Gray Line" is slowing down at the Oriental in the fourth week and "Gate of Hell" keeps drawing in the same week at the Loop. At the Monroe, "Romeo and Juliet" is levelling off in the fourth stanza while "Illicit Interlude" stays steady in the fourth week at the World. "Belles of St. Trinian's" is still tall in the fourth at the Carnegie.

"Battle Cry" is dropping off in the fifth session at the State-Lake and "Country Girl" is also diving in the sixth round at United Artists. "The Little Kidnappers" is still getting a nice ransom at the Surf in the sixth week while "This Is Cinerama" stays solid in the 87th week at the Palace.

Estimates for This Week

Carnegie (Telem't) (480; 95) — "Belles St. Trinian's" (Indie) (4th wk). Staunch $2,700. Last week, $3,000.

Americo Aboaf to Studio

Americo Aboaf, Universal's foreign general manager, leaves N.Y. Saturday (2) for a week of confabs at the studio.

After a week of looking at product and huddling with Alfred E. Daff, U exec v.p., and Edward Muhl, studio topper, Aboaf expects to return to his N.Y. headquarters.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e., without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

'Knock' Loud 14G, St. L.; 'Line' 11G, 2d

St. Louis, March 29.

Town is slowly recovering from last week's blizzard with consequent slow biz at big houses. "Knock on Wood," however, is doing well at the St. Louis. It's the first Paramount picture to play that house in years. "Cinerama Holiday" is holding firm at the Ambassador.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (Indie) (1,400; $1.20-$2.40)—"Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (6th wk). Fine $20,000 after same for fifth session.

Fox (F&M) (5,000; 50-75) — "White Feather" (20th) and "Davy Crocket, Indian Scout". (Realart). Opened Tuesday. Last week, "Captain Lightfoot" (U) and "Smoke Signal" (U), neat $14,000.

Loew's (Loew) (1,742; 60-85)— "Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G) and "Fire Over Africa" (Col) (2d wk). Good $9,000 following lusty $15,000 for initial stanza.

Orpheum (Loew) (1,400; 60-85)— "Black Tuesday" (UA) and "Shield for Murder" (UA) (2d wk). Fair $5,500 after nice $7,000 for opening frame.

'Girl' Sweet 21G Tops K.C.; 'Kettle' Hot 16G, 'Darling' Fine $6,000, 2d

Kansas City, March 29.

"Country Girl" is leading the pack, with a sock opening week at the Paramount, and due for several weeks of playing time. "Ma and Pa Kettle at Waikiki" in four Fox Midwest houses getting very pleasant play. "Women's Prison" and "Bamboo Prison" dualled at the Midland is light. Severe winter blizzards hit twice last week, slowing trade on current session as well as previous week.

Estimates for This Week

Glen (Dickson) (750; 85-$1)—"One Summer of Happiness" (Indie) (6th wk). Fancy $1,700, holds. Last week, $1,800.

'Jungle' Fair 15G In Snowy Cleve.

Cleveland, March 29.

Heavy weekend snowstorms slashed all grosses. "Blackboard Jungle" is only moderate at the State and "Capt. Lightfoot" is dreary at the Palace. The Hipp's "Big House U. S. A." is mild and "Conquest of Space" proved disappointing at the Ohio.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (S-W) (3,000; 70-$1)— "Long Gray Line" (Col) (3d wk). Good $9,000. Last week, $13,000.

Hipp (Telem't) (3,700; 70-$1) — "Big House U.S.A." (UA). Mild $9,000. Last week, "Untamed" (20th) (2d wk), $11,000.

State (Loew's) (3,500; 60-$1) — "Blackboard Jungle" (M-G). Moderate $15,000. Last week, "Conquest of Space" (Par), $15,100.

Stillman (Loew's) (2,700; 60-90) —"Country Girl" (Par) (8th wk). Smart $7,000 following $8,000 last week.

'Slipper' (155G), 'Star' (27G) Shine In Gotham; 'Jungle' Torrid 65G 2d, 'Eden' Nice 35G 3d, Others Spotty

If you had the picture, you did the business. That appeared to be the trend on Broadway last week. The well-received blockbusters drew crowds despite a rainy Saturday and unseasonable cold weather on Sunday. Saturday night saw lines at the Radio City Music Hall ("The Glass Slipper"), Loew's State ("Blackboard Jungle"), and Astor ("East of Eden"). The Roxy, where "Untamed" dipped, benefitted from the overflow Music Hall crowd.

Ace newcomer is "The Glass Slipper" (M-G) which, plus the Hall's popular annual Easter stageshow, chalked up a whopping $155,000, the best the Rockefeller showcase has had in weeks. The weekend biz was solid, slipping only Sunday night. "Man Without A Star" (U), only other opener, got off to a great start at the Victoria with about $27,000, solid for 1,000-seat house.

"Battle Cry," Warner Bros. champ longrun picture, continued to draw at the Paramount with a fine $33,000 for the eighth stanza. Another Warner entry, "East of Eden" at the Astor, is shaping up as another hit with $35,000 in the third session. Metro's controversial "Blackboard Jungle," aided by newspaper yarns of juve delinquency in the schools and a continuous round of pro and con comment, continued fancy at Loew's State with $65,000 in the second round. A new Alec Guinness picture, "To Paris With Love" at the arty Fine Arts, got off to fast start yesterday (Tues.) after a benefit preem Monday (28). Paramount's "The Country Girl" ends a successful 15-week run at the Criterion today (Wed.) with a bright $17,000 anticipated for the final round. Col's "Long Gray Line" was okay at $19,000 in sixth Capitol week.

New pictures moving in this week include 20th's "Man Called Peter" at the Roxy and Paramount's "Mambo" at the Criterion.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 50-$1.75) —"East of Eden" (WB) (3d wk). Third session of the Elia Kazen production looks to hit $35,000 for stanza ending today (Wed.). Second week was $44,000. Continues indef.

Baronet (Reade) (430; 90-$1.55) —"Game of Love" (Indie) (16th wk). The 15th round ended yesterday (Tues.) continued big with $3,700, solid for this period of run. Stays until "Trouble in Glen" (Rep) moves in. No specific date set for latter. The 14th week for "Love" was $3,900.

Capitol (Loew's) (4820; 85-$2.20) — "Long Gray Line" (Col) (7th wk). The session ending today (Wed.) looks to hit good $19,000 after $22,000 for previous stanza. Metro's "The Prodigal" is scheduled for May.

Criterion (Moss) (1,700; 50-$1.85) —"The Country Girl" (Par) (15th wk). Winds up sock 15-week run today (Wed.) with okay $17,000. "Mambo" (Par) moves in tomorrow (Thurs.). "Girl" was trim $19,000 in 14th stanza.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80) —"To Paris With Love" (Continental) (1st wk). Opened to smash biz today (Wed.) following charity preem for Union Settlement last night (Tues.). Matching b.o. of previous Alec Guinness films. In ahead, "Holiday for Henrietta" (Arde), with sock $6,800 for ninth and final week. Forced out by locked booking.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 70-$1.50) —"On Waterfront" (Col) (2d run). Slipped to $5,200 for current round after fine $7,000 for previous round. Not getting the business expected despite the numerous nominations for Academy Awards. "Wayward Wife" (IFE) opens April 1.

Guild (Guild) (450; $1-$1.80)— "Gate of Hell" (Indie) (16th wk). The Japanese import is still drawing solidly, moving up to $12,000 after $11,000 for 15th session. Continues until the summer.

Mayfair (Brandt) (1,736; 79-$1.80)—"Underwater" (RKO) (8th wk). The Jane Russell starrer hit mild $6,500 for seventh stanza ended yesterday (Tues.) after fair $8,500 for previous outing. "Long John Silver" (DCA) moves in April 6.

Normandie (Trans-Lux) (592; 95-$1.80)—"Camille" (M-G) (reissue) (9th wk). Eighth round ended Monday (21) hit fancy $5,400 after smash $6,500 for preceding week. Tieup with the publication of Greta Garbo's biography helping business, with Brentano's giving out tickets to buyers of tome.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 50-$1.60)— "The Big Combo" (AA) and vaude. Week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to hit fancy $22,000. Last week "Tight Spot" (Col) and vaude was also $22,000.

Paramount (ABC-Par) (3,664; 70-$1.75)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (9th wk). Continues as the champ longrun pic on Broadway with solid $33,000 for eighth round after sturdy $40,000 for previous week. "Strategic Air Command" (Par) opens April 20.

Paris (Pathe Cinema) (568; 90-$1.80)—"Wages of Fear" (Indie) (7th wk). Week ending last night (Tues.) was good $8,000 or less. Previous session was $9,000. Continues with "Heartbreak Ridge" (M-G) announced as next.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 95-$2.75)—"Glass Slipper" (M-G) and stageshow (1st wk). Opened to smash $155,000, best here in weeks. Helped by Hall's annual Easter show, and unanimously good reviews. Last week of "Hit the Deck" (M-G), the third, was mild $108,000.

Roxy (Nat'l Th.) (5,717; 65-$2.40) —"Untamed" (20th) (3d wk). Third and final session dipped to so-so $22,000 after $35,000 for first holdover session. "Man Called Peter" opens tomorrow (Thurs.) night with special benefit preem.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 78-$1.75)— "Blackboard Jungle" (M-G) (2d wk). First holdover session continued socko with round expected to wind up with $65,000 after $68,000 for opener. Controversy over authenticity of picture helping bally with newspaper and radio-tv debates helping biz.

Sutton (R&B) (561; 90-$1.50)— "Romeo and Juliet" (UA) (15th wk). The 14th round ended yesterday (Tues.) jumped to $5,400 after $4,800 for previous stanza. "Marty" (UA) opens April 11.

Trans-Lux 52nd St. (T-L) (540; $1-$1.50)—"Doctor in the House" (Rep.) (6th wk). Current stanza ending today (Wed.) holding at $9,500 after same total week before. Continues indef.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,060; 50-$1.75)—"Man Without a Star" (U). Opened to $27,000 or thereabouts, great for a 1,000-seater. In ahead, "N. Y. Confidential" (WB) hit $8,000 for six days of fifth week.

Warner (Cinema Prod.) (1,600; $1.20-$3.30)—"Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (8th wk). Seventh session ending Saturday (26) continued at capacity with $55,800, helped by extra Saturday morning performance for Boy Scouts at $1 a head. Previous session was $54,400.

'Jungle' Lush 57G Tops Dullish Hub; 'Feather' Fairish 15G, 'Girl' 12½G, 7th

Boston, March 29.

"Blackboard Jungle" at the Orpheum and State, is the big noise here this frame with the balance of firstruns in the so-so bracket. "White Feather," at the Paramount and Fenway, is fair. "Country Girl," in seventh week at the Astor, is okay but "Underwater!", in second frame at the Memorial, and "Untamed," in second week at the Met, are sluggish. "Camille" continues big at Beacon Hill.

Estimates For This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,500; 75-$1.25)— "Country Girl" (Par) (7th wk). Fine $12,500 following slick $14,500 for sixth week.

Beacon Hill (Beacon Hill) (800; 75-$1.25)—"Camille" (M-G) (reissue) (2d wk). Near $12,500 after very big $15,000 for first frame.

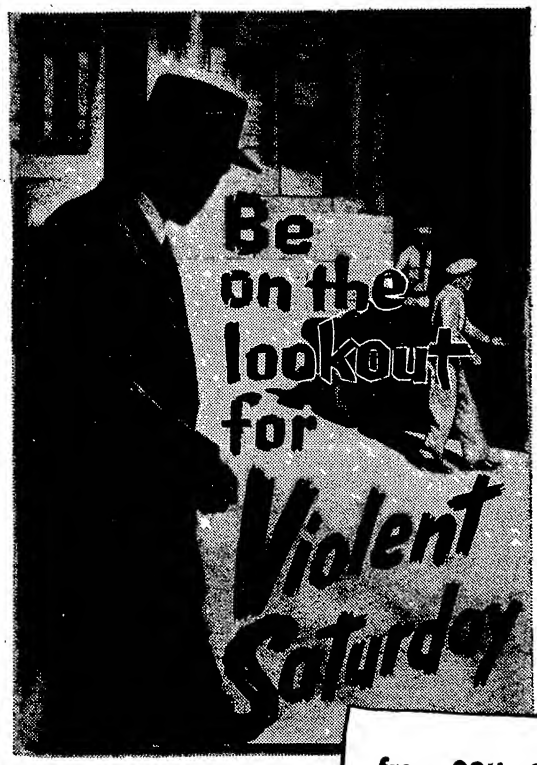
Boston (Cinerama Productions) (1,354; $1.25-$2.85) — "Cinerama" (Indie) (65th wk). Nifty $16,000. Previous week spurted to lively $18,300.

Exeter (Indie) (1,300; 60-$1)— "Gate of Hell" (Indie). Opened Sunday (27). Last week, "The Detective" (Col). Wound sixth week near $5,000.

Fenway (NET) (1,373; 60-$1)— "White Feather" (20th) and "Atomic Kid" (Rep). Mild $4,000. Last week, "Conquest of Space" (Par) and "5 Guns West" (SG). Thin $4,000.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 60-$1)— "Underwater!" (RKO) and "Sleeping Tiger" (Indie) (2d wk). Mild $12,000 following below hopes $19,000 for first week.

Metropolitan (NET) (4,367; 60-$1)—"Untamed" (20th) and "Bob Mathias Story" (AA) (2d wk). About $11,000 shapes after fair $20,000 last week.



Orpheum (Loew's) (3,000; 60-$1) —"Blackboard Jungle" (M-G) and "Wyoming Renegades" (Col). Hefty $38,000 or near. Last week, "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) and "Golden Mistress" (UA). Slow $15,000.

Paramount (NET) (1,700; 60-$1) —"White Feather" (20th) and "Atomic Kid" (Rep). Thin $11,000. Last week, "Conquest of Space" (Par) and "5 Guns West" (SG). Fell off to disappointing $12,400.

Pilgrim (ATC) (1,800; 65-95)— "Ten Wanted Men" (Col) and "The Wild One" (Col) (reissue) (2d wk). Off to about $7,000 following fair $11,000 for first round.

State (Loew's) (3,500; 60-$1)— "Blackboard Jungle" (M-G) and "Wyoming Renegades" (Col). Strong $19,000. Last week, "Jupiter's Darling" (M-G) and "Golden Mistress" (UA). Thin $7,500.

Nervous Producers In Foreign Lands Sure To Stir Grief For Yanks In '56

Although they've been squeezing a hefty volume of coin out of the foreign market and expect to do even better, the U. S. film companies are conscious of the fact that they may have to hurdle increasingly tough trade barriers abroad in the year to come.

Main difficulty, and one that translates itself almost automatically into headaches for the Americans, is the failure of the local product to come up to original expectations. Added to this is the new impact of Hollywood features with their technical innovations to which foreign producers have yet to catch up.

This new element of competition is seen spurring protectionist tendencies among governments abroad. Having seen their local industries flourish, creating employment and adding to the tax coin, film producing countries are now eager to retain this advantage even, if necessary, at the expense of American imports.

Tipoff to this situation is seen in the current Italian situation, which one industry observer close to the foreign market summed up like this last week: "Film relations between us and the Italians have never been worse." Another straw-in-the-wind is the German move to renounce the part of the GATT agreement limiting enforcement of local screen quotas.

Motion Picture Export Assn. frankly admits that it expects trouble ahead, particularly during the period when foreign producers sniff the trade winds and decide on whether or not to switch to the wide screen, stereophonic sound, etc.

What's bothering American execs is that a restriction, once imposed abroad, is rarely lifted if it serves local interests. "They're now a couple of years behind us again," noted one industryite. "So they're afraid of getting hurt, and they protect themselves, even if they should catch up to us, you can bet your life, those restrictions will stay on."

ANTA Marred By Sundries

blurry, especially the medium and the long shots. The camera work and lighting, while mostly satisfactory, lapsed horribly at times. Lena Horne should have a particular beef. She was the victim of sloppy camerawork and terrible lighting and came over poorly visually.

Victor Borge came through great and drew laugh after laugh. Cyril Ritchard, who shared the m.c. chores with Henry Morgan, belabored his English origin. It was just a little too much. (He's Irish and from Australia.—Ed.)

In all fairness, this ANTA Album should not serve to determine the future of legit shows over closed-circuit theatre television. However, there'll have to be updating of equipment. In comparison with the large screens now common in theatres and the results obtained with color, the tv screen and picture came out a poor second. The large-screen tv units in many theatres are now old, some even obsolete, and if theatremen hope to make closed-circuit a big paying business, they'd better look to their technical laurels.

The ANTA show was the first coast-to-coast entertainment event not presented by Theatre Network Television, which has staged the Metropolitan Opera and the championship prize fights. The opera, which seems like a more difficult event to sell, fared much better, with sellouts in a few spots. However, this had the backing of aggressive selling by Metopera groups and the theatres.

The difficulty ANTA and CARE had in peddling tickets is pointed up by the numerous price changes. Houses were originally scaled on a reserved seat basis at $5, $10, and $25 tax free, with the $25 ducats going to patrons. As the time for the event approached, the scale was lowered to $2 to $10. At curtain time, tickets were selling at from $1 to $3 at the RKO-Fordham. After the show started, customers were told to take any empty seat in the house.

And there were plenty. The 2,100-seat theatre drew less than 1,000. The 3,500-seat Loew's State in Boston had only 900 in the audience. The 1,100-seat Paramount in St. Paul was only half filled. Less than half showed up at the Temple Theatre in Birmingham, Ala. With a total attendance of 2,000 in two houses in Miami and Miami Beach, only half the seats were filled. In Chicago, only 300 turned out for the telecast at the 4,400-seat Uptown Theatre. Washington, D. C., seemed to have fared the best, with 1,800 payees at Loew's Capitol, including a good share of embassy row and some top figures in Government. The 1,200-seat Ashland in Kansas City had only 300 paying customers. Five hundred turned out at the 3,000-seat Orpheum in Omaha.

A fault in the presentation, which may be considered minor by many, was the complete slight of the out-of-town audience. No one mentioned or seemed to care that a vast group outside New York was looking in.

In the east, most theatres opened their doors at 9 p.m. What to do for an hour and half posed a problem. In some theatres, special CARE films were shown. In others, special concerts arranged by local committees were presented. The Washington audience was treated to a live concert by William Warfield and the Howard University Choir. Boston, Baltimore, and Philadelphia also had live shows preceding the telecast.

When you come right down to it, the ANTA Album offered nothing that can't be seen on home tv. The Ed Sullivan "Toast of the Town" show has offered performers such as Miss Horne and Borge and has presented excerpts from various plays, and the production numbers on the Jackie Gleason show, for example, are superior to those seen in the ANTA presentation.

Albany Lacked Interest

Albany, March 29.

Cancellation of the "ANTA Album" closed-circuit telecast Monday night (28) in the Grand, because of indicated poor seat sales, marked the first important theatre-video origination that had not been piped into Albany. The 1500-seat, three-floor house, once a spoke in the F. F. Proctor vaudeville wheel, had been tentatively leased for the CARE-sponsored show, but the plan was dropped due to an apparent lack of public interest in tickets, at $5 per.

Paul V. Wallen, is lessee-proprietor of the Grand, to which television equipment was transferred several years ago from the nearby Fabian-owned Palace.

A Real Busto in L. A.

Hollywood, March 29.

In Los Angeles, the ANTA Album closed-circuit to Fox Wilshire laid a large bomb with only 400 attending for $1.500 gross. Nut for the line, loop charges, and theatre rental was around $4,500. House was scaled $5 and $10 but only 50 sawbuck tickets were sold, with some requiring "pressure" on the picture crowd. It was the worst turnout for any closed-circuited event. ANTA drew only 100 in Phoenix and around 200 in Frisco.

In L. A. the show is regarded as a blow against theatre and subscription tv. The advance was badly handled with little publicity. No one knew until Sunday that "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" would be on the program.

Birk Binnard Succeeds Blumberg at Stanley

Philadelphia, March 29.

Birk Binnard has been named head of Stanley Warner Theatres' publicity and advertising. He succeeds Irving Blumberg, who left the company after 27 years to join Warner Bros. Pictures as advertising rep for Philly and Washington exchange areas.

Manager of the Warner Theatre, in Reading, Pa., since 1945, Binnard has been with the Stanley theatre chain for 20 years. Roy Robbins continues as assistant publicity and ad director.

LATIN AMERICA GOOD FILM MARKET STILL, BUT LOCAL $$ SHORTAGE HURTS

Dollar-shy Latin America, while a sock market for U. S. features is giving U. S. distributors lots of headaches, mostly via taxes. Increase in the Americans' overall billings, which is continuing, is being offset by strong deflationary and inflationary tendencies in many of the Latin American countries.

Returning to the U. S. last week from an extensive 10-week jaunt through the territory, Robert Corkery, Motion Picture Export Assn. veep in charge of Latin America, reported to the board on the overall picture which holds one or two bright spots.

Country-by-country, the situation is the following:

Cuba. The government has revived a 1943 measure calling for a 10% tax on the film companies' New York share. Since the levy would be applied retroactively, it would come to something like $2,000,000. The 10% tax would be in addition to a 3.5% tax on the gross and a 2% remittance tax. Both of these have been in force all the time. An MPEA tax committee is currently in Havana in an attempt to straighten out the situation. It's possible that MPEA prexy Eric Johnston may have to intervene.

Chile. Corkery was able to arrange for a $500,000 remittance, about half of the U. S. film coin frozen in the country from where there haven't been any dollars received for 18 months. Corkery also obtained a tentative promise from the Bank of Chile for remittance of $200,000 of monies owed to MPEA member companies on license permits. Coin was deposited in Chilean pesos in advance of film imports. When it came to covering it with dollars, the Chileans declared they didn't possess the necessary exchange.

The $500,000 in accrued royalties came out at the free rate of exchange. However, Corkery told the board that the Chileans understood and agreed that this should set no precedent and that the remaining coin was owed the companies at the official rate of exchanged.

Colombia. The government may tax remittances 30%, there being a shortage of dollar exchange. There's also a possibility that, by mid-year, the Colombians may move to reduce the volume of remittable coin. At the moment the Americans can transfer 60% of their gross as N. Y. share. Colombia already has upped import duties to 30% from a former 3%.

There's a possibility, too, that Colombia may nationalize film censorship with all the blue-pencilling being done in Bogota. Scissoring is currently being done largely uunder the aegis of local Church authorities.

Brazil. It's feared that the excommission is getting ready to up the "agio" (tax) which is added to the official exchange rate. At the moment, 70% of the U. S. companies' remittances come out at the official rate and 30% at the free market rate. The official rate now is 18.82 cruzeiros to the dollar. Up to last September, the agio was seven cruzeiros to the dollar. Then it was raised to 15. The new tax may go as high as 20 or 25 cruzeiros, forcing the companies to convert at the rate of 38.82 cr. or 43.82 cr. to the dollar.

Attempt is being made by MPEA to escape the increase which would sharply cut its remittances from Brazil, which rates as the most lucrative of the Latin American markets. While the economic picture in Brazil is cloudy, the U. S. companies did just receive their import licenses for theh next six months.

Latin American b.o. is up generally, in part to the increasing number of theatres and also due to the rise in population. Corkery reported that attempts are being made down to the line to obtain increases in admission prices which have been fixed at low levels for a long time.

There is an admish problem in Brazil. In Chile, a 20% boost in admission prices is in the wind by the end of this quarter. MPEA also has asked for an increase in Argentina for the new style product, i.e., CinemaScope, VistaVision, etc.

Bachelors: Key to B.O.

Waco, Tex., March 29.

Claiming to be world's champion filmgoer is George Raborn, a sports writer for the News-Tribune here. Since 1932 he has seen a total of 5,508 features, by count. He has seen as many as 402 in a year. In February alone he viewed 77 pics.

Explanation: he's single and doesn't own a tv set.

ANTA Album

start, may have militated against better b.o. CARE also hasn't the publicity pressure of some other welfare orgs. But the event must have been an eye-opener for legiters, who'll be awaiting comments from viewers in other cities and final tabulations.

Closed-circuit may prove the answer to legit financing; it might pay off the production cost in one shot, or whet one's appetite to see the show live. On the other hand, it might harm a Broadway run, kill off a road tour, and decrease legit employment. Whatever the effects, they loom as revolutionary.

Album's New Accent

As for the N. Y. live presentation, it was a widely-different Album from the previous four ('48-'49-'50-'51). Those catered to the theatre audience; this one was strictly for closed-tv. Where talent in previous Albums worked cuffo, each actor (star or chorus) received $300 for Monday's show. This was the first time an ANTA Album had its own singing and dancing chorus, instead of groups from Broadway musicals.

Show was aimed for the wired-tv audience. Instead of nostalgic harkbacks of yore, this show was geared for more general and current entertainment, in deference to the viewers nationally. The Adelphi audience was actually watching a telecast, instead of a stageshow, and may have felt bilked. Forefront of the stage was crowded with technicians and stagehands; a huge dolly camera occupied center stage and several more cameras crowded the rest of it.

Neglected 'Home' Aude?

Audience craned necks to see the show on the huge 20x16 screen above the stage, or on the several 21-inch sets on the floor. Stage work was generally blocked or partly-hidden. Singers were playing to the mike, singing too softly for the studio audience. ANTA may hot get as heavy turnouts for the "home" audience on future closed-tv'ers.

But the fascination of watching scenes behind the scene, the smooth handling of the vidcast, and the show itself, offset the inconveniences Monday night. The talent was super.

Program included a scene from "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," with Barbara Bel Geddes, and another from "Bus Stop," with Kim Stanley, Albert Salmi and Lou Polan—both surefire. Other highspots were Saroyan's "A Christmas Tie" (originally done on "Omnibus"), with Helen Hayes, Ray Boyle and Iggie Wolfington; the "Little Child" sketch from "Two's Company," with David Burns and Michael Mann; Lena Horne in a Rodgers & Hart songbook; Ruth Draper in her Scottish Immigrant monolog, and Victor Borge satirizing a Mozart opera (vocally and at piano).

Sandra Deel and an ensemble started matters off with "Another Op'nin, Another Show," from "Kiss Me Kate"; Helen Gallagher and Harold Lang sang and danced to "Suits Me"; Victor Moore did a dramatic bit, "The Actor's Sacrifice"; Ezio Pinza sang "Love Is A Very Light Thing," from "Fanny," and Julie Wilson sang "Why Was I Born?" Henry Morgan and Cyril Ritchard shared emcee chores, and Lehman Engel led the large orch spiritedly.

Gilbert Miller was producer, with Ben Kranz and Willard Swire doing yeoman work as coordinators, Milton Weintraub was general manager.

TRIP TO ENGLAND PRIZE

Stanley Warner Puts Up $19,500 To Stir Staff Brains

Total of 176 prizes, worth $19,500, with the top award an all-paid trip to England for two, is being offered by Stanley Warner to its theatre managers for the creation of exploitation, merchandising and promotion campaigns during the circuit's "Spring Movie Festival."

Drive is scheduled for the months of April, May, and June, with all theatres being serviced with an elaborate manual outlining all aspects of the Festival.

The Associated British Cinemas circuit will be the host for the trip to England. This is part of a reciprocal deal, Stanley Warner having entertained the winning manager of a similar campaign conducted by the ABC chain.

'East of Eden' B.O. Rival of 'Battle'

It looks like two in a row for Warner Bros. With "Battle Cry" already shaping up as the top grosser in the company's history, "East of Eden" is chalking up hefty returns in some dozen pre-release engagements. In some situations, it's coming close to or matching the initial returns on "Battle Cry." "Eden" doesn't go into general release until April 12.

Meanwhile, "Battle Cry" continues its hot pace. It's currently in its ninth frame at the Paramount, N.Y., longest run the house has had in a long time. It stays at the Par until April 20 when Paramount's "Strategic Air Command" moves in. The Broadway run is setting the pattern for holdover engagements in many spots in the country, with the picture currently in its sixth week in Akron, eighth in Baltimore, fifth in Canton, seventh in Cincinnati, sixth in Columbus, Dayton, Philadelphia, Chicago, Reading, and fifth in Omaha and Salt Lake City.

Picture has racked up almost 100% holdover playdates in all key firstrun situations, an enviable mark for any current film.

Cleveland Buying Pool Enters G&P Answer

Washington, March 29.

The Regent Theatre Co., of Cleveland, and other defendants asked the U.S. Supreme Court yesterday (28) not to hear an appeal by the G&P Amusement Co. in the latter's treble damage suit.

Case involves a novel angle. The damage suit is against a buying pool of independent theatres without common ownership.

G&P charges its Moreland Theatre was put out of business by the nearby Regent Theatre because the latter was part of a buying cooperative and thereby exercised undue pressure on the distributors.

The defendants asserfed in their reply brief that the suit was not brought for the benefit of G&P, but rather for the benefit of the present stockholders, Emanuel J. Stutz and associates, who acquired the stock in the Moreland cheaply in 1948, about 18 months before the suif was brought.

Italo-American Sports Pic Cops 'Grand Diploma'

Washington, March 29.

A film on "Italo-American Athletes," distributed abroad by the U. S. Information Agency, has copped a special "Grand Diploma of Honor" at the 11th International Sports Films Festival at Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy. Shown in the film are such toppers as Joe Di Maggio, Gene Sarazen, Eddie Arcaro, Rocky Marciano, etc.

Ten countries took part in the showings, with three other American sports shorts also garnering awards.

New Threat to British Com'l TV Posed By 14 Unions' Bid for Quota Cloak

London, March 29.

Give us a satisfactory quota protection or we won't work. That, in effect, is the challenge thrown out by 14 interested unions to the Independent Television Authority, the government agency charged with administering the new commercial tv network in Britain.

During the passage of the Television Bill through Parliament the unions campaigned for an 80% British quota. All they got was a clause written into the final Act which reads "that proper proportions of the recorded and other matter included in the programs are of British origin and of British performance."

Unions have now asked Sir Kenneth Clark and Sir Robert Fraser chairman and director-general of the ITA, to define "proper proportions" and have made it clear that if satisfactory assurances aren't forthcoming, they've prepared to instruct their members not to take part in commercial television programs.

Threat to the new commercial web is reported by British Actors Equity in their annual review and will be debated at their annual meeting on April 24. The actors union played a major role in the tv quota agitation and last year tabled a motion on the subject at the Trades Union Congress.

Equity believes that the situation is becoming more acute as D-Day for the new network approaches. The four program contractors, they aver, are months behind in their plans and are faced with the temptation of being able to buy readymade product which will be far cheaper than anything that could be made in Britain. Moreover, runs the Equity report, "these films will not be the inferior run-of-the-mill American products, but the cream of programs over the last five years, with stars already familiar to the public through the cinema."

Although agreeing they are in favor of importing the best of the foreign product, the union reckons it would be a disaster if the new medium "was swamped in the same way as our cinemas."

Hungary Shows Yank Pix; 'How Come?' Asks MPEA of U. S. State Dept.

Washington, March 22.

The official Communist press of Hungary is calling upon that country's film industry to step up the entertainment quality of its product so that it can compete in Hungary with features made by the free world.

It points out that comedy and musicals far outdraw the propaganda-loaded motion pictures of the Hungarian studios, says the U. S. Information Agency. This preference is causing considerable concern among the Red rulers of that country. The Commie press admits films from the west were readmitted into Hungary two years ago because "the people were starving for them," and that their box-office draw is far greater than the Iron Curtain product.

GRANADA MUSIC, DANCE FEST SETS STAR LINEUP

Granada, Spain, March 22.

The Granada Music and Dance Festival will be held here from June 20 to July 4, with a star lineup.

A ballet company of 20, headed by Yvette Chauvire and Jean Babilee, will offer new works, and the Spanish company of Rosario, with Roberto Iglesias, will appear. The Spanish Symphonic Orquestra will give six concerts under Ataulfo Argenta (at present batoning in Italy and France), Carl Schuricht and Juan Gorostidi. Soloists will include Andres Segovia, Zino Francescatti, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Robert Casadesus, Friederich Gulda, Joachim Achucarro and Sanchez Herrero. Also slated are the Italian Quartet, Scarlatti Orquestra from Naples and the Castelnuovo Tedesco Quintet.

Concerts and ballet shows will be given in the Cathedral, the Royal Palaces and Gardens. There will be an exhibition of Goya paintings.

Mother-Daughter Team For Madrid Legit Preem

Madrid, March 22.

Maria Fernanda Ladron de Guevara, Spain's grand old actress, who's been in Cuba the last three years, is returning shortly to debut with her actress-daughter, Amparo Rivelles, in Jose Antonio Jimenez-Arnau's "La Hija de Jano" (Jano's Daughter). Play is scheduled to open April 9 at the Teatro Reina Victoria.

Preem day, which also is Spain's Sabado de Gloria (Saturday of Glory), marks an important date theatrewise throughout the country. For on the same day some four other unveilings are slated. They include Miguel Mihura's "Sublima Decision" at the Teatro Infanta Isabel, Alberto Closas at the Comedia in Carlos Lopis' "De Acuerdo, Susana?," Gonzalez Verge's Compania de Arte with "El Enfermo Imaginario" in Valencia, and "La Muralla" in Zaragoza.

Wilder 'Sun' as Highspot Of 9th Edinburgh Fest; Old Vic's 'Othello' Due

London, March 22.

A specially commissioned play by Thornton Wilder, "A Life in the Sun," will be the legit highspot of the ninth Edinburgh Festival, which runs Aug. 21 to Sept. 10. It will be the playwright's first new piece since he wrote "The Skin of Our Teeth" in 1942. The request to him was influenced by the success of last year's presentation of "The Matchmaker," currently one of the legit hits in London.

Other legit shows for the fest, annuonced by Ian Hunter last week, include Edwige Feuillere in a new production of "La Dame Aux Camelias" and the Old Vic company in "Othello."

An oriental contribution to the junket will be provided by the Azuma Kabuki Dancers & Musicians from Tokyo, and classical ballet will be supplied by the Royal Danish Ballet with a repertoire of six productions, including "Romeo and Juliet" and "La Sylphide."

Cultural attractions at the festival will include productions by the Glyndebourne Opera, concerts by symphony orchs from London, New York and Berlin, and chamber music by combos from the Netherlands and Hungary.

Sherek Raps Dearth Of New Legit Shows

Glasgow, March 22.

Henry Sherek, British impresario, hit out at the lack of new legit shows here and the monopoly of city theatres by traditional pantomime. He said Glasgow is entitled to the best plays. If playgoers did not get legit productions in place of long-running pantomime, they would lose the habit of going to theatres.

"This applies chiefly to the younger people," said Sherek. "It is time for a renaissance in the Glasgow theatre. So much mischief has been done already that at first money will be lost, but these losses can be well recouped. But it must be soon. Otherwise, the young will have grown up to worship false gods, and it will be hard to drag them back from idolatry."

Sherek added that, good though native Scot plays might be at the Citizens' Theatre, the local art house, "a world city should see the world theatre." It would be more economical to include Glasgow in trips that already took in nearby Edinburgh with new plays, many of them teeing-off at the Lyceum, Edinburgh, each February and March.

"It costs just as much to transport a man carrying a spear, or a single-line speaking parlour maid, as it does a star," he said. "If the public could only get the opportunity of appreciating plays, we may find that they will not slavishly rush to see 'star' names, but rather look out for new playwrights."

'Misery' Holding On In London; 2d Reprieve

London, March 29.

"Misery Me," comedy by Dennis Cannan, presented by E. P. Clift and Daniel M. Angel, has had its second reprieve in a week. Originally it was decided to fold on Saturday (19), after four performances, but the b.o. took an upward trend and the run was extended for another week.

Last week it was decided to keep the play at the Duchess until April 9 and, if justified by results, to transfer it to another theatre.

European Pix Pool Nearer Actuality

Rome, March 22.

The long-aired European Film Pool may soon become a fact if plans drawn up during recent Franco-Italian pact talks in Paris materialize.

Italian and French delegations at the talks again expressed their countries' desires to initiate action towards such a European agreement, which might eventually bring about an ideal tariff-free exchange of films among Continental nations.

First step in this direction is an official invitation, on the part of France and Italy, for Germany to join them in forming a base for the pool. Idea is to formally constitute the three-nation entente in time for announcement at the upcoming Cannes Film Festival, which is in April.

Both delegations made it clear that formation of the proposed pool would not alter their respective positions or allegiance to the International Producers Assn., which maintains its jurisdiction over general international matters and disputes.

GRANADA NET IS UP TO $68,000 IN '54

London, March 22.

A record year for Granada Theatres is revealed by Sidney L. Bernstein in his chairman's report to stockholders, the net profit of $680,000 representing a rise of more than $74,000 over the previous year. Bernstein reported that 65% of the net profit is taken in taxation. He cited that when all the payment for income tax, profit tax, entertainments duty and other taxations are lumped together, this shows that the group has benefited the Chancellor of the Exchequer and local authorities to the extent of about $3,000,000 for the year.

Despite last year's budget concession, Bernstein notes that admission duty still claims 37% of boxoffice receipts and that the tax is a heavy burden on the producers of British films. He finds it difficult to see why the government, which has shown its desire to keep British production alive through the lesser palliatives of the National Film Finance Corp. the Eady levy and the Quota Act should "refuse to relax its considering stranglehold on the patient's windpipe."

Underlining that the voluntary Eady Scheme has created a great deal of controversy within the industry, the Granada chairman says the company has not changed its views that in all circumstances the levy to support British production is wrong. If a levy on theatre takings is necessary, he believes it should be a statutory one controlled by government authority and accepted as an assured right to the producers.

Of the activities by the group, Bernstein told stockholders they have met the challenge of the younger generation by presenting personally many of the top showbiz artists.

3 Hits Out of Seven New Entries Cheer Waning Paris Legit Season

Paris, March 22.

Turnover is still big at legit houses here. Tailend of the season is heavy with productions and has been able to add a few more moneymakers to the extensive list of this year. Successes appear to be two reprises of Gallic comedies, with medium runs probably in store for three offbeaters (two of them adaptions from Italo plays), one quick floppo in a French attempt at a Neopolitan comedy and a probable hit at the Comedie-Francaise rep via Paul Claudel's mystery play, "L'Annonce Faite A Maire." Three clicks out of seven, with three possible medium successes, is a fairly good total for the last quarter of a topheavy season.

Reprises in for solid crix and sheer enjoyment are Andre Roussin's "Les Oeufs De L'Autruche" (The Ostrich Eggs) at the Michodiere, and Georges Neveux's "Zamore," at the Gaite-Montparnasse, backed by a solid one-acter added entry in the "Le System Deux." "Autruche" benefits from a winning performance by Pierre Fresnay as the rambunctious, irresponsible upper bourgeois, Hippolyte Barjus, who finally gets a more sobering view of life when he finds one of his sons is a homosexual, that another is being kept by a rich Countess, and that his wife is on the verge of cheating on him. Clever writing, crackling dramaturgy and tour-de-force thesp aspects should round off the season for the Michodiere in fine style. Play has been adopted for London by Robert Morley as "Hippo Dancing" and might be worth U. S. interest with a few aspects changed and sponged to fit American tastes.

"Zamore" was ignominiously brushed off when it shared billing with a Jean Anouilh one-acter some years ago. Brought back, this makes for an engaging, delightful show. It might well be transfered to the U. S. as an erudite envelope for the talents of a top thesp. "Zemore" flits rapidly and amusingly, from a farce into a mystical opus, and finally into tragedy with well oiled bearings. A jovial cuckold follows his wife and her lover just to watch over her. High comedy and a knowing look at human foibles intermingle to make this fine theatre. "Deux" is also an unusual item about a timid soul. It is a pleasant fable. Together with "Zamore," it makes for bright theatre. A long run is in store.

Some Floppos, Too

Floppo is "Poppi," Georges Sonnier's attempt at a Neopolitan farce, at Theatre Des Arts. This tale of misery and human adaptability remains shallow and dreary without the feeling and humanity handed it by the Italians themselves. It serves only to unveil the fine acting ability of Louis De Funes.

Three off-the-main-stem entries look in for fine to moderate runs. Noctambules has Arthur Adamov's "Le Ping Pong," a symbolical evocation of the lives of a group of people whose desires and hopes are bound up with pinball machines. Although there are tightly written scenes, on the whole this does not jell into any coherent theatre. This might have a good run here.

"Un Cas Interessant" (An Interesting Case) by Dino Buzzati, adapted by Albert Camus, is at the La Bruyere. In the offbeat category, it looks in for a fair run. However, downbeat theme dims this. A combination of satire on big business and medicine, this vacillates between the forms of theatre. An excellent performance by Daniel Ivernel makes this an interesting try. Studio Des Champs Elysees has Pirandello's "La Fable D'Enfant Change." Written near the end of his life, this was taken out of the context, and remains unfinished and slightly sterile for undue interest here.

Paul Claudel saw the Comedie-Francaise production of his "L'Annonce Faite A Marie" (The Tidings Brought to Mary) before his death three weeks ago. Written over fifty years ago being this baroque mystery play of medieval miracles suffers from the CF production being overstaged and deprived of its bludgeoning simple faith. However, it still emerges as a strange, naive—profound monument to belief, and should be an important part of the C-F rep.

Alberty Nixes Tubthumper For Brit. 'Pennypacker'

London, March 29.

Donald Alberty, who is to present the upcoming London production of "Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker," is setting a precedent in press relations by dispensing with the services of a pressagent. Publicity is being handled direct by the management.

The production opens a tryout season in Birmingham next month and is due to open at the New Theatre in May. Nigel Patrick stars.

Paris Terp Scene Dominated by Iron Curtain Folk Troupes

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Paris, March 29.

Terp picture here this season has been mainly dominated by folklore troupes from the Iron Curtain countries. This cultural offensive, on the part of the East, has seen Polish, Roumanian, Hungarian and Bulgarian dance and choral groups, plus Czechoslovakian puppets and a touring group of Russian musicians and artists. Folk entries have been mainly devoid of propaganda, though some difficulties developed from local refugee groups from the various countries. People deflected from the Polish and Roumanian groups, and the Bulgarian Ballet opening last Wednesday (23) was the scene of a demonstration by Bulgarian student emigrees who distributed pamphlets.

Bulgarian Ballet, composed of 115 singers, dancers and musicians, is a winning, exuberant display of folk mores and festivals, aided by colorful costuming and the strahge music in its mixture of Western and Eastern influences. Aside from obvious political backing and curio value, this may also profit from reviews and those interested in pure and zestful folk displays. Hungarian Ballet is the most successful here, crixwise, this excellently-choreographed group displaying virility, poetry and dynamism of feeling and interp.

Polish and Roumanian groups were also colorful and entertaining, but had to cut their stays short due to political difficulties brought about by some members running off and choosing liberty. Josef Skupa's Czechoslovakian Marionettes are a delightful show for the kiddies and have enough invention and high comic appeal for adults too. Ingenious puppets come to a high point in a bearded chorus, a simpering, unruly performing pig and a jumping jazz band. This is highclass stringing and a solid show biz item no matter where it is from.

Also here is the National Greek Ballet, in for a run at the Theatre Des Champs Elysees. Though it has appeal in its unusual entries, costuming and dances, it lacks a dionysian spirit and forth, and emerges as the least interesting, theatrewise, of the various entries. The Yugoslav Ballet was also a rousing entry with its virile dervish dancing and instrumentalizing. Otherwise, the terp picture here has lacked classical ballet, except for a brief visit by the Sadler's Wells Ballet and the season of the Ballet Du Marquis De Cuevas. Cuevas showed a need for strong ensemble grouping this year and did not have the precision and interest shown in its preceding stays.

M-G to Preem 'Melody' In Aussie, April 20

Sydney, March 22.

Metro will world preem "Interrupted Melody" at the Metro on Collins St. in Melbourne April 20. Singer Marjorie Lawrence, central character in the biog, was born near that city. Originally skedded for N. Y., the preem, was moved to Melbourne after the Melbourne Sun-Pictorial urged a local unveiling.

Metro's Aussie managing director, Bernie Freeman, contacted Arthur Loew in N. Y. and later cabled the Melbourne paper okaying the switch of global preem plans.

MYERS RENEWS 'TAX-RELIEF HIJACK' RAP; DISSECTS EACH MAJOR (AS ALLIED SEES IT)

Allied States Assn., via general counsel and board chairman Abram F. Myers, has sharply reopened its charge that the film companies "Have drained off all or nearly all of the tax relief granted by Congress to the theatres." This contention, according to Myers, will be employed in Allied's efforts to seek outside help in fighting the hike in film prices.

In a sharply-worded bulletin, profusely documented with statistics relating to film company earnings from 1953 to 1955, Myers said that Allied "will harp on a few incontrovertible facts: (1) That following April 1, 1954 (the effective date of the tax bill) film prices increased; (2) that, in consequence, the film companies' net earnings have increased by leaps and bounds; while (3) the exhibitors continue to be no better off than they were before the bill was passed.

Myers also deplored the delay in setting up an industry roundtable confab, declaring that the top level conference "seems to have passed into limbo." According to Myers, all that exhibitors have sought is a chance to place their case before the responsible heads to the film companies "in the hope that each such official, with respect to his own company, would voluntarily abate or abandon policies which threaten the whole industry."

Myers contends that "cynicism begets cynisism and the manner in which the exhibitor overtures looking to a peaceful settlement of this controversy have been rejected, engenders the thought that this idea of a top level conference may have been advanced merely to induce exhibitors to postpone their plans for remedial action, while the film companies continue to wax fat on their present destructive policies."

Myers give a company by company rundown of the recent net earnings of each of the film companies. He notes that it would be inaccurate to attribute all increases in net earnings to confiscation of tax benefits, citing improved films and the revival of the foreign market as also contributing, "but the big item is exploitation of the starved domestic market."

The fact that the film companies' profits are soaring while the exhibitors are barely holding their own or are losing ground, according to Myers, "tells us all we need to know about what happened to the tax benefits."

How Allied Rates 'Em

His analysis of the earnings of each company follows:

Paramount: During the 2d quarter of 1954 (April 4 to July 3), net after taxes amounted to $2,558,000, as against $1,617,000 for 2d quarter of 1953, a gain of 58%. In the 3d quarter (July 4 to Oct. 2) net was $2,428,000 as against $2,005,000 for same quarter of preceding year, an increase of 21%. In 4th quarter of '54, net soared to $2,613,000 as against $1,784,000 for last quarter of '53, a gain of 46%. Myers notes that Par's net zoomed after April 1, 1954. It's net for the fiscal year of 1953, when the tax was on, was "modest" 15% over 1952, which "indicates that the company was slowly climbing out of its slump." In '54, "with nine months tax relief," Par's earnings increased to $9,003,000 as against $6,780,000, or 33%.

Warner Bros.: Its fiscal year runs from Aug. 1, hence the first half of fiscal '54 is interesting mainly for the purposes of comparison. The 3d quarter (Feb. 27-May 29) showed net earnings of $918,000 as against $796,000 for the same quarter in '53. But in the 4th quarter, covering three full months of tax relief, Warner Bros.' net soared to $1,441,000 as against $779,000 for the same quarter in '53, a gain of 85%. And to show that this is no fluke, the 1st quarter of the current fiscal year ('55) yielded $1,203,000 in net earnings as against only $765,000 for the 1st quarter in '54. For the fiscal year '54, Warner Bros. showed a net profit of $3,977,000 as against $2,908,000 for '53, a gain of 37%.

Universal: The 3d quarter of fiscal 1954 (May 1-July 31), was the first full quarter after tax relief. Net earnings for that quarter were $915,415 as against $704,376 for the like period in the preceding year. But the 4th quarter (Aug. 1-Oct. 30) netted a whopping $1,161,273 as against a measly $565,348 for the same quarter in 1953, a gain of 105%. And Universal still rolls on. The 1st quarter of its current year, ending Jan. 29, 1955, disclosed net earnings of $1,136,928. The fiscal year 1954, including only seven months of tax relief, showed a net of $3,797,000 as against $2,216,356 for the preceding year, a gain of 45%.

Columbia: Its fiscal year begins in June, hence only the last quarter (March 29-June 27) of fiscal '54 reflected the absorption of tax benefits. Its net for that period was $931,000 as against $632,000 for the fourth quarter of '53. But in the 1st quarter of the current fiscal year, with three full months of tax benefits under its belt, Columbia shoved its net earnings to $1,349,000 as compared with $762,000 in the preceding year, a gain of 77%; and its terrific $1,474,000 for the 2nd quarter shows that the company is still rolling. Columbia's net for the fiscal year ending June 26 was $3,595,000 as compared to $942,000 for the preceding year, a gain of $2,653,000 or 282%.

20th Century-Fox: The picture here is not as clear with respect to tax absorption because this company first hit the comeback trail with CinemaScope several months before April, 1954. Its fiscal year coincides with the calendar year and its 4th quarter and yearly earnings generally are announced at the end of March or early in April. Actually, therefore, we have figures for only the 2d and 3d quarters covering the tax relief period. For the 2d quarter (Mar. 28-June 26) the net was $1,048,000 as against a loss of $865,656 for the like period in 1953. And the 3d quarter (June 27-Sept. 25) disclosed a net of $2,635,518 as against $1,274,728 for the 3d quarter of '53, a gain of 107%.

Loew's, Inc. (MGM): This company's fiscal year begins September 1. The second quarter in '54 (Nov. 26-Mar. 18) contained 16 weeks and, therefore, affords a poor basis for comparison. The 3d quarter (Mar. 19-June 10) showed a net of $1,267,210, which was not extraordinary, but compared favorably with the $1,014,142 for the same period in '53. The 4th quarter showed a healthy $2,110,935 as against $1,194,732 for the last quarter of '53, a gain of 77%. Loew's total for the fiscal year '54 was $6,577,000 as against $4,380,000 for the preceding year, an increase of 50%.

Loew's is still called the "friendly company" as a carry-over of Bill Rodgers' popularity with exhibitors. The "popularity polls" conducted by Allied indicates that the exhibitors regard it as less greedy than some of the others. But how long will this last? At the recent stockholders' meeting Loew's management was criticized for not matching Paramount's spectacular earnings. Thus another danger threatens — the danger that the stockholders of all the companies will insist that the companies continue their tactics with increasing severity.

ness are identified as advisors. They're promised a payment of $500 if they accept the job. The advisors, Schwab and Vaupen, are to confine their activities solely to the production company.

A so-called non-partisan board of directors has been named to head the Foundation, comprising: Ronald Stuart Berkley, accountant; Edwin T. Estabrook, tv and pic producer; William Hodapp, also a tv and film producer, and Kai Soderman, insurance representative.

Schwab intends to pitch for funds via the press, his own appearance on tv programs, such as Steve Allen's, if this can be arranged, and direct contact with show business personalities.

The Braille biofilm has been scripted by Joseph Liss and, according to Schwab, will be lensed in France at a budget of $617,000.

Four absentees, Dorothy Dandridge, Eva Marie Saint, Katy Jurado and Karl Malden, will be cut in from N. Y. and Audrey Hepburn by film shot in London.

Up to Attorney-General If Par Theatres Acquires New House in Tucson

American Broadcasting - Paramount Theatres is expected to appeal to the U. S. Attorney General for the right to acquire or build a replacement for its State Theatre in Tucson, Ariz. A subsidiary of AB-PT recently lost its lease on the house and the lessor indicated that the premises would be converted for other purposes.

Chain made an application in N. Y. Federal Court for the right to arrange a replacement for the Tucson theatre. In denying the move, Judge Irving R. Kaufman ruled that under the 1949 consent decree between Paramount et al., and the Government parties affected by the decree shall not have the right to acquire new houses for five years unless the Attorney General makes an exception.

Delay in Effective Date Of Vermont's Matinee Law

Montpelier, Vt., March 29.

Even after Gov. Joseph Johnson had signed the new Sunday film matinee bill into law, legal confusion still plagued exhibitors throughout the state.

Franklin S. Billings, Jr., executive clerk, said the law would not become effective until June 1 and expressed doubt that special meetings on the local option angle in the various communities would be legal. The law specifically states that each community must vote on the issue at an "annual meeting," he pointed out.

Sunday night films have long been permitted in Vermont, but this is the first time that the lawmakers have broadened the law to permit Sunday afternoon shows.

'Run for Cover' Premieres

Austin, March 29.

World premiere showing of Paramount's "Run for Cover" has been set for this city on April 5, at the Paramount Theatre. The pic stars James Cagney, Viveca Lindfors and John Derek, and was produced by Pine-Thomas.

Cagney is expected to attend premiere.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Additional gifts to worthy causes by the Hollywood Canteen Foundation were disclosed by its president, Bette Davis. Latest contributions include $20,000 for the purchase of specially constructed large screen television sets for veterans' hospitals and others, and $25,000 for investment in the contemplated Hollywood Motion Picture Exposition. To date the Canteen Foundation has contributed more than $200,000 to qualifying causes, in addition to entertaining more than 3,000,000 servicemen during World War II.

Seven permanent members of the Foundation are Miss Davis, Jules C. Stein, Carey Wilson, Mason Morris, Baron Morehead, Ralph Clare and John Te Groen.

New complications arose today at the resumption of the legal battle between Mary Pickford and Samuel Goldwyn in Los Angeles Superior Court over ownership of the Goldwyn studios. In addition to her original $500,000 suit asking for an accounting of rentals, Miss Pickford filed an action demanding $50,000. Meanwhile, Goldwyn wants her to pay $503,000 for maintenance expenses.

New complaint contends that Goldwyn was ordered by the court in 1949 to remove everything from the studio that belonged to him personally or to Goldwyn Productions within 30 days, or it would become part of the studio property. Under the ruling, Miss Pickford claims, such properties reverted to her ownership.

Canadian Film Awards for 1955 has only five theatrical films among its more than 60 entries. One is feature-length: "The Stratford Adventure," National Film Board's documentary on the Shakesperean Festival at Stratford, Ont. Judging is under way in Ottawa but the awards will likely be presented in Montreal, although nothing has been announced on place or date.

Canadian awards differ from the Academy Awards in Hollywood in that practically all entries have nothing to do with show business. Films are all documentaries, most of them 16mm productions, and judges come from consumer, education, business, government and other such groups.

In an unusual legalistic twist, three top United Artists execs are among the defendants in a suit filed by United Artists. The action got underway some time ago when UA filed against Masterpiece Productions. Disputed were the tv rights to 30 UA pictures. Masterpiece came back with a counter-claim maintaining that Arthur Krim, UA president, board chairman Robert S. Benjamin and general counsel Seymour Peyser should be co-defendants in that they repped Masterpiece in acquiring the films and this was before they joined UA.

The Fed Court dismissed this claim but a reversal was won by Masterpiece in a ruling on appeal this week.

Week of Feb. 28-March 5 was the busiest in the history of the Technicolor Corp. During that period the company shipped 18,875,000 feet of 35m film in addition to 307,000 feet of 16m prints.

Honor Dallas Oldtimers

Dallas, March 29.

Three Texas pioneers in the film industry with the longest record of service in their fields were honored by the Dallas Women of the Motion Picture Industry last Thursday (24). They were: J. H. Hardin, theatre supplyman; Joseph Luckett, exhibition, and LeRoy Bickel, distribution.

Guest speaker was Ned Nepinet, former prez of RKO Pictures, himself a pioneer in Texas film industry. He was introduced by R. J. O'Donnell of Interstate Circuit.

the Deck" (M-G). Over $14,000. Last week, "Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G), below $12,000.

Squirrel Hill (SW) (900; 65-$1)—"Tonight's the Night" (AA) (3d wk). Under $2,000 on wind-up. Last week, over expectations at $2,700.

Stanley (SW) (3,800; 75-$1.25)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (5th wk). Long-runner coming in with about $9,000 in six days for final week. Last week, nearly $14,000.

Warner (SW) (1,365; $1.60-$2.40)—"Cinerama Holiday" (Indie) (6th wk). Hovering around $18,500 mark. May drop a little below that this week; on the nose last week.

'UNTAMED' HOT 16G, CINCY; 'FEATHER' 9½G

Cincinnati, March 29.

Record late-March cold snap slowed weekend traffic, but overall downtown count this week has exhibs content at this stage of Lent. "Untamed" shapes hefty in the big Albee as the top new bill. "White Feather," also bowing this stanza, looms okay at the Palace.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 75-90)—"Untamed" (20th). Hefty $16,000. Last week, "Country Girl" (Par) (3d wk), $11,000 at 75-$1.25 scale.

Capitol (Ohio Cinema Corp.) (1,376; $1.20-$2.65)—"Cinerama" (Indie) (41st wk). Upturn in group parties points to bullish $19,000, topping last week's $18,500.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 75-$1.25)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (m.c.) (4th wk). Retaining winning $6,500 stride in sixth frontline frame after last week's $7,500.

Keith's (Shor) (1,500; 75-$1.25)—"Racers" (20th) (2d wk). Moderate $6,000 after $10,300 opener.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 75-90)—"White Feather" (20th). Okay $9,500. Last week, "Conquest of Space" (Par), $10,000.

Blizzard Nips Indpls. Biz; 'Lightfoot' Mild $7,000

Indianapolis, March 29.

Biz was chilled by weekend blizzard that tied traffic in knots and had downtown practically deserted. While figures are modest, "Women's Prison" showed surprising strength to lead town at Loew's. "Chief Crazy Horse," at Circle, also is oke, and "Captain Lightfoot" very mild at Indiana.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Cockrill-Dolle) (2,800; 50-85)—"Chief Crazy Horse" (U) and "West of Zanzibar" (U). Neat $8,500. Last week, "New York Confidential (WB) and "Treasure of Ruby Hills" (AA). Thin $7,000.

Indiana (Cockrill-Dolle) (3,200; 50-85)—"Captain Lightfoot" (U). Slow $7,000. Last week, "Untamed" (20th). Sturdy $10,000.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,427; 50-80)—"Women's Prison" (Col) and "Wyoming Renegade" (Col.). Nice $9,000. Last week, "Hit the Deck" (M-G) (2d wk). Fair $7,500 at 60-90 scale.

Lyric (Cockrill-Dolle) (1,600; 35-70)—"12 O'clock High" (20th) (reissue) and "Dial Red O" (AA). Tepid $4,500. Last week, "Bowery to Bagdad" (AA) and "Silver Star" (Lippert), $5,000.

TORONTO

Fine $16,000. Last week, "Tonight's Night" (AA) (2d wk), $11,000.

Imperial (FP) (3,373; 60-$1) — "Bridges at Toko-ri" (Par) (3d wk). Holding hefty for $12,000. Last week, $16,500.

International (Taylor) (805; 50-80)—"For Better, for Worse" (IFD). Satisfactory $3,500. Last week, "Little Fugitive" (UA) (4th wk), $3,000.

Loew's (Loew) (2,090; 60-$1) — "Hit the Deck" (M-G). Big $17,000. Last week, "Many Rivers to Cross" (M-G) (2d wk), $9,000.

Odeon (Rank) (2,580; 60-$1) — "Long Gray Line" (Col) (2d wk). Neat $9,000. Last week, $12,500.

Shea's (FP) (2,386; 50-85) — "Americano" (RKO). Nice $10,500. Last week, "Track of Cat" (WB), $10,500.

Towne (Taylor) (693; 60-90) — "Tomorrow Is Forever" (Indie). Okay $4,000. Last week, "Ugsetu" (Indie) (2d wk), $3,500.

Uptown (Loew) (2,745; 60-$1) — "Captain Lightfoot" (U). Good $11,000. Last week, "Green Fire" (M-G) (3d wk), $5,000 for four days.

'HORSE' FAST $9,000, SEATTLE, 'EDEN' 10G

Seattle, March 29.

Topping newcomers this week is "Garden of Eden" at the Orpheum to give that house its best gross in months. It's paired with the indie, "Black Pirate." Another Hamrick house is using heavy ink for "Chief Crazy Horse", currently at the M. H.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (800; 75-$1) — "Hulot's Holiday" (Indie). (2d wk). Good $4,000. Last week, $4,700.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,830; $1-$1.25) — "Untamed" (20th) and "They Rode West" (Col) (2d wk). Big $8,000 after $13,000 last week.

Fifth Avenue (Evergreen) (2,500; $1-$1.25)—"Country Girl" (Par) 3d wk). Tremendous $11,500. Last week, $12,400.

Music Box (Hamrick) (850; 90-$1.25)—"Gate of Hell" (Indie). (2d wk). Fair $3,000. Last week, $3,900.

Music Hall (Hamrick) (2,300; 90-$1.25)—"Chief Crazy Horse" (U) and "Tarzan's Hidden Jungle" (RKO). Big $9,000 on eight days. Last week, "N.Y. Confidential" (WB) and "Unchained" (WB). Light $5,200.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,700; $1-$1.25)—"Garden of Eden" (Indie) and "Black Pirates" (Indie). Swell $10,000. Last week, "Underwater!" (RKO) and "Thunder Pass" (Lip), $5,300.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,039; $1-$1.25)—"Long Gray Line" (Col) (3d wk). Oke $5,500. Last week, $7,800.

Omaha Chilly But 'Girl' Boff 17G; 'Signal' $5,500

Omaha, March 29.

Unseasonal sub-zero temperatures and snow snagged Omaha last weekend but "Country Girl" made its bow with a lush b.o. take at the Orpheum, Tri-States' flagship. Only other new entry, "Smoke Signal," is just fair at the Omaha.

Estimates for This Week

Brandeis (RKO) (1,100; 75-$1)—"Battle Cry" (WB) (5th wk). Fair $3,500. Last week, $6,000.

Omaha (Tristates) (2,000; 65-85)—"Smoke Signal" (U) and "Big Tip Off" (AA). Modest $5,500 or near. Last week, "Conquest of Space" (Par) and "Devil's Harbor" (20th), $5,500 for six days.

Orpheum (Tristates) (2,890; 75-$1)—"Country Girl" (Par). Great $17,000. Last week, "The Racers" (20th), $10,000 for six days at 70-90 scale. Run was sliced one day for trade screening of "Strategic Air Command" (Par) Fri. (25).

State (Goldberg) (875; 50-85)—"Chief Crazy Horse" (U) (2d wk). Medium $4,500 after $7,000 bow.

'Deck' Hits Sock 18G In Prov.; 'Untamed' 14G

Providence, March 29.

"Hit The Deck" at Loew's State is leading a fairly happy town. Majestic is next in line with "Untamed," while RKO Albee with "Underwater" and Strand with "Conquest of Space," trail.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; 50-75) — "Underwater" (RKO). Steady $7,500. Last week, "Timberjack" (Rep) and "Laughing Anne" (Rep), fair $6,000.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 70-90)—"Untamed" (20th). Peppy $14,000. Last week, "White Feather" (20th) and "Unchained" (WB), good $9,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 75-95)—"Hit The Deck" (M-G) and "Golden Mistress" (UA). Sock $18,000. Last week, "Gray Line" (Col) (2nd wk), nice $13,000.

Strand (Silverman) (2,200; 50-75) — "Conquest of Space" (Par) and "Bowery to Bagdad" (AA). Average $6,000. Last week, "10 Wanted Men" (Col) and "Pirates Tripoli" (Col), good $7,500.

LOUISVILLE

wk). Oke $5,500 after last week's good $6,500.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 50-75)—"The Americano" (RKO) and "Fast and Furious" (RKO). Shaping for fair sesh at $11,000. Last week, "Capt. Lightfoot" (U) and "West Zanzibar" (U), same.

State (United Artists) (3,000; 50-75) — "Black Tuesday" (UA) and "Golden Mistress" (UA). Modest $7,000. Last week, "Down 3 Dark Streets" (UA) and "Shield for Murder" (UA), fair $8,500.

Trust Damages Ruled Taxable

Washington, March 29.

Treble damage verdicts are subject to Federal income tax, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled yesterday (28). The decision was 7-1.

The high court upheld the Internal Revenue Service and overturned lower court rulings in two cases, one involving glass manufacturers and the other, the $375,000 treble damage verdict won by the William Goldman Theatres, of Philadelphia, against the majors.

On the surface, it appears the revenue service will be able to recover from all exhibitors who have won private treble damage suits against the distributors. While the Supreme Court decision should make treble damage suits somewhat less attractive to independent theatre owners, there is still enough profit left in them so that suits will continue to be filed.

In the Goldman case, the trial court found the exhibitor had suffered a loss of profits equal to $125,000, due to antitrust law violations by the distributors. He was awarded treble damages of $375,000.

He reported $125,000 as gross income and paid income tax on it. He claimed the remaining $250,000 constituted punitive damages and was not taxable because Congress has never acted to tax such damages.

The court, in a decision by Chief Justice Earl Warren, held that punitive damages are covered under sec. 22 of the tax code which defines gross income. The tribunal pointed to the language in the definition, ". . . or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever . . ." and said that covered the situation.

to $700,000 without hitting the keys. ARC has a deal with Anglo-Amalgamated for Britain for all of its 1955 production and is making flat deals with distribs in the rest of the world.

The ARC prexy said his company, which expects to release eight this year and 18 in 1956, had been offered exhib coin and, in some instances, had accepted it. He said less than 20% of ARC's financing came from theatre interests. Exhibs are very reluctant these days to enter into playdate-guarantee deals such as the ones solicited by Hal R. Makelim with the backing of Allied States, he noted.

ARC's first release, "The Fast and the Furious," is doing well, Nicholson reported. ARC's second release is "Five Guns West," a tinter. The company is getting four pix from Roger Corman, a 28-year-old producer. Corman also will act as exec producer on all other pix backed by ARC. Nicholson said that, due to single billing in the South, he expected to do 50% of his national gross on "Five Guns West" in that area. He stressed that ARC-backed films are designed to be able to stand up in single bill territories. "Apache Woman," which rolls in May, may be done in Vistarama, Carl Dudley's anamorphic lens process which is compatible with CinemaScope, Nicholson indicated.

He said that, after "Apache Woman," he had planned to do a science-fiction pic about robots, but that the film "Jungle Queen" had been substituted "because, on talking with the exhibitors, we found that robots are poison at the boxoffice." Currently in production for ARC is "The Beast with 1,000,000 Eyes."

nada (Fox Midwest) (2,100; 2,043; 700; 1,217; 65-85)—"Ma and Pa Kettle at Waikiki" (U) and "Land of Fury" (U). Pleasant $16,000. Last week, "Untamed" (20th) and "Murder Is My Beat" (AA) (2d wk) in Tower and Uptown, oke $7,000. "Chief Crazy Horse" (U) played Fairway and Granada, healthy $7,000.

Vogue (Golden) (550; 75-$1)—"Beauties of the Night" (UA). Moderate $1,600, holds. Last week, "Young Wives Tale" (Indie) and "Castle in the Air" (Indie), light $1,300.

Crashing Film Gravy Train

lective than ever. The major producer's label alone no longer sells a picture. It's only what is on the screen that counts. There's a ready market now for good pictures. You produce them and we'll show them."

Earlier in outlining his $25,000,000 production slate to exhibs at the N. Y. conclave, Broidy emphasized the flexibility of the program for it could go to 36 months or down to 12 months since we'll be guided by the performance of the pictures and the demands of the market." No fixed number of films are set, he added, for "you will dictate how many we will deliver or release."

Broidy, who wryly recalled his firm's abortive effort 10 years ago to break into the "magic circle" surrounding major company status, asserted it "took a tragedy—a holocaust in the industry" before it was decided to make another try. With the demand for fewer and better pictures, he added, "we determined to get some worthwhile product."

Experience a decade ago, Broidy recalled, was that exhibitors were "fretful of disturbing their relations with the majors. How could anybody get started?" he asked rhetorically. Likewise, he indicated that there are a few situations even now where some exhibs are loathe to book "outside" product. If these isolated logjams don't open up, he asserted, AA may resort to legal action.

On the other hand, some observers feel that Broidy may never need to take court steps in light of the potential b.o. strength contained in the company's upcoming program. While some of the firm's current films may not be too stout boxofficewise, smarter exhibs are convinced it's good business to go along with AA from the start for when the John Huston, Billy Wilder and William Wyler pix roll off the production line they may be in a favorable position as far as bargaining terms are concerned.

The $25,000,000 program, for which Broidy says adequate financing is assured, will be led by Wyler's "Friendly Persuasion" which is due to go before the cameras around Aug. 1 with Gary Cooper starring. Wilder launches "Ariane," based on the famed romantic tale by Claude Anet, in November after he finishes "Lindbergh Story" for Warners. Huston will start "The Man Who Would Be King" with Humphrey Bogart and another star of "equal calibre" between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15. Jose Ferrer is contributing "The Matador" after he winds up a current project for Columbia.

Broidy also paid tribute to AA's executive staff for its part in improving the company's position. He specifically named v.p.'s Harold Mirisch, G. Ralph Branton, George D. Burrows and exec producer Walter Mirisch. "The fact that Allied Artists is in this strong position today," he said, "is due in large measure to these four men. This group embarked with me two years ago on the plans to widely expand our operation, bringing to our company the top creative talent of which you are now aware and a big upgrading of our product."

Broidy, who will conclude his nationwide tour in Los Angeles next Tues. (5), will host exhibs in Kansas City tomorrow (Thurs.). In line with the program followed in other cities, a screening of the company's "An Annapolis Story" and "Shotgun" are slated and a luncheon is planned for theatremen, press, radio and tv. Accompanying him throughout the junket has been national ad-pub director John Flinn and general sales manager Morey Goldstein.

Problem faced by new production-distribution firms in obtaining playing time in theatres throughout the country was aggressively pinpointed last week by Allied Artists prexy Steve Broidy. Although AA, as heir to Monogram, hardly can be considered a new company, AA has had a tough time in breaking through what Broidy termed "the magic circle." It's Broidy's contention that exhibitors, despite their continuous plea for additional product, stick, for the most part, to their same sources. Despite the theatremen's denunciations of the major companies, they make every effort to buy their films and give the little guy a break only as a last resort.

This has been the beef of the indie distrib for many years. During the so-called product shortage, the indies felt the time had arrived when they could break into "the magic circle." Exhibitors of every description, from the one-house owner to the big chain topper, have verbally supported the efforts of the indies in recent months. However, the indies want more than moral support. They're waiting for bookings and for prime playing time rather than being used as a fill-in source when major company product is unavailable.

Broidy's hard-hitting speeches in New York and around the country may have an effect in awakening exhibitors. Some indies, Filmakers Releasing Organization, for example, have succeeded in prying dates and playing time. But this has been the exception rather than the rule. Filmakers has clicked with exploitation-type product, but other indies, with foreign-origin product in English, haven't been able even to get a hearing. This is particularly the case in the midwest where British films, with action elements and name players, are still looked upon as the plague.

Exhibitor leaders have urged their members to give all indie distribs a hearing, but most theatremen are playing it safe—showing only Hollywood product emanating from the major studios. If a company such as Allied Artists has found it difficult to break the barrier, it's noted, what chance does a smaller indie distrib have? Small distribs are carefully watching the results of AA's new program and to what extent Broidy's succeeds in crashing through the charmed circle.

The indie distribs accuse the exhibs of being two-faced. The exhibs, it's said, clamor for more films and lower prices, but do nothing to establish a competitive market by slotting the films of the non-major companies. Broidy's pitch, it's hoped, will serve to open the gate for the indies as well as push such companies as AA and Republic into the upper echelon.

Herbert Yates' Comment

Hollywood, March 29.

Next six months will probably determine the destiny of the motion picture business for the next two years, Republic chief Herbert J. Yates told the company's western regional sales conference. He emphasized that the industry must do its best to increase the current level of 45,000,000 customers to the peak of 95,000,000 which it enjoyed during the war years.

"The rose-colored glasses," he said, "must be discarded in favor of realistic adjustments of producer investments against theatre gross receipts. Producers and exhibitors must join hands now in a common cause to increase attendance or both will face an economic readjustment."

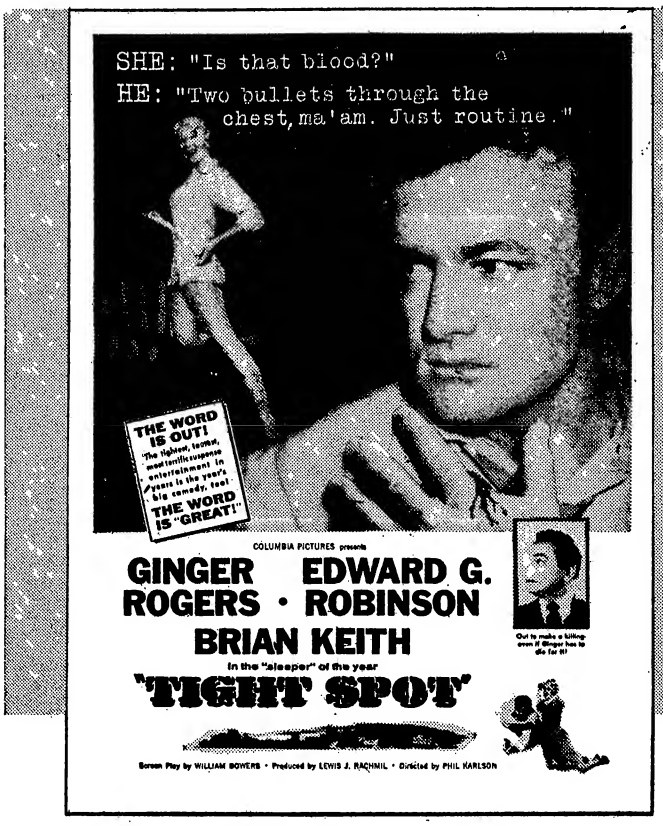
producer's berth to Milton Greene, a Look Magazine photo and close friend of Miss Monroe's, are shrugged off with a smile at 20th which appears to be grooming Sheree North as Miss Monroe's successor in the glamour crown.

Ushered For Warners

Miss Monroe, who had execs slightly miffed when she made a p.r. at the opening of Warner Bros.' "East of Eden," serving briefly as an usherette, has one other film—"The Seven Year Itch"—in the can at 20th. Advance reports say her performance in the comedy is standout and this, too, is seen spurring another round of talks on conditions under which the star might return to the fold.

Miss Monroe's last release at 20th was "There's No Business Like Showbusiness." She's made it clear that she was unhappy with the assignment and that she wants parts that give her a chance to display more of her histrionic talents.



JAMES MASON'S LIBEL SUIT

Los Angeles, March 29.

James Mason won a point in his $1,000,000 libel suit against Erskine Johnson and Fawcett Publications in Superior Court. Judge A. Curtis Smith overruled a demurrer filed by the two defendants.

Plaintiff claims that Johnson wrote something about this marital status which was published in Motion Picture and TV mag.

Some Pedagogs Rue 'Blackboard'; See Teaching (and U.S.) Discredited; But Reality Follows Fiction

As the controversy over the authenticity of "The Blackboard Jungle" continued to rage, all which, incidentally, working toward the b.o. value of the Metro picture, a front page news story lent credence to M-G's depiction of juvenile delinquency in a big city high school. The N. Y. World-Telegram & Sun reported Mon. (28) in a four-column headline "Bayonet Holds Teacher as Pupils Are Slugged." The situation is somewhat similar to an incident in the picture in which a student menaces a teacher, played by Glenn Ford, with a switchblade knife.

A later clarification of what happened at the school refuted the bayonet incident. It was established, however, that outsiders invaded a classroom to slug two students.

The picture, like the Evan Hunter novel on which it is based, has stirred up more pro and con comment than any recent Hollywood film. There are many who feel that the picture should never have been made, although the intention might have been sincere in showing the plight of teachers and pointing up the problem of delinquency. The general feeling among educators is that the situations are stacked in that many isolated incidents have been telescoped for melodrama's sake.

Bosley Crowther, N. Y. Times film critic, in a Sunday (27) reappraisal of the film notes that the picture raises grave questions of fact. He asks "is any school so ridden with ruffianism and crime that teachers are rendered helpless and learning is nullified?" He points out that the film may discourage young people from wanting to teach in city schools and that there may be a tendency among some boys to imitate the hoods in the picture. "Certainly juvenile delinquency is a problem today," Crowther concludes. "But it will not help to have it misrepresented and sensationalized."

The film has divided many educators into rival camps and it has helped Metro's exploitation via numerous radio and tv debates in which different sides argue for and against "The Blackboard Jungle." There appears to be general agreement that it will do no good for the U. S. if the picture is released abroad and Metro seems inclined to withhold foreign distribution of the pic.

Newspapers as well as educators appear to be looking at the picture from different angles. Some education editors have denounced the film strongly. However, the N. Y. Daily News, which a year ago ran a series of articles on the school situation in New York City, is solidly supporting the film. The News series, incidentally, was considered by many as "exaggerated," particularly the aspects dealing with hoodlumism raging in the schools. In an editorial Monday (28), the News came to the aid of "The Blackboard Jungle," terming it a film that doesn't pull its punches. "It's good entertainment," said the newspaper "but it also gives the honest, slam-bang lowdown on the junior punks and electric chair candidates who have been permitted to make shambles of some U. S. high and vocational schools."

Parker Construction Sues Dickinson Theatre Circuit

Kansas City, March 29.

A $59,000 suit brought by the Parker Construction Co. of Shawnee, Okla., against Dickinson Theatre Circuit went to trial last week before Federal Judge Stephen S. Chandler Jr. Action arose over plaintiff's construction of drive-in theatres for Dickinson in Leawood, Kansas City suburb, and Pittsburg Kans.

Parker claims Dickinson owes $49,000 as balance of construction costs on the Leawood site and $10,000 on the Pittsburg ozoner. Dickinson, on the other hand, has counterclaimed for $155,000, asserting that Parker's construction was faulty.

Banned in Memphis

Memphis, March 29.

Lloyd Binford, Memphis' chief censor, has banned Metro's "Blackboard Jungle" for this area. Its believed to be the first Metro feature ever banned by Binford, now nearing 90 years of age.

Binford told VARIETY: "It's the vilest picture I've seen in 26 years as censor. The teenagers start off bad. I thought they would reform and we would have to pass it but they are just as bad at the end."

Negro students are in pic with white students attending school. Binford said this had nothing to do with his stopping the pic "when the picture first started I thought we were going to have to pass a picture showing Negro and white students together. It was so bad we banned it and not because of Negro students," Binford said.

'Luther' Does Well In Catholic Lands

"Martin Luther," produced by Louis de Rochemont for the Lutheran Church, is equalling its U. S. success in foreign countries. The returns being chalked up abroad, even in predominantly Catholic countries, is proving an eyeopener to its sponsors as did the film's original impact in the U. S.

In a report of the status of distribution in each of the 17 nations in which the picture has been introduced, Robert E. A. Lee, executive secretary of Lutheran Church Productions Inc., said that outstanding attendance records were being established. The press and radio in largely Catholic countries, according to Lee, have carried a great deal of advance comment on "Luther," resulting in considerable public interest in the film.

Foreign release of the picture started last fall under contracts with local distributors in England, Holland, Sweden, Finland, Norway, Denmark and Switzerland, including British Lion Films for the United Kinbdom, and 20th-Fox International handling the rest of the world.

A de-centralized form of distribution has been arranged for the U. S. with 31 regional outlets. Lee disclosed that the film has played 3,500 situations in the U. S. and "we have a survey under way to determine the unplayed situations so that the church might focus locally and nationally on these remaining opportunities."

Strand, Milwaukee Shut

Milwaukee, March 29.

Strand Theatre here closed over the past week because of the product situation. Gordon Hewitt of the Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Corp. said there were insufficient films to operate the Strand on a first-run basis and expenses would be too high in running the house as a second-run.

Hewitt reported the Strand likely will be reopened if the availability of product improves.

Drive-Ins Chilled

Seattle, March 29.

Coldest spring over the longest period is hitting the drive-ins a body blow. Biz is brutal due to the weather. Most of them opened on Washington's birthday anniversary and a few as early as Feb. 15th.

It's the worst frigid stretch here in 35 years.

Chi Booth Union Rapped by ACLU

Chicago, March 29.

The American Civil Liberties Union has filed an amicus (friend of the court) brief in U. S. District Court here, stating its opposition to the alleged refusal of members of the Chicago Moving Pictures Operators Union to show the film "Salt of the Earth" at the Cinema Annex theatre here last summer. The union was named the defendant in a damage suit filed in this court recently by IPC Distributors, Inc., distributors of the film.

The ACLU stated in its brief that it was not interested in the merits of the film, but rather questioned whether a private organization occupying a critical position in the communications field could set itself up as a censor board for the community.

ACLU brief bases its stand on the precedental Associated Press case, in which the U. S. Supreme Court declared certain AP restrictions on non-member news gathering agencies unconstitutional and in violation of the First Amendment to the Constitution. The ACLU argues that the Chicago film operators union has similarly violated the First Amendment in its alleged refusal to show "Salt of the Earth."

Next Columbia Releases

Hollywood, March 29.

Columbia's releasing program for April calls for three films, starting with "Three For the Show," starring Betty Grable, Jack Lemmon and Marge and Gower Champion.

Others are the Johnny Weissmuller adventure picture, "Jungle Moon Man," and a re-issue, "The Return of October," co-starring Glenn Ford and Terry Moore.

Secretary of the Navy. Also present were D. Walter Swann, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs, and Frederick Bund, head of the Army-Air Force Motion Picture Service, both of whom had attended all prior meetings. Swann is the official charged with working out a solution to the problem.

Representing the industry last week were MPAA prexy Eric Johnston, Kenneth Clark, MPAA vice president; Walter Reade Jr., past president of TOA; Maurice Goldstein of UA, president of the Sales Managers Group, and Julian Brylawski, of Stanley Warner, who is also government contact here for TOA. All but Johnston had been at previous meetings.

The industry has recommended that in certain specified areas, the in-town theatres be granted a 14-day clearance ahead of the military posts, except where the theatres fail to play a film within 30 days of its release in that exchange area. In exchange, the industry would liberalize the policy of those eligible to attend the post theatres for film showings.

Ohio Drive to Revive Censorship

Judge Cites High Delinquency Among Amish Sect Whose Members Never Attend Moving Pictures

Columbus, March 29.

The battle to reinstate a film censorship law in Ohio hotted up last week when the Judiciary Committee of the Ohio House held an open hearing which played to standing room only. As always, pro-censorship forces presented the most witnesses and talked the longest, while the anti-censorship group, composed almost entirely of theatre exhibitors, contented themselves with but two witnesses.

A meeting of the Judiciary group's seven-man subcommittee is scheduled for today (29) and one of the scheduled witnesses is Robert A. Wile, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, a vigorous opponent of film censorship.

The subcommittee has been handed three separate bills which it will likely draft into a single measure, if it does anything. One bill (backed by Gov. Frank J. Lausche) seeks to set up definitions that will meet court standards in rulings which have laid censorship low; another, sponsored by Rep. Louis J. Schneider Jr. (R., Cincinnati), would require scissoring of films for persons under 21; the third bill, says its sponsor, Rep. Andrew Putka (D., Cleveland), sets up "standards which courts will hold constitutional."

Parade of pro-censor witnesses included Mrs. W. Andrew Martin, Columbus, chairman of the newly-formed Motion Picture Committee for Decent Films in Ohio; Judge Clayton W. Rose, Columbus, domestic relations jurist and president of the Juvenile Judges of Ohio and Thomas Osborne, Cleveland lawyer, representing the Catholic Parent-Teacher League of Cleveland and the Cleveland Council of the Knights of Columbus.

One anti-censorship witness was Hoy L. Russell, judge of the juvenile court in Holmes County (Millersburg) and a theatre owner and exhibitor for 30 years. Judge Russell read a letter in answer to one which Judge Rose circularized all Ohio juvenile court judges, in which he asked a series of 13 questions attempting to demolish every argument of the pro-censorship forces.

Judge Russell told the committee that although his county is composed of 30 per cent Amish, whose religion forbids them to attend films, delinquency among those 30 per cent, is greater than among the remaining 70 per cent who do attend the movie. In 30 years, said the judge, he has never seen anyone of the Amish faith (easily detectable by their distinguishing dress) in his theatre. It hardly seems fair, he said, to blame pictures for juvenile delinquency when this perfect test situation reveals such an accusation is baseless.

John Harlor, of Columbus, leading constitutional lawyer in Ohio who fought and won the "M" case before the U. S. Supreme Court and nearly every other censorship case won in the Ohio courts, was the other anti-censorship witness.

Can a constitutional law be written, he was asked, providing for prior restraint, which is what every film censorship law involves?

"No," was Harlor's flat, unembroidered answer.

Despite all the hue and cry and viewing with alarm indulged in by those who want a return of film censorship in Ohio, anti-censorship forces are hopeful that such a law cannot be put on the books, and if it does get there that it won't stick —that is, unless the Constitution is repealed.

On the eve of hearings on House Bill 241 designed to reinstate film censorship in Ohio, it became apparent that pro-censorship forces were busily girding for battle.

Big tipoff came in a letter written by Domestic Relations Judge Clayton Rose to all juvenile court judges in Ohio urging their support in the struggle to renew film censorship. Rose is president of the juvenile court judges of Ohio. One of these letters went to Hoy L. Russell, judge of juvenile court in Holmes County, who also is a theatre owner and a director of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Judge Russell immediately replied to Judge Rose and the ITO saw to it that copies of his letter were widely distributed to the press.

"Frankly, I am amazed," wrote Judge Russell, "that men who ordinarily apply judicial thinking to public questions can go off the deep end and glibly assert that unless Ohio has censorship of motion pictures we will have 'obscene pictures portraying acts of adultery, fornication, rape, etc., the portrayal of sexual relations as desirable, acceptable or proper behavior.' What is the basis for such reasoning?

"Has Ohio had an influx of such pictures since censorship was discontinued last December?" asked Judge Russell. "I have not noted it. Some of the states bordering Ohio do not have censorship. Are they having such pictures in their states?"

Continuing, Judge Russell asked Judge Rose:

"I am advised that only five states in the Union do have motion picture censorship—do the remaining 43 states have these filthy pictures you say will be shown in Ohio unless we have censorship?

"Do you actually believe that the several hundred Ohio citizens who own and operate motion picture theatres are prevented from being peddlers of pornography solely because of censorship?

"Does not Ohio have statutes now which provide severe penalties for showing pictures of the type you mention in your letter?

"Can you cite just one motion picture, shown in Ohio or elsewhere, which glorified crime or illicit sex relationships, perversion juvenile delinquency or anti-social behavior?

"Can you cite me to any motion picture which has been the vehicle for 'subtle communist propaganda'?

"Has any other segment of commerce or industry in the United States as effectively purged itself of communist adherents as has the motion picture industry?"

'Game of Love' in Plea

Boston, March 29.

Times Film Corp. of New York has requested the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court to rule that Otis M. Whitney, Public Safety Commissioner, exceeded his authority by banning the Sunday showing of the foreign film "The Game of Love."

Film company charges that Whitney's banning of the pic infringes on freedom of press and speech.

Reissues

consideration, is not entirely the determining factor in the decision to sell or not to sell to tv. It boils down essentially to a dollars and cents proposition. How much are the pictures in the vaults worth? That's the poser confronting executives entrusted with the task of listening to potential deals. A video exposure of an old film immediately kills its theatre reissue value. The tv film buyers won't accept just the dogs. They want a couple of former b.o. winners as part of the package. However, film company execs, noting the success of an occasional reissue, Metro's "Camille" being the most recent example, are wondering if the oldies aren't worth more than the tv interests are offering.

"I've been made many offers," said a v.p. of one of the top companies. "I just don't know if the price is right. I've heard of films going to tv at from $30,000 to $45,000 each and shorts at $2,000 to $3,000. I've been offered $5,000 each for some of our shorts. I just don't think the price is right yet. With the number of plays these properties can get on tv, it seems to me they should be worth a lot more.

"If you were sitting home, what would you do? It would be easy if we could predict the reaction of the exhibitors. Can we afford to antogonize them by selling to tv. You tell me. Sure we're talking to everybody. We want to keep in touch with what's happening. The time may come when it will be feasible to sell to tv. We want to be ready. As of now, however, we have no plans to sell pictures to

Headaches Ahead in Europe

Robert Bassler, in N. Y. after exec producer chores abroad on "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes," said this week that filmmakers planning CinemaScope production in London and Paris over the next few months are headed for trouble.

Bassler said he's plenty high on the merits of this process but the rub lies in the availability of equipment. He warned that there's a shortage of anamorphic cameras and studio space in Europe. Also processing facilities are limited.

On another subject, the filmmaker said he can't see home toll tv as representing too great a threat to exhibitors. He opined that this medium might be suitable for limited appeal pictures "but the impact of size, color and encompassment that comes with the new techniques demands a theatre for full appreciation."

Metro Workshop a Surprise Click

What Trade Pre-Doped as a Tired Stunt Reveals Much Appeal to Today's Showmen

The cynics got lost as Metro moved underway a few months ago with its series of "Ticket-Selling Workshop" meetings with exhibitors in key cities around the country. In sessions to date, theatremen might have waxed sentimental or a little corny in expressing their attachment to the industry. But all have shown keen interest in the idea of listening to the ideas of their colleagues on how to draw customers.

M-G's "Workshop" program was explained by Mike Simons, the company's exhibitor relations chief, and Emery Austin, exploitation head, at a N. Y. luncheon last week under a joint M-G and Associated Motion Picture Advertisers banner.

The conclaves have been held in a dozen cities so far and M-G eventually will blanket the country with more of same. The pitch has been to sell pictures, and while M-G might have engaged in a little self-plugging, the accent has been on promotion of product generally—everybody's, said Simons.

It's been functioning this way. A city is selected for a "Ticket-Selling" conference and resident circuit heads and individual theatreowners are invited by M-G distribution chief Charles Reagan and Simons, respectively. Theatremen from another area who've been experiencing an upbeat in business, three to six of them, are asked to sit in as panelists (none has refused). The out-of-towners make with the dialog on policies and extra curricular activities that have resulted in more ticket sales and upped community stature for their theatres.

Attendance at each of the idea-swapping conventions has been strong—300 and upward. M-G started out picking up the luncheon tabs and shortly after Coca-Cola took on the bankroller for trade relations purposes. Coke's cost has been estimated at $40,000, meaning lotsa pauses that refreshes are needed to recoup.

Simons told his Gotham audience that the meets are devoid of jokes and hi-jinks. All strictly business and it's all right, too, if speakers, who are given limited time allotments, skip the usual "Ladies and Gentlemen" intro lines. The local mayor is not invited and telegrams from those who couldn't attend go unread.

Simons gave a capsule recap in N. Y., mentioning only a couple of the money-making ideas that have intrigued exhibs. One centered on a teenager advisory club set up by a theatreowner. Members are a group of 13-year-old girls who advise on what pictures are favored or disfavored and why. The exhib hosts meetings, uncorks a few bottles of pop and obtains a clue on how to win over the moppets.

Another was a tiein with local merchants, who make the theatre the focal point of a community sales campaign. Reason being that the filmhouses brings out the local citizens and nearby retailers can nab them for sales going and coming.

Austin, who co-gavels the "Workshop" palavers with Simons, related that many theatremen are in need of an education in the sense they're unaware of selling "tools" which the distribs make available. Some were unhep to the meaning of pressbooks and others didn't know a 24-sheet from a bedspread, for example. Austin's job at the meets is to enlighten the non-pro theatremen on the wide variety of M-G's exploitation devices.

M-G's 5th at Hall

With "The Glass Slipper" current and "Interrupted Melody" and "Love Me or Leave Me" set to follow, Metro will have five pictures in a row at the Radio City Music Hall, N. Y. Previous to "Slipper," "Hit the Deck" and "Jupiter's Darling" played the N. Y. showcase.

In another booking, M-G has snared the Capitol for "The Prodigal," with the opening planned in May. This is the first Metro picture to land in the Capitol since "Last Time I Saw Paris" in November.

Metro Briefing Field Salesmen On 'Outside' Pix

Taking on outside product is a new experience for Metro and the film company is making sure that its sales staffers are properly briefed on how they're to be handled. As a consequence, the company is calling together its salesmen in the field to outline the recent production deals, such as with Samuel Goldwyn for the release of "Guys and Dolls," the forthcoming Desilu (Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz) picture, and the future films to be made by Sol C. Siegel under a pact now being finalized.

Regional conclaves are being held following a two-day division managers meeting in Chicago last week at which sales chief Charles M. Reagan presided. Branch and district managers of the eastern territory, under the supervision of John P. Byrne, met Monday (28) at the Sheraton Astor, N. Y. Byrne met individually with some of the sales reps yesterday (Tues.) and then left for a tour of his branches to meet with the sales staffs locally. His first stop will be Albany, followed by Philadelphia, New York, Boston, New Haven, and Buffalo.

Other division sales managers will hold similar meetings with their district and branch managers, to be followed by visits to each of the branches for staff sessions.

In addition to outside product, sessions are being devoted to discussions of release plans for "The Prodigal," "Blackboard Jungle," "Interrupted Melody," "Love Me or Leave Me," "The Glass Slipper," and "The Cobweb."

NOVELTY SOON PALLS, MAYER REMINDS BIZ

Hollywood, March 29.

Motion picture industry need not worry about color television, Louis B. Mayer, told members of the American Cinema Editors at their fifth annual dinner honoring nominees for the Oscar Derby.

"When Technicolor first became available to the film studios," he said, "it was a great novelty and brought people to the film houses just to see almost anything that was offered in color. The novelty soon wore off, and film producers learned that nothing ever takes the place of top entertainment, no matter how you dress it up."

Paying tribute to members of ACE, Mayer declared, "You have the prestige and the deserved dignity of your profession and your creative efforts have contributed to the success of the finished motion picture."

ACE awards were presented by Jane Wyman to Ralph Dawson for "The High and the Mighty;" William A. Lyon and Henry Batista for "The Caine Mutiny;" Glen Milford for "On the Waterfront;" Elmo Williams for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea;" Ralph Winters for "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," and to Lynn Harrison and Grant Smith, TV Academy winners for "Operation Undersea."

SAG Warns Alexander's Colorado Springs Studio Is on Its Penalty List

Hollywood, March 29.

Board of directors of Screen Actors Guild has warned members if they work for Alexander Film Co. of Colorado Springs they will be termed guilty of misconduct unbecoming a member and face possible suspension if convicted.

Alexander is on Guild's unfair list because it has not inked a basic agreement with SAG covering wage scales and conditions for actors, singers and announcers in films made by the company.

SAG has also cancelled pacts with Cy Roth and Key Productions for allegedly falling to make payments due actors they employed, and no guild member can work for them. Members were also told not to work for Les Cook, a nonsignatory producer. Guild cancelled franchise of Jack Morse agency for non-payment of franchise fees, and no member can use agent.

SAG is holding tv residual checks for a number of actors it has been unable to locate. They are Imogene B. Ansara, Al Bayne, Inga Borg, Jerry Burns, Jack Carr, Ludwig Donath, Peter Engle, Margaret Field, Joel Friedkin, Jerry Hayes, Joey Larson, Patsy McClelland, Noreen Michaels, Robert Newton, Christian Pasques, Berry Patterson, H. REPUBLIC GIVES ITS EXCHANGES MORE SCOPE

Chicago, March 29.

Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic Pictures, disclosed a new Republic policy of increased local autonomy for exchanges throughout the country, with branch managers granted broader authority to make local decisions. The policy was unveiled at the Republic midwest sales conclave here last week, first of three such meetings currently being held by the film company.

The move increasing branch independence from home office rule was dictated by the faster tempo of the times, and should enable exchange managers to move more quickly to meet changing local conditions, stated Yates' executive assistant, William M. Saal. It is expected that the branches will be guided by general policies laid down by the home office and success of this policy of greater local freedom will depend on the calibre of the men administering it, continued Saal.

Republic worldwide sales director Richard W. Altschuler conducted sales policy briefings on five forthcoming Republic pix for midwest exchange heads attending the meet.

Teevee film plans loom large in Republic's future, according to Earl R. Collins, president of Hollywood Television Service, Republic's telefilm subsidiary. Prexy Collins revealed that, within the next three months, the telefilmery will have five series of half-hour shows on the market. Two series of 39 half-hour films are currently being sold, "Behind the Scenes," a comedy series, and "Fu Manchu" a whodunit serial. Three more are currently in production, and are set for early release, two comedies and a drama.

'Seasonless' Film Year Nearer?

Ed Hyman Sees More Sensible Policies—Next Test: 'Hoarding' Product for July 4th Weekend

Distributors are gradually waking up to the necessity of avoiding pre-holiday slumps in their release skeds and are arranging their distribution in a more orderly and coordinated manner.

That's the impression of Edward L. Hyman, v.p. of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, who returned to N.Y. last week following an extensive three-week swing through the western part of the country, including a stopover at the studios.

Hyman, long an advocate of a "seasonless" film year, said the May and June period was again a difficult one, with distribs tending to hoard their top releases for the July 4 holiday. He added, however, that at least some of the companies were setting potential b.o. films for May and June and that this was a distinct step in the right direction.

Tough booking times for exhibs come in May and June, in the pre-Easter period and in December, Hyman held. "Once the holidays roll around, there's so much triple A product around, the theatres can't play it all," he observed.

Hyman said the UPT affiliates were all actively engaged in carrying out the program outlined by president Leonard Goldenson, which stressed ways and means of getting the juve audience back into the theatres. Complete report on methods used and ends accomplished will be given at the annual UPT meet in late August or early September. "We are doing what we can, but it's important that the studios give us the right material to work with," he stressed. "They must cooperate by giving us films that have that special appeal."

Having previewed the upcoming product at the Coast, Hyman had words of praise for VistaVision, which he said gave extraordinary depth and clarity, and for the Todd-AO process which he saw applied in footage from "Oklahoma." Some of the UPT houses will be showing "Oklahoma" later this year, using the special projectors made in Holland.

First 1955 quarter in the UPT houses is showing an increase over 1954, Hyman said. This is in contrast to other reports stating that business in the past few weeks has lagged.

Dividends Healthy

Washington, March 29.

Picture biz looks strong on the basis of dividends paid during the first two months of this year. Total reported for January and February came to $3,244,000, high above the $2,047,000 figure for the same period of 1954, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce.

February melon was a huge $2,190,000, as against $846,000 for February, 1954. However, a good part of the difference is due to deferred payments; some companies which paid in January last year, disbursed the melon in February this time. Here are the company figures:

Columbia Pictures, which paid but $65,000 in February, 1954, made it $444,000 this time. Loew's Boston Theatres paid $39,000 in both years; and Warner Bros. held at the same $742,000 in 1954 and 1955.

National Theatres paid $346,000 in February; last year it paid in January. The Stanley Warner circuit, which also paid in January, 1954, took care of its stockholders this time in February with a fine $619,000.

Prints Reaching N.Y. Late Crimp Magazine Breaks

Delay in getting prints of new pictures to the homeoffice continues to stymie the long-range ballyhoo efforts of the eastern pub-ad departments of the film companies. Greatest problem is in servicing many of the national magazines whose forms close six to eight weeks before publication. The picture must be shown far in advance if the pub-ad men expect the plugs to break at the time of the release of the picture.

Not all prints are late in arriving at the New York offices but the policy of uncertainty continues and the eastern staffers are unable to plan adequately the exploitation campaign, not knowing which picture will or will not be available for showing.

Metros bally staff has tried several methods to assure itself of magazine breaks by showing the pictures far in advance. On one occasion, it flew a contingent of magazine people to the Coast to look at some half a dozen films in about three days. Currently, the studio is shipping a work print east so that a quick screening can be arranged for the periodicals. The film usually arrives with separate film and sound tracks and a film editor is sent along to make certain that it is run off properly.

Ozoners' Booth Contract

Minneapolis, March 29.

With the signing of a new three-year contract by the five Minneapolis area ozoners and the AFL projectionists' union, all of this city's theatres now are set until the end of 1957 with their boothmen.

The new contract provides for the pay status quo the first year and a 5c an hour scale boost each of the last two years.

During recent weeks, the projectionists effected two other three-year contracts. One was with the United Paramount and RKO Theatres here providing for a 9c per hour pay increase each of the final two years and one with independent conventional houses that includes a provision for an 8c per hour stipend boost each of the last two semesters.

This will be the largest show train from Toledo since the war years when, because of the restrictions on gasoline, Mrs. Hineline ran trains to Cleveland for the Metropolitan Opera.

Eagle, Albany in All-Out $350,000 Antitrust Suit

Albany, March 29.

A $350,000 treble damage antitrust suit was filed in U.S. District Court at Utica last week by the Capitol City Theatre Corp. former lessee and operator of the Eagle theatre, Albany, against the nine major distributors, three Fabian corporations, two Warner companies, and two Hellman corporations, alleging that they had "conspired in various ways" against the plaintiff. "Illegal monopoly" and "unlawful acts" were also charged, the monopoly assertedly forcing the corporation to sell the subsequent-run house. The suit, in effect, is against all theatres in Albany. Dates of the claimed violations were from July 1, 1944 to April 1, 1951, when the Eagle was sold. Harold Strassman is the present operator.

Jacob M. Olshansky, Albany, is attorney for plaintiff.

TV'S HIGH COST OF POLITICS

CBS-TV's Got the Raiding Urge

Not content with merely competing with ABC-TV in the latter's 7:30-8 strip operation, CBS-TV is actually going out and trying to raid the network for three of the shows that have made ABC the toprated web in the time period. CBS-TV's plans for half-hour shows in the 7:30-8 strip include "Rin Tin Tin," "The Lone Ranger" and "Name's the Same," and it's now making strong overtures to their respective sponsors to woo them over in their same time periods. "Rin Tin Tin" and "Lone Ranger," particularly, are two of the very shows which by their solid ratings cued the decision by CBS to switch to the half-hour format rather than the current music-and-news quarter-hours.

CBS has an inside track on at least one of the shows and a strong argument on another. Web and General Mills are chummy, what with "Lone Ranger" running repeats on CBS for GM on Saturday afternoons, with good results. And, since Nabisco, which bankrolls "Rin Tin Tin" on ABC, also sponsors "Halls of Ivy" alternately on CBS, the latter is inducing Nabisco with a contiguous rate advantage if it brings "Rinnie" over. Finally, the weak sister, ratingwise, of the trio, "Name's the Same," is also the subject of a pitch to Ralston, its ABC bankroller. These three are all that CBS can touch, since "Disneyland" is an exclusive ABC property and "Cavalcade of America" is firmly pacted for another year.

Fact that CBS is imitating ABC's program setup, let alone raiding its shows, is the first indication by the other webs of the new bigtime status ABC now occupies. The program raids, combined with CBS' grab of the U. S. Steel business, are the first time either CBS or NBC have condescended to look at ABC in any way but as an upstart. ABC, of course, appreciates the compliment, but isn't too happy over the raiding tactics with which it's expressed.

TV In The Deep South

Major Network Shows Compete With Sleep In Reshuffling of Station Schedules

Mobile, March 29.

Many of the top-ranking tv shows come on in the deep south just about the time Steve Allen's "Tonight" is bowing in in New York. Or with central time, often an hour after he has started.

What makes it doubly bad is that two-thirds of viewers here hit the hay hard and fast at 10 p. m. Apparently tv space buyers in the big ad agencies do not realize this. Or they believe in representation (and billing) at all odds.

In Mobile, on Sunday at 11 p.m. comes "Medic." This has been preceded by a kine of "Toast of the Town" two weeks after the program has been shown live at 7 p. m. in Pensacola. (Mobile gets Pensacola with a special Pensacola aerial and the right conditions.)

On Sunday, New Orleans tosses "Ozzie and Harriet" at 10, "Meet Mr. McNulty" at 10:30 and "Make Room for Daddy" at 11. "The Whistler" bows at 11:30 in New Orleans Sundays with "This Is the Life" at midnight. But Channel 3 in Pensacola has had Jack Benny or "Private Secretary" at 6:30.

So far as VHF set owners are concerned Pensacola Mobile and New Orleans are one-station cities. New Orleans has a UHF station,

'Toast' 30.7; NBC 26.2

CBS-TV's Toast of the Town" took the Trendex measure of NBC-TV's "Entertainment '55" colorspec dedicating its Burbank studio Sunday (27). Ed Sullivan show wound up with a 30.7 vs. 26.2 in the 8 to 9 rivalry, putting together half-hour clusters of 30 and 31.4 against 24.7 and 27.6.

The NBC spec kicked off at 7:30 with 25.5 to beat the 19.4 of "Private Secretary." For the 90 minutes, NBC's score was 25.9, to 26.9 gor Columbia.

Miltie & Martha's 3-Way Sponsor Spread in '55-'56

Next season's sponsor setup in the 8 to 9 Milton Berle-Martha Raye NBC-TV "all new but the Buicks" Tuesday showcase has been resolved on a tripartite basis. With Buick ankling the spot to move in with Jackie Gleason's half-hour "Honeymooners" telefilms, Whirlpool Washers and American Chicle are joining the previously pacted Sunbeam in carrying the Berle-Raye banners. Sunbeam remains with the Sunday night specolas, with Hazel Bishop pulling out, though latter will be repped in the first half of Tuesday hour with a summer show that returns "Place the Face" to video in revised format (other 30 minutes going to Toni and Associated Products with another stanza).

Sunbeam, Whirlpool and American Chicle entries maintain the "Miltie & Martha" gaits of never having been without a tv sponsor. The funsters will carry on with about two-thirds of the exposures, with another show understood to be in the making for the slot for the balance. It may be a four-way show, with Martin & Lewis and Bob Hope doing four or five shots apiece to constitute a Tuesday "Comedy Hour."

The Chicle bankrolling is particularly interesting since the gum outfit is one of three sponsors of Sid Caesar's Monday night hour (along with RCA and Procter & Gamble). It may indicate that Chicle is preparing to move out as a Caesar participant next season.

'Gunsmoke' TV'er As CBS' Answer

CBS Radio's "Gunsmoke" show is the latest of the audio-only attractions to get the tv treatment, with the network planning a major buildup for a newcomer. Jim Arness (said to be a John Wayne discovery), in the lead role. The interesting aspect of "Gunsmoke's" conversion, however, is that this will be first entry in the web's 7:30 to 8 cross-the-board frontal attack on the inroads by the ABC-TV with its "gotta get 'em young" credo ("Disneyland," "Lone Ranger," "Rin Tin Tin.")

CBS is projecting its 7:30 to 8 overhaul in terms of next fall, which will mean the dispossessing of the Monday-through-Friday news & music format that's been a CBS early-evening staple since the beginning. Still to be resolved is what happens to Doug Edwards, Perry Como, Jo Stafford and Jane Froman. But one thing looms as a certainty — the kids'll get the early evening play, a formula which will probably become universal in practice to encompass all networks and all stations (one report is that the present 7:30-8 layout will be moved up to 7-7:30).

'56 CHI-FRISCO BIG SPONSOR RAP

By GEORGE ROSEN

It isn't likely that any single sponsor will be in a position to pick up the tab for the kind of coin it'll necessitate to bankroll the '56 Demo-GOP national conventions in Chicago and San Francisco, respectively. And in view of the Chi-Frisco shuttling process and the added rap on tap in contrast to the one-city-only (Chi) coverage in '52, the tv networks know only too well the millions that will be involved and how important the sponsorship picture looms this time up.

To cite but one network's plight, back in '52 it cost CBS some $2,400,000 to do the two-convention job. Westinghouse was the sponsor, spending $1,800,000. Loss to the network: $600,000. Translated in terms of Columbia, NBC and ABC, the tv out-of-pocket rap came to an approximate $2,000,000.

But that could be peanuts compared to what the webs are up against this time. It's figured it'll take at least a $3,000,000 sponsorship price tag on each of the tv networks to make the coverage a black-ink operation because of the added cost factors. Increase in network time charges since '52 (plus the new stations that have since joined the webs) are the major factors that will hike the cost for each web some $1,000,000 since the last conventions. Technician salaries have gone up some 30% since '52 and this time it's going to involve each network sending a crew of about 100 people to San Francisco after the Chi meet. Technicians alone (CBS, NBC, ABC) will number in excess of 200.

The combined network chieftains responsible for the putting the two-convention show on the air scouted the Frisco picture a couple weeks back and came to the conclusion that the Repubs' Cow Palace coverage snags can in all probability be hurdled, but that it's gonna be pretty rough going. They found a balcony to house the installations, etc., but in contrast, they conceded, Chi is a "dream job."

GOP Arrangements Group

Washington, March 29.

Alvin Cast, Republican State Chairman for Indiana, will head the subcommittee on arrangements for radio, television and motion pictures for the Republican National Convention in San Francisco, in August, 1956.

With him on the subcommittee will be Mrs. Marshall E. Cornett, of Oregon; Mrs. F. Peavey Heffelfinger, of Minnesota, and George Longmire, of North Dakota. Convention committee appointments were announced Sunday night (27) by Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

The Real Stuff

Members of the Manischewitz Wine family will go to the tv bat themselves to describe the traditional Seder ceremony in advance of the Jewish Passover season.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Manischewitz will appear on "Jinx's Diary" over WRCA-TV, N.Y., tomorrow (Thurs.) and show a table set with characteristic silver and china that passes from one generation to the next. Passover season start next week.

It Costs Money to Be Ambitious; Steve Allen & Paar $2,000,000 Rap

CBS Gets U. S. Steel

Issue of who gets the ABC-TV "U. S. Steel Hour" was finally resolved late yesterday (Tues.) when CBS romped home with the Theatre Guild dramatics. All-live show will go into the slot that Columbia had pitched at the giant Ben Fairless outfit—10 to 11 p.m. Wednesday in the web-imposed void made by Pabst telebouts being pushed over to ABC. It will rotate with General Electric's prospective major film showcaser. Steel preem on CBS-TV will be July 6.

NBC had entered the bidding (with ABC in the retention ring) by offering Tuesday 9:30-10:30 time, same as at ABC, aiming to ditch or reslot "Circle Theatre" and "Truth or Consequences," ABC was pointing to its Tuesday build-up next season via Warner Bros. series.

Heating up the transmitters early in the morning and keeping them burning into the late night is costing the tv networks a barrel of money. In fact it's estimated that the Jack Paar "Morning Show" is costing CBS-TV somewhere in the neighborhood of a $1,000,000 rap, on the basis of present negative sponsor reaction, and NBC-TV a like amount on its Steve Allen "Tonight" show. It's reported that up to a few weeks ago NBC was dropping $30,000 a week on the cross-board Allen frolic, but this amount was whittled down considerably via behind-scenes trimmings, etc. Even with the shavings, however, it's still about a $1,000,000 per annum nick.

Whatever the ambitions or aspirations of the webs or their determination to prove something, the networks have no intention of abandoning the costly projects. It's tough for Paar to get a rating (Dave Garroway's "Today" has the commanding lead) and on top of that the sponsors aren't biting in terms of the CBS 7 to 9 a. m. spread. The Columbia program braintrusters are still playing around with format changes, heightening the entertainment segments, etc., still convinced that it's got a winner in the Paar showcase. But in the meantime it spells out money.

Ditto on the NBC-TV late night Allen show. Major advantage of the latter is that it enjoys the benefits of the three-way "T-H-T" sales ride (in which sponsors get "Today," "Home" and "Tonight" exposure) on a combined rate setup, but it's been tough going trying to peddle the Allen show solo. And the competing late night pix (as with WCBS-TV in N. Y.) get the breaks on the ratings.

Everybody seems to benefit from the networks. The stations, oddly enough, are receptive to the Paar and Allen shows, for they're cashing in on local cut-in sales while enjoying a free entertainment ride from the network. In terms of both Paar and Allen, the coin is satisfying and their respective shows have parlayed them into major prominence, each with his own loyal following.

Everybody's Out For Como, But It Looks Like NBC

Shift of Perry Como from CBS to NBC-TV is in the works. With CBS attempting to end the 15-minute partitions in the 7:30 to 8 p.m. period, it is knocking the Chesterfield biz out of its ledgers. Result is that virtually every network is angling for the alignment of Como.

The offer from NBC-TV looms as the largest to date. With that deal, it's said that Como would have the choice of continuing with a 15-minute segment, or could go into a half-hour or a full-hour show.

ABC is also set to go into the Como sweepstakes. It's still in the process of strengthening its overall talent and program structure. However, CBS is also countering with an offer for Como to remain.

The sifting of the various offers to Como will begin today (Wed.) when Thomas G. Rockwell, head of General Artists Corp. which handles Como, returns from Florida, where he attended the opening of Kay Starr at the Fontainebleau Hotel, Miami Beach. Como will also return from Chicago today where he attended the Music Operators of America convention. A decision is expected by the end of the week.

'Mickey Mouse Club' Piles Up the Clients; Kitty Now $8,000,000

"Mickey Mouse Club," already half-sold last week, has added three more clients plus another "iffy" to its ABC-TV roster. Web has signed Carnation Milk, American Dairy Assn. and Mars Candy for a quarter-hour weekly apiece, thus bringing the total sponsorship lineup on the upcoming Walt Disney daytimer to 13 quarter-hours out of a possible 20. In terms of cold cash, it brings the kitty up to about $8,000,000 annually.

The iffy client, which would make sponsor No. 8 and quarter-hour No. 14, is Welch Grape Juice, which hasn't signed yet but is very close to a deal. Welch sponsorship would really be a feather in ABC-TV's cap, since it involves cancellation of the firm's participation in "Howdy Doody" on NBC-TV. "Mickey Mouse Club" is aimed directly at "Howdy," being slotted in the same time period and aiming at the same audience. Welch would be the first "Howdy"-to-"Mickey" defection. Re the remaining clients, American Dairy becomes the first spill-over bankroller, doubling on the two Disney shows on ABC. It's one of three sponsors of the nighttime "Disneyland."

NBC Dickers For Selznick Features

Hollywood, March 29.

NBC and David O. Selznick are huddling again, perhaps for the umpteenth time, but in this session there's an added element. The network is not only dickering for Selznick's services as a producer but is negotiating for a flock of DOS' features, which it would presumably spot on the network as "specials." Re the negotiations for his services, NBC wants him to do occasional spectaculars. Selznick's tv efforts have been confined thus far to last fall's two-hour, four-networks "Light's Diamond Jubilee" spec.

Negotiations are being handled directly between Selznick and NBC prexy Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver, here for last weekend's opening of the NBC color studios in Burbank.

PARKER PEN BILLINGS IN AGENCY SWITCH

Chicago, March 29.

The Parker Pen account, which has been berthed with J. Walter Thompson the past dozen years, switches to Tatham-Laird in late spring.

T-L account exec Dave Watrous, a former Parker ad manager and a nephew of the family, was reportedly instrumental in getting for his shop the nod for the pen firm's billings, currently running about $2,500,000 annually.

Gleason's 'Mardi Gras' May Wind Up As Costliest Hour Show in TV

Jackie Gleason's upcoming full hour "Mardi Gras" tv show is being whipped into audition shape, with a "teletranscription" all set to roll for the CBS high program command within the next couple of weeks. And the way it's shaping up it could well wind up as the most costly regular weekly hour show to hit the medium.

This is the showcase designed for the Saturday night 10 to 11 spot next season as the big CBS ammunition to throw against NBC's George Gobel and "Hit Parade." And what it does for Gleason is beyond precedent in tv's history—giving his Jackie Gleason Enterprises practically a clean sweep on CBS-TV's Saturday night programming (with the exception of the 9 to 10 slottings of "Two for the Money" and "My Favorite Husband.") The Gleason scorecard will read: 8 to 8:30: The Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey variety show; 8:30 to 9: "The Honeymooners"; 10 to 11: "Mardi Gras." Only Arthur Godfrey with his multiple showcasings and $18,000,000 annual sponsorship gross accruing to CBS has lived in that kind of rarefied atmosphere.

Everything about "Mardi Gras" and its night club setting and trappings will be expensive. There's even talk of CBS building a special theatre for exclusive origination of the show. Already heralded is the fact that it'll have 24 dancing girls (the highest paid ponies in tv); eight showgirls, a full vocal chorus (under Lyn Duddy's direction) and a full band complement. This, of course, is over and above the week-to-week acts. Gleason plans to be in and out of the show periodically, just as he plans shuttling on to the Dorseys' set, which some weeks may give him a two-hour Saturday night exposure.

Cuttin' Corners

In the mad tv race for top names in which protocol and "business us usual" are gradually being discarded, it appears the sponsors themselves are going directly to the personalities in an effort to negotiate exclusive deals.

Last week one of the top automotives with a major stake in tv programming circumvented the networks in a bid to wrap up Judy Garland for next season. However, Sid Luft, husband-manager of the star, wouldn't commit himself.

Similarly it's understood that General Foods made similar direct overtures to Sam Goldwyn recently, object being a GF-sponsored tv hour to tie in with the release next fall of Goldwyn's, "Guys and Dolls" pic.

ABC-TV Sets New Minimum Dollar Structure on Rate

Having reached the big time in the network rating sweepstakes, ABC-TV has set about doing something with its rate card structure. Result, which will be mailed out Friday (1) to agencies and clients, is Rate Card No. 5, the first new card issued since July of 1951 and the first card under which the web will charge a minimum dollar volume to prospective advertisers.

Minimum is a new approach to "must buy" card structures. Instead of a "must buy" list of stations, as is the practice elsewhere, it involves a minimum dollar purchase, with clients free to pick their stations so long as they reach the dollar minimum. New minimum figure is placed at about $25,000 per half-hour time purchase. The only station "must buys" are the network's five o&o's, with the advertiser free to select all other outlets. Web will suggest a list of stations which it's sure of clearing and which comprises about $21,000 of that $25,000 minimum, but the advertiser is in no way obligated to choose those particular outlets.

Other new feature of the rate card is an improved discount structure enabling an individual bankroller to earn up to 32½% in discounts, as opposed to the previous 27½%. Understood the client must spend a minimum of $80,000 a week on a 52-week basis to earn the 32½%. Accompanying the rate card will be a new production manual, No. 4, with a simplified method of racking up production-facilities charges. Under the new manual, the web is separating charges for facilities-equipment and personnel, charging a flat rate for the facilities and equipment and a sliding scale for personnel, depending on the number used and union requirements. Previous production manuals listed personnel and facilities together, requiring long and complicated figuring to arrive at an overall cost. Under the new plan, advertiser can figure his facilities and equipment costs immediately, then tack on personnel charges.

Tab on Specs Up; 'High Cost of TV'

NBC-TV is hiking the cost of its specs next season. Whereas it's been costing the client $330,000 per 90-minute show, the amount goes up to $420,000 starting in the fall. Reason: high costs of tv, the benefits of expanded coverage and new program "surprises."

The Sunbeam and Hazel Bishop co-sponsorship tab this season on the Sunday night specs is $165,000 per 45 minutes. Latter figure thus becomes $210,000 in the fall, when the Sabbath eve tint series will be divided among a number of clients a la the "magazine insertion" pattern.

Ford and RCA are expected to continue with the Monday night "Producers Showcase" series with Oldsmobile dittoing on the Saturday night specs.

Allyn Edwards Ankles WRCA for 'Citizen' Show

All components on the "Mr. Citizen" package for ABC-TV have been resolved with Allyn Edwards ankling his three-hour morning radio show on WRCA, N. Y., to take the host-narrator post. Cunningham & Walsh property (for Liggett & Myers) starts April 20 in the 8:30 p.m. post-Disney Wednesday slot that ousts the Stu Erwin show. Ed Bryon is producing with Marx Loeb assisting, Charles Tate directing and John Gart batonning. Scripts are by Robert Shaw and Howard Rodman and Pete McGovern is editor.

"Citizen" is a dramatization of joeblow "heroes" with expectancy that latter will be spotted at conclusion for the snapper and receive the plaque award from prominent guests.

'Biogs' Vice Lux Radio

"Biographies in Sound," NBC's acclaimed radio stanza slotted Sunday, will move into the Tuesday night berth of "Lux Radio Theatre" when latter takes its summer hiatus.

Web will do six fresh biogs and reprise seven from its series for the hot weather spread.

Lester Gottlieb Subs Godfrey TV Slot Again

CBS Radio program veepee Lester Gottlieb again doubles into tv on April 20 when he handles the production reins on the Arthur Godfrey Wednesday 8 to 9 slot during the latter's absence. Talent set thus far includes Jack Carter and Bobby Van, with most of the Godfrey regulars. Al Singer and Sid Garfield have been pacted to write special material.

Last month Gottlieb subbed in the same hour, with Art Carney as the star, with the stanza getting a favorable onceover from tv program chieftain Hubbell Robinson.

Caesar Grounded by Grippe, But Due Back After Spec

Sid Caesar may have had some reservations in the past about being preempted every fourth Monday by NBC-TV's "Producers Showcase" spec. But with the comic conking out on Monday (28) as result of grippe, the next specola—April 4, with Greer Garson in "Reunion in Vienna"—will provide the gap he needs to recover and get into rehearsal for his April 11 return. Caesar was reported okay yesterday (Tues.) though still in fever at his N.Y. residence.

Monday's subber was a kine of the Nov. 8 show which introduced Nanette Fabray as his vis-a-vis. It was Caesar's first absence in some six years of his videocracy.

Dicker Steve Allen As Lead in BG Pic

TV stars appear to be in demand for film roles this year. Steve Allen, for one, is being seriously considered for the titular role in the upcoming Universal-International filming of the "Benny Goodman Story." Just how much of a conflict it will present in terms of his NBC-TV "Tonight" show, or whether he'd do the film during his network hiatus period remains, among other things, to be resolved.

Similarly, Phil Silvers is being sought for the film version of "Fifth Season," to play the Menasha Skulnik lead role. It's planned to shoot the film in New York. There's less of a pix-tv conflict involved in this case, since Silvers already has 13 of his CBS-TV comedy vidfilm series in the can and plans to have a full 26 ready by the time the show preems in the fall.

'Be Kind to TV Coml's' Sez Optometric Assn. Head; Good for the Kids

Des Moines, March 29.

Dr. Lois B. Bing of Cleveland, chairman of the American Optometric Association's committee on visual problems in schools, told an optometric conference here that "we should be kind to commercials on television." She said, "television as such is not harmful to the eyes. In fact it provides fine educational experiences for children they wouldn't have otherwise." She said that commercials "break up the intense visual concentration and thus ease the strain on the eyes."

She went on to say, "as a vision and education specialist I'm interested in good posture and its effects on vision. Poor posture leads to a weakening of the ability to use both eyes equally. Children shouldn't slouch down in chairs or lie down while watching tv. They shouldn't watch with one eye covered or hidden. There should not be a bright light between the watcher and the television screen, nor should the room be totally dark. It should have diffused light. The intense concentration itself isn't too harmful because it is broken up by commercials when the viewer can relax his eyes a little."

AG to ES: 'You Dope!'

Arthur Godfrey took a couple of swipes at another "giant member" of the CBS program family, Ed Sullivan, last week. Holding a clipping in his hand from Sullivan's N. Y. Daily News column referring to "another operation" for Godfrey, the latter referred to the "Toast"-master as a "dope" for not checking with him on the surgical matter. The inside is that Godfrey has been incensed all along because Sullivan has been giving ex-Godfreyite Julius LaRosa work on "Toast of the Town."

Godfrey's "dope" crack and kindred material made major news in Boston, for instance, where Sullivan "can do no wrong."

Pitt Radio Gets Giveaway Bug

KQV's Big Money Push to Inaugurate 'New Sound' in Morning

Pittsburgh, March 29.

Biggest radio push in a long time around here has just been launched by KQV, with an $8,500 giveaway and $30,000 in newspaper and other advertising in connection with what local CBS outlet calls "a new sound" in morning programming.

Show is deejay Joe Deane's early a. m. stanza, rechristened "1410 Time" and revised on the basis of a survey of 1,500 women in the tri-state area. For three and a half hours, from 6 to 9:30, Deane's platters will be strictly instrumental; not a single one of them will have a vocal.

This, according to KQV execs, is in line with what they found after analyzing the answers by the femmes to a questionnaire. In the past, there had been no distinction between Deane's morning and afternoon sessions. The changeover, at least in the morning, is aimed at housewives who revealed a distaste for constant repetition of "noisy, popular music" as well as "too much talk" and "too much silliness" by deejays at that time of day.

In the afternoon, however, Deane will continue as in the past with a conventional type of deejaying "to keep my franchise," he says.

NBC Sweeps Stakes

NBC sure has the luck o' the Irish, or at least a couple of its secretaries have. T'was a case of the boss looking with admiration at his gal in two of the web's offices, with the secretaries both having swept up a clean $140,000 each in the Irish Sweepstakes. After taxes, the prizes come to about $60,000 each, which means the girls can probably buy their bosses a couple of times over.

Winnahs were Dotty Grossman, secretary to Jack Sebastian of the NBC Film Division publicity department, and Sara Willner, sec. to Tom O'Brien of owned & operated stations.

British Com'l TV Gets Top Names; Coates, Barbirolli

London, March 29.

In a bid to capture talent for their commercial tv enterprise, Associated-Rediffusion, the program contracting company which will run the London outlet on weekdays, has negotiated pacts with prominent local showbiz personalities.

Peter Coates, independent legit manager and director, has been named as the web's senior drama producer and has already started on his new assignment. With his wife, Joan Miller in the lead, he directed the Broadway production last year of "A Pin to See the Peepshow."

A-R has also signed Sir John Barbirolli as music adviser, and has inked the Halle Orchestra for fortnightly concerts under his baton. Sir John's role as adviser will not be limited to longhair but will cover all music played over the station.

The network has also closed a deal with Eve Boswell for a series of 13 programs in which she'll be supported by the Johnny Johnson vocal group, with dances arranged by Peter Glover. The chirp filmed the first two in the series prior to leaving on a South African tour last week.

Texaco's 430G ABC Radio News

Texaco has picked up the tab for one of the fattest sales landed by ABC Radio in months, a 33-week purchase of the network's weekend news package of 22 five-minute newscasts. In terms of coin, the package goes at $13,000 per week, so it's a $430,000 expenditure by Texaco. Deal, set via Kudner, is effective April 16 and marks a return by Texaco to the package, which it had for a 10-week spell last summer.

Weekend news package has been ABC's most effective "new look" segment yet. The Texas deal gives it a total of 78 weeks of continued sponsorship with the exception of one weekend, last year's World Series weekend. It's been continuously sponsored since last May, with such bankrollers as Admiral, Musterole, Rybutol, A. C. Gilbert, and Pacquin. Program costs are virtually nil, since the web uses some six staff announcers on the show.

TV'S 'TAKE BACK YOUR MINK'

Weaver & the Scrambled Eggheads

Chicago, March 29.

NBC prexy Sylvester (Pat) Weaver stopped off in Chi last Saturday (26) on his way to the Coast, to guestspeak at the annual U. of Chicago management conference. It was a forum right down Weaver's alley (he described it as a collection of "big butter and egghead men") and his speech on "Television and the Intellectual" was grooved strictly for upper echelon mentalities. And with no texts available it was something of a test in highbrow osmosis for the reporters present as he outlined his visions of the "all-people elite" and the truly modern "classless society."

Weaver chided the brainboys for failing to recognize the true nature of the continuing American revolution leading to an era in which not the few but the many can enjoy civilization's material and cultural plums. With modern production techniques affording the leisure time and with television bringing everyone in contact with the "great, wide, wonderful world," the society of tomorrow need not be comprised of the intellectual haves and have nots. (This is a free translation).

He voiced a lack of patience for the lads in the heavy gray who scoff at tv and argued that "to program for intellectuals is easy, to make all intellectuals is the challenge." Or as U of C Chancellor Lawrence A. Kimpton postscripted: "Mr. Weaver wants the eggheads scrambled into our civilization."

Major Reshuffle of ABC-TV Shows Keyed to Warner Bros. Entry

"Warner Bros. Presents," the picture company's upcoming hour-long show on ABC-TV, is serving to touch off a wholesale programming reshuffle at the network for the fall. Involved in the big switch would be "Cavalcade of America," "TV Reader's Digest," the Danny Thomas "Make Room for Daddy" stanza and possibly a couple of other entries. Cueing the shift is a final decision by the web to slot "WB Presents" at 7:30-8:30 Tuesdays, thus causing "Cavalcade" to move.

The duPont entry will go into the Monday at 8 period in the fall. "Reader's Digest" will move out of that period into Tuesday night, either at 8:30 or 9. Decision depends on whether Florida Citrus goes into next season with "20 Questions," currently occupying the 8:30 slot. "Make Room for Daddy," at any rate, is now definitely scheduled to move to an earlier time on another day. Feeling at the web and the sponsors is that a good deal of children's appeal in the show is being wasted in its current 9 p.m. period on Tuesdays, and the probability is that it will be slotted Fridays at 8:30 in the fall, following "Ozzie & Harriet" and replacing the current Ray Bolger Show, which has lost its sponsor.

If "Daddy" moves to Friday, as is likely, and "20 Questions" is dropped, "Digest" would probably move into the Tuesday at 8:30 post, with the network having to fill 9 p.m. If "20 Questions" stays, then "Digest" will almost certainly move into the 9 p.m. time, replacing "Daddy." Probable date for all this to happen is Sept. 13, which is when "Warner Bros." premieres.

Presto! Amazo!

Magico Milbourne Christopher is doing his quicker-than-the-eye stunts as "Amazo the Great" in a series of tv film commercials to whip up interest in Amazo, the quick-mix pudding.

After Christopher does a legitimate baffler he tells viewers they can work magic themselves with the 30-second dessert. There's a package tie-in too. Each box carries a trick trading card endorsed by Christopher.

American Maize Products Co. is the sponsor, Kenyon & Eckhardt, the agency.

200G 'Norby' Pix To Stay in Can

With Eastman Kodak lopping off its "Norby" sponsorship in mid-April and switching over to "Ford Theatre" reruns instead, there will still be five of the "Norby" episodes that won't even be exposed to the public—at least not under Eastman sponsorship. It's estimated that each of the 30-minute installments, made in Eastman color process, represents a cost of about $40,000, with EK thus going into the hole to the tune of $200,000.

Films are owned jointly by producer David Swift and star David Wayne. It's doubtful, in view of the show's track record, whether the series will be pitched up for reruns to drain off residual coin.

With the switch in programs, Eastman inherits the Wednesday at 8 period on NBC-TV (opposite "Disneyland" and Arthur Godfrey), vacating its present Wed. at 7 tenancy.

NBC's $1,500,000 For NCAA 8-Game TV Spread in Fall

NCAA grid-on-vid returns to NBC with the network shelling out a minimum $1,500,000, it's understood, for eight games with seven on traditional Saturday and one on Thanksgiving. This is a moveover from ABC-TV which had a split sponsorship last year that took the web for a reported $1,800,000 ride in the red. NBC had the 1953 pact under General Motors' sponsorship. NCAA has 13 footballcasts in all, five of them done regionally for the first time and on separate bidding basis. Other bidder for the national griddery was CBS.

Deal was made over the weekend with E. L. (Dick) Romney, commissioner of the Mountain State Conference who is chairman of the NCAA tv committee. NBC was repped by public affairs v.p. Davidson Taylor and sports director Thomas Gallery.

QUAKER OATS IN 'ZOO PARADE' EXIT

Chicago, March 29.

After a five-year ride, Quaker Oats is dropping its alternate sponsorship of NBC-TV's "Zoo Parade" May 8. Defection of Quaker, for its Ken-L-Ration products, leaves the Chi-originator unsponsored for the moment as American Chicle checks off April 17.

Web reportedly has a couple of new hot clients on the string for the Sunday afternoon remote from the Windy City's Lincoln Park Zoo. "Zoo" crew, headed by narrator Marlin Perkins, departs this summer for a two-month junket into the interior of South Africa to lense wild life film footage for next season's shows.

AX SPONSORS FOR CHINCHILLA COAT

By LEONARD TRAUBE

The era of networks waiting on tv sponsors with hat in hand is over—at least until the next round. It's the webs that now have the upper hand on calling the shots to the point where backers of shows are virtually in the position of being obliged to show references to rate continued employment on the video lanes.

Current power plays center in giving underwriters the w.k. heave-ho either for more qualitative check-payers or in an effort to meet the challenge of the competition, or both. The trend sneaked up in the industry last fall when NBC-TV gave the back of its hand to Firestone Rubber and U. S. Tobacco, pushing out "Voice of Firestone" and "Martin Kane" to make room for Sid Caesar's Monday night "Hour" (along with a programming segue that includes "Medic" and the every-fourth-week "Producers Showcase" specolas) and the Thursday night "Lux Video Theatre" inherited from CBS-TV.

Columbia's Turn

Now it's Columbia that's become embroiled in the manifold maneuvers wherein sponsors are virtually being invited to be included out. Witness, for instance, the stand of Columbia prexy J. L. Van Volkenburg in putting the cancellation kibosh on Pabst's Blue Ribbon Bouts on Wednesday at 10 after the beer dispenser refused to cut down on the number of fisticuff engagements to allow the network to schedule classier programs in the interim weeks (with CBS also pointing to the limited appeal of the fights for the big-buying femme audience). As result, the Paley & Stanton forces are now fortified with a General Electric hour and, having gladly given up Pabst to ABC-TV, are ultra-bullish on scoring a coup on that web by bringing the powerful Theatre Guild-U. S. Steel dramatics into camp for the alternate weeks. (GE was pacted with the understanding that it would forego its weekly showcasing if U. S. Steel was won over as the rotating stanza.) The GE-USS alternation would give CBS the biggest one-two punch on the spectrum as far as a gathering in of industrial giants is concerned. It's of incalculable prestige, plus the coin factor, though obviously the network must have done some "fast talking" to swing such a deal, and perhaps was forced to provide concessions. In the Van Volkenburg

CBS Isn't Clowning

General Electric's heavily-promoted telexcerpt of the Emmett Kelly autobiography, "Clown," with Henry Fonda starred, outpulled every other Sunday evening show this weekend (27) with a resounding 32.7 overnight Trendex rating. "GE Theatre," in its CBS-TV 9-9:30 post, even outrated Ed Sullivan's consistent Top 10'er and the competing (to Sullivan) "Entertainment '55" heralding the opening of NBC-TV's Burbank color city. As to its own opposition, GE murdered "Philco Playhouse" by more than two to one.

GE pulled a 32.7, compared with "Philco's" 15.6 for the first half-hour, with "Clown's" draw spilling over into the 9:30 CBS-TV time when "Stage Seven" pulled a 26.0 compared with "Philco's" second-half-hour 16.7.

Sitting Life Out?

Quote by playwright St. John Ervine at Bristol:

"Under the influence of television, the human race will become a large heaving jelly, unwilling to go anywhere, incapable of going anywhere, just sitting its life out looking in."

CBS-TV Axe Falls on Noxzema, Longines; Climaxes 2-Way Agitation

Halo, Goodbye

Fact that NBC-TV has been peddling Sunday 8 to 9 as part of the rotating sponsorship scheme indicates that Colgate, currently represented by "Comedy Hour" in the time slot, is no longer interested in 100% possession of the opposite-Ed Sullivan segment.

While "Comedy Hour" in its present form is being scrapped at the end of the season, nobody knows yet just what goes into the hour period in the fall. Scheduled shift of Colgate entry from Bates to Esty agency may be academic by the fall, depending on the sponsor's eventual plans.

Noxzema and Longines-Wittnauer have been knocked off their respective shows on CBS-TV with both ending up in May. Noxzema is rotating client on "Person to Person" along with Amoco, with Hamm Beer the midwest sponsor. Whether the latter will return to its weekly sponsorship is not determined. The Ed Murrow-starring show has long been agitating to divest itself of the sunburn lotion and shaving cream outfit and finally succeeded with the help of the web's upper echelon. They want a "classier" client.

"Longines' Chronoscope" exits the Monday-Wednesday-Friday sphere at 11 p.m. In this case the agitation came from stations which have been pressing for recapture of the time for their late night feature pix and other monied fare. "Chronoscope" has been going for four years with Larry LeSueur the permanent on screen editor for the last 18 months. Local station scheduling has been regularly irregular with an 11:15 opening on the even days and 11 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday, and hence competing outlets are figured in a better position to grab off ratings. On the mixed choice, NBC-TV fronts Steve Allen in "Tonight" at 11:30 (though he comes in 15 minutes earlier on WRCA-TV, N. Y., for Knickerbocker Beer). WCBS-TV, Gotham key of CBS, will thus be able to "day and date" its rivals, particularly NBC's o&o, with the news recap followed by sports capsule, then into the "Late Show" celluloid at 11:15 on a fixed basis.

In the reshuffle, Piel's Beer will retain the crossboard status on the news plus Tuesday and Thursday on five-minute sports (Don Cochrane on news, and Bill Hickey on sports), with General Cigar on the other three days of the athletics segment. However, Piel's moves out of the Saturday night news picture and is replaced by Ford Dealers of N. Y. since there's another beer—Budweiser—that's latching on to the "Demon Runyon Theatre" telepix series at 10:30 and it isn't considered good practice to slot competing products consecutively.

Sponsor-Rotating Plan at NBC-TV Hits Some Snags

NBC's plan for a criss-crossing of sponsors designed to give the client a multiple-night exposure on major shows has run into advertiser resistance, and it's understood that the plan will probably be abandoned or drastically modified. Under the proposed setup, for example, a single sponsor, under a rotating policy, would one week be identified with the Sunday night 8 to 9 hour where "Comedy Hour" is currently berthed); another week get exposure on the Sid Caesar show; Tuesday night with Milton Berle-Martha Raye, etc. Cost per season, per client: $5,500,000.

Understood some clients thought the plan too hazardous and preferred identifying themselves with single shows. Too, the idea of buying into a show that would be competing with such high-voltage competition as "Toast of the Town" didn't strike clients as too appealing, particularly since, at this stage of the game, nobody even knows what's going into Sunday 8 to 9 in the fall as successor to "Comedy Hour."

RALSTON TO CBS-TV AS EXEC PRODUCER

Indie tv producer Gilbert A. Ralston this week became a network staffer, joining the program family of v.p. Hubbell Robinson Jr. as an executive producer at CBS-TV. For the last five years he's been grinding out telefilms for major clients, including Electric Companies, International Silver, Hamilton Watch and General Electric and put together a large chunk of DuPont's half-hour "Cavalcade of America." For the last 18 months Ralston has been shooting in Africa, Algeria and France on skeins just bought by the Heinz Co.

Ralston's rep was made at Procter & Gamble in the 1943-50 span, first in the radio division at Cincinnati hq and later as exec producer of the soaper's P&G Productions. Before that hookup he was nighttime radio head of Compton agency.

Franken to TPA

Jerry Frankin, sales head of Lester Lewis Associates, indie packagers, for the last four years, checked out last week to become chief of the newly-formed press sector of Television Programs of America.

Deal, made with prexy Milton Gordon and exec v.p. Michael Sillerman, gives TPA a resident publicity director, with Dine & Kalmus, on the account for some months, retained as consultants.

NBC's 100G For 3 'Pan' Repeats

NBC, it's reported, has finalized its deal for the "Peter Pan" repeat next Christmas, but at a price. Understood network clinched the deal only after agreeing to a stipulation that it pay $100,000 to the James M. Barrie estate for three more presentations. (It will probably become an annual Xmas tv fixture.)

Originally, NBC had an option for a one-time repeat at $12,500, but permitted it to lapse without taking any action. Subsequently the price was hiked to $35,000 for a one-shot or "three for a $100,000." Web bought the latter. Original fee for the recent Mary Martin telecast was $25,000.

VANDA TO EUROPE FOR 'BIG TOP' ACTS

Philadelphia, March 29.

Charles Vanda, producer of "The Big Top," flies to London April 12 on the first leg of a buying tour of feature acts for his one hour CBS-TV circus show. He will visit England, France, Italy and Denmark in search of talent. He picks up Glenn Gundell, v.p. of National Dairies, the Sealtest sponsor of "Big Top" in Paris and they both check the Cirque Medrano there and then fly to Copenhagen for the Tivoli and Shuman Circus openings.

Vanda, who is veepee of WCAU-TV in Philadelphia and a member of the NARTB Information Committee will also deliver lectures on television in London, Paris and Rome.

Probe of TV Industry Broadened; Sidney Davis Named Chief Counsel

Washington, March 29.

Scope of the forthcoming hearings by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on network-UHF problems was spelled out by Chairman Warren Magnuson (D.-Wash.) last week with announcement the inquiry will survey "the entire field of broadcasting, telecasting and communications."

This apparent broadening of the inquiry was disclosed by Magnuson in naming Sidney Davis as chief counsel for the investigation. A minority counsel to represent the Republican membership of the Committee for the probe is to be selected this week.

Indications that monopoly aspects of television will play a major role in the inquiry were seen in the appointment of Davis, who has been acting as chief counsel for a Senate Judiciary subcommittee which has been looking into possible monopoly in connection with the Dixon-Yates contract providing for private power facilities to supplement TVA.

Davis, 37, is on leave from the New York law firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin & Krim, in which he is a partner. He is a former special assistant to the Attorney General and was law secretary in 1944 to Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

Davis' firm represents Paramount Pictures Corp., among others in the motion picture industry.

Simultaneous with Davis' appointment, the reactivated UHF Industry Coordinating Committee, under the chairmanship of Harold H. Thoms of WISE-TV, Asheville, N. C., warned that unless "prompt remedial measures" are taken many small market VHF stations as well as ultra highs will fold.

'Critical Situation'

The recent proposal of the FCC to institute a comprehensive study of network operations, the UHF Committee declared, vindicates the position it has taken for more than a year. It is recognition "that a critical situation now exists as a result of the present tv allocation plan and present network practices and arrangements." It is also recognition, Committee asserted, "that dangerous monopolistic conditions exist which are leading to concentration of the control of all tv in this country in two powerful networks and in a handful of large superpower, supercoverage tv stations in a few of the large markets of the country."

And if this happens, the Committee predicted, the public "will be restricted in the near future to

WOR-TV Winnah In 'Battle in Aft.'

To insiders it looks as though WOR-TV (N. Y.) and Ted Steele won out in the nine-month "battle in the afternoon" over the combined forces of Bob Kennedy and Allen Ludden in similar formats at rival WPIX. When WPIX topper Fred Thrower announced that the Kennedy-Ludden program sequence was going out on April 8 because the baseball season would interfere, few recalled that in the five years that Steele held down the same spots he never took a summer hiatus. Moreover, the Daily News-owned station isn't taking a firm stand about the return of the p.m. stanza combo in the fall after the diamond televising is gone for another year. Some of the performers on the axed WPIX shows aren't at all happy about autumn prospects, either.

The battle was joined last July, the very week Steele started at WOR. WPIX put three personalities (including Shari Lewis—for the juves at 5:30) into the three different type shows that Steele had handled alone. There was a variety-for-mom show that singer Bob Kennedy took over; a teenage show handled by Ludden, and Miss Lewis' kiddie edition, which was killed not so much by Steele competition but by the arrival of the powerfully rated "Our Gang" film shorts which got the 5:30 nod. Incidentally, Steele himself didn't fare too well among the youngest Where Does Pabst Switch to ABC-TV Put Tom Duggan?

Chicago, March 22.

Switch of the Wednesday night fight telecasts packaged by the International Boxing Club from CBS-TV to ABC-TV next June may have interesting ramifications so far as controversial commentator Tom Duggan, currently the No. 1 local coin producer at ABC-TV's WBKB here is concerned. Duggan long has been an outspoken critic of IBC activities and his exit a couple years back from NBC-TV's WNBQ where he first came into home prominence was a direct result of the personal attacks he had leveled against IBC prexy James Norris and associates.

When the gabber was given the gate at WNBQ he signed on with WBKB where his campaign against the boxing outfit has continued unstintedly. At the same time, his "comeback' 'on the ABC-TV o&o after the NBC-TV ouster has projected him into the top money brackets withd his 10 shows per week netting the station close to $10,000 per frame.

By a coincidence, Duggan this week is negotiating a new contract with WBKB and it's expected his stance in relation to the IBC, now that it's to be associated with the parent network, will come up for discussion.

Pabst, which has been bankrolling the Wednesday night bouts on CBS-TV for the past five years, cuts back to an alternate week sponsorship when the midweek card moves to ABC June 1. However, the fights will be telecast weekly with the web on the prowl for an alternate client. Moveover reportedly resulted from Columbia's insistence that the pug schedule be limited next season to every-other-week showcasing.

ABC RADIO SLOTTING ALL-NEGRO STANZA

ABC Radio has slotted its first all-Negro network show, latching onto the current rhythm & blues craze with a half-hour weekly segment titled "Rhythm & Blues on Parade." Show, which will originate from the Club Baby Grand in Harlem, features Willie Bryant, w.k. New York deejay, along with top Negro guest artists and acts at the club. Show, which goes into the Thursday at 9:30 period starting April 7, will be hinged on the r & b fad, with live music and interviews taking that as their focal point.

ABC, to keep the all-Negro character of the show intact, has even put a Negro engineer on the segment, taking him off a tv camera and putting him on audio just for the show. Club Baby Grand, on 125th St., has been the origination point for a number of local (N.Y.) late-hour radio shows, but this is the first time it's being used as a network showcaser.

Benoff's Coca Scripting May Delay O'Seas Trek

Mac Benoff has been called east to script the Imogene Coca show, Saturday nights over NBC-TV, and if he continues, it will set back his scheduled European sailing May 8. This is part of a comedy travel book assignment for Henry Holt & Co., dealing with a "Mr. and Mrs. America in Europe."

Benoff completed his Danny Thomas (ABC-TV) filmed comedy series, and is slated for at least a month with the Coca show, but may extend it.

WFIL-TV Loves the Guvs

Philadelphia, March 29.

Gov. George M. Leader, of Pennsylvania, Gov. Robert H. Meyner, of New Jersey, and Gov. J. Caleb Boggs, of Delaware, will inaugurate a new series of monthly telecasts on WFIL-TV, Thursday, April 7, 8 to 8:30 p. m., originating from Independence Hall.

The three Governors, whose states comprise the Delaware River Valley industrial area, will appear together on these televised meetings to review the factors and projects that affect the mutual prosperity and well being of the region.

PIAZZA'S TINTER

Marguerite Piazza, the operatic oriole and nitery nightingale, will star in "High Pitch" on Chrysler's CBS-TV "Shower of Stars" color show May 12.

"Pitch" can be taken two ways —music or sports. Miss Piazza is scripted as running a baseball team.

TV's Newsroom of Tomorrow

Douglas Edwards, CBS-TV's cross-the-board newsman, looked into his crystal ball last week and projected himself into 1965 for an electronic peak-a-boo at the video future in terms of global events.

"Ten years from now (maybe less, considering the speed-up processes of the electronic sciences), there will be transoceanic, round-the-world live tv," said Edwards. "I can see the tv editor of the future sitting in his New York newsroom facing a bank of 30 to 40 giant-size monitors—many of them color receivers—reporting what newsfilm cameramen-correspondents are covering anywhere in the world at any given moment. It will be a 24-hour operation.

"Tomorrow's tv camera-transmitter will be small and extremely mobile, powerful enough to roam anywhere in the world, to shoot the news and beam it to more powerful transmitters for immediate airing, or for super-speed recording which can be televised minutes later. On our own program, we've already begun to use tv recordings of news events with greater speed and quality than we would have thought possible a couple of years ago.

"For example, when live transmission difficulties developed during the nuclear weapons tests in Nevada, our CBS television station in Los Angeles (KNXT) made a recording of the tv transmission and sent it to us in New York as soon as it could. We made a second recording and had it on the air within an hour and a half—with quite good quality.

"Every hour on the hour—or more often—the editor will be able to feed the network a fire in Rio de Janeiro, an elephant hunt in Africa, a flood along the Nile, a king's coronation or a bikini bathing beauty contest on the Riviera."

Edwards, 37, is no johnny-come-lately. He switched from sound to sight about eight years ago, with a "network" of two or three stations. His 7:30 p.m.'er is NSR (no sponsor room). Last week, too impatient to stand by while the years roll on to fulfill or dent his predictions covering the next decade, he introduced a background map 18 by 13 feet, fronted as the most accurate up-to-date of its kind in the world. The global mural is the work of Richard Edes Harrison, a foremost cartographer (Time, Fortune; etc.) produced jointly with Aaron Ehrlich, CBS News' graphic arts director. It's in values of gray and took several weeks to work out. Alongside the map is a blank board on which are pinpointed spots mentioned in the newscast.

'BEWARE OF TELEPIX CON-MEN'

CBS' 'Never Had It So Good'

CBS' "peaches and cream" annual report, showing record earnings, revenues and sales for '54 with a consolidated net income (after taxes) of $11,414,845, takes on even added significance when it's recognized that board chairman William S. Paley's corporate setup took it on the chin on the manufacturing front (CBS-Columbia and CBS-Hytron). An additional $5,302,181 in capital gains (after taxes) developed through the sale of the comany's minority station interests in Washington (WTOP) and Minneapolis (WCCO).

CBS' gross revenue and sales (up 18.9% over '53) of $373,380,139 thus put Paley & Co. in the better than "one third of an RCA empire" realm (latter is hugging the billion mark), but whereas the big noise in RCA is manufacturing, with broadcasting running second, CBS' mounting profits come primarily from its television network, with Columbia Records also a profit factor.

As usual, the published report (prexy Frank Stanton attends personally to the handsome topography and art work) is an artistic triumph in keeping with the bullish aspect of the annual report's contents.

With '54 tv billings representing a 50% increase over '53's $98,000,000 take, the prospects for '55 are even more promising on the basis of January biz, when CBS-TV racked up $15,000,000 for a single month's billings in contrast to the previous January's $10,000,000.

Simultaneous release of CBS proxy statement bares salaries paid to officers and directors during '53 amounting to $1,666,539, with Edward R. Murrow topping list with $306,611, with an additional $105,600 in royalties from Person to Person, Inc.

Other salaries: Stanton, $250,836; Paley, $200,000; J. L. Van Volkenburg, CBS-TV prexy, $101,250; James B. Conkling, Columbia Records prexy, $72,499; Adrian Murphy, CBS Radio prexy, $65,000; Charles F. Stromeyer, CBS-Hytron prexy, $54,807; Seymour Mintz, CBS-Columbia prexy, $51,346.

And then there's a 5% cross-the-board salary hike for all N. Y. employees in the labor grade structure with over 150 hired hands to receive wage adjustments above the general increase. The ghost walks April 8 on both increases.

NARTB Board Split on Toll TV

Fellows Calls April 12 Special Session to Evolve Industry Stand

Washington, March 29.

National Assn. of Radio and TV Broadcasters may find its house somewhat divided when its tv board of directors meets here in two weeks to consider the FCC proposal to authorize toll tv. NARTB prexy Harold E. Fellows has called the board members to a special meeting April 12 to discuss the industry position. Initial comments to the FCC proposal are due May 9.

At least two members of the board can be expected to oppose an organization stand against pay tv. One of them is Paul Raibourn who heads Paramount Picture's tv station KTLA in Los Angeles. In view of Par's controlling interest in Telemeter, Raibourn's position on toll tv is obvious.

Another board member who would be inclined to favor toll tv is John Esau, principal stockholder in UHF station KTVQ in Oklahoma City. Along with other UHF operators in difficulties Esau will probably support toll tv as a source of added revenue. His station is being operated under a trusteeship appointed by the courts last December.

NARTB has not committed itself on toll tv but Fellows has urged

'Woolworth Hour' In June 5 CBS Bow

F. W. Woolworth's initial splurge in radio, reported several weeks ago, is set for unveiling on June 5 as a 60-minute Sunday musicale in the 1 o'clock slot. The five-and-dime colossus is earmarking about $18,000 in time and talent for its "Woolworth Hour" on CBS, with bigtime trimmings including Macdonald Carey as the emcee and Percy Faith's 35-piece orch (plus chorus), in addition to regular guests in the name value groove (some shows will have two or more such extra-addeds). Billy Daniels cut the first audition record in the guestar slot.

The June inaugural indicates a summertime showcase, though at a press bally yesterday (Tues.) at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., the client and the web (with Rae C. McClaren, v.p., heading up the

BBB Gets Tough As 'Bait & Switch' Abuses Continue

The hottest Better Business Bureau session with N. Y. telecasters was reported to have occurred last week, with BBB local boss Hugh Jackson warning three tele stations in the met area, which still run "bait" and "switch" advertising in the face of their own written code against it, that they'd better cut it out before the law gets after them. Cause for alarm among the video stations is the purported entry of N. Y. District Attorney Frank Hogan's men into sleuthing around the misleading advertising field. Heretofore, it was strictly the legal baby of Brooklyn D.A. Edward Silver.

Jackson warned the video outlet execs that another reason they'd better get the b&s copy off the air in quick time was that he didn't think he could stave off newspaper coverage of the situation much longer. The papers are understood to be anxious to tear at the stations which continue to carry b&s after a month under tv's own self-regulatory code. Jackson was said to have called matters to tv's attention alone, because he felt that violations are more evident to the public via that medium than in radio.

It's reliably told that one known "bait" bankroller was frank to admit he is "laying low" until the indictment the Brooklyn Grand Jury recently brought against Atlantic Sewing Machine is disposed of.

Names of the three tele stations which as of last Wednesday or Thursday (24) were still carrying obvious "bait" ads were withheld.

BARE SUCKER TECHNIQUES

By BOB CHANDLER

The telepix promotors—the get-rich-quick boys who descended on Hollywood and New York four years ago and promoted enough money for hundreds of pilot films and hundreds more that were never produced—appear to be up to their old tricks again, but this time they're operating from the hinterlands. Telepix distributors report a resurgence of con-men, operating from all over the U. S., plaguing them with new techniques with which to fool the suckers.

Latest device is the requesting from distributors of a letter to the effect that the distributor has seen the story outline or script or even rough footage for a series, and while he can't finance or guarantee financing for a series, he would be glad to undertake distribution once the films are completed. This achieved, the promoter goes back to his country cousins brandishing the letter as a guarantee that the films will have an outlet. After that, it's like taking candy from an unsuspecting baby in raising the coin for a series that's never shot. Needless to say, the donors never see the money or the promoter again.

Unfortunately, the practice in all respects but one closely resembles the bona fide method of securing financing for a new series. Under the legitimate method, the producer shows the distributor his property, and if the latter likes it, he gives the producer a guarantee of return of negative cost within a specified period, conditional, of course, on the producer actually delivering the films. With the guarantee in hand, the producer can then raise his financing from either private or banking sources. The difference between the legitimate producer's technique and that of the promoter is that the promoter doesn't ask for a guarantee, but merely asks a letter from the distrib saying he's interested in repping the series. This is enough to rope the out-of-towners in, but it wouldn't work with experienced backers.

But a development has emerged over the past year that helps spot the promoter—it's the fact that now distributors prefer to finance production directly rather than guarantee negative costs, under the theory that guarantees are the same as financing, only deferred over a period of a year to 18 months. Since the financing source gets a piece of the property while the guarantor merely gets his distribution fee, the distribs will finance wherever possible. This trend has enabled the distribs to

No Blues in the Night For N. Y. Radio Indies; Program Mills Grinding

The present N. Y. indie radio picture holds the spotlight on evening programming these days. First, it was the quiet (and probably still continuing) program-personality machinations at WNEW. Last week, it was WMGM, with a shift twixt 5 and 8 to an all-pop lineup. Now it's the happy bankroll situation at WINS that points up a new "nighttime point of view" among the town's major indies.

From 7 p.m. to midnight, WINS, owned by the Elroy McCaw interests, has been defying the critics by capitalizing on the big rhythm & blues kick among teenagers. The time is virtually SRO. And the shows which still maintain the pop standard at WINS are believed affected in their increased billings by the existence of surrounding r&b programs, deejayed by the controversial Alan (Rock 'N' Roll) Freed.

Freed holds forth from 7 to 9 six nights weekly with about a dozen sponsors underwriting. This is

Freelance TV Writers Say 'How About Us?' Lamenting Pay Standards

Eye Opener

Operating on the theory that radio time buyers really listen to radio, station WXLW of Indianapolis has undertaken a unique broadcasting "first." The midwest station has pacted for a slate of spots via a N. Y. station in order to reach the Madison Ave. marksmen.

It's believed the first time on record of any station buying airtime on another to promote air sales. Bob Enoch, WXLW, is placing his coin into a month's-worth of commercials in the WINS "Bob & Ray" ayem strip. Main purpose of the campaign is to focus ears on the Indianapolis station's power increase from 1kw to 5kw.

AFTRA Holds Off On Condemnation Of 'Aware' Group

A resolution to condemn several members of the New York local of the American Federation of TV-Radio Artists lost out last Tuesday (22) in the first skirmish when the membership in a close vote nixed the subject being placed on the regular agenda of that meeting. This was merely a constitutional delay since an amended resolution containing no carges against members will be presented at the next meeting in May when it will be official business.

The parley, attended by about 400 at the Sheraton-Astor, started at 8:30 and lasted until midnight as both camps gave vent to their feelings with new prexy Travis Johnson in the chair. Advocates of the original resolution had accused seven AFTRA members, who are also members of Aware, Inc., an anti-Communist group, of carrying on a "blacksmithing" campaign, with special reference to an independent candidates' slate of 26 of whom 13 were listed by name by an Aware pamphlet as having "public records in connection with Communist-front apparatus" and with others bearing "less significant records" in this sphere. The slate was defeated, a fact which in itself aroused the anti-Aware group.

The "Seven Up" are Vinton and Jean Hayworth, Richard Keith, William Kenne, William Neil, Ned Wever and Leigh Whipper. Since then an eighth name was added in Godfrey Schmidt, associate AFTRA members. Original petition's intention was to force Aware to disavow its attacks via "blacklist" and other methods and sought condemnation of the group for "interfering in the internal affairs" of the union.

In a clarifying statement Alex McKee, secretary of the N. Y. local, declared that only the board of directors can discipline a member, and such member then has the right to appeal the decision at a membership meeting, but the membership may not act except on an appeal. "It was for this reason," he said, "that the resolution in question was denied a place on the regular agenda" of the March 22 meeting. "As of this date (March 25), no charges have been presented to the board," McKee stated.

Seek Van For 'Wayde'

Van Johnson is wary of live tv but may be brought out of that state pronto. Chrysler is baiting him with the lead in "Sincerely, Willis Wayde," Gore Vidal's adaptation of the John P. Marquand novel.

"Wayde" is due May 5 on CBS-TV's "Climax,"

Freelance writers feel that television's greatest inconsistency is the way it forks out top coin to Martha Raye, Jackie Gleason, Milton Berle, Ed Sullivan, et. al., and then turns blandly to the scribes—who consider themselves at least to dramatic showcasings what comedians and emcees are to variety stanzas—and reluctantly makes coin concessions. Moreover, freelance writer consensus is that tv working conditions could be vastly improved for them.

A couple of well-informed members of Writers Guild of America, at a time when their organization is talking over freelance standards with webs, agencies and packagers, say that even the class tv dramatists aren't satisfied with their lot.

The situation seems to be among scribblers that they look upon the tv industry as a "stepping stone." In most every instance, the men who bring tv its present dramatic prestige find it hard to make a living wage in the industry. The Paddy Chayefsfskys, the Rod Serlings and the Reginald Roses are, among a few others, making three to four times the normal writer wage for a 60-minute script, but they're in a single minority. And even their $3,500 or $4,000 per showcase becomes much lower when the demands the producer makes on the writer's time (over and above actual writing) are taken into consideration. For the writer on the way up, these producer and/or network demands are really tough.

It was said that video controls the freelancer in such a way as to use him as if he were on a week-to-week salary but without sufficient pay. While on the Coast, for example, where there is traditional writer strength, the pro-

CBS 'Pro Father' Facing TV Axe

Chicago, March 29.

Helene Curtis and the Earle Ludgin agency are in the market for a show to replace "Professional Father" in the Saturday night at 9 (CST) spot on CBS-TV. Overtures have been made to Columbia to move Edward R. Murrow's "Person to Person" into the period which bucks NBC-TV's George Gobel.

Shampoo firm has been negotiating with Parker Pen for a shared ride on the new show, with the two bankrollers splitting the span according to their seasonal sales drives. Parker has been off network tv since last December when it exited CBS-TV's "Four-Star Playhouse." The gettogether may be up in the air, however, in the wake of the pen firm's sudden decision to depart the J. Walter Thompson agency to sign on with Tatham-Laird.

Pitch to CBS for the "P&P" display has been that the two clients would provide the show with a couple of class sponsors. But it's considered doubtful Murrow would be willing to break up his weekends by moving the half-hour into Saturday nights.

Dodge Puts Brake On Danny Thomas Singing For Olds-Sponsored Acad

Hollywood, March 29.

Danny Thomas, previously skedded to sing "Count Your Blessings Instead of Sheep," one of five nominated songs, at the Oscar Derby tomorrow (Wed.), was forced to bow out by his tv sponsor. Dodge Oscar simulcast is sponsored by Oldsmobile. Dodge didn't want him to appear nationally on plugging a rival car, even by inference, through presence on the show.

Peggy King replaces him.

RCA Asks Dismissal of Antitrust Suit by U.S.; 'Electronic Role' Accent

RCA asked for dismissal of the Government antitrust action against it yesterday (Tues.), branding the suit "unreasonable, unnecessary and contrary to the public interest" and specifically denying allegations charging violations of the Sherman Act. RCA's brief, filed in New York federal district court, where the original complaint was entered last November, stressed RCA's role in helping the electronics industry to expand "so far in so short a time" by its research and licensing activities.

RCA used facts and figures on the growth of the industry to make its point, declaring that the industry is competitive and therefore the suit is not valid, and that it could not have grown so quickly if RCA, in its licensing arrangements, had unreasonably restrained trade, as is charged.

It pointed out that sales of radio and television receivers increased from $54,400,000 in 1932 to $1,470,000,000 in 1954, or over 2,500%; that its major competitors, Admiral, CBS, DuMont, Emerson, General Electric, IT&T, Motorola, Philco, Raytheon, Sylvania, Westinghouse and Zenith, did a combined business for the most recent annual period of over $2,000,000,000; and that other manufacturers have entered allied fields of electronics with direct application to radio-tv, such manufacturers being Boeing, Douglas, Hughes and United aircraft companies, General Motors and Willys Motors, Burroughs Corp., International Business Machines, Remington Rand and National Cash Register, General Mills, General Dynamics, Paramount Pictures, Bell & Howell, Otis Elevator and many others.

Cross-Licensing

Tracing the history of its licensing operation, RCA said that the practice of cross-licensing was established with Westinghouse, AT&T and General Electric because "without them the industry would have been paralyzed by conflicting patent holdings and endless patent litigation." When the Government arranged a consent decree in 1930, new agreements were drawn up. This decree was upheld by the courts in 1942, RCA pointed out, and RCA said it has lived up to the terms of the decree. "RCA avers that the Government

Space Shows Dwindle

With the end of ABC's "Space Patrol" and DuMont's "Captain Video" soon at hand, the number of network space stanzas in tv will stand at two, and one of them will be exposed only occasionally. Kraft has "Tom Corbett, Space Cadet" on Saturdays via NBC-TV. And "Disneyland" on ABC-TV recently ran through an hour devoted to the interplanetary, with more such shows in the mill.

Both remaining space shows incidentally have the same technical consultant. "Corbett," the Rockhill saga, and Disney's "Tomorrowland" each come under rocket expert Willy Ley's guidance.

Video Space Now A Major Selling Point for Dailies

The detailed newspaper video coverage and program listings today have become major circulation builders. The dailies' trend is toward expanded video info, with some major papers in different parts of the country coming out with weekly slick or semi-slick supplements on tv alone. While it is a circulation hypo for papers, which, ironically, have been blaming falling sales on the advent of tv, it poses a small threat—that may burgeon into a big one—to the regular program listing mags.

Plus the beginning of slicks by the N. Y. Journal-American recently and by the Boston Post, there have been signs like the N.Y. Daily News' "Best TV Movies" listings, which give synopsis and the year each feature was filmed, station and time in addition to regular video listings. Other N.Y. dailies and out-of-town sheets are adopting similar video gimmicks to push sales.

An exec for the Boston Post foresees a major turn in the direction of tv supplements by what he terms as "regional" newspapers, like his own. A regional paper, by the extent of its physical coverage alone, can make such a proposition economnical feasible. The Post official opined that newspapers "have been so reluctant to do anything along show business lines—yet, it is not hard to find out where everybody is these nights." He added that the tv audience is a natural for a weekly regional supplement since it is bigger than the film audience "and look," he says, "how the movie fan magazines grew into tremendous enterprises."

Telethons Murder To Niteries: Hover

Hollywood, March 29.

Ciro's boniface, H. D. Hover, has complained mournfully to Theatre Authority that present method of holding telethons is "murdering" the nitery biz here and has asked TA to switch hours of the marathoners. Hover's sorrows were contained in a letter sent I. B. Kornblum, exec director of TA, which grants clearance on such events. Currently the telethons are held from 11 p.m. of one day to mid-afternoon the next.

Hover's woes were specifically directed at the next telethon, for City of Hope, on KTLA June 11, and he suggested that while the idea of such an event is "excellent" it be held all day on a Sunday, "perhaps from 10 a.m. until about 8 p.m."

"The way telethons are being held now, beginning at 11 p.m., they not only murder the night club business, which in this town is in a jeopardous position and which supplies most of the talent to these telethons, but such unreasonable hours allows for a minimum number of viewers with a maximum of inconvenience. Not too many people want to stay up from 11 p.m. on through the night," wrote Hover.

There seemed little chance TA would acquiesce to Hover's request for the change in hours. Kornblum recently said TA had decided from the performer standpoint, it had been agreed the best hours for telethons would be 11 p.m. Saturday to 4 p.m. Sunday, and strongly hinted under no circumstances would this be changed. All Hollywood talent guilds are in TA, and each one has a representative on the board.

Blondeau Sets TV'ers For Gallic Versions

Jean Paul-Blondeau, French tv producer holding proprietary rights to "Dollar a Second," has nabbed an exclusive to a pair of U. S. tv programs, "What's My Line" (CBS) and "This Is Your Life" (NBC).

They'll be presented in the Gallic version next fall and are being readied as commercial shows over outlets in the Luxemburg-Saar-Monte Carlo area. Latter are the only peripheric stations with commercial shows.

Ziv's Swiss Spread

Ziv Television Program's foreign setup advanced a couple of notches last week when the company set 26-week runs of two of its dubbed shows on the Swiss television network. French-language version of "Mr. District Attorney" and a German track of "Favorite Story" both start May 1 for a minimum of 26 weeks via the facilities of Societe Suisse de Radiodiffusion, with transmitters in Geneva and Zurich.

Deal was set following good viewer acceptance of an experimentally dubbed version of "D.A." during February and March in Switzerland.

Dairymen's Kid Series

Hollywood, March 29.

National Dairymen's Assn. will sponsor the moppet telepix series, "Kite-Flite to Moonland," on a coast-to-coast basis beginning late next month.

Program features puppet characters and is produced by Elizabeth Barry. Featured also is the vocal combo, Starliters.

Ed Lamb to Take Stand on Friday

Washington, March 29.

After more than a month's recess, FCC hearings on Commie charges against broadcaster-publisher Edward O. Lamb will be resumed Friday (April 1) with Lamb taking the stand. Lamb is appearing at the request of FCC attorney Joseph Kittner who want to question him on his representations to the Commission that he fought Communism. Kittner contends that certain writings attributed to Lamb belie such representations.

Plans to appeal a ruling by Examiner Herbert Sharfman denying a motion to dismiss the proceedings have been deferred by Lamb for the time being. In view of Kittner's argument that the motion was premature because of his desire to call Lamb, attorneys for Lamb may wait until the Commission has definitely rested its case before making further attempts to end the hearings.

However, it seems likely that the proceedings will go on for some time. Russell Brown, co-counsel for Lamb, has indicated he will request hearings in New York, Cleveland, Toledo and Erie, Pa., for testimony by defense witnesses.

Aside from the Commie charges, testimony may also be required on issues involving charges by Lamb that Commission investigators offered bribes for false testimony. Lamb has petitioned the Commission to delete these issues. Kittner has opposed their deletion on grounds they concern Lamb's "responsibility" as a broadcast licensee. The Commission has not yet ruled on the request.

BUDDY EBSEN SIGNS AS DISNEY REGULAR

Hollywood, March 29.

Buddy Ebsen has been signed by Walt Disney Productions to a long-term deal as an actor-singer-dancer. Unusual feature of the deal is that Ebsen's immediate assignments will all be centered on television, an indication that Disney is intent on building a talent stable for his video activities as well as theatrical. He'll star in "Johnny Tremain," a two-part historical drama slated for next year's "Disneyland" series along with other "Disneylands," plus appearances in the daytime "Mickey Mouse Club" which starts on ABC-TV in the fall.

Ebsen was featured in the three-part "Davey Crockett" story on this season's "Disneyland," currently slated for theatrical exhibition in an edited version.

Antell's Easter Buy

Charles Antell, whose Formula 9 Shampoo and sundry cosmetics have been upbeat of late as tv one-shots (Emmy Awards, for one), is making another special pitch. Outfit is latching on to NBC-TV's "Easter in New York" show (April 10). Slotting at the moment is 12:15 to 1 p.m., but if no other sponsor shows up, the Easter stanza will ride solely under the Antell banner as a half-hour commencing at 12:30 instead. About 52 stations are lined up so far.

Although TAA ad agency placed the business (as with the Television Academy kudos, shared with Maybelline, and the others), Antell has quit the commission house and accepting bids over the next 30 days to find a replacement.

Columbus—Bud Gillis, member of WLW-C's staff since 1953, has been named program manager of the Crosley tv outlet here, after serving as acting p.m. for six weeks.

Now You're Talking

Clifton Fadiman, in his "Party of One" column in the March issue of Holiday magazine, writes:

"For some years people such as myself—not well educated but frankly amorous of education—have been trying to use every available medium of communication as a means of closing the gap and ministering to a beleaguered audience that is in danger of becoming the Forgotten Public. We have not done this out of 'social consciousness' or any nobility of soul. We have done it in part because it is the only way we know to make an honest living and in part because it provides a most enjoyable occupation.

"As I write this, for example, I am engaged in running a radio show (on NBC) called 'Conversation.' It attempts, using the talents of three good talkers plus my m.c. self, to revive an obsolescent art, that of civilized, noncontroversial, discursive, nonpatronizing talk. We try, though not too sweatily, to entertain; but, between you and me and don't tell anybody, whatever modest value the program has is basically educational. Nothing we say deserves to be treasured in the memory. But merely to dramatize once a week the idea of mental play in a period unduly suspicious of that idea, has to my mind educational merit.

"'Conversation,' on its particular level, is one example of the mental brokerage business I have for years been engaged in, blending the pitchman and the would-be professor, a weird combination that only the wonderful flexibility of our fluctuating culture would permit."

Lee Blasts Bad Taste, Excessive Comm'ls, 'Bait & Switch' Evils

Nashville, March 29.

FCC Commissioner Robert E. Lee lashed out at broadcasters here yesterday (Mon.) for excessive commercialism, bait and switch advertising and "bad taste" in programming.

In an address before Tennessee Assn. of Broadcasters, Comr. Lee urged the industry to police itself "and thus not encourage those who would take the power of self-policing away from you."

Continued abuse by broadcasters of their public interest responsibilities "may bring us close to a semblance of censorship that we all want to shun," he warned. "Don't force the FCC to enter this dangerous area."

Asserting that free speech "is not a license for insurrection against public right," Lee suggested "reasonable compliance" with the NARTB code to "keep us all out of trouble."

Commissioner declared that complaints numbering "several hundred thousands" in recent years, largely on false and misleading advertising, have become "a very real problem. Complaints of overcommercialism" he said, are "rather well taken."

"I personally," he said, "would not object to 99.4% of commercially sponsored time, but I do object to an unreasonable amount of the broadcast hour being devoted to the sales pitch."

Recognizing that many AM stations "in desperation" are taking any kind of advertising to stay in the black, Lee asserted, "I do not believe this is a solution. It is merely a deterioration of public service."

Stations would do "infinitely better," he said, by redoubling their efforts to improve programming, thus capturing more audience and more advertising.

Over the long range, he said, excess commercialism arouses public resentment with resultant demands for government intervention to the detriment of a highly competitive industry.

"Let's not throw the baby out with the bath water," he urged.

Truex Switch

James Truex, tv scripter and son of the w.k. acting couple (Ernest and Sylvia Field Truex), is making the big transfer. Gov. Averell Harriman has named him public relations chief of the Dept. of Public Works with Albany as hq. Truex was active in the governor's campaign last year and lived near Harriman's Arden Farms summer home.

Truex has been repped on video with about a dozen works, including plays on "Lux Video" and "Hall of Fame."

Hygo's 600G Hypo As It Makes Like O'Neil's GT Setup

The near-record two-week haul by Hygo Films for its new block of feature films is second only to the track record of Tom O'Neil's General Teleradio and its Bank of America 30, and it proves the continued hungering by stations after more vaulted quality Hollywood pix. Hygo so far has grossed $600,000 from the pix and as a result of tie-in sales of other properties. Sales were made in 12 major markets, with at least five other smaller stations hopping on for the feature-film ride as of yesterday (Tues.).

The 13-package includes some Walter Wanger-produced prints out of the U-A backlog, some U-I stuff, etc., and Hygo negotiated the features at about $45,000 each. In making the $600,000 (before costs), Hygo offered the 13 wrapped in the same package as the 10 Chesapeake features that have been the house about a year. In other cases (the General Teleradio station, WNAC-TV, for instance) the 13 were tied in with the Bill Elliot hoss operas and the cartoons, both of which were gotten from Columbia. Tie-in deals held true for about two-thirds of the Hygo stations in the past 10 days, enabling the stations to average down the cost per pic of the new group on low-budget deals for some of the other films.

In addition to the four Meredith stations in K.C., Phoenix, Syracuse and Omaha (inked via Station Sales), there was N.Y., L.A., Seattle, Boston, Chi, San Francisco, Milwaukee and Detroit. To show how much Hygo commands for the pix, WCBS-TV, N.Y., paid its biggest amount for features to date —$6,500 per one.

VIDPIX ROLL IN TEXAS

Dallas, March 29.

Shooting has started here on a tv film series by First Colonial Films, a new organization with studios on Lake Dallas. Steve Brodie is star of the series to be known as "Colonial Theatre," which is being written and directed by Frank Perri.

R. L. Russell heads First Colonial Films.

Chi Wants Share Of Summer Subs

Chicago, March 29.

Chi NBC-TV program lads have been making their annual spring pitch for a chance to fill some of the summer hiatus holes. Only thing definite at this early stage for program chief Ben Park and his crew is a revival of the Sunday afternoon "Out On the Farm" rural display that saw hot weather duty last year.

Park also has the go-ahead to start work on ideas for a group of telementaries, embracing midwest activities, which would be used in the web's projected tv scrutiny of the 20th century. Park has been boning up on automation, the "look, Ma, no hands" techniques of modern push button industrial production, and sees it with its far-reaching social and economic ramifications a likely subject for the documentary treatment.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

Emmett Kelly, the clown, and Emmett Kelly, the technical director, don't talk to each other. This may be because Kelly never opens his trap as Willie, the weary and tattered tramp of Ringling circus fame. The word trap is used advisedly since his early work on the smalltime tanbark was as a trapeze artist in a double with his wife Eva (nee Moore). In his autobiog "Clown," written with veteran pressagent F. Beverly Kelley and published last year, the silent buffoon with the wistful puss does not link himself with the flying return gentry—an aristocratic calling quite in contrast with the straight trapeze—yet this was—the springboard for the opening salvo of "Clown" on Sunday's (27) "General Electric Theatre" over CBS-TV. Perhaps Kelly, as tech advisor, did not think the difference matters, but the book readers would, since the telefilm was pitched as based on episodes from the work.

The joey's major contribution was tutoring Henry Fonda in the art of makeup and training him in the Kelly gait. Basically, there were only a pair of Kelly's w.k. gags, the peanut and sledgehammer wallop and broom and shovel employed to chase the spotlight out of the ring. Preceding incidents were routine, uninspired heartbeat in the Mel Goldberg-Richard Collins adaptation staged by James Neilsen. These were pegged on Kelly's professional separation from his wife to start his fullfledged career as a member of clown alley (they were eventually divorced). There are some stirring events in the book not touched in this small slice. Dorothy Malone played the spouse, James Flavin the circus manager and George Givot had a couple of colorful bits as the ringmaster. The circus music was okay, as were flashes of several turns and crowd scenes, but the whole was no more than a lowercase treatment of the world of sawdust and spangles. A viewer could not get a grasp of the substance behind Kelly's stature as a clown.

GE enjoyed considerable promotional values, what with Kelly doing a panto quickie on the preceding "Toast of the Town," newsreeled in the night's recaps and acting as a sort of advance guard for the Ringling show's opening today (Wed.). Trau.

"Oklahoma," the Rodgers & Hammerstein musical, was the meat of Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" stanza on CBS-TV Sunday night (27), but the seasoning was flat. The show marked the 12th annl of the musical, but the stanza failed to come alive with any of the freshness or vitality of the R&H original.

Instead of doing tabloid version of the musical (which may have been precluded by other commitments, including the forthcoming pic version in the Todd-AO process), "Toast" showcased the top songs in "Oklahoma" as performed, in some cases, by the original players in the 1943 legit production. The tunes, of course, were okay, but the production framework was lacklustre. The straight musical offerings, moreover, could well have used some comedy turn interpolations.

Sullivan apparently likes big choral ensembles so this show teed off with the Oklahoma Univ. Glee Club, in a remote pickup from Oklahoma City, doing the show's title song. Near the end of the show, another big chorus, the Augustana College Choir did "O What A Beautiful Morning" in Swedish. This treatment made both numbers massively dull.

Far better were Celeste Holm's reprise of "Can't Say No" and "A Fella Needs A Girl," the latter from another R&H show, "Allegro." John Raitt, an R&H alumnus from the original cast of "Carousel," and Florence Henderson, currently in the Broadway musical, "Fanny," did nicely on "People Will Say We're In Love," with Miss Henderson coming back again to do a "Fanny" number, "Be Kind To Parents," with youngster Gary Wright. In order to give an idea of "Oklahoma's" international coverage, Richard Collett, Swedish baritone, did "Surrey With the Fringe On Top," in his native tongue. Barbara Cook also came over nicely with her rendition of "Many A New Day," with backing from a ballet troupe.

Sullivan also brought Oscar Hammerstein 2d and Richard Rodgers for the expected questions about their technique of collaboration. Rodgers closed the show by batoning the orchestra in the title song, with the lead singers in the "Toast" show as the vocal ensemble. Herm.

"Studio One," currently in a romantic-drama and comedy cycle, brought in one of its best of the season Monday night (28) in Ernest Kinoy's "Dominique." A warm and wistful romantic comedy with an occasional spurt of satire, its theme and situation gave it enough of a twist to make it standout. Story of an Italian girl of an aristocratic family suddenly transplanted to suburban Long Island as the wife of a highway engineer also served as the perfect vehicle for Marisa Pavan, the Italian import, and the role of the harassed hubby was a nice change of pace for Ralph Meeker.

Play compared a series of incidents setting off the difficulties of Miss Pavan's adjustment from the casual and sophisticated life of the Italian aristocrat to the stuffy (by comparison) atmosphere of suburbia. Here's where the satire came in, via a sharply etched vignette of an embarrassed but prudish neighbor who wants her nude statue removed from the lawn, as played by Peter Sturgeon, and a "good cheer lady" bit involving Betty Sinclair as the giveaway girl who welcomes newcomers to the community with gifts from the local merchants. The naivete of the Italian girl toward American materialism provided a striking and amusing note.

All of which were added fillips to the main situation, the ups and downs of a romance complicated by differences in background and outlook. Complicating the situation is the element of the triangle, with Phyllis Hill playing a childhood chum of Meeker's who's been in love with him all the time. The crisis comes when, with customary directness, Miss Pavan tells Miss Hill that she ought to stop being cruel to herself by seeing Meeker. This, coupled to her failure to sign an immigration affadavit, sends her packing for home, but all comes out nicely in the end.

Kinoy might have used a couple of more incidents to bolster the plot, but as director Franklin Schaffner played it out, the story ran at a leisurely but convincing pace. Miss Pavan brought directness, warmth and credibility to her role, while Meeker showed sympathetically as the puzzled hubby. Miss Hill was fine, as was Norman Feld as another friend. Everything about the production was excellent, including a suitable bittersweet musical background and some impressive props. Chan.

"Frigidaire Entertains," which preemed last fall as a sort of weekend party type of show, is rapidly becoming a minor "Toast of the Town" on the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. video web. Retaining its regulars—emcee Byng Whittaker, canary Frosia Gregory, batoner Jimmy Namara and commercial gabber Beth Lockerbie—show is swinging more and more to acts from Toronto niteries and stage to fill its Friday 9 p.m. halfhour.

Format is still considerably offbeat to the "Toast" style but it will take very little to swing it around to fit. Emceeing of w.k. stocky Whittaker suits the show and Namaro's band showbacking is socko. Recent appearances on the Frigidaire stanza included Lenny Collier, The Dyerettes, Larry Weeks, Barin-Bore, Bobby Joyce and Ginger, others. With closer knitting and smoother pacing, airer could be a top spot on the CBC screen schedule. Gorm.

Tony Martin accented the production side of his 7:30 NBC-TV show on Monday (28). What with his romantic pipes and those extravaganza touches, it was a slick quarter-hourful that, for all its quickieness, operated at leisurely gait beamed for the dinnertime set. Martin opened with one-two punch of "In A Little Spanish Town" and "I Love Paris in the Spring," then mixed quintet took over for the "Si Si" stuff. Star joined them to front an Anglicized German folker bearing the production accoutrements in depth and followed up neatly with "April in Portugal."

As with CBS, the NBC web may find itself in the throes of reshuffling the 7:30 to 8 song and newscast stanzas (Martin's Monday plus the Eddie Fisher-Dinah Shore two apiece rotation plus the J. C. Swayze crossboarder), but there should always be a Tony Martin around no matter what the slot. And ditto the other pair of chirpers. Trau.

BUFFALO BILL JR.
With Dick Jones, Nancy Gilbert, Harry Chesire, others
Produced by: Flying A Productions
30 Half-hours
MARS, BROWN SHOES (110 markets)
Distributor (fringe markets): CBS Television Film Sales
(Leo Burnett)

This Flying A kidfilm was the principal in a unique spot buy via Leo Burnett some months ago, in which Mars has signed up for spring-summer bankrolling with Brown Shoes taking over when the weather grows a little colder. (CBS Television Film can sell in markets left after the Burnett-Flying A deal.) The half-hour vidfilm skein was absolute in following the standard pattern of juve hoss mellers. That was quite clear when the initialer was viewed via WCBS-TV, N. Y., last Saturday. The show was slotted during the 30 minutes just prior to "Annie Oakley," another Flying A pic series. Only difference was in sex of the leads.

Flying A looks to have a real budget saver in this twin operation: looks like same sets, locations, houses, extras, etc., and, union rulings permitting, even the same scripts, with just minor changes. The whole "Buffalo Bill Jr." setup is geared away from taking chances. But while the kids aren't getting anything very fresh, they are getting a type program that has evidenced strong audience support in the past.

First show, with Dick Jones as the fresh-faced cowkid star, ran through B.B.'s efforts to keep the Apaches from saving their chief, Geronimo, from a Federal prison. With the help and hindrance of his kid sister Calamity (Nancy Gilbert), who tricked the villains through knowledge of Morse code, the first show was carried to a successful conclusion. Team was, in turn, helped and hindered by Harry (Pappy) Chesire, as Judge Ben Wiley, who, as stepfather to the hero and his sister, was also a help and hindrance. It was chiefly Chesire who, by flagrant misuse of his judicial powers and dullness, provided the laughs.

The "Bill Jr." production had just enough guns, blundering and fisticuffs to satisfy most juve video viewers even taken in a double dose with "Annie Oakley." Art.

Subscription TV Gets A CBS 'Omnibus' Airing In Pro & Con Debate

CBS-TV's "Omnibus" on Sunday (27) tossed around the controversial question of subscription tv, with emcee Alistair Cooke interviewing some key personalities in show biz, sports, education and broadcasting and briefing the viewer on the rudiments of unscrambling the home picture via the Zenith Phonevision decoder. (Cooke emphasized that he had sought to interview some Hollywood film reps on the subject but that all had turned down the invitation.)

At best, Cooke hazarded, it will be at least another year before toll-tv becomes reality, even should the FCC agree that it's in the public interest.

Interviewed via film on the pros and cons of toll-tv were such diverse personalities as legit producer Jean Dalrymple (with particular reference as to what effect it would have on the N. Y. City Center opera-ballet-drama season); Tom Hamilton, athletic director of U. of Pittsburgh; George B. Storer, owner of multiple tv stations, and Dr. David Henry, of New York U.

Miss Dalrymple saw subscription tv as resolving all of the City Center financial problems but cautioned that a viewer, conditioned to free video, wouldn't go for a toll rap unless it was a super-duper production in the sense of a "Peter Pan." Nor could she see toll-tv displacing free-tv.

The Pitt sports director was bullish on the prospects of subscription tv resolving the economics of collegiate sports, but felt that controls were necessary to erase any stigma of college commercialism. As far as he was concerned, if toll-tv emptied the stadiums, it wouldn't be particularly important as long as the dollars were coming in.

Storer, a major figure in the status quo picture of commercial video, couldn't see the feasibility of toll-tv either for the big or the small station and predicted a public protest when "free" hours of viewing were reduced or eliminated.

Dr. Henry expressed the hope that educational tv would be in-

Sustaining
ABC-TV from Baltimore

"Tomorrow," an ABC import from WAAM-TV, Baltimore, looms as an extremely important public service venture for the network. This program, with blessings from John Hopkins U., is directed at youngsters looking at the roster of professions and vocations. It's a tremendous aid in selecting a career.

Initial show, "Metals by the Mile," concerned itself with metallurgy, of which there is a glaring deficiency either to meet the growing peacetime needs or those of national defense. As it's been pointed out, there are only 460 metallurgists being trained today. At the same time, it was noted, there were some 16 kinds of metal in use in 1900 and today there are 321 known metals and alloys. So many phases of daily living depend upon various kinds of metals that a continued deficiency in personnel would impair the normal rate of progress.

The program is aimed at the youngsters in the final stages of high school who must soon decide what to do. However, the language used on the show is adult and as non-technical as possible. The presentation is fair and isn't intended to glamorize the calling.

However, the literate and painstakingly careful presentation makes the layout absorbing at times. The show started off with the historic development of metals with film clips illustrating. Lynn Poole, of Johns Hopkins, does the moderating, with guest spiels by Robert Maddin, metallurgist at that school, with Dr. J. H. Hollomon, of General Electric, telling more of that profession's importance and function. Dr. Vannevar Bush, one of the more eminent scientists spoke on the opportunities in that field. He predicted many years of prosperity if war can be avoided and he said it can be done if we're intelligent about it. Jose.

WENDY BARRIE SHOW
With Sunny Abbott Trio, others
Producer: Lester Wolf
Director: David Lowe
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 11:30 a.m.
Participating
WABD, N.Y.

Wendy Barrie came back to video last week after a couple of months hiatus following her short-lived Ohio television showcase. The fourth day (24) of her new WABD, N.Y., half-hour ayem strip was a pretty lively compilation of hokum, music and song showbiz shop talk, latter delivered in the grand Broadway manner that would tend to impair the full sympathies of the homebodies the stanza seeks. Show subtitle is "Shop Talk."

Her telexposure began with a few minutes a la Kukla and Fran, only with less whimsy. She and a puppet, Arnold Ardvaark by name, who gabs like a disenchanted German dialectician rather than a talking ardvaark, palavered with no special goal in mind. For variety, the Sunny Abbott Trio sang and played "Them There Eyes." Though their singing wasn't much, style was peppery and their instrumentalizing nicely rounded the scene. One of the other touches was a session with one Connie Gordon, who gave out with a "do it yourself" potion in paints. Rather nervously handled by Miss Gordon, it seemed the stanza's most direct approach to the fraus.

Guest of this first Thursday's telecast was video announcer Jack Lescoulie. This vis-a-vis gave the clearest evidences of the femme's entertainment conditioning. Lingo was far removed from the realities of everyday speech, but the "wonderful," "very great," "isn't that something!" "just terrific," as well as the saccharine "oh, you sweet thing" and "I'm just mad about him" weren't out of place in Miss Barrie's personality. She's a matronly, busy woman whose bright delivery doesn't allow dwelling on her colorful tongue.

With all DuMont on a save-coin kick, it's only likely that all o&o WABD's morning shows be limited to a one-camera operation. In line with that, the Wendy Barrie program was so neatly directed by David Lowe that the single camera limitation went unnoticed. The lensing played easily about the modest set, with the stage business being diverse enough to aid interest. Miss Barrie's commercial spiel was good. If the audience didn't get a particularly good break, the bankrollers did when she let the "buy this" chatter drip over into the entertainment portions. Art.

ENTERTAINMENT 1955
With Fred Allen, Dinah Shore, Bob Hope, Jimmy Durante, Ralph Edwards, John Derek, Leontyne Price, Judy Holliday, Cesar Romero, Bobby Hackett, Pat Carroll, Tom Helmore, Adolph Zukor, Helen Hayes, Nancy Coleman, Karl Malden, Paul Newman, Josh Wheeler, others
Producer; Jack Rayel
Director: Dick McDonagh (Max Liebman for N.Y. cut-in) Musical Director: Gordon Jenkins
90 Mins.; Sun. (27), 7:30 p.m.
SUNBEAM, HAZEL BISHOP
NBC-TV, from Hollywood and N.Y.
(Perrin Paus; Raymond Spector)

NBC-TV dedicated its new $3,000,000 Color City in Burbank, Calif., on Sunday (27) with a 90-minute all-star tint display that, for the most part, played more like the show it was competing against—"Toast of the Town." And as though to rub it in, Bob Hope, who was lending a dedicatory assist while the rival "Toast" was vying for the Sunday 8 to 9 audience, managed to toss in a cuffo plug to Ed Sullivan & Co. Only the on-camera presence of prexy Pat Weaver and exec veepee Bob Sarnoff (along with sponsor Sunbeam factotum B. A. Graham to send Color City on its way) reestablished the fact that this was NBC's party and any resemblance to a rival show was entirely coincidental.

Show, which originated from the elaborate Burbank studios (save for a couple of pickups from the N.Y. end) managed to cram a lot of top talent into its hour and a half framework, with Fred Allen handling the emcee chores. (And, lo, after these many years still lacking the ease and casual demeanor that's otherwise second nature to such a vet trouper). Yet while the salute was designed strictly in Burbank's favor, it remained for the two Gotham-emanating segments to pack the show's highest entertainment quotient. These included the reenactment of an exciting first-act scene from the smash legiter "Desperate Hours" on the occasion of the tv announcement of its Antoinette Perry Award (with Helen Hayes on hand to present a "Tony" to author Joseph Hayes and another to director Robert Montgomery, whose actress daughter Elizabeth accepted for him), and the opening and best comedy sketch of the layout, featuring Bobby Hackett and Pat Carroll, with Tom Helmore doing the off-camera commentary. (This particular sketch was produced-directed by Max Liebman.)

Otherwise "Entertainment 1955" was pretty much of an in and out affair, certainly not the distinctive and unusual show that should have been blueprinted to symbolize such an important date and event in the onward and upward march of NBC. The "Toast" format was in evidence throughout (as with the legit "Desperate Hours" capsule). There was a good 20 minutes in the latter half that had more overtones of a Paramount, rather than an NBC, salute, when Ralph Edwards gave Adolph Zukor the bio treatment, which inevitably invited "preview" film clips of Bob Hope's upcoming "Seven Little Foys" and the James Cagney-John Derek "Run for Cover" (with both Hope and Derek doing an in-person). Hope's standup routine, incidentally, was a funny bit.

Dinah Shore simulated a recording session in her plattering of "Whatever Lola Wants"; Leontyne Price sang an aria from "Tosca" (with a capable assist from Josh Wheeler); Jimmy Durante played foil to Allen's pitchman in a song sketch that failed to play as funny as the idea; Judy Holliday and Cesar Romero enacted a series of Mr. & Mrs. sketches that was short on inspired writing but frequently redeemed by Miss Holliday's compelling mimicry.

CONSOLIDATED CIGAR, BARBASOL
WABC-TV, N. Y.
(Erwin, Wasey)

Deal Erwin, Wasey got for two of its clients for a twice-nightly weather strip via WABC-TV will probably go down in history as one of the cheapest cost-per-thousand per commercial minute deals (it's figured at about 10c) in television. Consolidated Cigar (Dutch Masters) and Barbasol alternate on the shows, with crossplugs, plus some extra run-of-station spots thrown in for good measure.

But while the deal may be fine from the agency's point of view, it isn't from the viewers. First of all, too much commercial time in the five minutes, a good incen-

Growing

Time

It's Spring, and NBC Radio is growing everywhere you look!

Growing new business, for example. During the past season, NBC Radio signed up $16,116,000 in new business — a 165% new-billings increase over the previous season. Fifty sponsors are making sure, through new time buys, that their advertising bears a cash crop.

The reason? New programming ideas and sales patterns in NBC network radio — like the Mary Margaret McBride and Dr. Norman Vincent Peale morning strip shows, the widely acclaimed Biographies in Sound, and the exciting new concepts to be unveiled shortly. All of them represent a creative approach to radio as a modern medium, filling a special and vital role in people's lives.

Yes, it's Spring at NBC, and things are stirring. It's a time of growth, of vitality and movement.

VARIETY - ARB City-By-City Syndicated and National Spot Film Chart

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 top-rated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time — day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv.), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quiz; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors rep the national spot sponsor for whom the film is aired.

Radio Reviews

SECOND HUSBAND
With Cathleen Cordell, Richard Waring, Madaline Belgrad, Ralph Lee Robertson, Mercer McCleod, Arthur Maitland
Producers: Anne and Frank Hummert
Director: Edward Slattery
Writer: Elizabeth Todd
15 Mins., Mon.-thru-Fri., 11:45 a.m.
Sustaining
CBS, from N. Y.

When CBS moved the quarter-hour "Rosemary" strip into the old "Aunt Jenny" spot at 12:15, the web made a gross error in replacing it with "new" Anne and Frank Hummert creation, "Second Husband:" "Husband" was excellent as a travesty of a soaper, but as a soaper it was, qualifications not withstanding, awful when heard on its second broadcast a week ago Tuesday (22).

There has always been an intellectual abomination of soapers. It's been sort of a game. However, those same stanzas have made the radio webs much sponsor coin. This new show, on the other hand, will probably double the intensity of abomination, and not collect one farthing from a farsighted bankroller; listeners will have difficulty in identifying with its phony characters.

After the long and ludicrous narrative opening, which overused words like "crisis," "despair," and "distress" and sounded like a take-off on itself, the plot was launched with a vengeance. It was complicated and it was dull and wooden. For example, at least two stock types were evident in the second show: a widow who couldn't remarry—even the man she loves with an all-consuming passion-because (1) "I haven't the right to give my (two small children) a stepfather" and (2) she didn't feel that this prospective stepfather should assume her great financial debts. In order to achieve a sympathetic lead character, he or she should—by even soap opera standards—have some admirable traits, perhaps if only an ability to think with occasional clarity. But the heroine allowed this lover-boy of hers to wipe away all her groundless (and that was all too obvious also) fears with one sweep of his well-worn dialog. Suddenly, she was in his arms, with ensuing chatter sounding like a parody on the "John and Marsha" disk.

The acting of old pros like Cathleen Cordell as the widow and Richard Waring as the potential second hubby was as wooden as the script, whose dialog was handled by Elizabeth Todd. As an American banker, Waring sounded just like another CBS Radio character—Lord Henry Brinthrop, husband of "Our Gal Sunday." Art.

JEAN SHEPPARD SHOW
Producer: Larry Dorn
90 Mins.; Sat., 4:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WOR, N. Y.

WOR has an offbeat deejay airer in this new 90-minute Saturday session. It's more patter than platter. Stint is handled by the Jean Sheppard, who recently moved into N. Y. from Cincinnati. Major portion of the program is devoted to long stretches of gab, which Sheppard delivers in a literate fashion. However, it's his subject matter that gives the show a novel twist.

The wrinkle here is that it's difficult to get a straight line on what he's chatting about. Most of the discourse is in an obscured vein. There are overtones of cleverness that failed to break through on show caught last Saturday (26). A cut down on airer's talkathon aspect, with heavier turntable concentration might prove beneficial since the few disks played on show caught were all quality waxings.

Tunes spun included vocals and instrumentals, and weren't the usual pop product. Jess.

WINIFRED DICK CARROUSEL

WINIFRED DICK STORES
KIKI, Honolulu

When a sponsor picks up the tab for a weekly three-hour radio program, that's news. And that's what the Winifred Dick chain of sportswear and specialty shops is doing for "Carrousel."

Slotted just after the major transcribed network shows leave the air, stanza's a cinch for good listenership. It's also good listening. Gene Taylor, one of the town's better known jocks, picks the disks and ad libs the commercials with—wonder of wonders—virtual carte blanche from Bob and Winifred Dick, the sponsors.

The Dicks, who parlayed a small shop into a four-unit Waikiki chain, take pride in knowing they're helping provide generous semi-pop and semi-classical fare for fellow music lovers. They're in good hands for Taylor picks his tunes well. And his commercials, only one each half-hour, are voiced sincerely and warmly. Walt.

WEW's 50G Sale

St. Louis, March 29.

Radio station WEW, second oldest station in the U. S. and the first to be operated by a university, has been sold by the St. Louis U. to Aubrey D. Reid, known on the air as Bruce Barrington, for more than $50,000. Deal is subject to greenlight from FCC.

Barrington, who is station manager of KOXK, has been with latter station since 1938 and has tendered his resignation effective April 1.

½-Hour Canadian TV Show Costs $5,000 In Contrast to 35G in U.S.

Ottawa, March 29.

Giving evidence before a federal govt. committee probing radio and television policies of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., CBC's g.m., A. D. Dunton, said Canadians have rich and expensive tastes in video. Dunton was aware, he said, that this taste came from watching tv shows originating in the U. S., but pointed out that while an average U. S. tv production would cost about $35,000, a half-hour on Canadian tv would cost about $5,000. He reiterated that CBC could import television shows at much less cost than it could originate them, but that CBC wanted to ensure a large share of tv shows seen in Canada were originated and produced in Canada.

Dunton said one-third of Canada's population has television sets, the present outlets covering about 70% of the nation's population.

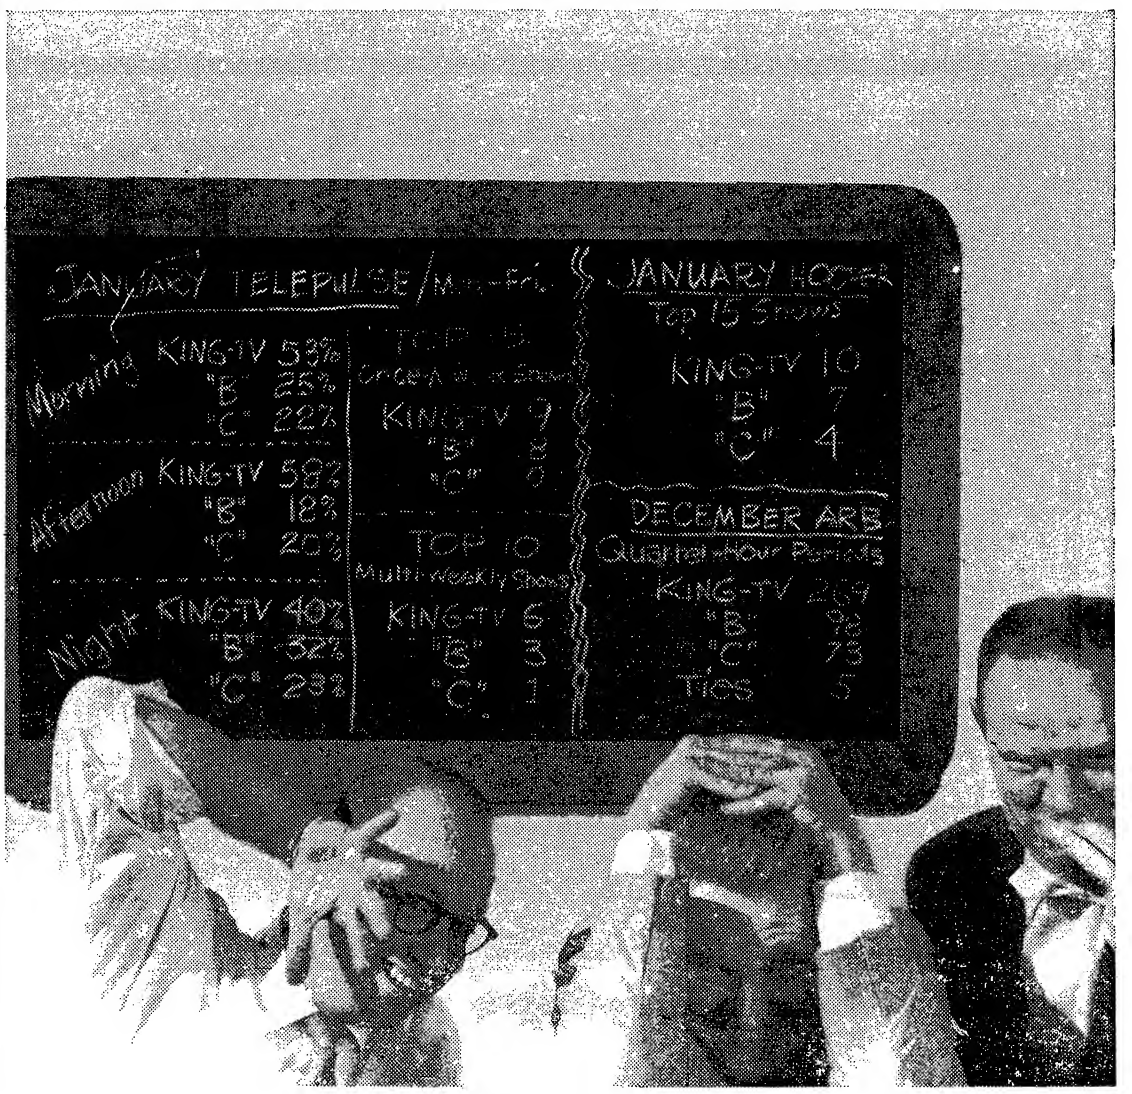
a narrow choice of program services dispensed by a few stations, a situation which is abhorrent to the American system of broadcasting."

The Plotkin and Jones reports "forcefully demonstrate that a truly nationwide competitive system has not and cannot be accomplished under the present tv station allocation rules and regulations or under prevailing conditions with respect to network programming," the Committee said.

Attainment of such a system, Committee added, now depends on the speed, with which the Senate and the FCC complete their studies. The objective requires "a prompt and vigorous" program, urged, to provide:

1. An "adequate number" of tv stations with facilities for "equal competitive opportunity."



2. Greater "competitive opportunity" for network and other program sources to supply tv stations.

3. Reduction of "excessive cable charges to small tv stations are "availability of efficient, competitive facilities" for carrying network programs.

4. Availability of "economical, efficient and nondiscriminatory tv receiving sets and transmitting equipment."

Among steps to be taken to achieve these ends, the Committee urged that FCC be given the necessary funds to study network programming. It also recommended deintermixture, removal of excise taxes to eliminate cost differentials for all-channel sets, adoption to FCC proposals to confine stations to their assigned markets, and limitations on antenna heights and powers to keep coverage of VHF stations from overflowing into UHF areas.

Meanwhile, the House Appropriations Committee, in approving a $1,870,000 budget for FCC operations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1956, earmarked $80,000 for the agency's proposed network study.

We Don't Like Competitive Ads

But every now and then the boss insists that we do one. After all, he says, if your merchandise is judged better (by impartial experts), why be bashful? That always stumps us. So we do a competitive ad. As painlessly as possible.

Now let's get into this Seattle rating picture. KING-TV is so far out in front that it's embarrassing. Sort of feel like Roger Bannister lapping one of his opponents. Morning, afternoon, and night, our program boys outrun the field. By a healthy margin...on three rating services, yet.

So that's the way it is. If you want a cinch winner in Seattle, it's KING-TV. A sure thing. And who wants to put his advertising dollars on a long shot these days?

Simmons & Lear Now A Corp.; Set Properties

That "look, ma, I'm a corporation" trend is by no means confined to the stars in television. Pair of writers, Ed Simmons & Norman Lear, currently writing-producing-directing the Martha Raye show, have gone on a corporate binge with two new companies listed under their names.

Outfits were formed to produce and control two new properties in the Simmons & Lear hopper. Both are comedies, one about a pair of hotel charwomen titled "The Gibson Girls," the other about newlyweds titled "I Take Thee, Susan." Names of the new companies, respectively, are Simmons & Lear Productions Inc. and Simmons & Lear Enterprises Inc.

A Manager Reflects On Why He's Investing In an Indie VHF'er

Milwaukee.

Editor, VARIETY:

As a petitioner (now in hearing) for Channel 6, WMIL would certainly not be making our pitch, and investing money, with any thought that "toll" is any part of the payoff. Not in any dream of collecting home fees have we—an independent—put $200,000 on the line to date in engineering, legal and other preparations; or committed ourselves for nearly $1,000,000, should the FCC give us the nod. Speculation that "toll" influences an applicant in our circumstances is unrealistic. Never gave it a thought.

Here's the way we've been reasoning:

WTMJ-TV (VHF) covers 650,000 homes. WXIX, CBS-owned UHF here, covers 312,000 homes, WTVW, Hearst-owned VHF, covers what WTMJ-TV does. WTVW, a relatively new station, is doing quite well, an ABC outlet.

Television, to us, if we win, is an opportunity to serve over 500,000 homes—far more than our CBS-owned UHF will serve for a decade. Our problem is to provide more and better entertainment than the two VHF stations now here. (UHF—CBS-owned or no, is not yet a problem.) Can we?

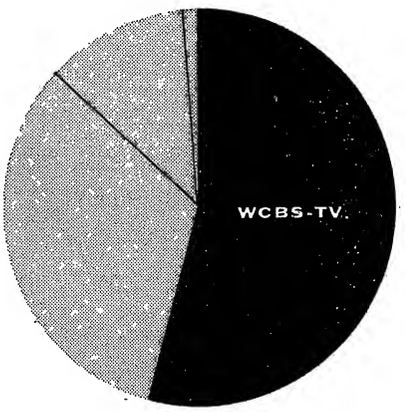
A good show on film (non-network) should serve the same audience as a good show on kinescope. A good film now, syndicated, should serve the same audience as a good film show fed on network lines. And it is yet to be proved that a live network show will attract more audience (because it's live) than a better-entertainment film show. It's just a question of which is better boxoffice. And we have great confidence that good syndicated film—plus DuMont—is as good as film or live that happens to originate from some network source.

There's more to it than that. No network will own WMIL-TV if we get a grant. There are no front-office taboos about what we may or many not do, in terms of live programming or in terms of news coverage. And in a market of more than a million people, there must be an awful lot of people who are more interested in what they see on their screen than what some anonymous brass in a complex operation (all of whose eggs are not in the tv basket, as are ours) thinks in good broad policy to allow them to see.

What I am trying to say is that we are spending a lot of money and a lot of time . . . we have spent more than two years of the latter . . . trying to get a grant on Channel 6.

We are not doing it because someone has some strange crystal ball that tells us that future developments, beyond the realm of present day commercial tv, will make the channel valuable.

We are doing it because we have faith in our ability to produce entertainment that will compete favorably with what the other stations in this town can present.



After all, for eight years, we have run a daytime radio station on 1290 kilocycles, certainly not the choicest of frequencies. For many of those eight years, we have presented the kind of entertainment that put us up there leading the operating race or so darn close that we were breathing down the necks of the guys favored with more of the world's choice possessions, in terms of physical facilities.

view, Wednesday 10 to 11 will be "milestones in television" with the "top boxoffice names in American entertainment" as the grand design. ("Best of Broadway," one-for-four with Pabst, is, of course, put out to graze though it may show up in another guise next season.)

That Noxzema Itch

Another major CBS hatchet job has been done on Noxzema, alternating money-provider (with Amoco) on "Person Person," with Edward R. Murrow and producing collaborators John Aaron and Jesse Zousmer having made no bones about their displeasure with the sponsorship. Noxzema, which came on last year to alternate with Amoco when the oil outfit decided to retrench on the weekly exposure, bids "P to P" adieu in mid-May in face of the fact that ad agency SSC&B was ready to put in for renewal. Here, too, it is understood that the top brass of the web backed Murrow & Co. in inviting the complexioneer to seek other pastures. Whether Amoco will now return to every-week plugging is not now known. (Hamm Beer is the midwest picker-upper and there are several regional sponsors that constitute a kind of co-op setup on the show.)

Longines-Wittnauer, longtime mint for Columbia, is finally squeezed out of the tri-weekly 11 p.m. "Chronoscope" forum spot. Ouster stems almost wholly from local stations, which for four years have been working up to a fever pitch on recapturing the time for feature films and other late night segments. In New York (WCBS-TV), as elsewhere, the vintage pix are prime money-getters and the stations have been anxious to get back to "same time" status on a daily basis, instead of a quarter-hour delay following Longines' Monday-Wednesday-Friday interview setup. Additionally, CBS, in behalf of outlets, wants to get in ahead of Steve Allen's "Tonight!" show on NBC-TV, and that's how it'll be starting May 16. (For local developments see separate story.) Longines is a major buyer of CBS Radio time, with its "Choraliers" a quarter-hour strip. The "summer" hiatius on "Choraliers" is coming early this year (in April), which may indicate that the timepiece outfit has other plans next season.

Then, too, CBS is ditching its 7:30 news and music cross-the-board spread against the ravages wrought principally by ABC-TV's "Disneyland," and hence the multiple sponsors will be out in the cold unless and until other slots are opened up.

When it comes to strengthening their nighttime patterns, the networks look sponsors straight in the eye and say, "away you go." For the bankrollers, competition is the strife of video life as they ponder the question of "where to go!"

CAESAR'S SERIES ON BOYS WHO MADE GOOD

That "buy me, buy my show" trend among top tele stars, as exemplified by Jackie Gleason and his "Stage Show" package, has found another adherent in Sid Caesar, whose Shellrick Corp. has picked up the rights to a new series which it will begin to peddle soon. Series is titled "The Boy Who Changed the World," and it concerns the boyhoods of great men.

Idea stems from the "Studio One" play of the same name, about the boyhood of Thomas Alva Edison, produced in conjunction with the 75th anni of Edison's perfection of the incandescent bulb. Joseph Schrank, who wrote the "Studio One" teleplay, has been retained by Caesar as writing supervisor and script editor, and is currently in the process of assigning scripts. Shellrick, incidentally, is the name of the corporation, owned by Caesar, which turns out his Monday night "Caesar's Hour" on NBC-TV.

RCA's Radio Spots

RCA has bought a bundle of 46 radio participations on NBC (where else?) for a springtime push of radio-telesets, records and other products. The crossboard "Great Gildersleeve" gets 16 Wednesday Thursday spots. Another 16 goes to the daytime "Second Chance," Tuesday and Thursday; eight to the Sunday "Weekend series" and six to the Saturday "roadshow."

'Revoke' Clause on CBS Cuffo TV Tix Hit By Clients As Discriminatory

Some sponsors and agencies are irked at what they call the "discriminatory practice" existing at CBS in connection with studio tickets. The web recently put the following text on the backs of the cuffos: "CBS has the right to refuse admission and to revoke this ticket at any time." Reportedly the first tickets to bear the revocation clause were for the Arthur Godfrey shows, but this has since been extended to all audience programs.

It's understood that audience abuse of the ticket privilege as specifically applied to the Godfrey shows obliged the network to tighten up to the extent that enforcement remains more or less confined to the AG end of programming. Sponsors and their commission houses don't look too kindly on the practice. As one of them put it, "The advertiser wants to sell goods and engender good will by issuing the ticket. Why should CBS jeopardize this good will by refusing to admit the sponsor's audience guests (as they have done)?"

Freemantle's 750G Bonanza In Stepped-Up Bid for Foreign Dollar

The importance of the overseas markets to American vidfilmers is evidenced by the meteoric billings increase by Fremantle Overseas Radio and Television last year as against '53. The company, which until recently stood almost alone in foreign distribbing, leaped from a tiny biz volume to over $750,000 in international sales in '54. And, as it was a good year for FORTV, 1954 also saw the beginnings of widespread competition for that foreign tv dollar.

The FORTV gross coin total also included about 40% from radio syndications. The company, under Paul Talbot's presidential aegis, now has four tv shows, some features, etc., and 24 radio programs weekly in 22 countries (including incidental U.S. radio sales).

FORTV has benefitted, judging by its bankroll lists, from a tendency by American sponsors to spend with consistency in overseas markets. There was Westinghouse, TWA, McCormick Spices, Nestles, Standard Oil of N.J., Pepsi Cola and Allis Chalmers in that group.

The largest tv market for FORTV was Mexico, supplying over $120,000 of the total gross. There aren't many stations in most other countries but these latter supplied in far smaller amounts several thousands toward the total. Brazil's four video stations bought some American telefilm. The Cuban market which has eight or nine stations supplied FORTV with more than Brazil by many dollars and just about as much as Great Britain, which Talbot felt wasn't exploited to its fullest in sales volume.

There were other tv sales in Colombia, Germany, Japan, Italy and Puerto Rico. Radio sales went to Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore, New Zealand, Trinidad, South Africa — all naturals for English-language e.t.'s.

While Ziv and MCA have gotten rather heavily into foreign film distributing, and while Screen Gems' interest is beginning to wax hot, FORTV still hits the most countries (with its four telefilm skeins "Jungle Macabre," "Bulldog Drummond," "ABC Playhouse," "Hopalong Cassidy," and its library stuff like the Encyclopaedia Britannica library and cartoons.) This year, a team of Caputo and Douglass have begun an outfit to run "foreign only" competition to FORTV. The latter group has full-time employees in their 22-nation sales chain, as well as "affiliated" outfits (like Macquirie in Australia) and outright indie sales agents. The first two groups double as agencies in prepping live tv shows, particularly in casees like P.R. and Mexico.

Columbus—Sidney R. Barger, of WCPO-TV, Cincinnati, has been named executive producer at WLW-C, Crosley tv outlet here.

PAUL DIXON BACK TO CINCY FOR CROSLEY

Paul Dixon shifts back to Cincinati after only a few months away to undertake a three-station telepact with the Crosley chain. New program will begin about a week after the performer exits his afternoon DuMont strip.

Deal, between Dixon and Crosley v.p. John Murphy, involves Crosley's WLW-T, Cincinnati, WLW-D, Dayton, and WLW-C, Columbus, and will be slotted in the afternoon. Crosley web carries a couple of other daytime shows, along with at least one early Saturday evenings. When last in Cincy, Dixon was on via WCPO, which, in turn, fed DuMont. This arrangement lasted until a Dixon hassle with the WCPO management.

former and prexy Adrian Murphy and his brassers fronting for the network) seemed enthused enough to instill the gathering with the year-round formula expectancy; a hope not dispelled by the agency, Lynn C. Baker.

Meanwhile, CBS' hot weather chessboard is on the move in other Sunday directions. "Sunday Playhouse" out of the Coast will go into the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" 6:30 time, preeming this weekend (3) with Joseph Cotten in James Hilton's "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." As with Hallmark, Bill Froug is producing and directing and Frank Goss continues as announcer-host. "Fame" is expected back in the fall with Edward Arnold presiding.

Peter Potter's "Jukebox Jury" will go full hour again this summer, taking the Jack Benny-Amos 'n' Andy 7 to 8 slot. Last summer's "Jury" hour saw Toni picking up the parttime tab (show's regular slot is 8:30-9 p.m. Saturday), but so far no sponsor has showed up for the extended hiatus version. Amos 'n' Andy crossboard "Music Hall" series continues, though there's talk of another time.

Tennessee Ernie Ford gets an extension starting April 25 and riding through the summer, going 7 to 7:45. Extra 15 minutes stems from the Longines Choraliers vacancy.

Latest to board Tennessee Ernie on the Power Plan is Harrison Products (No-Doz), in for Friday capsule starting May 20. Other Ernie clients via the plan are Campana, Philip Morris and Carter Products.

set; his own show in that vein was axed sometime back in a WOR-TV program shuffle. His own variety and teen casings still remain intact, though.

For several months after the July competition started, neither WOR-TV nor WPIX could make much sponsor headway, with many bankrollers waiting it out to see which would get the rating pull, but even that was pretty evenly divided. The Steele victory was by default mostly. His own shows aren't so sponsor-strong yet that onlookers feel justified in saying he took all the available commercialers away from WPIX; it's just that the latter's shows just couldn't pull enough on their own.

WPIX plans for the soon-to-be vacated afternoon hours aren't yet clear.

Eager Legal Beavers

Lawyers are getting into the video act to even a further degree. Legalites and partners Larry Unger and Albert Marten are bankrolling their second vidfilm venture—proposed a half-hour dramatic series. Pilot was shot in N. Y. recently on a three-day work sked with Luther Adler hosting and also co-starring with John Conte.

The initial 26½-minute production, in line with low N. Y. telefilm lensing costs, was brought home for exactly $11,700. Lawyer team last put coin behind the Mel Allen "Call The Play" sports exposure on film, which is sponsored by White Owl.

Hartford—Edyth Radom has joined the staff of WDRC as woman's editor, a new post.

SRO time, and when Freed picks up again at 11 p.m. until 1 ayem, many of the same buyers in the earlier show (Alsol Auto Wax, L. P. Spears, Frost Stores, Lowell-Mercury, American Schools, etc.) also ride with this one. However, the latter has more spots to sell for a filled-up status.

From 9 to 10:45 its largely jazz on the "Birdland Show." Crawford Clothes carries the whole segment, and even invests slightly in Freed. The only non-commercial break is at 10:45 when WINS airs a sustaining 15-minuter, "United Nations Radio Review," the same show Mutual carries on the web less WOR in N. Y.

Bob Leder, WINS manager, reports that in the past several months, since Freed moved his show and the accompanying controversy from the midwest, the outlet's nighttime audience has jumped almost fourfold on the local radio ratings. Whether attributable to Freed or not, the post-midnight to 6 ayem strip is in for a biz rise too. It's comparatively new time for the station in which SRO biz is being done by gabber Stan Shaw.

spot the promoter as the guy who walks in with the claim that he's already got his financing and needs only an expression of interest from the distrib. Sure, there are producers who have their own financing in advance, but they are only few and far between, and they're also established men in the field. Beware of the others.

Strong reaction in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles against the promoters after thousands of dollars were wasted or actually swindled drove the con-men out of these production centres, and, industryites believed, out of the business entirely. But now the distribs have been receiving visitors and letters from such cities as Pittsburgh, Buffalo, San Antonio, Houston, Milwaukee and other spots. With the realization that the money boys have wised up to the facts of telefilm life, the promoters have moved out into the country where there's just as much coin available, but in less experienced hands.

Gross-Krasne and Reed Join Forces to Produce Television Commercials

Two major telefilm production outfits, Gross-Krasne and Roland Reed Productions, have pooled their facilities for production of television commercials and have formed Roland Reed-Gross, Krasne TV Commercials, a new firm which will take over the current blurb accounts of both outfits. Manpower from both companies will run the outfit, which will headquarter at the G-K California Studios, with Reed; his v.p. Guy Thayer; Jack Gross; Phil Krasne; and G-K exec veep Lee Savin running the new operation.

Reed and Gross-Krasne have never combined production forces before, although Gross and Krasne, as principals in the erstwhile United Television Programs (since absorbed by MCA) did distribute a couple of Reed's syndicated properties. G-K recently disbanded its commercials unit, with the announcement that it would resume filming under auspices of a separate company. New firm apparently is the result. Reed's Gotham veep, Hampton Howard, who'll rep the new outfit with N. Y. agencies, previously did the same thing for Gross-Krasne before moving over to Reed last year.

WGAL-TV has a potent effect on the spending habits of over three million people with effective annual buying income of $5 billion — the one station that reaches this market.

Lombardo's 'Shoot 'Em in Bunches' Sets New Low-Cost Vidpix Pattern

By ART WOODSTONE

Though there are many inexpensive, efficient ways to shoot vidfilm, it took Guy Lombardo's half-hour musical production out of the MCA-TV distribution stable to give a real lesson in low-cost filming of class celluloid product. The MCA execs call it "Multiple filming"—shooting several pix at one time.

It's a unique setup that's already progressed beyond the experiment stage. It could readily create a sharp change in the syndication profit pattern, it's felt. This like-an-assembly-line operation on Lombardo's show is estimated to shave amounts varying from $2,000 to $6,000 off the usual $18,000 or $19,000 price tag on a half-hour telepic.

The bandleader, who threw his personal coin behind the syndicated package, got a hand from MCA talent factotum Freddie Fields, who in turn closed foreheads with the show's exec producer Bob Foshko and producer-director Herb Sussan. Unique in this bringing home the "bacon a la celluloid" is that each of these men has heretofore been chiefly associated with live tv. Even unit manager Jack Grossberg and program coordinator Herb Berger have had to bargain only with instantaneous tv presentation or legit. Only film vet in the pack is chief film editor Paul Falkenberg, whose experience dates back to the German art pix of the '20s. Nevertheless, this team has devised what, in an ever expanding industrial field, is perhaps the most intricate, stop-watch filming sked around. Despite shortcuts, show has been acceptable to at least 45 or 50 local sponsors to date, and that includes a large A&P regional hunk as well.

Down to the Last Word

Outfit's production heads, Sussan and Foshko, spend from two to three weeks behind closed doors at Lombardo Film's. MCA headquarters, planning every camera angle, every lip sync movement, every pre-recording sesh down to the word, bar and split second. Object is, as in last week's setup, to be able to go into shooting in a downtown N.Y., studio and, in the matter of five (on occasion six or seven) weekdays, turn out five complete (even to A&P's commercials) half-hour stanzas.

Essentially, here's the way it works: Foshko, Sussan and Fields believe that a musical show of the Lombardo type is best pre-recorded almost in its entirety. Goal of pre-recording is (1) to eliminate the bad sound element extant in most N.Y. film studios by instead shooting at, say, a Reeves or a Decca or some place else where sound is the only occupation; (2) by this method be able to establish the precise length of time of each musical number, whether by Lombardo, one of his regular singers or by guesters. This minimizes the expense (in time and pocketbook) of having to hastily guess where to cut or fill a little to make the show run exactly 26½ minutes, or whatever.

It's said that Lombardo's regulars, including brothers Liebert and Carmen, now have the sync matter (after about 35 films) down to an exact science. After pre-recording their numbers, they are almost always able to perform (sans sound) with perfect lip and motion (handling of instruments, etc.) synchronization. Occasionally, as it was noted first hand, there is a slip in that department on the part of a guest. But generally they handle themselves well in sync matters too. Sussan has them cut a record, which he then gives them to study and repeat exactly, first at home and then in the film studio (some three or four times) before actual filming.

Intricate Pattern

There's no stinting on stars, script, film quality. The money saving angle in the whole shootin' shebang is the Foshko-Sussan-Fields triumvirate's handling of the shooting sked itself. It was arranged, much to the early disbelief of Lombardo himself, in a carefully preplanned and intricate pattern. It's mostly a matter of logistics. Foshko will lay out every conceivable type camera shot that will be used in each of the five shows shot in the same week. For example, there will be a succession of maybe nine "cover" (whole cast) shots made, a like series of left-hand side wide angle shots and also right-hand side wide angle shots, etc. There are even a certain number of shots of the brass section alone at a predesigned angle or of the rhythm section. Not one of Sussan's shots is left to the vagaries of last-minute decision.

With the shots all laid out, it's then a matter of following the script to the letter; all the wide angle shots for all five shows are shot at one morning or afternoon shooting session. Since Lombardo's intros all are from the same general spot on the studio-built bandstand, they are lensed at the sitting. Then too, it is proper to see every guest for the five shows lined up on the same morning at the studio for cover, wide-angle or some other shots.

Throughout this, however, there is ample room in the shooting worksheet for disbursement of the touches that make each show distinct. There's the Marine flyer, just back from Korea, visiting the on-set "Hotel Roosevelt Grill" (at top union minimum); or the after-circus juves and their clown guide, et. al. Around one of these fillips the theme is set.

'Guest Control' Policy To Curb Overexposure On NBC O&O Stations

NBC's owned & operated in New York are making sure that guests won't be popping up with excessive frequency on shows. A "guest control" policy has been established toward this end and it works this way:

All guest lists will clear through WRCA (radio and tv) news and special features department at least a week prior to appearance. Included will be date on the organization (if any) the guest represents or his "cause" (charity, etc.). If the log shows that the guest is skedded for another show, the producer of the second program will be notified so that he can write in another name. The department will keep a list of personalities available for guest appearances in all "shapes, sizes and types."

New Time, Expansion For Hy Gardner TV'er

N. Y. Herald Tribune columnist Hy Gardner and the WPIX (N. Y.) echelon, in deciding to move the 30-minute interview show to Thursday night at 10 p.m., did so because of "the potentially more adult audience." The Sundays-at-7 p.m. was deemed, tv-wise, conflicting too much with the early evening "kid trade."

Louis G. Cowan Inc., which is packaging the new half-hour format (originally 15 minutes), has several sponsors interested with an eye to a network slot.

Freelance Writers

ducer by contract cannot generally ask more than limited days of a scribe's time on a tele assignment. In the East, where the "prestige" video dramas come from mainly, it has been common practice to hold onto the writer for months, for the same initial fee. He has to wait for a decision for days on his "springboard" idea, often on his subsequent treatment or outline (in the meantime, growing cold so that when he returns to the story, it takes extra days "getting back in shape"), in rewrites and rehearsals. In all, it often takes as much as three months for a script. Considering that in the majority of instances, the writer might get $1,000 for his work, it's pretty low wages when spread out.

One of the ideas the scribes try to get across in their indictment of tv is that the electronic medium, by keeping the writers under monetary thumb while paying gold-mine wages to comics, are permitting an invidious comparison between drama and variety shows.

ABC Radio's 'Fix It'

Radio is getting into the $6,000,000,000 annual do-it-yourself market via ABC. Web has slotted a cross-the-board nightly segment on the subject, "How to Fix It," with Hubbard Cobb as the authority, starting next Monday (4). Show will air in the 10:15-10:25 time slot, following "AFL Views the News," as a co-op feature.

Stations can sell the strip for any price or in any manner they please without paying the web a fixed charge for the program. Instead, they merely pay 25% of their individual sale price, whether they sell it as a straight package or as a spot carrier. Plan gives stations greater flexibility and more control over their own sales operation.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

New York Journal American's "Who's Who on TV" contest wound up with entry No. 50 on Sunday (27) and there'll be a hot scramble on since the final entry included a printed form to break ties in the number of correct identifications made of the 50 distorted photos. This phase of the contest introduced to the public at large a subject that heretofore has been limited to the trade. For instance, contestants are asked to make three predictions on the form: (1) name the Top 10 programs to be disclosed in the April survey of the American Research Bureau; (2) name the order of viewer popularity; (3) name the percentage rating of popularity the first three of the Top 10 programs will earn in the survey. To assist readers, the newspaper listed ARB's Top 10 for April, 1953.

WNYC, the N. Y. municipally-owned & operated radio station starts its third annual book festival on Friday (1), with 100 special stanzas framing at least 25 major literati-showbiz personalities and other. The seven-day rundown of "tops in tomes" will include discussions and readings by these people, among whom are such as Justice William O. Douglas, Helen Hayes, Carl Sandburg, Clifton Fadiman, Fred Allen, Bennett Cerf, Rex Stout, Allan Nevins, et al.

Sessions via the city o&o will range from gab on science fiction, mystery stories, kid stories, comedic analyses to poetry and critiques. Deal was arranged by station boss Seymour Siegel.

Rex Evans, Coast shirtmaker who doubles as an actor, figures that Don Wilson might have a "beef" (pun intended) re VARIETY's review of the most recent Jack Benny show on CBS-TV. It was Evans, claiming to be at least 40 pounds heavier than Wilson, who played Bing Crosby's butler. In fact, he's a butling specialist, having been grooved in that department for such stars as Irene Butler and Liberace when they guestarred for Benny. (On a small telescreen, it still looked like Wilson.)

Scripter-director Newt Meltzer is coming through on tv with a threesome of credits in the next few days, with two works exposed in one night. NBC-TV's "Justice" tomorrow (Thurs.) will present his "Fearful Hour." On Sunday (3) he'll be repped on CBS-TV's "You Are There" with "At the Completion of the Transcontinental Railroad" and same night will mark the premiere of "Appointment With Adventure" (replacing "Father Knows Best" on CBS-TV) for which Meltzer has supplied the script.

Meltzer has been active in documentary films for 14 years and made his tv debut only 18 months ago as then editorial supervisor on CBS-TV's "The Search."

There's a baby bonanza in the production of telefilm commercials out in Peoria, Ill. Central Telefilms there, helmed by Herb Landon who last July ankled Kenyon & Eckhardt publicity to take over, turned out in March 30 one-minute films and 15 20-second spots for Fehr's Brewery; completed a new minute-long animated cartoon for Rival Dog Food and a second skein of films for National Broom Manufacturing Assn.; four 60-second Servisoft vidpix, plus several more shortie pix for two other advertisers, Toastmaster Bread and B-F Spaghetti.

TC, Landon reports, has taken on additional studio space. Incidentally, Maxwell Landow, lately of National Screen Service, is animation boss, and a Bradley U. ex-prof, Maxwell Landow is art director.

cannot attack a consent decree to which it is a party by charging RCA with violating the law—beginning the very day after the decree was entered—because it has conformed to the provisions of the decree," the brief stated.

$50,000,000 Twice

RCA stressed its own role in helping the industry to develop in terms of cross-licensing and in terms of its own research efforts. It had spent $50,000,000 in developing black and white television before it realized a profit and has spent more than $50,000,000 on the development and promotion of color and is still "pioneering" color tv activities at a "substantial loss." No other organization, it was stated, has contributed as much to the research and development of these products as RCA, and its licensing policies have enabled competitors to enjoy the fruits of its research on reasonable and non-discriminatory terms, it was declared.

Getting down to specific Government allegations, RCA denied that it engages in "package licensing" or forces any licensee to accept a license under more patents than he wants. "RCA's licenses contain no restrictions as to price, quantity, territory, or anything else; require no minimum royalty, and are offered under any one or more patents and for any apparatus as may be desired by any prospective licensee." It listed its royalty rates as follows

Radio receivers using tubes, ½ of 1%; radio receivers using transistors, ⅛ of 1%; black and white television receivers, 1¼%; color tv receivers, 1¼%; electron tubes other than color tubes, 1¼%; color tubes, 1¾%; color tv commercial apparatus except government, 2%; other commercial apparatus except government, 1½%, and government commercial apparatus, 1%.

St. Louis—Assistant sales manager William O'Donnell is the new chief of KXOK's commercial department, replacing the late V. N. (Bud) Springgate who died earlier this month. O'Donnell has been with the ABC affiliate for five years in various sales capacities.

tive for tune-out. Secondly, not enough accurate info as to the weather. It's all right to give weather reports a humorous twist, as Scotty Scott does with the aid of a cutout bird mounted on a weathervane to which she asks questions and gets nods accompanied by the info on slides, but that doesn't mean the precise and complete information should be slighted. Scotty goofed on the night caught, predicting rain for the next day when previous weather shows correctly predicted snow.

As for Scotty herself, she's been doing the weather on WABC-TV for some time now, and she's an old hand at it. Chief attraction, however, continues to be the fact that she's mighty easy on the eyes. Which leads to another twist, the fact that the agency has a femme doing the blurbs on male products. Good idea, since she bears watching, but again, they should be cut a little shorter. As for her handling of the weather, it's a little overly cute, something which can be corrected with some closer supervision. Chan.

IT'S GREAT TO BE YOUNG With Sam Levenson
Producer: Robert Jennings
30 Mins., Tues., 3 p.m.
WCAU-TV, Philadelphia

At the suggestion of Charles Vanda, v.p. in charge of television at the WCAU stations, Robert Jennings (exec producer of "Chance of a Lifetime") borrowed spot customarily occupied by Jack Valentine ("Valentine's Day") for his one-shot Sam Levenson tryout. Show was kinescoped as a pilot film while telecast locally. Jennings considers the out-of-town runthrough a trend in programming.

That the idea has its merits was evidenced by an edginess — a worried note in Levenson's delivery in spite of his infectious story telling. The juves featured in his newest of talent hunts justify the title. They are unafraid while performing, although a little self-conscious during the interviews. While the genius tag bestowed on some of his "finds" seemed overenthusiastic, the general calibre of group, which ranged in age from six to 18, was high.

Entertainers included a pop singer, a pianist, a quartet and a cute moppet who dueted with her host for the finale. The ex-schoolteacher humorist is a natural to emcee and introduce young talent. They help lead into Levenson's surefire family reminiscences and the homey raconteur can throw away a gag with the best. Regardless of the abilities of the kids, the sets will be tuned on for Levenson, whose comedy is at home in almost every livingroom.

Production values were not only trite—roses and a cottage set—but they didn't look durable enough to last out the program. Show ran over. Gagh.

KEN NORDINE SHOW
With Dick Marx, Johnny Frigo, Porky Panico, Pat Scot, Fleming Brown
Exec Producer: Les Weinrott
Producer: Niles Swanson
Director: Phil Bondelli
30 Mins.; Wed., 11 p.m.
Sustaining
WBBM-TV, Chicago

With most of the experiments now relegated to the latenight fringe, the local night watch is turning up some intriguing divertissements. Newest entry is this offbeat WBBM-TV variety halfhour skippered by Ken Nordine. It has all the makings of a tasty dish, especially for the jazz fans.

Surrounded by some high calibre regular and guest musical talent, Nordine works the show at an easy pace with his chief contribution one of his patented tv "readings." This time (23) he reeled off Poe's "Tell Tale Heart" for eerie impact. Gabber lends a lot of class to the outing.

His regular associates, jazz pianist Dick Marx and bassman Johnny Frigo, provided a couple of cool offerings. "Hooray for Love" was especially flashy and they were joined by trumpeter Porky Panico who gave a fine ride on "I Can't Get Started With You." Vocal honors were ably handled by Pat Scot who chirped a Frigo original, tagged "Detour Ahead," for okay results and folk singer Fleming Brown who spun off a brace of authentic ballads straight down the cognoscenti groove.

Although the lighting went awry in a couple of instances, the 30 minutes were neatly showcased in the light-on-black idiom. Dave.

TED TRAVERS SHOW
With Claude Jones, guests
Producer: Travers
Director: Roger Coelos
60 Mins.; Fri., 11:45 p.m.
SUNNYSIDE AUTO
WGN-TV, Chicago

WGN-TV is off on a latenight deejay kick with the closing hour four nights a week given over to the platter-chatter specialists. The Friday night slot is helmed by Ted Travers, a softspoken gent with an easy style. However, off the edition watched (18) he'll have to smooth up the cluttered format and add more spark to the proceedings if the show is to make any significant impact.

It's the usual disk-interview combo with some individual devices such as screening a streamer of lyrics while the record is being spun and a telephone song title quiz. Another regular feature which came off okay was a deft sketching exhibition by an unbilled crayon artist. Another new twist billboards the current music hits via a sheet music rack display. Live music portions are supplied by pianist Claude Jones who dished out a real cool treatment of "Lullaby at Birdland." Travers himself warbled a couple of choruses in so-so fashion.

Except for the judo demonstration which provided some flash and action, the guest segs failed to come alive. Interview with a couple of reps from the Swift packing firm added up to little for the post-midnight audience and Travers' quickie chinfest with singer Janet Brace was too hurried.

With all the screened credits for the various giveaways and gadgets used on the show, the car dealer bankroller almost gets lost in the shuffle. Dave.

BASKETBALL TOURNEY
With Jack Horner, Jim Pollard
Producer: Bob Fransen
Directors: Charles Phillips, Art Widdum, Roger Miller
120 Mins.: Sat. (25), 9 p.m.
KEYD-TV, Minneapolis-St. Paul

KEYD-TV, the Twin Cities' newest station, scored a 10-strike time, the annual Minnesota state high school basketball tournament's complete championship flight. Finding advertising sponsors for these telecasts was as simple as Mother Goose's Simon. Hitherto, the televising has been limited to the final championship deciding game.

These tournaments arouse a tremendous amount of statewide interest and are second only to U. of Minnesota football in sports' appeal. The tournament itself and the contests are front page newspaper stuff.

This 1955 tournament, continuing for three days, afternoons and evenings, found the state's regional champs battling it out for first place and drew a record-breaking 85,120 attendance in the huge 18,000-capacity U. of Minnesota field house here. Including standees, the crowd of 18,400 on the last night also set a new high mark.

During the tournament fire department authorities even had threatened to close the games to spectators because of overcrowding of the field house. The state association's big problem is how to cope with the ticket demand from all over the area.

The championship deciding game was a close and exciting thriller between Minneapolis Washburn and Austin, Minn., high school, fraught with drama and tenseness as the former won 67 to 58 while the wildly cheering, noisy crowd gave vent to its feelings.

Using two cameras, KEYD-TV followed the floor action perfectly and caught numerous human interest sidelights. Topnotch sportscaster Jack Horner's play-by-play description, singling out individual players by name, supplemented the visual in a manner calculated to increase viewers' enjoyment. He and Jim Pollard, all-time hooper great and a Minneapolis Lakers' pro basketball team star, also explained and expertly analyzed the teams' tactics and strategy and commented interestingly on various of the action's phases.

Commercials were unobtrusive and well devised. Rees.

Schubert Files Suit Vs. DuM, Loveton on 'North'

Producer Bernard L. Schubert has filed a suit in Federal Court in N. Y. to stop DuMont and John W. Loveton or his Advertisers Television Programs, Inc., from using the "Mr. and Mrs. North" vidfilm series on the air. Schubert's second aim is to prevent DuMont, for its local o&o WABD (which will carry the films), from paying Loveton for usage.

Schubert claims that Loveton organized Advertisers Television Programs early this year in order to breach an agreement said to date back to 1952 and which was "modified" in '54. Just what the modifications were the brief does not say.

Case was first filed in N. Y. Supreme Court, but due to DuMont's corporate diversity, it had to be moved into Federal Court on Friday (25).

New Orleans—Ankling of James Gordon as v.p. and general manager at WNOE, radio station here, is taken as the second important step in the outlet's "face lifting" job. Gordon's quitting comes within a few weeks of owner James Noe's announcement that he was dropping his Mutual network tie to turn fulltime indie.

cluded in the toll-tv scheme, since it would bring in much needed revenue, and saw no disparity in the "tuition for education" principle and the charging of a fee for education via video. Rose.

'Omnibus' on the Pan

Opponents of pay-tv are boiling over what they claim was a "strange coincidence" on "Omnibus" when divergent views on "coinbox" programming were presented.

Strongest spokesman against toll-tv was supposed to be George B. Storer, Miami broadcaster, but when the film strip made last week in Miami Beach was presented on the air it was claimed that little of it could be understood because of low quality of the film.

"It looked to me," one anti-toll-tv spokesman said, "as though Zenith was giving a demonstration of its 'Scramblevision' and I started looking for a coin-slot to see if I could clear up the picture and sound."

Coincidentally, Zenith, whose Cdr. Eugene F. McDonald Jr. is the loudest proponent of fee-tv, is one of the sponsors of "Omnibus."

The anti-pay-tv committee wired protests to "Omnibus," the Ford Foundation and CBS demanding that Storer be given a "return engagement" on an early program so that his opinions could be delivered via an "understandable" film strip or in person.

It was reported that the Miami broadcaster also registered a complaint with program and network toppers.

tner down, has been out pitching the Warner package to just about every agency in town, plus out-of-town outfits. While the bulk of the sales force has been concentrating on New York, teams have been going out for the past week, to Chicago and to Detroit to hit up agencies and clients (automakers in the case of Detroit) there. No production details on the show have been set yet, and they probably won't be until the end of April, after Kintner visits the Coast for a session with Warners on casting, production, etc. Meanwhile, the web faces a tough selling job, since the show is priced to sell at around $65,000 a week, one of the highest regular segments on the market.

TV in Deep South

Channel 61, with limited audience and many leading programs.

"I Love Lucy" can be seen by stay-up-lates in Mobile Mondays at 10:30 p. m., a half-hour after average bedtime. On Monday nights at 11:15 p. m. New Orleans offers "Studio One." (Mobile and Pensacola frequently get New Orleans). On Tuesday nights "It's a Great Life" comes on at 11:15 and Wednesday at the same late hour there is "Two for the Money."

On Thursday Mobile has "Four-Star Playhouse" at 10 with "I've Got a Secret" at 10:30 p. m. Friday Mobile has "Topper" at 10 and "The Millionaire" at 10:30.

Saturday finds Jackie Gleason at 10 in Mobile and "Professional Father" at 11 and "Twenty Questions" at 11:30. In New Orleans on Saturday at 11 comes U. S. Steel Hour." But at 7 p. m. on Sunday "The Comedy Hour" comes through live in Mobile.

On Monday, Thursday and Friday "News Caravan" comes through to Mobile. But not on Tuesday and Wednesday. But it is shown five nights a week in New Orleans.

Pensacola has a late show movie every night including Saturday and Sunday; New Orleans offers a late feature film Thursday and Friday only, with a special feature film at midnight Saturday.

Quite a few local shows are in the early evening hours, with local merchants getting the best time. So far the Steve Allen show has not broken the ice in the deep South.

Fort Worth — Hewel Jones, sales manager for KXOL here, has been named a veepee of the Fort Worth Broadcasting Co., operators of the outlet.

Don Sharpe Sets Flock Of Properties in Motion; 'Blandings,' 'Jody,' et al.

Telefilm agent-producer-packager Don Sharpe, still pedalling his intercontinental bicycle, has set a number of projects, new and old, in the works. Back on the Coast after a quickie trip to London to discuss future plans with Douglas Fairbanks and to perform a sales spiel to the new commercial television operations there, Sharpe has set the following shows into motion:

(1) Pilot on "Mr. Blandings" series, with Macdonald Carey starring, goes before the cameras April 11; (2) principal shooting on "Jody and Me," the George Brent-Lydia Reed starrer, was wrapped last week; (3) wound scripts for 13 "I Love a Mystery" telefilms; (4) finalized scripts for the ABC-syndicated "Sheena, Queen of the Jungle" series, which goes into production in mid-April; (5) secured rights in association with Fairbanks to the "Bulldog Drummond" title and character, with a syndicated series planned for production in London; (6) optioned the novel "Grand Motel" for a possible feature film and telefilm series; (7) optioned Richard Von Kleist's "Hurricane Kelly" adventure story as a possible vehicle for Frank Lovejoy to be shot on location in color and offered for network sale; and (8) dropped his interest in the "Black Beauty" property because "I discovered there were some half dozen producers claiming right to the title."

Fort Worth—WPAP-TV is beginning a new sustaining video series to o.o. the American family situation next Sunday (3) under the production aegis of the Fort Worth Junior League, which last year did a series of juve delinquency. Half-hour skein will run through six Sabbaths. Show, "Family Affair," will cover home problems, with technical advice being supplied by mental health counsellors.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By MIKE GROSS

Sarah Vaughan: "Whatever Lola Wants (Lola Gets)"-"Oh Yeah" (Mercury). Few showtune numbers in recent years have attracted as much diskery attention as "Lola," from the upcoming "Damn Yankees" score. With the release restriction lifted over the past weekend, six diskeries were ready with their versions of the tune. Dick Ross & Jerry Adler came up with a pair of clickos in their latest legituner effort, "Pajama Game," with "Hey There" and "Hernando's Hideway" so it's not unusual that the diskers would want to ride along with a winner. "Lola" is an offshoot of "Hernando's" in that's in the Latino groove, but it's got a peppery beat and an intriguing lyric that stands alone. Sarah Vaughan comes off best in the lyric-handling and looks like a shoo-in for top bracket slotting. Aided by a tiptop chile arrangement, she makes it an enchanting and inviting side. Dinah Shore (RCA Victor) and Carmen McRae (Decca) are worthy contenders but both lack the subtle s.a. that the song needs and that Miss Vaughan has. Victor would do better to concentrate on Miss Shore's flip side, "Church Twice On Sunday." It's a swinging revivalist song that could go far. Ginny Gibson (MGM) gives the lure of the "Lola" lyric the obvious vocal workover and Jamie who works with the Mello Larks on an Epic cutting is a bit too cute to be effective. The Hi-Los on the indie Starlight, are okay. "Oh Yeah," the bottom side of Miss Vaughan's Merc slice, is a novelty that doesn't quite come off.

Bill Hayes: "The Berry Tree"-"Blue Black Hair" (Cadence). It looks like Archie Bleyer (prez and a&r head for Cadence) has come up with two-in-a-row for Bill Hayes. Crooner clicked a couple of months ago with "Davy Crockett" and "The Berry Tree" shapes as a follow-up smash. Tune, from the Metro pic, "Many Rivers To Cross," is in the folk genre like "Crockett" and Hayes gives it a standout vocal. It's light and lilting and a natural for jock and juke spins. When "The Berry Tree" push is over, the jocks won't hurt themselves by spinning "Blue Black Hair." It doesn't have the zingy quality of its mate, but it's a solid, infectious folk item.

Fontane Sisters: "Most of All"-"Put Me In The Mood" (Dot). With the rock 'n roll beat still denting the pop lists, it's difficult to discount the Fontane Sisters' cut of "Most of All" as a top-bracket contender. It follows the pattern of their "Hearts of Stone" and "Rock Love" and until the teeners want to wash their hands of the whole thing, the formula will pay off. The tune has the beat and the drive that The Fontane gals know how to deliver. Don Cornell, who sliced the tune for Coral, will have to take a backseat to the distaffers this time. The Fontanes work over "Put Me In The Mood," on the reverse, in typical r&b fashion but this time the tune just doesn't have it.

Dolores Hawkins: "No Such Luck"-"Smoky Morning" (Epic). If there ever was a new ballad to crack through the rhythm & blues predominance on the platter shows, "No Such Luck" is it. The tune has what it takes, in melody and lyric, and the thrush belts with the kind of gusto that could make a song in the pre-r&b days. "Smoky Morning" on the reverse, is a scrabble of the old blues formula.

Kitty Kallen: "Kitty Who?"-"By Bayou Bay" (Decca). The big problem in the recording biz is what song shoud be recorded by whom. So when a tune titled "Kitty Who" is put on the a&r block, it's a good bet that a Patti Page won't take it, or a Joni James or a Kay Starr. But a Kitty Kallen will lap it up. She's not to be blamed, either. It's an okay tune, with words and music pegged for her piping style, but it remains a special item, at best. "By Bayou Bay," on the backside, is a strong ballad entry with a better chance.

Nelson Riddle Orch: "The Pendulum Song"-"Run For Cover" (Capitol). There are enough offbeat sounds in Nelson Riddle's "Pendulum Song" to make it a strong programming item for the deejays and a coingrabber for the jukes. The "chime" sounds are neatly put together and the side emerges as an ear-catching piece that rates spins. "Run For Cover" is a fast-paced item that won't get far despite it's speed.

Percy Faith Orch: "Land of the Pharaohs"-"The World Is Mine" (Columbia). Dimitri Tiomkin has whipped out an enchanting melody for the WB pic, "Land of the Pharaohs," and Percy Faith has delivered it up with taste and color. The haunting melodic line could prove to be an important factor in pushing this disk through. Tiomkin has his own orch version of the tune on the Coral label, but if there are any marbles to be picked up it'll be by Faith. On the bottom deck of the Faith release is a charming workover of "The World Is Mine."

Joan Regan: "Prize of Gold"-"Too Many Heartaches" (London). The fact that Joan Regan sings on the soundtrack of the upcoming Columbia release of the pic "Prize of Gold" should help this slice get off the ground. Because it's solid ballad with an excellent wax workover, it will coin added plays on the spinning market. Thrush switches to a breezy style on "Too Many Heartaches" for okay results, especially on the juke level.

Les Elgart Orch: "Chattanooga Legion Band"-"Come To The Mardi Gras" (Columbia). The Les Elgart orch whips up plenty of steam for the "Chattanooga Legion Band." It's a zippy item especially tailored for the juke trade. The Tattle Tales do an okay job on the breezy lyric. The Elgart crew gets lost, however, on its way to the "Mardi Gras," on the bottom deck.

Album Reviews

Frank Chacksfield Orch: "The Music of Noel Coward" (London). If Noel Coward used only acid for his prose, he must have been saving the schmaltz for his music. At least that's what's it seems like in Frank Chacksfield's 12-inch LP workover of 14 Coward compositions. The Coward-Chacksfield formula for schmaltz, however, is not hard to digest. In fact, it all adds up to a delightful shellac piece for those who like their background music unobtrusive and easy on the ear. Chacksfield delivers 'em all in a quiet but rich and colorful manner. For the Coward cult, there's "Zigeuner," "I'll Follow My Secret Heart," "Someday I'll Find You" and "I'll See You Again," among others.

Salt Lake City Five: (Jubilee). This 10-inch LP is pure dixieland, swinging, catching and full of exuberance. None of the members of the combo has reached the age of 30, but each plays like he was around when dixieland originated. In the package are such breezy items as "Darktown Strutter's Ball," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Do You Know What It Means To Miss New Orleans" and "That's A-Plenty."

Henry Morgan: "Here's Morgan" (Riverside). During the high point of his radio days a few years back, Henry Morgan came up with some pretty precious monologs that were often badly repeated by his fans for fans who happened to miss that night's broadcast. Morgan has come up with some of his best scripts for this 10-inch LP and when the question comes up in these tv days (in which he's shuttled from one show to another) as to what was so special about Morgan, the disk is there to prove that he was one of the best satirists around. Among the items on the wax repeat are "Little Red Riding Rouge," "Googie Morgan On Baseball," "Dr. Heinrich von Morgan on Child Care" and the bitter "Truth About Cowboys." After listening to the latter again, it's surprising that no cowpoke has drawn a bead on him yet.

Marion McPartland: "At The Hickory House" (Capitol). There are few femmes around today who can touch a keyboard and get the same results as Marion McPartland. She's one of the top distaffers on the 88's today, and Capitol has caught her in rare form. She knows how to get all the feeling out of a ballad and all the beat out of a jumping jazz item. Through it all, she gets a standout assist from Joe Morello, on drums, and Bill Crew, on bass.

Crazy Otto: (Decca). There's a big wax vogue for the barrelhouse piano (tabbed by Decca as Crazy Otto style) so this 12-inch LP of the keyboarder who kicked off the craze is a natural for big sales. Sides were cut in Germany by Deutsche-Gramaphone as was the original single coupling of "Smiles" and "Glad Rag Doll," which started the whole thing. The two sides are included in this set as is such other oldies as "Beautiful Ohio," "My Melancholy Baby," "Red Sails In The Sunset" and "Rose of Washington Square" among others. For the record, Decca's Crazy Otto is German composer-pianist Fritz Schulz-Reichel.

R&B'S SLIP IS NOW SHOWING

Another Copyright Anomaly

In a business where the gimmick, i.e. some unique trick of recording, is the difference between a hit and a flop, the flagrant manner in which recording ideas, arrangements, and kindred techniques are pilfered, is a blot on the industry.

The majors are more guilty than the independents because the history has been that the indie label, perforce more resourceful, has been the one most likely to come up with the novel treatment. The trade knows what is meant and to whom applied when competitive arrangements of ditties such as "Wheel of Fortune," "Tweedle Dee," "Let Me Go Lover," "Sh-Boom!" "Don't Let The Stars Get In Your Eyes," "In A Little Spanish Town" and "If I Give My Heart To You" are cited.

It is not enough to say that once a "notice of user" is filed anybody can record a copyrighted pop song by paying the statutory 2c royalty. The artistic interpretations, as openly stolen by one or another artist, label and/or a&r man, is comparable to somebody stealing an act's routine. Unfortunately, the Copyright Act applies to the basic tune but not to the arrangement or interpretation. This is an anomaly in an era when it's the "interpretation" that is the yes or no answer to a hit.

The larceny is a two-way street. If, as seems to have been the case, the major labels cop from the indies, the majors in turn seem to be the victims of cutrate deals whereby four or six hits are packaged in one of those 99c EPs or LPs, reprising the "top hits" done in an almost carbon style of the original name artist's arrangement.

This is one widespread gripe which the Record Industry Assn. of America should come to grips with as the logical repository of intra-diskery biz problems. Abel.

Radio Outlets, Disk Jocks Launch Self-Policing Setups Vs. 'Leer-ic' Wax

Boston, March 29.

Spearheaded by Sherm Feller, WVDA late night deejay, a representative group of Hub platter spinners and station managers met last week to draw up a code to regulate the airing of records aimed at eliminating the current "leer-ic" problem and its widespread unfavorable publicity.

Action was prompted by recent editorials in The Pilot, the Catholic Archdiocesean publication, and other dailies, plus a published interview with songwriter Jimmy McHugh, who, on a visit here last week, termed the current trend in lyrics as "very disgusting." The songwriter urged parents and the clergy to unite in an all-out drive to eliminate the offensive songs and suggested the parents write to radio and tv station demanding they bypass disks with double-entendre lyrics.

Feller's group set up a six point code of ethics regulating the type of record to be played over the air and at record hops, figuring the self-policing setup would eventually discourage companies from releasing the controversial platters.

Commuters' committee of the West Shore Railroad, which is carrying on a hot tussle with the owning N. Y. Central on retention of the service, has been using a "pig" theme for its battle. This is based on making Central prexy board chairman eat his own words since some years ago (when he headed the Chesapeake & Ohio). Young blasted the railroads on the count that pigs could cross the country without changing trains whereas passengers couldn't. The West Shore commuter's pitch is that pigs are carried on the road but passenger service is threatened.

Alec Wilder is being commissioned to compose a tune along these lines. It's called "West Shore Blues."

Chi Catholic Youth Put Pressure on DJs To Ban Off-Color Disks

Chicago, March 29.

Windy City deejays and radio stations are being barraged with mail protesting off-color and shady meaning disk lyrics. Letters, all following a similiar pattern, are apparently part of an organized drive to take the blue out of lyrics being conducted by Catholic youth groups.

With one indie alone tallying 4,000 letters during recent days, practically every station in town has been busy drafting rebuttal replies and taking a second look at their music screening setups. One major radio-tv plant, WGN and WGN-TV, after a top brass conference on the situation has established a special review panel to "reenforce a traditionally strict music clearance policy."

Review board, comprised of both station execs and deejays, will pass on all disks where the question of good taste is involved. Panel members are WGN program director Bruce Dennis, assistant

Reelect ASCAP Board, Adams Gets Top Vote

Underlining ASCAP's new "era of peace," the incumbent board of directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers has been elected by the membership with prexy Stanley Adams getting the greatest number of individual votes among writers. Size of Adams' votes was regarded as a vote of confidence in his administration and he's a cinch to be reelected for a third year term by the board.

Among the writers reelected to the board were Stanley Adams, Gene Buck, Paul Cunningham, L. Wolfe Gilbert, Oscar Hammerstein 2d, Otto A. Harbach, John Tasker Howard, A. Walter Kramer, Alex C. Kramer, George W. Meyer, Deems Taylor and Jack Yellen. The publishers reelected were Louis Bernstein, Saul H. Bourne, Irving Caesar, Frank H. Connor, Max Dreyfus, Bernard Goodwin, Donald Gray, Jack Mills, Abe Olman, J. J. Robbins, Gustave Schirmer and Herman Starr.

The Society held its annual feed last night (Tues.) at New York's Waldorf-Astoria after the membership meet in the afternoon. ASCAP's USO unit of songwriters supplied the entertainment.

SURVEY SEES END OF CYCLE

The popularity of the rock 'n' roll beat in the New York area is slipping. Teenage Survey Service pinpointed the downgrade in a recent poll of teeners in the metropolitan area in which 70% were opposed to the beat while 30% were for it.

The consensus, according to the teenage outfit, is that the next 90 days will definitely show if rhythm & blues will stay with the teeners. Outfit continues in its report that if the drop, which started in January, continues at the same rate, it will be safe to assume that it will be just a passing fancy by June. The survey also spotlighted that the biggest drop in r&b's appeal came from teens in the upper income bracket families.

Last January when the service polled teeners as to their disk jockey favorites, Alan Freed (WINS), a newcomer to the N. Y. deejay scene was voted second due to his appeal as the leading exponent of rock 'n roll. In the March survey Freed dropped to third place being topped by Jerry Marshall (WNEW) and Martin Block (ABC).

Among the quotes culled by the outfits interviewers were: From those against r&b—"We're tired of these types of records. They're getting to be a repetition of one another." "In the beginning we all enjoyed it because it was a novelty, now it's a nuisance." "We have to have records we can play at church and school socials without having to be ashamed to play them." "At first we didn't notice the lyrics were off-color because we were attracted by the beat. Now we're listening to the words and it's not nice."

Quotes from those who were pro r&b:—It makes me want to dance. Why don't they have regular dances for us kids?" "It's exciting and gives me a warm feeling." "This is for me. The grownups can butt out of it."

The following disk jockey programs were listed as top-10 favorites in the Teenage Survey Service Poll.

1. Jerry Marshall—WNEW.
2. Martin Block—WABC.
3. Alan Freed—WINS.
4. Jack Lacy—WINS.
5. Brad Phillips—WINS.
6. Al Collins—WRCA.
7. Art Ford—WNEW.

7a. Klavin & Finch—WNEW.

8. Norm Prescott—WNEW.

8a. Paul Brenner—WAAT.

9. Bill Williams—WNEW.
10. Bill Silbert—WMGM.

10a. Gallagher & O'Brien—WMCA.

Personals Hypo Sales Of U.S. Names in Aussie

Sydney, March 29.

Visits here of topline platter stars like Johnnie Ray, Frankie Laine, Frank Sinatra and Nat (King) Cole are sharply spurting disk sales.

Cole's sales via the Capitol label have been increased better than 100% since he came here to take a quick swing around Gordon and Reyes' stadium circuit. During the three months through December last year, Cole sold some 26,000 records here but this was boosted to 55,000 during the months of January and February this year, which include his 10-day visit in January.

New Jukebox Music Licensing Outfit Gets OK at MOA Convention in Chi As Answer to Copyright Act Changes

Chicago, March 29.

Delegates to the Music Operators of America convention here voted unanimously today (Tues.) to enter into 99-year tax-free agreement with National Jukebox Music, Inc., newly formed performing rights society. Under terms of agreement, music operators will be able to use NJM copyrighted tunes without paying royalties or licensing fees for period of 99 years, regardless of the outcome of pending congressional action to change existing copyright laws. Action came after minimum of discussion following presentation of NJM plan by Barney Young, head of the fledgling organization.

Mitch Miller, Columbia Records artists & repertoire chief, during discussion asked Young how he proposed to attract songwriting talent to the newly formed NJM. George Miller, MOA prexy, answered: "With the potential we have in 11,000 operators and 500,000 automatic phonographs, we can do anything."

NJM outfit is getting a big buildup among the coin machine delegates attending the three-day conclave as a device to put MOA in a better bargaining position vis-a-vis the American Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers and Broadcast Music Inc. should changes in copyright legislature open up jukeboxes to performance fees.

National Jukebox Music Inc. has released its first record, "Daddy From Georgia Way," flipped with "Early, Early, Early in the Morning," song by Bob Chester. Thirty thousand copies of the disk, Rugby, Anyone?

It's been said that in England everything stops for tea—but for E. R. (Ted) Lewis, British Decca topper, everything stops for rugby. Lewis, who's been in the U. S. for the past couple of weeks looking over the activities of his London Records subsid as well as negotiating new distribution deals, cancelled all appointments last Thursday to hop a plane to Paris to see the rugby match between France and Wales.

Lewis was back in New York Monday (28) to resume his wax activities.

U.S. Pubs Get $50,000 Divvy From Nip Deal

U. S. publishers' deal with JASRAC (Japanese Society of Rights of Authors & Composers) for payment of disk royalties, is starting to yield substantial dividends. JASRAC will make its biggest payment to date to Harry Fox, publishers' agent and trustee, in April when it will remit $50,000 to the U. S. This is the fifth and biggest, by far, of the payments made by JASRAC.

Deal with JASRAC was made a couple of years ago by attorney Julian T. Abeles (& Bernstein) who went to Japan in behalf of Fox. Widespread popularity of U. S. tunes in Japan cued the need for a pact with Japanese diskeries to pay mechanical royalties. Prior to this deal, there were haphazard attempts to collect coin from the Nippon diskers.

JASRAC is the Japanese equivalent of ASCAP in the U.S. and collects performance fees for its members. Under its deal with Abeles, the Japanese society agreed to supervise collection of mechanical royalties as well for U. S. publishers.

BUDDY ROBBINS TO S-B TO HEAD COL MUSIC CO.

Buddy Robbins has moved to Shapiro-Bernstein to take over the general professional manager's spot of the Columbia Pictures music firm. Pubbery starts operation with "Prize of Gold," tune written by Ned Washington and Lester Lee, for the pic of the same name.

Robbins previously had been music plugger for United Artists. At one time he also operated his own publishing firm.

Decca Bows Longplay Subscription Service

In a move to give longplay disk coverage to marginal stations who do not get the cuffo service, Decca Records has inaugurated a paid LP subscription service for radio outlets. Several other major labels, such as RCA Victor and Columbia, have similar services.

Under the Decca plan, a station will get 60 pop LPs a year for $50 annually or 50 classical LP for the same price. Both services together will cost the station $85. Decca has a parallel plan for single pop disks to stations which are not included on the free list.

Harry Fox Makes Unique Deal With Mail Order Co. for Publisher Coin

Harry Fox, publishers' agent and trustee, has made a unique deal with a New Jersey mail order operation, headed by Joseph J. Pinkus, under which the latter agrees to assume the responsibility for the payment of disk royalties. Julian T. Abeles (& Bernstein), attorney for Fox, arranged the pact in addition to a cash payment of over $10,000 to cover past royalties that were due to publishers represented by Fox.

Previous to the settlement, Pinkus disclaimed responsibility for the royalties, contending that he was the purchaser of disks made by other manufacturers. Fox, however, claimed that Pinkus had set up the suppliers, such as the Air Check and Marlil disk labels, and even though the latter companies went out of business, Pinkus was held to be liable for the payment of the song royalties. The settlement of the past royalty debt was made on the basis of sales estimated from the amount of advertising Pinkus had done. Fox's accountants could not track down the amount of actual platter sales.

Pinkus, who conducts a multiple mail-order operation, selling everything from girdles to disks, advertises extensively on local radi outlets across the country.

Major Records Sez You Can't Mispell It Majar

Majar Records, indie disk company in the pop ficld, has been enjoined from using that name by N. Y. State Supreme Court Justice Oven McGivern. Decision was in favor of Thomas J. Valentino, who has been marketing sound effects and sacred music disks under the name of Major Records for the past 15 years.

The Majar label broke into the pop bestseller lists last ycar with Denise Lor's "If I Give My Heart To You."

N.Y. Solons OK Anti-Piracy Bill

Albany, March 29.

The Assembly unanimously passed the Wilson-Condon bill last week, amending the penal law to make it a misdemeanor for any person or company to copy a phonograph record for sale or profit. Bill goes to Gov. Harriman's desk for signing.

Assemblyman Malcolm Wilson, Yonkers Republican, explained that the measure would help to halt "bootleg recordings," which adversely affect legitimate business, royalties and payments to unions. 'Name" vocalists and band leaders are among those who have endorsed the bill. Senator William F. Condon, Yonkers Republican, sponsored the companion bill in the State Senate been sold to music operators so far. NJM is in the process of establishing a copyright stockpile and envisions a growth which will pressed by Columbia Records, have enable the newborn organization to effectively oppose ASCAP and BMI.

The newly organized performance rights group is also seeking broadcast outlets for its songs and has circularized some 4,000 radio stations proposing a swap of tax-free licensing to the stations in return for exploitation of its music.

There was some sentiment at the convention that action on the proposed NJM setup should be held up until the outcome of pending Congressional action to revise the copyright laws is decided. Sidney Levine, the MOA's attorney, sounded the keynote of the convention by voicing unalterable opposition to two bills introduced in congress to amend the 1909 copyright act now in effect.

First, Senate Bill 590, introduced by Senator Harley Kilgore, would change the 1909 law by deleting that portion of the law which exempts coin-operated music machines from payment of performance rights. The second, sponsored by Representative Frank Thompson Jr. in the House, would result in appointment of a Presidential fact-finding commission to consider complete revision of the 1909 copyright law.

Levine maintained the 1909 Copyright Act exemption applying to coin-operated machines is justified and based on the fact that such machines are an exploitation medium for songs. He stated further that the existing copyright societies were already receiving a mechanical royalty from the record companies. Levine also opined that passage of the proposed legislation, which would in effect grant ASCAP and BMI the right to tax individual operators, would freeze out the small publishers, authors and record companies as well as destroy the jukebox industry.

The MOA attorney stated that the large record companies were also opposed to the possibility of a performance rights tax on the individual music operator. He asked for the delegates' wholehearted support for NJM, the new copyright society.

MOA prexy George A. Miller reiterated the MOA's view that jukebox plays were not public performances and therefore should continue to benefit from the copyright exemptions contained in the 1909 law.

A motion, introduced by Albert Denver, co-chairman of the convention and head of the New York operators group, voicing the delegate's opposition to both bills currently being considered in Congress and to any other legislation proposed to change the existing copyright law, was carried almost unanimously by the convention delegates.

Jolt Juarez Jukes

Juarez, Mexico, March 29.

All jukeboxes in Juarez were silenced by Mayor Pedro N. Garcia of Juarez last week.

Unions representing musicians and singers had demanded that mechanical music be outlawed. According to unions, the jukeboxes replaced live musicians and set back culture.

MILLS' DISK OPERATION STYMIED BY MONICKER

Hollywood, March 29.

Launching of Mills Music's new disk subsid, American Records, has been delayed until next week due to the fact that the labels monicker has several prior claimants. Columbia Records, for one, notified Mills that it had retained the rights to "American" when it originally switched from that name to Columbia.

Irving Mills, who's running the disk operation, said the delay would be temporary and a new name would be quickly adopted. Mills' legal staff is currently studying clearances on a new name for the disk operation.

BG Clicks in Weekend Dates at Basin Street

Benny Goodman wound up a series of five weekend jazz concerts at Basin Street, New York jazz nitery, Saturday (26), drawing more than 15,000 payees for the 10 dates. Goodman formed a septet especially for the Basin Street stands, which he played Friday and Saturday nights. Gene Krupa and his trio go in next weekend (1-2).

On April 7, Louis Armstrong moves in to resume the spot's regular policy.

Bert Parks' Wax Bow

Bert Parks, emcee of the ABC-TV show, "Stop The Music," is making his bow on wax via the indie Majar label.

His first assigned tune is "Don't Do Anything I Wouldn't Do."

Inside Stuff—Music

Possibility that the small indie jazz companies may be over extending themselves in an effort to prevent the majors from signing up jazz talent, is indicated in a current Coast situation. One small jazz company has so many jazz men under exclusive contract that it is unable to meet the required number of recording dates on all of them. In order to hold its star, it had to invest in an expensive big band date recently and it was forced to offer one of its lesser artists to a competitive label for a session in order to meet the required number of releases for his contract. The major labels can circumvent this by recording and putting masters on ice indefintely. Most small labels operate close to the margin and cannot build up this kind of inventory.

Kitty Kallen, Decca Records songstress, will get the benefit of two big video shows to kick off her new platter, "Kitty Who?" and "By Bayou Bay." She will do both sides on the CBS-TV Easter Seal show, to be emceed by Jack Benny, and will also do them on the Colgate Comedy Hour on NBC-TV on Sunday (3). Miss Kallen is donating the royalties of the first 100,000 sales of the disk to the Crippled Children's Society.

MGM Records is getting into the baseball act with a waxed recitation of Ernest L. Thayer's "Casey At the Bat" by the late Lionel Barrymore. Album will be tied in with the nation's Salute to Baseball Week and will be aired on NBC's "Weekend News" show Sunday (3).

Bandleader Bobby Sherwood's versatility gets a fully showcasing on Coral's upcoming release of his versions of "Yes, Indeed" and "Brown Eyes, Why Are You Blue." Disk features Sherwood playing all the instruments in the orch as well as all the vocal parts. He also conducts.

Copy Market Widening With New Code System for Electric Organ

Music publishers, eyeing the increasing sales of electronic organs as a new potential copy market, have finally solved a problem that has stemmed from the lack of standardization among the various organ manufacturers. Each of the 16 organ manufacturers has its copyright language for its registrations or "stops," with the result that publisher would have had to print 16 different arrangements of each tune to cover the field.

Publisher George Goodwin, who runs the Tune-Dex card-file operation, came up recently with the Song Dex Organmaster Code which solves the problem. Top publishers have now been adopting the code for their sheet music. Irving Berlin Music, Music Publishers Holding Corp., Famous Music and Hill & Range were the first pubs to use the system.

Goodwin, in consultation with several leading organists, narrowed down all the possible registration combinations to a basic 75, which would enable any organist to register any type of music quickly. By means of Goodwin's code numbers, the owner of any organ refers to the number on his sheet music, in order to find out what stops to use. The organ code takes its place on sheet music along with ukelele charts and chord symbols.

Goodwin is getting $1 for each code sold to buyers of organs, with the publisher getting the service cuffo. At the present time, there are about 175,000 organs in the homes with $50,000 being added annually.

Code system is a boon for the organ manufacturers as well as the publishers, since a longstanding gripe of organ purchasers that pop music was not available has now been removed.

PRADO MAMBO TO TOP OF RCA'S DISK SELLERS

Perez Prado and his mambo crew are currently cooking with RCA Victor's topselling disk, "Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White." Platter has topped the Victor roster for the past four weeks and is heading to become the year's biggest instrumental on the Victor label, with over 500,000 in sales.

Prado meantime has picked up an opportune booking at New York's Birdland jazz spot, starting April 7.

Berlin Enjoys Court Act In Song Infringe Claim

Irving Berlin delayed his scheduled trip to Bermuda this week to make a personal appearance in N. Y. Federal Court Monday (28), where he was being sued for allegedly infringing on another songwriter's tune. Suit was brought by Alfred L. Smith, who charged before Judge Martin M. Frank that Berlin had based his showtune, "You're Just in Love," from "Call Me Madam," on Smith's song, "I Fell in Love."

Smith demonstrated his song in court, singing the lyrics from the witness chair and then later playing it on a piano before the judge's bench. Although apparently enjoying Smith's rendition, Berlin flatly denied Smith's allegations. Latter charged that Berlin and his music firm, Berlin Music, had access to the Smith tune and "copied the music," calling it "You're Just in Love." Plaintiff asks for an injunction and an accounting of profits arising from the infringement.

Philco Sets Cuffo Juve Hop at H'wood Palladium

Hollywood, March 29.

The Philco Corp. is sponsoring the "Phonorama Hop" for teenagers April 1 at the Palladium. Ballroom is being rented for occasion.

Johnny Desmond, who planed in Sunday (27) to sing the "High and the Mighty" at the Academy Awards (Wed.), will be the featured vocalist at the cuffo kids' hop. He's sponsored on radio by Philco.

COLUMBIA OPENS BIG PUSH FOR P'KGED GOODS

Columbia Records kicked off an all-out promotion for its pop album line Monday (28). Drive, which is being pitched on the dealer level, will run for two months.

The pop push is pegged on Col's CL 500 line and will stress the flock of new sets due for release during the drive period. Among the artists up for the special pop album hypo are Mechel Legrand, Arthur Godfrey, Turk Murphy, Les Brown, Victor Borge and Liberace.

Col is offering a barrage of material, flyers, streamers, special order blanks as well as special dealer and distributor contests to get the promotion moving.

Diskery also is gearing a hefty promotion barrage for the upcoming tour of the New York Philharmonic Symphony. It's the first time in 34 years that the N.Y. Philharmonic will tour the U.S. and Col has prepped a special folio for distribs to tie-in with the orch when it hits their territory. The folio includes a special 10-inch LP made by Jim Fassett, music commentator of the Philharmonic which can be used as a 15-minute radio show in advance of the orch's appearance.

Progressive Jazz Eyes Quarter-Tone Piano As The New Sound in Music

If Leonard Levinson has his way, the new sound in music will be the quarter-tone piano. Levinson, radio-tele scripter, currently is peddling a demo platter of the quarter-tone piano cut by Hans Barth, who created the new sound more than 25 years ago.

The quarter-tone piano, which consists of an upper and lower keyboard, has a progressive music quality. (Pianos today are fixed to the half-tone scale.) Top enthusiasm for the new sound has been coming from the progressive jazz field. Such modernists as Shorty Rogers, Sauter-Finegan and Stan Kenton already have expressed interest in the Barth technique.

Levinson was first exposed to the quarter-tone when he covered a Barth concert on the Coast as a Hollywood VARIETY staffer in the early 1930s. It was not until a few months ago, however, that he decided to promote the quarter-tone. Barth came up from Florida to cut the platter, which includes original compositions as well as a Gershwin Prelude.

The first Barth concert demonstration of the quarter-tone was billed as "The Piano of Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." According to Levinson, "Tomorrow" is here.

LOMBARDO SCHEDULES 2-MONTH CONCERT TREK

Guy Lombardo and his orch will exit from their regular balliwick at the Hotel Roosevelt, N. Y., Grill Room early in April, to start a two-month concert tour under Music Corp. of America auspices. It's been an annual cross-country trek for Lombardo, who will carry several vaude acts with the band.

Opening date is at Jackson, Miss., April 9. On successive nights, Lombardo will hit towns in Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, Iowa and Illinois. He will wind up the tour late in May in time to supervise this year's production of "Arabian Nights," which he will again present at Jones Beach, L. I., this summer.

Decca Repacts Polka Leader to Longtermer

Whoopie John Wilfhart, polka bandleader, has been repacted by Decca to another longterm deal. He has been with the label since 1938 and has been one of the consistent sellers in the polka market, particularly in the midwest.

Leonard Joy negotiated the deal for Decca.

Archie Bleyer Gives A&R Formula For Hits: Get Your Own Record Shop

The recording men will have to start looking for new sources of information on the public's song tastes if Archie Bleyer, Cadence Records topper, hits paydirt with his Bill Hayes' release of "The Berry Tree." While the other diskers have been relying on their fleet men and assorted tipsters for info on new material, Bleyer has been keeping a sharp ear to the requests coming in to his record shop in Hempstead, L. I. The shop, according to Bleyer, has been one of the top factors in making Cadence one of the hottest indie labels around today because it puts him right on top of what the kids want.

Bleyer was the first disker to get wind of the growing call for the "Ballad of Davy Crockett" after it had been aired on the Walt Disney ABC-TV stanza. Calls for a waxing of the tune began coming into his shop and after Bleyer found that there were etchings of the song available, he rushed a Hayes' slice into the market. The major labels hopped on the "Crockett" bandwagon soon after, but Cadence had the lead and the platter is now nearing the 1,000,000 disk sales mark.

Bleyer now is looking for a repeat with "The Berry Tree." Tune, from the Metro pic, "Many Rivers To Cross," is the Miller (Big Three) Music catalog but the pub let it lie dormant. In the past few weeks, however, since the pic began touring the nabe house in Long Island, Bleyer's shop has been getting calls for a recording of the tune. When Bleyer discovered from Miller that no diskery had cut the song, he rush-pressed a Hayes' waxing and Miller is going all out to push it to the top. Tune was written for the pic by Saul Chaplin.

Cadence also gets another ear to the wax market whims via Sam Clark, Bleyer's pard in the diskery. Clark operates a disk distributing outfit in Boston and continually keeps in close touch with the local dealers as to what tunes and platters are getting the biggest call.

TOP JAZZ NAMES SET MEMORIAL FOR PARKER

In a memorial concert to the late Charlie (Yardbird) Parker, the modern alto saxist who died this month, a group of top jazz names are cuffoing their services at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., Saturday night (2). All proceeds from the concert will be used to provide for the education and welfare of Parker's two children. Hazel Scott, Dizzy Gillespie, Charles Mingus, Mary Lou Williams and William Duffy are heads of the fund.

Boxes are being sold at $100. Among the performers will be Kenny Clarke, Clifford Brown, Max Roach, Lucky Thompson, Lee Konitz, Sonny Stitt, Charlie Shavers, Tony Scott and Red Allen.

Philly's Tribute to 'The Bird'

Philadelphia, March 29.

A marathon jazz memorial for the benefit of the family of the late Charles (Yardbird) Parker, founder of the modern "bop" school, was held yesterday at the Blue Note, North Philly musical bar.

Owner Jack Fields staged the memorial, the proceeds of which are to be turned over to the trust fund set up for Parker's two children. Appearing in the more than 12 hours of continuous jazz were Ray Bryant, Dizzy Gillespie, Ben Webster, Stan Getz, Art Blakey, Coleman Hawkins, Chet Baker, J. J. Johnson, Kenny Durham, Billie Holiday, Jo Jones, Horace Silvers, Mary Lou Williams, Mary Ann McCall, Phelonius Monk, Leonard Feather and Hazel Scott.

Philadelphia deejays manned the contribution boxes, working in hourly shifts.

NORMAN BROOKS TO X

Whatever happened to Norman Brooks? He's now joined Label X and will cut a group of tunes under X's a&r chief Jimmy Hilliard on the Coast later this week.

Brooks was an overnight click on disks a couple of years ago with his "Hello, Sunshine" slice for Zodiac which sounded like a takeoff on the late Al Jolson. He was unable to repeat after that initial hit.

VARIETY Scoreboard OF TOP TALENT AND TUNES

Compiled from Statistical Reports of Distribution Encompassing the Three Major Outlets

Coin Machines Retail Disks Retail Sheet Music

as Published in the Current Issue

NOTE: The current comparative sales strength of the Artists and Tunes listed hereunder is arrived at under a statistical system comprising each of the three major sales outlets enumerated above. These findings are correlated with data from wider sources, which are exclusive with VARIETY. The positions resulting from these findings denote the OVERALL IMPACT developed from the ratio of points scored, two ways in the case of talent (coin machines, retail disks) and three ways in the case of tunes (coin machines, retail disks and retail sheet music).

VARIETY DISK JOCKEY POLL

This compilation is designed to indicate those records rising in popularity as well as those on top. Ratings are computed on the basis of ten points for a No. 1 mention, nine for a No. 2, and so on down to one point. Wherever possible, only records with two or more mentions are listed, even though their total points are less in some cases than those which receive only one mention. Cities and jockeys will vary from week to week to present a comprehensive picture of all sectors of the country regionally.

Radio, Disk Jocks Launch

getting together to "censor" the music that their disk jockeys play. KITE is already plugging itself as a "clean music" station and other outlets are following its lead.

Assisting KITE in its plan to place a voluntary ban on recorded smut is the San Antonio Youth Study Commission. Lists of objectional records drawn by chairman Stephen Catalini, police juvenile chief G. E. Matheny and Judge Raymond Gerhardt will be honored by virtually all local radio stations.

Largest number of disk casualties will fall in the r&b category. In addition, pop songs will be hit if they're too loaded. These include "Teach Me Tonight" and "Love For Sale."

Important thing, local radio men say, is that the industry, itself, is moving to keep itself free from censorship on the music it plays before prim listeners set up a commotion for official censorship. There is also a move to get the youth commission to contact jukebox operators and record stores to see that records don't go the way of comic books.

All three local Spanish language outlets are also joining in the crusade to clean up records played on their stations.

L.A. Effort a Dud

Hollywood, March 29.

Zeke Manners, KFWB disk jock who broke into print recently, after taking a verbal swing at Peter Potter's anti-stand on r&b records, is being shunned in the issue by the 70 other deejays working this area.

Manners, who fired the opening shot that set off a temporary deejay war, last week sent out letters to all fellow wax-whirlers requesting they meet at a designated time and place to "discuss the situation." Manner's letter stated, "It is my idea that the poor material can be weeded out and discarded, thus leaving a place for good r&b records which could be broadcast for the pleasure of those who enjoy this type of music."

According to last reports, the KFWB disk jock has received no replies confirming their presence at the meeting.

The stations, of course, immediately and arbitrarily have ruled out the public playing of some r&b disks. Others getting played have run afoul much criticism for "offensiveness." In other instances various deejays do not play some r&b material that their biscuit-brothers do. Manners' suggestion here, however, is the first that deejays censor records as a body.

DEEP SOUTH JOCKEYS JUNK 50% OF R&B WAX

Mobile, March 29.

Between 40 and 50% of r.&b. disks submitted make the trash basket. That's according to two of Mobile's leading disk jocks. "Filth in both title and words makes their destruction a must," says Happy Wainwright, "Night Prowler" on Station WKRG, Mobile's only all-night spinner. "Requests for the r.&b. platters comprise 40% of the please pleas that come in. Three months ago they were 10%, two months ago 20%, and last month about 30%. Today they hit 40%.

Jimmy Morris, who has the "Late Date" program on the same station. He reports about half the requests on his 9:30 to midnight program six days a week are for r.&b. "Any time a trend swamps you like these requests have, you can figure that the peak is being hit, and by the middle of summer they should be headed for the skids," says Morris. "Unfortunately, most of the phoned requests come from teenagers, many of whom buy records or hear them somewhere else besides radio.

A few stations in the New Orleans area report heavy requests for r&b disks, mostly from juke joints and diners after midnight.

Only in Birmingham are the requests falling off somewhat for the r&b stuff. This may be due to all-station effort to play up music for square dancing, getting a big play in the Pittsburgh of the South, and therapeutically (but not so labeled) as an antidote for the rock 'n roll blares. Even iron-lunged dance callers of "do-si-do" fame cannot holler over an r&b yelper, plus the boiler room accompaniment.

Bridgeport Police Ban Rock 'n' Rollers After Juve Brawls

Bridgeport, March 29.

The Bridgeport cops, for one, don't like the rock 'n rollers, John A. Lyddy, police superintendent, has barred permits for rock 'n' roll teenage bashes until further notice.

Lyddy explained that the move was made because the situation was getting out of hand and not on any specific request from any church or community group. The superintendent cited last week's brawl in New Haven where several youths were arrested in a fracas at a rhythm & blues dance.

In New Haven, police chief Francis V. McManus, also clamped a ban on the rock 'n' roll festivals.

Marge Raeburn Drops Carbons for Own Pipes

Hollywood, March 29.

Marge Raeburn, who under the billing of Peggy Lawrence imitates name singers' stylings in turning out disks for Music Masters, cut-price label, has waxed the Jay Livingston and Ray Evans tune, "Alley Oop," under her real monicker.

Tunesmiths heard a recording of her cut of "If I Give My Heart to You," wherein she imitated a styling on a major label best seller, and were impressed. Decca, meanwhile, has purchased the masters and simultaneously pacted songstress to a recording pact.

Chi Catholics

p.c. Win Jolly, WGN-TV program chief Jay Faraghan, music clearance director Claire Dowell, publicity topper Jim Hanlon and deejays Saxie Dowell, Buddy Black and Jim Lounsbury.

Except that they point up the growing awareness of the problems posed by the leftfield lyrics, the teenage letters aren't considered too serious by the various station officialdoms. Fact that the beefs follow the blunderbuss approach without pinpointing any particular culprits pretty much removes the sting as far as any invidual station is concerned.

In some instances the letters are being sent to deejays who never play pop stuff, let alone rhythm & blues. WMAQ's Charles (Gus) Chan, who specializes in south of the border music exclusively and who has taken off personally on blue tinged stuff, received some 25 warning notes last week. WGN reports that among the 700 letters it has received were several for Fred Reynolds, its former jazz specialist who departed Chi for an eastern assignment some two months ago.

At WIND, the top rated 24-hour deejay outlet where they estimate they have received some 1,000 letters, program chief Leslie Atlass Jr., freely admits he's concerned with the problem of freewheeling lyrics. But he suggests there are no easy pat solutions. Unless a tune is patently smutty, and thus immediately rejected, it's often a matter of how much is "read into" the ditty by the listener. And he points out there are other factors such as the stature of the performer or the composer to be weighed.

Tom Davis, manager of WAAF where the 4,000 letters were received, minced no words in stating his policy. "We have never played smut; and we never will."

Local deejay Howard Miller also was sharply criticized in Asca News, local organ of the Chicago Inter-Student Catholic Action Organization, for playing allegedly unsuitable disks.

COLUMBIA 'SLIPS' ON 'PHARAOHS' ISSUE DATE

Although Columbia Records jumped the release date on "Land of the Pharaohs," the Warner Bros. music firms won't press any action because label immediately notified the deejays that platter was shipped "accidentally" and to withhold air-play until the restriction is lifted.

Tune, which was cut for Col by Percy Faith, was written for the WB pic of the same title by Dimitri Tiomkin. The Music Publishing Holding Corp., WB's publishing operation, has restricted the tune until April 9.

THE GREATEST NAME IN ENTERTAINMENT

Caribbean Circuit Is in the Making; Dominicans Go After Yanqui Show Biz

The Dominican Republic is going after Yanqui show biz, with the result that a Caribbean circuit is in the making. Arismende Trujillo, director of a Voz Dominicana, a cultural center in Cuidad Trujillo, has made a deal with Milton Lehr, producer of the shows at the Escambron Beach Hotel, San Juan, P.R., to buy the floorshows from the Puerto Rican spot. Layout, presently at the Escambron, goes into La Voz on April 9 for an extended stay.

At the same time, the Escambron will get a show which will include La Petite Ballet, Roulettes and Seiler & Seabold. The groups in both spots will do one show weekly on video, both to be produced by Lehr.

Purchase of the Escambron show by the Dominicans marks the first show biz export from Puerto Rico during the tenure of Operation Bootstrap, the self-help program initiated by Gov. Luis Muno-Marin. Lehr, who came to New York last week to confer his booker, Leon Newman, on setting up talent for the new Escambron show, has been named the official advisor on entertainment to the Government.

Puerto Rico has always imported the bulk of its entertainment needs from the mainland. The deal with the Dominican Republic marks the first export of a complete unit from the island.

Lehr envisions a complete circuit of shows in the Caribbean and South American areas. There's always been a natural hunger for U. S. talent in these parts. Brazil used to be the major importer of U. S. performers, but since the casinos were forced to close, there has been little activity there. However, Lehr feels that the market for packaged shows can be revived even without the gambling and will survey the setup in that area.

Arismende Trujillo, brother of Gen. Rafael Trujillo, president of the Dominican Republic, is reportedly interested in enlarging show biz activities in that country as a lure for American tourists. The first U. S. show in La Voz will comprise Skippy, Great Nazarro, Juan Luis & Leonor, Chino & Maria, Trio San Juan and a line.

Nanci Crompton Booked On South African Tour

London, March 22.

After finishing her two weeks at the Savoy Hotel, where she opened March 7, Nanci Crompton has been booked by Lew & Leslie Grade for an eight-week tour in South Africa for the Schlesingers.

Dancer is due to open at Her Majesty's Theatre, Johannesburg, March 25, and then Cape Town, after which she plays the Moulin Rouge, Paris, month of June.

Grades are also expected to close deal with Val Parnell and Bernard Delfont for Miss Crompton to be featured in the Norman Wisdom revue at the London Palladium, which is due to open early August.

Camp Shows As Clearing House for Free Talent

USO-Camp Shows has been named the clearing house for talent who volunteer to entertain troops for free. Camp Shows generally gets a lot of offers around the summer. Many are from college instrumental and drama groups, others are from dance organizations. Applicants are carefully screened for entertainment values before being accepted. Most of the volunteers are used to augment the entertainment schedule in areas which get very little in the way of regular USO troupes.

However, choral groups need not apply, since the problems of messing and billeting them are greater than their intrinsic value to the service. As a matter of fact, the Army and Air Force are producing a very high grade of glee club as part of their own recreational service. A contest among Army glee clubs is currently being judged, via tapes, in Washington.

Philadelphia Met Story: From Opera to Sports To a Religioso Center

Philadelphia, March 29.

The Met, the former Metropolitan Opera House built in 1908 by the late Oscar Hammerstein, has been purchased by a national evangelistic group as a headquarters. The $1,000,000 showplace, which played opera until as late as 1920, later was a Shrine headquarters and then played films, vaude and finally became a sports arena.

Jimmy Toppi, sports promoter, will continue to operate the building until June, and turn it over to the purchasers, the Rev. Thea Felix Jones, his wife, Willie Mae Jones, and the Rev. Jack Coe. Toppi, who has owned the Met since 1944, received $250,000 for the 5,000-seat structure. It will be known as the Philadelphia Evangelistic Center.

ANN SOTHERN'S 100G IN VEGAS FOUR-WEEKER

Hollywood, March 29.

Ann Sothern's Vincent Productions will stage a four-week show at the New Frontier Hotel here, starting July 11. Contract is one of the heaviest for a single engagement at a nitery. Miss Sothern, it's reported, will get $100,000 on her own for the four weeks, and in addition, Vincent Productions will get additional coin for the rest of the show.

Already set in the package are Bambi Lynn & Rod Alexander and comic Bob Williams. Miss Sothern will do a medley of songs from "Lady in the Dark," in which television show she appeared, and will intro the Latin terp Cha-Cha-Cha in that area.

$5,000,000 Royal Nevada Preps April 19 Vegas Bow

Las Vegas, March 29.

Latest hotel opener will be the Royal Nevada, which will swing wide the doors of its reported $5,000,000 structure on April 19. Helen Traubel is set to headline the opening show. Program also will include comic Dave Barry.

Dances are being staged by George Tapps and Jerry Fielding is conducting the Royal Nevada orch.

Gipsy Markoff's First Lisbon Date Since Crash

Paris, March 29.

Gipsy Markoff will play her first engagement in Portugal since the Lisbon Clipper Crash of 1943 in which she was injured. She's been set for the Casino de Estoril, Lisbon, for 10 days starting April 8. She's currently appearing at Ciro's, Paris.

Between engagements, Miss Markoff is working on her autobiography tentatively entitled "Indestructible Gipsy." The Lisbon Clipper crash which occurred on the Tagus River, also injured Jane Froman, Lorraine Rognan and Yvette, and killed Roy Rognan and Tamara. Damage case is still in the U. S. courts.

Benefit Setup Outside N.Y., Chi, Coast May Cue Downbeat on Free Shows

Question of benefits is again getting a lot of attention these days. Feeling is that under the present setup of the Theatre Authority, benefits are working against charities located outside of New York, Chicago and Hollywood. Those holding big events under charitable auspices in those cities are generally forced to pay premium club date scales for the events. Those held in the three metropolitan centres, where there's a big concentration of talent, can hold them comparatively cheaply by paying the 15% TA bite.

One example is seen in the benefit to be held in Boston May 5 for the Jewish Memorial Hospital. This institution will pay a heavy scale for acts which so far include Buddy Hackett, Dick Shawn, Richard Tucker and Chiquita & Johnson.

Benefits in other cities, including Philadelphia, Baltimore and Atlantic City, face the same situation. In season, Miami Beach is able to hold a sizable benefit with free talent. However, future gratis showings will be difficult because of the beef put up by Florida nitery operators who pledged not to donate talent appearing in their spots unless the affair was held in a nitery.

There is little the out-of-town organizations can do about the situation, but the fact that charitable organizations outside of New York can afford to pay top prices for acts, may ultimately cause another re-evaluation of the benefit system. Acts who have been offered high prices for out-of-town benefits are starting to rebel at the gratis work or jobs at token payments.

The system whereby acts refund their stipened to the charity frequently works out to the detriment of the talent. Under strict interpretation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue regulations, the earnings which are later refunded must be listed as income, and the rebate is part of the allowable 15% to charities. Of course, the age-old complaint that everyone gets paid but the actor still holds true in the big-city gratis shindigs. However, if the talent can get paid for similar work out of town, then it's logical that they should be paid for work for charities homebased in New York.

See Upped Show Budget As Cleve.'s Hollenden Goes to Detroit Group

Cleveland, March 29.

Hotel Hollenden's Vogue Room, one of Cleveland's major niteries, is likely to have its entertainment budget increased considerably by new operators who took over the hotel's lease last week. It was acquired by International Hotels Corp. of Detroit, which bought out the stock of a Cleveland syndicate for a reported price of $1,300,000.

Robert Joyce will remain as managing director, with complete jurisdiction over the Vogue Room. It's rumored that new lessees aim to expand club's floor shows, always a strong drawing-card for convention trade. Combine that sold out consisted of 13 Clevelanders, one of whom was Meyer B. Fine, film exhibitor. Although the new operators leased the Hollenden for 13 years, it still is owned by Detroit's Ben Tobin, who in 1951 bought the Empire State Bldg. in New York with a group.

EXOTIC DANCERS SWARM ALL OVER MPLS. CAFES

Minneapolis, March 29.

After being almost completely in the discard for a considerable period, exotic dancers are currently more in evidence in local loop niteries and theatre bars than ever before because of what the bistro owners declare to be a revivified public interest in and demand for them.

Four establishments have two or more such performers. Three other spots feature a single dancer.

One night club, Augie's, is using the dancers for the first time after, he says, he had vowed "there'd never be a stripper in my joint." Now, he explains, the popularity of "this sort of entertainment" finally has whipped him into line.

Flying-on-Skates 'Pan' For 1956 'Ice Capades'

Pittsburgh, March 29.

John H. Harris, producer of "Ice Capades," believes his 1956 edition will be the boxoffice blockbuster of them all. That's because he has already set a flying-on skates "Peter Pan" for his featured production number, and Harris figures the recent Mary Martin tv version was a multi-million-dollar trailer for next season's skating extravaganza.

"Peter Pan" will also be Donna Atwood's (Mrs. Harris) farewell appearance in "Ice Capades." The longtime star of the icer is retiring next summer and will settle down with the three small children, including five-year-old twin boys, in the new family home in Beverly Hills.

TRIXIE'S $5,000 ESTATE

Hollywood, March 29.

Trixie Friganza, who died Feb. 27, left an estate under $5,000.

This was disclosed when her will was filed for probate in Superior Court here.

Billy Daniels has been signed for the Beverly Hills Country Club, Newport, Ky., starting June 24 for two weeks.

U. S. Vauders Find Billy Graham Threat to Big Scot B.O. Take

By GORDON IRVING

Glasgow, March 29.

U. S. vaude acts, timing their annual pre-Easter invasion of Britain for openings at the Empire vaudery here, are still notching up top biz. But they've run into their strongest-yet counter-attraction, the $140,000 Billy Graham evangelical campaign.

Don Cornell, the Four Aces and Johnnie Ray are the vaude headliners in the 2,000-seater Empire, while Graham preaches to 14,000 nightly in the massive Kelvin Hall, a mile along Sauchiehall St., and charges 'em nothing.

Prelim reports suggest that the U. S. acts could have hit a better time to play Glasgow. On the other hand, many coachloads taking country customers to the religious meetings are killing two dogs with the same stone by allowing their passengers time in the city to hear both Billy Graham and, say, Johnnie Ray.

Top price for Ray, who opens Monday (4), is $1.35, while Graham is for free.

Cornell, with a highly pleasing song act that won praise from crix, hit the worst spot by timing his opening for the publicity-ridden preem of the Graham show March 21. Despite counter-claims on press space from the evangelical ensemble, he collected useful columns of space both picture and storywise via his ex-boxer gimmick.

Publicity Angle

The Four Aces, also making their United Kingdom bow, planed direct to Prestwick airport near here Sunday (27) and thus missed the usual publicity boost given to American acts who come straight to London and meet the press boys there. Switch in plans was necessitated by serious illness of one of their children.

George & Bert Bernard are another U. S. act who will meet the Graham counter-show during their vaude week here April 11.

Obviously many young customers are being attracted to the religious gatherings, which is tending to affect vaude biz in city generally. Extra matinees are, nevertheless, being set for the Johnnie Ray week, when prices will also be upped 50%.

Over 5,000 buses are being hired to bring people to see Graham. Latter's campaign is marked by highpowered publicity and massive poster displays. Eighty-three special trains will converge on the city during the six-week campaign, March 21-April 30.

Preacher is delivering sermons six nights each week, with two performances on Saturdays. Estimated that, by end of the six-week campaign over 500,000 will have spent coin in traveling to see and hear him.

Show biz is also hit through broadcast relays of his Kelvin Hall services to 38 Scot towns from north to south. He also has aid of gospel singer George Beverley Shea and of a choir of 1,000 voices.

FETEING PEARL BAILEY ON 20TH SHOW BIZ ANNI

Pearl Bailey will be feted at the Blue Angel, N. Y., Sunday (3) on her birthday and her 20th anni in show biz. She's slated to do a long turn on her own that evening. Miss Bailey's regular employment is in the current Broadway musical, "House of Flowers."

Among those slated to show that evening are Lena Horne, Gloria De Haven, Marlene Dietrich, Red Buttons, Juanita Hall, Dave Garroway, Truman Capote, Benny Goodman, Julie Oshins and Sherry Britton.

'Waters' 16G

"Dancing Waters" scored a heavy $16,000 for 10 days at the National Orange Festival, San Bernardino, Cal., which wound up Sunday (27). Fountain display had a uniform scale of 50c for adults and half that sum for children.

Show started off slowly, but built up a good momentum, with weekends bringing the greater portion of the admissions.

Ralston & Vincent Inc. has been chartered to conduct a business as theatrical agents in New York.

Leopoldi to Appear In N. Y. Borscht Belt

Vienna, March 22.

Hermann Leopoldi, vet cafe composer and pianist, got a bid from Louis S. de Pitt, owner of De Pitt's Mountain Lodge at Fleischmanns, N. Y., to guest during the summer season with his songstress, Helly Moslein.

De Pitt was in the Austrian capital to look over the new talent, and made the Leopoldi deal.

Philly Rendezvous Folding After 20 Year Run

Philadelphia, March 29.

The Rendezvous, Philly showcase for musical attractions and recording names, will shutter Saturday night (2) after two decades of operation. One of the town's more successful spots, the Rendezvous is closing down as the result of a realty deal in which owner Lee Guber sold both the Senator Hotel and the club to an undisclosed purchaser for $250,000.

The buildings will become part of an industrial expansion program in that area, the real estate brokers reported. Guber, who has run the club and hotel since 1946, said the furnishings and equipment were not included in the sale price.

Under Guber's regime, the Rendezvous was enlarged to its present capacity of 250 and introduced to local cafe-goers such new talent as Rosemary Clooney, Patti Page, the Four Aces, Ronnie Graham, Orson Bean and Sarah Vaughan. Regular attractions inincluded Louis Armstrong, George Shearing, Erroll Garner, Sidney Bechet, Muggsy Spanier and Jack Spanier and Jack Teagarden.

The closing show will find the valedictory delivered by John Carradine, with music from Teddie King and the Tony Luis Trio. Prior to Guber's occupancy, the Rendezvous was run for 10 years by Irwin Wolf and was the early stomping grounds of Jackie Miles, Lenny Kent and Alan Gale, and acts like Nat (King) Cole and Slim Gaillard.

Known as the Irving House in the late 19th century, the hotel catered primarily to show people and carnival personnel.

ELLA FITZGERALD SETS PACE WITH FRISCO DATE

San Francisco, March 29.

Ella Fitzgerald has signed to open at the Fairmont Hotel's Venetian Room April 5 for three weeks.

This is the first jazz act the hotel has ever booked, although it has been extremely successful in the past with Negro talent, such as Sammy Davis Jr., Lena Horne, the Mills Bros. and Nat (King) Cole.

This is Miss Fitzgerald's first booking of this type, and the success of it will not only determine her draw in similar places but also the possibility of other jazz stars playing the Venetian Room.

Mpls. Nitery Taking Fling at Name Bands

Minneapolis, March 29.

For the first time in many years a local nitery, the Flame, is having a fling at a name band policy. It has teed off currently with Charley Ventura and is dickering with other such outfits.

Bistro, which at one time played the biggest name acts in the business, also will book bigtime personalities to appear with the bands. Singer Anita O'Day has been added to the Ventura show this week. Underlined are clarinetist Buddy DeFranco, pianist Oscar Peterson and singers Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald and others of similar stature.

New 250G Ohio Arena

Lorain, O., March 29.

The $250,000 Lorain Arena on Lake Road, about one mile west of Lorain, has been unveiled, the largest structure of its kind in the community. The arena will offer roller skating, starting April 2, and will also be available for civic, public and sports events.

First booking was a three-day automobile show, March 25-27, by the Lorain Automobile Dealers Assn.

240G Lido Show Preps for Latinos

Paris, March 29.

Pierre-Louis Guerin and Rene Fraday are putting finishing touches on their "A Night at the Lido" show, which will tour South America starting this month. Mounted for theatre, this consists of the top numbers from the past Lido nitery specs and cost a solid 80,000,000 francs ($240,000). It will have a breakin run of one week here, and then heads for a four-month stint at the Opera House in Buenos Aires. Then it hits Rio de Janeiro, San Paolo, Mexico and winds in Cuba. U.S. show biz oglers are expected in Cuba, and show may go into a U.S. run if there are any right offers.

Grandiose show has 60 Bluebell Girls plus a bevy of specialized acts, with the emphasis on spectacle, gowning and dress. This is the first Guerin theatrical venture since the ll-fated "Plein Feu" (Full Fire), with Maurice Chovalier, at the Empire in 1952. Guerin goes along with the troupe to Argentina and then starts his talent trekking around the Continent with co-producer Rene Fraday. They will be looking for acts for their new Lido show, to bow in December, and also for the new addition to the Lido Syndicate, the Bal Tabarin, which is temporarily slated for a July opening.

Pitt's Twin Coaches Gets Real Break on Griffith

Pittsburgh, March 29.

Twin Coaches is getting a real break and a buy on Andy Griffith, who is pencilled in for the week of April 18. Joe Hiller, who books the big 1,200 theatre-restaurant 25 miles from the downtown section, originally had Griffith set for the Mae West show which comes in next week. But the date was pushed back to allow the entertainer to fill a better-paying commitment.

Griffith's manager later asked Hiller for another postponement, but he wouldn't budge and insisted on the 18th at the price fixed. That was right before Griffith starred on tv in the U. S. Steel Hour production of "No Time for Sergeants." The wide exposure tnd the raves for him immediately skyrocketed Griffith's salary.

Twin Coaches, however, gets him at the old pay, one-fourth of what they're asking and getting for Griffith now.

Herods Set for Summer Tour of Midwest Fairs

Glasgow, March 22.

Jat Herod, U. S. entertainer who made his British bow at the Empire vaudery here, is set to return to the States in June for a three-month tour of midwest fairs in Minnesota and Dakota. With his wife, Betty Bryant, he will star in their "Manhattan Cocktail" revue. Herod goes to the Coast for nitery dates in September, and is mulling a visit to Honolulu next January.

Mrs. Herod is daughter of Capt. Billy Bryant, w.k. showboat producer, now living at Point Pleasant, W. Va.

N.Y. AGVA Exec Bd. Bolts Over Goss Ouster

Majority of the New York branch executive committee of the American Guild of Variety Artists resigned Monday (28) en masse in protest over the ouster of Irving Goss, former N. Y. branch head of the performer union. This is the second protest made by N. Y. members on this issue. A previous meeting voted non-confidence in the national board, which had demanded and obtained the resignation. Prior to joining AGVA Goss was a consultant for various locals of the Teamsters Union.

Those who sent in the resignations were Jai Leta, Cy Reeves, Frank Stevens, Tommy Spencer, Phil Fara, Leon Fields, Asta Svenn, Paul Duke, Murray Davis and Paul Valentine.

Among the reasons advanced for the resignations was the failure by the Interim Committee and its various members to explain or give a report to the N. Y. executive committee and the N. Y. membership on the Goss ouster, but they did explain the reasons to the cast of the Radio City Music Hall, N. Y.

Statement as given to the committee also deplored the secrecy of the proceedings of the national board which dismissed Goss, along with national administrative secretary Jack Irving and resident counsel Henry Katz. The resigned members declared that there was a hostility between the union execs and the membership and their sole interest in participating in AGVA affairs was to create a strong and democratic union.

Cy Reeves, current at the Old Roumanian, N. Y., has been acting as the liaison between Goss and the resigned members of the N. Y. branch executive committee.

SEE HOODS WANTING IN ON SMALL DALLAS CLUBS

Dallas, March 29.

Police theorized that recent threats to suburban lounge operators, after two recent bombings of such clubs, might be attempts by underworld hoodlums to take over smaller niteries here. Three local taverns received telephoned threats last week from callers who wanted to "move in" or hire the live combo playing there.

Two roof bombings on March 18 damaged a pair of suburban lounges. Three persons at the bar were injured when a roof explosion sent debris into the This-Is-It Club, on Forest Ave. Same night three of the quartet, Preacher and His Deacons, were slightly injured in a roof blast at Jerry's Hangman Club, on Hampton Road. Quartet finished the night's work before seeking medical aid.

CAN. SPORTSMAN'S SHOW

The Canadian National Sportsman's Show, held at the Coliseum, Toronto, drew an estimated 69,000 attendance for nine days which ended March 19.

Event had a show which included Sharkey the Seal, Alexander Konyot, Atomics, as well as comedy divers, various diving, logrolling and water acts.

The talent agencies expect the Miami Beach hotels to become more important than niteries in the field of act buying. Although they are not likely to be as spectacular in shelling out top monies for the headliners as the night clubs currently are, they anticipate much stability, since the bulk of the names will be in the middle-bracketed field. They expect greater variations in price range and more performers to be used per season than the niteries ever thought possible.

This year, according to some agencies, the dollar volume of hotels compared with the niteries has been on approximately equal terms. However, they expect that the season just passed will be the last one in which there will be an equitable comparison between the Beach hotels and niteries.

The agencies feel that this turn of events is a healthy development for the offices as well as the talent. In order to maintain the triple-headliner policy in vogue in Miami Beach for the past few years, they have had to badger top names to work there, make enemies among bonifaces and zoom the price of nitery attendance so high as to become prohibitive to many. Also, the agencies and talent have been blamed for the demise of many niteries.

Recent developments in Florida indicate year-round operation for the resort. Hotels are booking far into the summer. The agencies have a considerable batch of bookings for the Florida hotels as far as August.

Whether nitery buying will ever be as big as it was in the past is now dubious, unless conditions change radically. Events of the past season indicate that the one-show nightly policy is here to stay. There just doesn't seem to be inclination to stay up late enough for a second show. With a one-show to pay off, the pileup policy of super names doesn't seem economically feasible. Hotels are also better equipped to take reverses in the entertainment rooms than are niteries. They have the room sales to make up any deficit, and nitery losses can be written off as part of the inn's exploitation.

The Fontainebleau is presently the exception in the hotels. They are shelling out such sums as $12,500 for Kay Starr and paid out a similar sum to Tony Martin. Their La Ronde Room seats 500. However, if that inn gets the bulk of the trade, then other hotels may have to fall in line. Thus the name buying bit may start all over again in the hotels, but the agencies say that it's not likely for many years to come.

BLOODLESS BULLFIGHTS FOR AMERICAN MARKET?

The American market will be probed for a bullfight potential. Jose Rosa Rodrigues, Portuguese sportsman, plans to import a batch of bulls and horses for bloodless bullfights. Entire process is called a tourada. The first event is planned for the summer. In second part, there will be some bull wrestling.

The influx of Spanish-speaking peoples, Rodrigues believes, makes the venture feasible. About 100 bulls and 20 horses will be imported for the series.

Langdon's Blades Show Set for London June 16

London, March 29.

Claude Langdon's new blades show, tentatively titled "Wildfire," is skedded to open at the Empress Hall arena June 16, with Richard Hearne and Frankie Vaughan in the leads and Ted & George Durant as a specialty act. The production will be staged by Pauline Grant.

The Empress Hall ice panto, "Cinderella On Ice," with Tommy Trinder and Sonya Kaye starred, folded last Saturday (19), after a run of nearly four months. Paid admissions exceeded 862,000 and there were three Royal visits to the show by Princess Margaret, Duke of Edinburgh and Shah and Queen of Persia.

New Acts

THE CAMPBELLS (2)
Juggling
6 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Juggling of this boy-girl partnership is in all parts competent, but that is the maximum. The Campbells team tries hard to please with a varied bag of up-in-the-air hankies, clubs, rings, etc., but the elements of surprise and suspense are lacking.

Everything is from the dated juggler's manual. What the act needs, evidently, to qualify it for a cycle of club and vaude dates, is something that they can call their own. Art.

ANNIK CHARLIER
Songs
10 Mins.
L'Olympia, Paris

Annik Charlier is a well-stacked girl with flaming red hair who possesses a strong, belting voice. Reminiscent of the throb school, headed by Edith Piaf, she still hasn't arrived at a personalized style and stays in the standard register. More work, a well chosen rep and more control of bodily and hand movements may take this girl out of the chirp category and into the specialized ranks.

At present, her chances for the U.S. are slight except for possible intimeries catering to Francophilic tastes. She is one to be watched and recently won the Disk Prize of Deauville. Mosk.

BERNARD LOUIS-PHILIPPE PEIFFER (3)
Instrumental
30 Mins.
Embers, N.Y.

For the past couple of years, Yankee jazz buffs back from Paris have been touting a hot pianist with the marathon tag of Bernard Philippe-Louis Peiffer whom they've nicknamed "Le Most." The Embers, New York's stomping ground for 88-ers finally imported him for a U.S. preem last week.

"Le Most" is a tough tag to live up to and Gotham's keyboard cultists will probably find him quite a bit less than the most. Peiffer's fingerwork is deft and his style is inventive but there's nothing too unusual about his technique that lifts him above the flock of piano purveyors currently making the rounds of the jazz spots.

Working with a bass and drums backing, Peiffer whips up some okay interpretive pieces but his work lacks flash and stirs up only casual interest. His book is made up primarily of standards and he treats 'em with respect by not drifting too far from the melodic beat. He's at his best, however, with a torrid mambo sequence and an interpretive tribute to "Fats" Waller. Gros.

GEORGE MARTIN
Comedy
12 Mins.
Empire, Glasgow

Pleasant young English comedian adopts the billing of "the casual comedian," and works hard but in relaxed style to achieve this end. As is, act lacks sufficient strength for overseas marketing, and could be strengthened by funnier scripting, intenser topicality and a small speedup in pace.

He puffs away casually at a pipe and gabs re anything and everything, mainly funny experiences and links with his army days. Moves away two-thirds through act from position front-stage to seat himself on piano stool and show his vocal prowess. Throughout act, has typical Londonized accents that appeal to English but not so much to Scots, Americans or Continentals. Winds with accordion playing and another song.

Okay for general run of vauderies and tv in Britain and possibly Commonwealth centers, but act needs pace and strength for U.S. market. Gord.

CHET CLARK
Harmonica
9 Mins.
Palace, N. Y.

Chet Clark, has okay harmonicability which he greatly enhances by a lively stage manner. He bows with a medley from "Carmen" and builds through "Papa Loves Mambo" (during which he hops around in proper but subdued mambo style) to a boogie woogie closer.

Has the advantage of youth in sustaining vigorous mouth organing. Fine filler in all situations. Art.

COTTAS (3)
Acro-contortion
10 Mins.
L'Olympia, Paris

Though this is an essentially familiar act of two men tossing and twisting about a pretty young girl, an offbeat gambit is added in the presence of two gigantic wolfhounds who suddenly bound over the girl, while she is being swung around, and go through hoops, and, in other ways, put on the dog for this polished act.

Looks like a natural for special placing in U.S. vaude or nitery shows and a nice entry for tv. Mosk.

THE CHORD CATS (6)
Songs
9 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

The Chord Cats (6) originally started their career as Chords, but another act using that name forced a change. This five-man Negro group plus pianist, originally responsible for the recording and the writing of "Sh-Boom," when on the Flair label, uses the two-mike technique with a lead singer on one of the instruments, while the others work the other mike.

The Chord Cats (now disking for Atlantic) are capable of some vigorous and exciting harmonics. They look well and can hit pay dirt in any number of situations. This group can conjure up any variety of moods, since they do not have to rely on any single category to make good. They hit it well in a ballad and also give "Ko-Ko-Mo" an exciting workover. The individual voices are good as is seen by the fact that soloists can be shifted. The group also has some visual attributes as is evidenced by its ability to interpolate some terping into the act. They are assured applause-winners in most situations. Jose.

GUARANIS (6)
Songs, Dances
20 Mins.
L'Olympia, Paris

Guaranis (6) are a colorful South American song quartet, aided by two folk dancers, who spin a colorful act with the many carioca rhythms from various parts of S.A. Dressed in authentic Paraguayan costumes, with offbeat instruments, the excellent songalog and bright dance interludes make this a good bet for possible U.S. nitery slotting or for tv.

They have become a staple nitery item here, and now look in for good house appearances with their first stint in for big applause. Mosk.

THE CHARMS (5)
Songs
12 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

The Charms, five negro lads, have an appealing way with a song. Their youth is an obvious attribute in their presentation since it gives these boys a good lead at the outset. The group using a baritone lead, has a light vocal texture that's easy to absorb and can color a number excellently. At this point, most of their tunes seem to have the same overall pattern, but it's nonetheless a good trademark that doesn't seem to wear off during their running time.

The Charms indicate a lot of promise. A couple of the youngsters appear to be in their teens and the others are in their early 20s. Arrangements are good and they seem ripe for intimate as well as largeseaters on the bigtime. Jose.

CLAUDE VEGA
Song impressions
15 Mins.
L'Olympia, Paris

Claude Vega is slight young man possessed of an uncanny knack of imitating offbeat-voiced singers. He not only mimics, but adds knowledgable impressions and wraps this up in solid material to make this a fine offbeater that has become a top nitery and house supporter here.

Since his material is so Gallic, depending on many little-known French singers on the U.S. mart, this remains primarily local in appeal, but might make for U.S. special attention if he culled his known imitations from his big repertoire. Mosk.

LEO FERRE
Songs
35 Mins.
L'Olympia, Paris

A balding, gloomy-looking head, supporting steel rimmed glasses, and collared by an open-necked shirt, makes an unusual appearance for a top-billed singer. Leo Ferre is a cleffer who recently turned singer, and has been pushed to star billing on the strength of his songs made popular by others. His is a surprising entry and one that is intrinsically French.

Though specialized and primarily local in appeal, this new song phenom may be of interest for specialized U.S. boites seeking the new and unusual in chant. His songs should soon be spanning the Atlantic, even if he doesn't. He is now an offbeat name here, and a needed new top tonic name for the music halls. Mosk.

3 DANCING DICTATORS
7 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

Three Dancing Dictators offers a varied line of taps that make them eligible for the bulk of niteries. Negro team works on a fairly even keel with little variation. The terps are of a good brand, but could stand some flashy midterm tricks. Their taps however, show a solidarity. The trio knocks off a lot of footwork, some of which shows imagination. They need more work on the circuits and a mite of reroutining before they realize their potential. Jose.

handling the negotiations, said that neither plan is final. Possibility still exists that Miss Garland will return to the Palace for its first reserved seat vaude show in two years.

Miss Garland had a 19-week run at the Palace and when she left grosses were still in top shape. Danny Kaye and Betty Hutton were others to have very successful shows at the Palace. Miss Hutton, however, stayed only for a four-weeker on her second trip to the house.

When Miss Garland went into the Palace, she was on the second leg of a comeback that culminated with her making "A Star Is Born" for Warner Bros. last year. Her first vaude try was at the Palladium, London, where she was also a tremendous hit.

R. C. Music Hall, N. Y.

The foregoing cluster of personal credits is arresting for several reasons. One, for the sheer size of the roster necessary to get an Easter stage show off the ground—and that's literally a salient fact, since this is a very mobile divertissement with more than the ordinary amount of machinery-in-motion. Second, and related to item one, the Music Hall is fairly unique among theatres of any kind in program-crediting its stage manager (John Jackson), who certainly must be one-armed paperhanger backstage. Third, as to the musical conductor credits, shared by three men, the spectator in the rear of the house has a hard time knowing who, at a given performance, has the stick in his paw. (Left our opera glasses home, along with our opera hat.)

By the second day, when reviewed by VARIETY, the show was apparently shaping up. The audience could still see stagehands mopping up, or ducking out from the ramps, and the Peter Clark steam curtain didn't quite blot out the airplane on the ground before it appeared in the sky. The general pace was slow in spots and the music needed better miking when the orchestra travelled downstage, surrendering the pit area to the Rockettes. But, of course, the Music Hall revues don't have a New Haven breakin.

It is pointless to compare the 1955 Easter show with Easter of other years. Like comparing one Aurora Borealis to another. Traditionally, senior producer Leon Leonidoff opens up all the organ stops, all the lights, all the trapdoors and flying gear, and makes with the joy of spring stuff. Maybe the net results are better some years than this year. Suffice that the Hall is swarming with mother, daddy and the kiddies and they give every gesture and giggle indicating satisfaction.

The forepart of the show, "Glory of Easter," is pretty standard, down to the repetitious use of Rubinstein's "Kamenoi Ostrow," plainly Monsignor Leonidoff's stet-and-stereotype for reverential mood setting. Monks go up the sides of the auditorium bearing tapers; nun-like figures in white carrying lilies converge before the altar. For the grand flash finish they form a cross, blending into the stained glass window and over-patterned in spotlights.

The regulation animal act for the kiddies comes second. It's an amusing routine (Victor Julian and His Pets) with the dogs in elaborate costumes, dancing on their hind legs. Follows a bit of nursery book tableau involving little Miss Muffet, Mister Spider and some dancing mushrooms. This segues into a dance of the spring vegetables. Then into the airport scene, "Home for the Holidays," and for the big whammo, the Rockettes are on campus (the lyrics say so, and the gals wear mortar boards).

The acrobatic headliner is a Danish boy, aged 15, who was reviewed under New Acts from the Lido, Paris, some months ago. He was then known simply as John, but is programmed and announced at the Music Hall as Wonderboy John, a better television program title than billing for a theatre or cafe turn. This is not to deny that the lad's accomplishments justify the adjective. His balancing, aerial contortion and general performance are exceptional in every respect, and there is every reason to suppose he can play all the main talent spots in America, for he is sure to impress. It's just that it seems tough for a lad to go through life being called Wonderboy. It could lead to neuroses or being sponsored by Wheaties.

These are familiar ingredients, mixed in with a generous display of costumes, mass effects, props, maypoles in electric lights, and hydraulic wonders. With Metro's Cinderella story, "The Glass Slipper," for feature and Warners' very amusing Looney Tune, "The Hole Idea," to pad out the time, it all adds up to entertainment worthy of the largest (and the last) of the presentation houses. Land.

L'Olympia, Paris

Paris, March 22.

Bruno Coquatrix presents Festival De La Chanson '55, with Leo Ferre, Odette Laure, Annik Charlier, Guaranis (6), Pacita Tomas Ballet (9), Claude Vega, Hal Monty, Cottas (3), Lord X, Yvonne Solal, Gaston Lapeyronne Orch (12); $1.25 top.

Since song is the mainstay of the music hall, interspersed with solid fillers and offbeaters, director Bruno Coquatrix had the fine idea of dedicating a program to chanters, not quite of star category as yet, but definitely on the way up. He had a sure element in pert songstress Odette Laure, and took a long chance in star billing cleffer Leo Ferre, recently turned singer.

Odette Laure is a saucy, reedy-voiced wench whose malicious songs, bright interp and taking insouciance make this a fine entry, and also shows her capable of hitting the bigtime. New names are needed to avoid repetitiveness in the house circuits, and it looks like two will come out of this stanza.

Other song items are Claude Vega, Guaranis (6) and newcomer Annik Charlier, all cataloged under New Acts for their budding or arrived appeal. Also rating a New Acts is the uncommon acro entry, Cottas (3), who add two enormous wolfhounds to their act for an out-of-the-ordinary bit worthy of U.S. ogling. Pacita Tomas Ballet (9) is a Hispano outfit who add a flash of color and movement. Though losing some fire and authenticity in stage transposition, with a too-mannered flamenco flamboyance by Miss Tomas, it is a good cementer of the bill, and has bright boys and girls whirling to the guitar and orch accomp.

Hal Monty supplies some low-down fun with enough comic invention and verve to make this a fine leavener. Twisting balloons into animal figures, playing a tiny accordion or doing a yockful striptease, Monty is always funny and makes for mitts. Lord X is dressed in tails and essays a parody juggler-acro act. Enough knowhow and acceptable acrobatics makes this a good opener. Yvonne Solal gives her usual ingratiating intros, and Gaston Lapeyronne Orch (12) gives good backing to the proceedings. Mosk.

Apollo, N. Y.

Chord Cats (5), Charms (5), Beulah Swan, Princess D'Orsay, Crackshot & Roscoe, Buddy Tate Orch; "Khyber Patrol" (UA).

The Apollo, following this setup, is calling it quits to stageshows for two of the worst weeks in the year, and will resume with live entertainment on April 8, with Louis Jordan headlining.

For its temporary swan song, the Frank Schiffman flagship has installed a somewhat curious bill which doesn't indicate a masterful acumen in buying. The overall design of the program leans toward the controversial rock 'n' roll, but skilled show design can create variety even within that sphere. But the setting of The Chord Cats and The Charms on the same bill looks like the house is hot for five-man singing groups. Both work with the two-mike technique, the lead singer occupying one, and the others supplying background at the next. Both are in New Acts.

The layout opens with the Three Dancing Dictators (New Acts) for a fast opening number, as a good warmup. The comedy this session is by Crackshot & Roscoe, who get laughs with a policeman sketch.

An encore item is Beulah Swan, who rocks and rolls her voice and torso into an extremely blue pattern, but one which excites the customers considerably. Miss Swan's blues numbers and topless gowns showing her amplitude make some of the strip acts seem appropriate for church socials.

In fact, this is borne out by the appearances of Princess D'Orsay, immediately following Miss Swan. La Princess gets down to upper and nether essentials in short order and then proceeds to do a bit of fire-eating. She picks up bits of flame on her fingers, rolls torches over her torso and plants herself right over the flame. Unfortunately, the heat has been taken off her act by the preceding turn.

Saxist Buddy Tate conducts the orchestra this trip. The band seems like a pickup crew, since there are times when the acts get a cacophony in the showbacking bits. Presence of an electric organ in the setup sometimes throws the instrumentation into an imbalance. The musical ideas expressed by Tate seem okay, but it appears that he needs further time to articulate them. Jose.

Chicago, Chi

Chicago, March 25.

Georgia Gibbs (with Bill Russell), Bill Hayes, Johnny Maddox, Peiro Bros., Lou Basil Orch; "The Purple Plain" (UA).

The current bill at the Chicago Theatre should prove something about the house's record name policy. The three featured performers each have a hit record at the top of the charts as they start their stint here.

Georgia Gibbs, Mercury Records star, handles the distaff vocalizing in this two-rounder. Gal exudes confidence as she runs through a rep, showcasing unusual versatility and a pleasant, well-trained voice. Opening with "I Love Paris," Miss Gibbs handles the number with the appropriate hushed throatiness, with no hint of the exuberance she reserves for tunes like "Dance With Me Henry," later on. Songstress handles slow ballads like "Somebody Loves Me" as well as she does rhythmic uptunes like "Ballin' The Jack." She wraps up with her current Mercury hit, "Tweedle-Dee," saving the piece de resistance for the last. Gal goes over big with the customers.

Bill Hayes, whose Cadence disking of "Ballad of Davy Crockett" is a top tune right now, proves he can sing other songs, too. Hayes impresses with a pleasing personality, instantly putting the audience in a receptive mood. Singer has a varied repertoire; he does standards like "Lady Be Good" and "Cecelia" as well as the recent hits, "No Other Love Have I" and That's All I Want From You." Although lad's pipes are not overly rich in tone, he has a wide range and well-disciplined voice. When the singing is presented as personably as is done here, it cannot fail to please. Hayes essays his hit, "Ballad of Davy Crockett," inviting the audience to provide the choral background, and gets surprising response. He encores with "Ko-Ko-Mo" and goes off to loud salvos.

Johnny Maddox, of "Crazy Otto" fame, plays the barrelhouse piano on stage. Using an antique, detuned instrument, covered with a red-checkered tablecloth and beer glasses, Maddox, with bowlers and sleeve garters, plugs away as did the "Professor" of old. Playing numbers best suited to this style, Maddox rags "Robert E. Lee," "Way Down Yonder," "Twelfth Street Rag" and his Dot hit, "Crazy Otto Medley." The piano thumping becomes monotonous after a while and the turn would be greatly improved by a line of patter to tie it together, adding an undercurrent of nostalgic comedy. Maddox handles himself stiffly on stage, but this should wear off in time. As is, turn gets good palms.

The warmup act for this display is a juggling pair, for a refreshing change from the inevitable hoofing team. Peiro Bros. show deft balance and excellent coordination as they juggle clubs, sticks, blocks and hats, with a few comic sallies in between.

Lou Basil and orchestra cut the usual excellent showback. Gabe.

Empire, Glasgow

Glasgow, March 24.

Don Cornell (with Jerry Carretta at piano), Musical Elliotts (3), George Martin, Billy Baxter, Brockways (2), Shipway Twins, Flack & Lucas, Austral, Rosinas (2), Bobby Dowds Orch.

Making his British bow, Don Cornell is the headliner here in a fairly pleasing vaude layout. Singer, best known around these parts by his disk "Hold My Hand," makes a solid impression by virtue of his approach being different to that of other U.S. name singers.

For instance, he doesn't engage in physical mitt-movements; has a modest, unassuming approach, and scores not only by a good set of pipes but also by a highly attractive personality which endears him to all ages of stubholders. On top of this, his linking patter is both amusing and interesting. Singer, in other words, proves a likeable, ordinary fellow and not a phenomenon who makes fans shriek and swoon.

Act is neatly attuned to local taste, with several references to Glasgow sporting personalities, etc. Shows his knowledge of Italian and Neapolitan background by good interp of "Oh Marie," both in English and Italian. Singer gives early spot to his hit number, "Hold My Hand," a sure palm-getter. Introduces his conductor-accompanist, Jerry Carretta, and gives him the build-up musicwise, then ranges in pleasant gabbing over titles of his disks.

Segues with more gabbing, then into "Just For a Day," the comedy song, "It's a Lie" (in which he uses orch participation by getting them to join in chorus when standing up), and "Because."

Carretta attends skillfully to the ivories throughout act.

Flack & Lucas, w.k. British dancing duo, open the layout with accomplished hoofing, and are followed by the Shipway Twins, pair of youngish Australians who score with act on the multiple bars and particularly the gimmick of one partner doing a two-and-a-half somersault in the air in swing from bar to ground. Austral has polished up his vent act since last time here but needs to increase its pace. He's another Australian.

The Musical Elliotts are mother, father and daughter, offering their established comedy-instrumental act in which the male is hen-pecked and nagged musically by an imperious wife and retorts, clown-garbed, with amusing toots and blows. At show caught, this act was overlong and could have done with useful pruning.

The Rosinas (2) cause customer gasps with twists and somersaults in midair. The Brockways, another mixed duo, garner palming for a cycling act in various costume garbings.

Billy Baxter, young English comedian, makes biggest impression of the support turns by his show-biz-through-the-ages comedy, ranging in peppy travesties from silent pix to vaude heyday, and the 1955 deejay. Baxter is kid brother of Jeannie Carson, musical star from London. On this showing, his act is a honey-in-the-making.

Bobby Dowds house orch does a sound job of showbacking. George Martin is in New Acts. Gord.

Palace, N. Y.

Campbells (2), Chet Clark, Three Wiles, Fred Lowery, Milton Douglas with Prisella, Noble Sissle & Eubie Blake, Patrice Helene & Jan Howard, Edwards Bros. (3), Jo Lombardi Orch; "The Big Combo" (A-A), reviewed in VARIETY Feb. 16, '55.

The Palace achieves a satisfactory vaude level this week. Two of the topline acts are distinctly different in the audiences they appeal to. The Noble Sissle-Eubie Blake musicalities get to those who were kids in the '20s and early '30s; the duo pitches a heavy line of "do you re-memorabilia." On the other hand, the sly comedics of Patrice Helene and her partner, Jan Howard, do not appeal either by the rules or in practice, to the strong Sissle-Blake fans in evidence, except where there is hokumed-up terp routining by the youngef performing brace.

Initial act on the bill are the juggling Campbells, who are appraised in New Acts. So is number two, harmonicaist Chet Clark. Incidentally, the Campbells are sort of a slow opener, but the pace picks up considerably with Clark. In trey are the Three Wiles, a two-boys, one-girl trio loudly applauded for an intro which consists mostly of soft footwork and big smiles. But the act doesn't maintain its original high. Even the Wiles' "before your eyes" costume changes are sans real holding power.

Fourth on the card is whistler Fred Lowery, working (when seen) without co-billed Catherine Toomay. He's still hot in his "William Tell Overture" and the more recent standard, in his tongue-in-teeth catalog, "High and Mighty." He's followed by another veteran turn, Milton Douglas with Prisella. Rotund comic uses oldest of lines, but demonstrates the importance of perfect timing. There are only a few times that his rapid-fire punchlines miss.

Sissle on voice and Blake on piano are up next, and they have an intimate several minutes seated comfortably on a piano stool. They cook up some real oldies that they composed for the flapper era and the depression years that followed, including "Bandana Days" and a raft of numbers from "Shuffle Along." Solo work by each is excellent; Sissle is a master of that singing dialog of old vaudeville, and Blake knows how to whip about the keys, his being the only presentation that seems to transcend eras.

Little Miss Helene is clever verbally, and is also tops on timing, and her pantomimic dancing is socko. The Edwards Bros. close with some precarious balancing work, using the top of a baby grand piano as the gymnast field. Jo Lombardi backing follows good form. Art.

Meanwhile the Western Ave. lot is said to have the capacity for making additional series. 20th last week assigned to General Artists Corp. the sales rights to the "My Friend Flicka" pix which it plans to make for tv. Several other of 20th's properties, including the "Mr. Belvedere" series and "Jesse James," also are possibilities for tv lensing.

There's a pronounced desire at 20th to play ball with all the networks, hence the discussions that have gone on with top execs of the webs, including a lengthy session last week with Pat Weaver of NBC. 20th is described as "deluged" with proposals, including some that would put the film company in a position of producing directly for, and to the specifications of, the networks.

While the topic of releasing its old pix to tv crops up periodically in the talks with the broadcasters, 20th is still sticking to a "hands off" policy "for the moment." While it is indicated that no changes are contemplated at the moment, there are also hints that this situation will not continue forever.

A N. Y. Times story last week, hinting that 20th would use its tv projects to train fledging actors and technicians, had the filmery and Young & Rubicam, the agency, accusing each other of leaking the story to the paper. Y & R spokesman termed the story "very unfortunate," stressing that GE wasn't in a mood to splurge on "experiments" and expected top values for its dough.

There are indications that, whatever 20th does on a one-hour basis, will include a plug for its theatrical product. Also, 20th may produce the commercials for these programs. Latter will be filmed under the direction of Sid Rogell, general manager of the Western Ave. lot, with production v.p. Darryl F. Zanuck supervising the work.

the case of the U. S. and other free nations' film exports to Japan.

They Remember Joly

He also explained that various American stars, such as the late Al Jolson, Bob Hope, Marilyn Monroe and others who had gone to Korea to entertain American troops and also did shows in Tokyo to which the public was invited, gave the Nips a yen for more p.a.'s by Hollywood names. This, he thinks, did much to raise the parity of American films.

"It would be one of the best investments in our own dollar-earning capacities, as well as a decisive blow aimed at both the Chinese and Russian brands of Communism, for Hollywood to sponsor at least one film celebrity cavalcade to Japan annually," actor opines.

"Even Japanese producers, whose product competes with our own, are urging us to do this. These producers, engaged in a free enterprise, would rather have Hollywood as a competitor, with our types of film messages that inspire confidence in privately-controlled industry, than risk the Red-made films, disguised as entertainment but actually aimed at alienating Japan from its allies and friends of the free world."

Ryan described the Nip exhibition market as "a lush and sound customer for Hollywood, with its purchasing powers underwritten by American dollars." Banking laws permit foreign film importers to take their money out of the country.

"It must also be remembered," actor added, "that the Japanese people are among the world's best-paying customers at the boxoffice. Japan now has 3,734 excellently-equipped film houses, with a total seating capacity of 1,900,000. This marks an increase of 634 theatres in four years.

"It also represents a terrifically important market to Hollywood and a ready-made audience of men, women and children to be won over to the democratic way of living and thinking."

Copacabana, N. Y.

Jules Podell presentation of Douglas Coudy production; stars the Will Mastin Trio (Sammy Davis Jr.), with Morty Stevens, The Belmonts (2), DeCastro Sisters (3), Donna Williams, Jack Drummond, Barbara Maye, Larry Howard; Michael Durso and Frank Marti bands; songs, George Campbell & Marvin Moore; costumes Billy Livingston (Mme. Berthe); orchestrations, Eliot G. Eberhard; $5 minimum.

Saloon biz has been off, but there will be no b.o. problems at the Copa with the incumbent Sammy Davis Jr. starring. Colored comic is one of the real sock new stars of the day. His rise has been meteoric since Bill Miller first showcased the lad (and his father and uncle whose name—Will Mastin—tops the act's billing) at the now defunct Riviera, Fort Lee, N.J.

Young Davis has come a long way since. What may have been regarded as an intra-family sentimentality, where the two old boys and the kid first engaged in "challenge" hoofing, is now an accepted thing. Everybody understands. The boy is indubitably the star of the trio and a star in his own right; but the idea of Davis Sr. and Uncle Mastin making with their polite hoofing and the scat tempos in the background is as much part of the picture as young Davis' eye-patch.

The Floyd Gibbons touch, since that nasty auto accident this past winter on the Coast, becomes as unobtrusive as Harold Lloyd's specs, because the talent values are so solid and overwhelming. He is a relaxed showman who comes on the floor asking for nothing and giving plenty. Whether a prop glass eye would be more decorative is something strictly for his own decision. Davis has expressed himself that it might prove disconcerting if the customers become too preoccupied in trying to identify which optic wears the phoney. He could of course so state, but with or without the eye-patch his repertoire is no patchwork of hit 'n' miss tidbits.

He knows what he's doing all the way, and sets forthrightly out to do it. He has aplomb and assurance, and if perhaps his Lindy-type ad libs—that patois of Yiddish-American small-talk in which the non-blintzes Martha Raye and Davis Jr. are as prone to indulge in, with the same abandon as a Berle or a Jack E. Leonard—may be looked upon with some askance, in the main it's incidental. In the main he is socko.

Not only is his mimicry uncanny but his show-wise indulgences are not too inside for the customers not to appreciate them. He is frankly worshipful of Sinatra, calling him his "idol." He makes with the teacup bit in the Sinatra style, but uncorks takeoffs on Billy Daniels, Nat King Cole, Vaughn Monroe, Tony Bennett, Frankie Laine, Godfrey, Eddie Fisher, Barry Fitzgerald, Crosby and Jerry (Martin &) Lewis that are artistic vignettes of mature mimicry. His "Bojangles" Bill Robinson is authoritative and the touch of the flamenco, along with his other musical drolleries, is a tribute to special maestro-arranger Morty Stevens, an ofay, who wields the special baton and who gets noteworthy spotlighting.

Davis is one of those multiple-threat comedians who, when he's hot, hits the jackpot in all departments. The newest fillip, of course, comes from his socko Decca diskings of "Hey There" and the more recent "All Of You". His style is not colored by any racial interpretation—he chirps these concurrent Broadway musicomedy ballads with romantic authority.

Willingness to give so much of himself may prove a minor handicap; evidence of that is his supplementary business with the drums. While it was further demonstration of a one-man tour-de-force, coming after so long a show might call for some editing. He ran the gamut from the bull fiddle to the traps (including a touch of the Jack Powell-style of drumstick comedy) to the trumpet in an unannounced takeoff of Satchmo.

Certainly his "Birth of the Blues," the socko Jerry Lewis, the other impressions, a trailer for an upcoming Rodgers & Hart album (but with a rather slow excerpt, "So Unhappy But Oh So Glad") made for virtually a solid 60 minutes of versatility. The kid has nothing but talent.

Show remains the same framework as with the predecessor Doug Coudy stagings—the orchidaceous coiffs adorning what appear to be a set of new lookers, all beauts.

The new interludes are John and June Belmont with their classy ballroomology, limited somewhat because of the extra floor tables and some potent ringside customer competition, unwitting and unwilling as it may have been, but when Debbie & Eddie, Marilyn Monroe, Berle, Caesar, Jack E. Leonard, Evelyn Keyes, Mike Todd, et al. are in the ace tables they're almost also in the floorshow.

The brunet DeCastro Sisters, Cuba's defi to the Andrews Sisters, cut up with their Latino concept of the Pepsi-Cola jingles, "You Are My Sunshine", the "C'Est Si Bon" nonsense, and their disclick "Teach Me Tonight", Interlarded is another production number before the Mastin Trio. Donna Williams, Jack Drummond, Barbara Maye and Larry Howard are the juve song & dance number-leaders, and per usual the Mike Durso—with the ailing maestro still absent—and the Frank Marti bands continue dishing up the terp tunes for the rugcutters. Abel.

Celebrity Room, Philly

Philadelphia, March 25.

Joe Smith & Charlie Dale, Joe Stevens, Steve Manning; Lee Henderson Line (12), Al Small's Orch (6); $2.50 minimum.

The Avon Comedy Four, which has played almost everywhere in the 55 years since it was started, is making its night club debut in Philadelphia at the Celebrity Room. Thanks to television, Joe Smith and Charlie Dale can count on an audience other than greybeards and people with long memories. Smith & Dale are the oldest team in the business and probably the only duo remaining from the great days of vaude. For many, their appeal is largely nostalgic, a feeling that is heightened by the barbershop quality of their quartetting with a pair of juves—Joe Stevens and Steve Manning.

Used to working with a stage and curtain, all four members of the act showed some uncertainty in their getoffs and entrances, which are made through the audience at the Celebrity. Younger members offer a song intro to cue on Smith & Dale. Comedians go into "No Biz Like Show Biz" and then do the chef and restaurant owner routine, with their associates as waiters for extra line feeding. Skit needs better presentation to slam across vintage gags.

Stevens and Manning duo on a medley and then Smith & Dale come on for the "Dr. Kronkheit" bit on which they hold the copyright. Timing and time-tested material of this routine still packs a full quota of laughs. From then on they're in and all four work the finale with an Irish lilt, followed by Smith & Dale tunes from long gone musicals. Since they are the sole act in the show, comics should employ another skit or build the vocals for the finals. Lee Henderson line opens with a mambo number, and closes with a pulchritude parade. House was half-full at late opening show, due to bad weather. Gagh.

Colony, London

London, March 22.

Fay De Witt, Felix King & Don Carlos Orchs; $5 minimum.

Fay de Witt, blonde newcomer to these shores, impresses immediately as a very funny girl. That asset, allied to looks, vocal prowess and a sparkling personality, adds up to a socko attraction. Word-of-mouth should help to establish femme as one of the sturdiest attractions booked by operator Harry Morris for many a month.

Entire routine, unduly stretched on opening night to 45 minutes, is angled to comedy, and the laugh reaction from the ringsiders is continuous. Miss de Witt, with a range of brisk novelty material, sets a pace and standard with her opening number and very nearly succeeds in maintaining them throughout the stint.

After a fake opening as a classy operatic soprano, the chirp moves straight into comedy with "You Can't Make a Lady Out of Me," and follows through with a biting satirical number and a contrasting blues entry about moving to the suburbs. Then into an elaborate and oversentimental treatment of "Show Business," from which she segues neatly into a bubbly French tune and a laughmaking takeoff of Yma Sumac. A cockney number, especially added for the occasion, gets the right response. But the highspot of the presentation is her version of "Opening Night at the Met," which closes the act with a hefty wallop.

The routine, despite its intricate cues, gets precision backgrounding from the Felix King resident combo. Dansapation sessions are shared with the Don Carlos rhythm group. Myro.

Latin Quarter, N.Y.

Lou Walters presentation, with Patty Andrews (Walter Weschler), Joey Bishop, Holger & Dolores, Miller & Gibson, Cristianis, Clarissa, Jessica Haist, Melodeers, Harmoneers, Art Wanr & Buddy Harlow Orchs; minimum $5, $6.

It seems a pity that the Andrews Sisters didn't hold off their split for a while longer. Today, sister teams and group singing acts are at a premium, as is seen by the collection of the multiple turns on the best-selling disk lists. However, where there was formerly one name act, there are now a pair of them with Patty doing a single, while Laverne and Maxene are in tandem.

Patty has apparently kicked over most of the traces of her former association. Her given handle used to be Patti and it would be customary for her to review the disclicks of her past, which are many and varied. This she disdains in favor of a lot of numbers, new to her, and which go over with telling effect.

Miss Andrews has become a skilled performer on her own, armed with some excellent material. She can punch, relax and clown all over the floor as well. Net result is a shade over a half-hour of entertainment that incites a lot of applause. Her clown bit at the closer is her major opus.

She climbs into clown rig in front of the audience, whitens her face and delivers the antics that makes for what is almost a show-stopping mitt. Walter Weschler (Miss Andrews' spouse) accomps her at the piano and sometimes takes the place of the other two sisters in giving her some comedic assists. His lifts, though, are generally confined to his handling of the musical chores, and he gives the turn considerable pacing.

It is still difficult for Miss Andrews to break the association of so many years. That the act has reached a high patina is readily seen, but more important, Miss Andrews gives the impression that she has the capacity to attain depth, which is still a major measure of greatness. She's on the right track, it seems.

Her material is well selected, and gives the impression of variety. She can shift easily from a ballad to a comedy number. Her clowning is raucous, but effective in "Peony Bush." There's an easy delivery of a Hawaiian rib, and a delineation of "Sadie Thompson," among others. Weschler breaks it up with a bit of boogie-woogie ivorying which gives his wife time to catch her breath. This is Miss Andrews' first time around as a single in New York. With her firm foundations, she'll be back and probably with more stature.

Lou Walters has refurbished his longrunning review with several other acts. Joey Bishop occupies the comedy slot, and he goes over excellently with his near-deadpan delivery. His lines are fast and knowing, but never too fast to pass over the heads of the tourist trade. His turn is punctuated with a lot of laughs and he's a strong entry here.

Holger & Dolores, also in a return stand, give the audience a workout applause-wise. The duo, in their ballroomistics, do some amazing tricks. The blond behemoth of a guy handles the girl with terrific ease, and some of the lifts, spins and tosses provide gasps.

Another action-laden turn is by the Cristianis, a standard teeterboard group who get off some good three-highs and fast tumbling to merit the mob's approval. Other new item is Olivette Miller & Bert Gibson, a Negro hoofing and harp act. It's an unusual combination, with Miss Miller making good at the Lyons & Healy pluckings. The combination is at times hard to fathom, but it goes over well. The duo is well-garbed and its closer is a "Me and My Shadow" bit, with guy donning an identical costume, even to a femme wig, in a carboning of the femme's movements. They make several costume changes.

Rest of the show including terps by Clarissa and songs by Jessica Haist is stetted, with the Mme. Kamarova production holding over nicely. The biz on night caught seemed to be tremendous, especially in view of the pre-Easter period. Jose.

Sands, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 16.

Marguerite Piazza, Tony & Eddie, Chuck Nelson, Copa Girls & Boys (14), Antonio Morelli Orch (12); no cover, no minimum.

While other local boite operators dawdled in doubt that diva Marguerite Piazza might be able to bridge the gap between the longnet set in the Cocoanut Grove (L. A.) and the crowd on the Strip, producer Jack Entratter sized the attraction up for his bailiwick. The cosmopolites are now handing it to him for bringing in one of the outstanding new acts in show biz.

The giant stagewait for the star and the contrastingly mediocre opening act are hurdled by the voice, beauty and stage pyrotechnics of the star as she regaled with 16 numbers in her opening show. With a big assist from her punchinello-aide, Jack Bunch, who did some hoofing while she went the route from opera to dixieland and also assisted in the costume changes in a dressing room set up on stage, Miss Piazza clicks all the way.

The soprano does "La Paloma," "Sorrento," a medley of classic sparklers, and "A Bunny Grows Up To Be A Rabbit," which she does in a form-clinging slit gown. Then she proceeds to knock off "Got You Under My Skin,"

The contrast of Marguerite Piazza, today and the same lady who appeared not so long ago in another local bistro as a straight operatic singer points up the importance of showmanship and material. Where she barely created a ripple that first time, she now has top impact. "One Fine Day," from "Madam Butterfly," segues into a Dixieland set led off by "Basin Street" that's a lulu. She winds up her 35-minute chore with her foot on the stage rail belting "When the Saints Come Marching In." Herb Ross did a standout job in building the act, using rare imagination especially in his work with the agile Bunch and the lighting. John Gali plucks the mandolin to play a vital musical part in the act.

Tony & Eddie are another entry in the growing parade of record pantomimists, and lend a rather incongruous contrast to the otherwise high calibre of the show. Another setting might be more suitable to show the boys to better advantage. Hurling water in each other's face and assembling a ghastly series of figures on the darkened stage to get a chilling effect succeed. But the chills aren't inspired by the monsters.

The Copa Girls & Boys and nicely costumed for a western and calypso routine, both ably sung by Chuck Nelson as the line moves well to rate a nice hand. Antonio Morelli guides his orch thruout in fine style. Bob.

Liberty's, Paris

Paris, March 15.

Odette Laure, Fernand Sardou, Charpini, Raoul, Patrick & Valmenee, Claude Vega, Champi, Pieral; minimum, $4.

Liberty's still has the most liberally packed show extant, and this nitery-eatery presents an unceasing group of acts which begins at 10:30 p.m. and ends at 2 a.m. Though environment is limpwrist, with waiters, cook, etc., joining in for drag dance bits, atmospherics are always clever and tasteful and this boite exudes genuine wit which is a rarity here nowadays. For that Gallic feeling this is well worth a visit for tourists, even if the lingo barrier might be a handicap. Tab is normal and surroundings warm.

Diminutive Odette Laure is topper in her squeaky-voiced songalog that benefits from thesp knowhow, devilish intonations and personality. Whether singing about a half-witted diabolical child, telling stories of the Paris snob set or lilting a tale of first love, Miss Laure is a catching offbeater and heading for the big brackets. Fernand Sardou uncorks a bright bit of Mediterranean sunshine in his tales of Marseillaise character shenanigans and a bright, taking voice for his catching songs of repose and philosophical laziness. Patrick & Valmence do a rapid patter act of clever verbage and pacing for good mitts.

Raoul is a singing waiter who gurgles 1900's songs of compassion and purity with an insouciance and comic undertone that leads to a joyous aud sing. Claude Vega gives out with an uncanny imitation of the various w.k. voices here and has good material to boot. Charpini is one of the leading limpwristers here, and has enough showmanship and guile to be always entertaining rather than annoying. His melee in a courtroom sketch, which has him as a woman who turned man, is of full yock value. Champi puts the solid tag on this kaleidoscopic roundelay with a broadside of storytelling that stamps him one of the best raconteurs in the biz. His timing, material and attitudes make for a veritable gale of laughter. The various sketches, in which the waiters and chef join in, are always risible and do not even disrupt the service. Dwarf Pieral presents a silhouet of Toulouse-Lautrec to mark the precursor attitudes of this staple boite. Mosk.

Chez Paree, Chi

Chicago, March 22.

Xavier Cugat Orch (11), with Abbe Lane, Jackie Kannon, Julio & Marisa Torres, Garcia; $1.50 cover, $3.75 minimum.

Bongos and maracas, torso-tossing and Hispano hoofing have taken over this posh Windy City boite, with Xavier Cugat helming his Latino display. The house was packed opening night and patrons whooped it up enthusiastically for entertainment in the Latin-American vein.

Abbe Lane, Cugat's flaming-tressed and dangerously-curved spouse, gives out with a few heavily sexed-up vocal interps, mostly south of the border standards. Gal nods in the direction of straight pops with "Naughty Lady of Shady Lane" but generally sticks to such numbers as "Sway," "Bim Bam Boom" and "Cha Cha Cha." Miss Lane makes a striking appearance in a green sheath, revealingly slit and decollete in the extreme, to play the natural charms to the hilt.

Jackie Kannon works the comedy end for a brief siesta from the Latin-American flavor. He has several fracturing routines, interspersed with a few yock-producing gags. Kannon depends on energetic delivery and plenty of mugging for his laughs, and succeeds despite the venerable age of some of the material. Comic does a rib of current public tastes in his "That's Entertainment" bit, lampooning teevee, sexy pocketbooks, and record hits like "Sh-Boom." Such lampoons are fairly common, but Kannon adds an eye-filling, curvy fillip to the bit by using his knockout blonde wife as a foil for the clowning. Kannon winds up with an Indian routine, easily his best, featuring a hatching chicken in a paper bag.

Cugat spaces a couple of dance teams through his act and the Garcias, specializing in rumba, samba and mambo interps, are especially noteworthy for graceful hoofing. Shortly after opening of the show, Julio & Marisa Torres essay classical flamenco hoofing. At times a little Apache creeps in, but good-natured crowd takes the terping in an impression rather than authentic flamenco and the Torres are well received.

Cugat's package is introed in modern tempo by the full orchestra in "Mambo Number Eighty," followed by the faves, "Brazil" and "Siboney," with the maestro leading on the violin. The whole show is well tied together by the Latino musicians, and a pair of them, Candido and Diablito, have a spot of their own. Candido plays his own composition, "Jungle Flute," as Diablito clowns jungle noises and atmosphere. Competent musicianship provides a solid foundation for the crowd-pleasing Cugat revue.

Latin Quarter, Boston

Boston, March 23.

Marion Marlowe, Ernie Richman & Mannequins (4), Jackie Marlin, Guy Guarino, Harry DeAngelis Orch, Zarde Bros. Trio; $5 minimum.

Displaying poise, slick showmanship and a lovely voice, Marion Marlowe is very impressive in her first Hub nitery date. She's class and the customers are with her from walk-on. Even though the stately chirp opened to a substantial audience every indication points to the fact that biz will build throughout her week's stint as a result of strong word-of-mouth.

Miss Marlowe's songalog is varied, well-sprinkled with special material numbers along with pops and standards. In the special material category are such items as "Questions, Questions," serving as a nod to the Arthur Godfrey gang, "Should I Be Sweet or Get Hot?" This allows her the opportunity to indulge in a bit of ribbing of her semi-operatic style, to unleash some gut-buckety vocalizing and the plaint "TV is Tough on Love." Sesh is tied together with light, articulate banter, resulting in a thoroughly entertaining half-hour.

Supporting show is so-so. Ernie Richman and his three attractive mannequins score okay in the opening slot. Three gals pose on pedestals before springing into action in a lively terp turn. Jackie Marlin shows to better advantage in his carbons than in the comedy department, some of his material being of the shopworn variety.

Guy Guarino handles the emceeing chores and Harry DeAngelis showbacks in tiptop fashion. The Zarde Bros. Trio is on hand for between-set rhythm setting. Ellie.

Hotel Statler, N. Y.

Les Elgart Orch with Larry Elgart, Don Forbes; $1.50, $2 covers.

Les Elgart's young crew, which had its New York bow at the N.Y. Hotel Astor Roof last summer, is now making a regular stand at the Cafe Rouge of the Hotel Statler, Gotham's last remaining hotel showcase for touring bands.

The Elgart band is strictly designed for dancing and there's no attempt to create any big noise by any offbeat musical ideas. Playing it safe may be sound commercial sense, but it definitely won't bring the band biz back either.

This crew hews to the tried and true dance-band sound. The melodic line is clear, the beat is simple and the sidemen play with the necessary degree of precision. On occasion, the band manages to swing, but for the most part the arrangements are on the sweet side, without much excitement generated. That, of course, may be fitting the bill exactly for this room, which no longer is drawing the younger set as it did back in the heyday of the band biz, when this hostelry was known as the Pennsylvania Hotel.

The band has a good book of oldies and novelties to provide the change of pace. In the vocal department, Don Forbes impresses with a fine voice on all types of songs, although the Sinatra influence is so strong at times that it sounds like a takeoff.

Les Elgart fronts the band unobtrusively, while helping out the brass section. His brother Larry is featured on sax. Herm.

Thunderbird, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 18.

Winged Victory Chorus (14), Irene Ryan, Jaye Bros. (2); Thunderbird Dancers (8), Al Jahns Orch (11); no cover or minimum.

This unpretentious three-framer nears the status of being a sleeper, due mainly to the creative work of choreographer Gail Robbins who dreamed up a colorful version of "Oklahoma," in which the voices of the Winged Victory Chorus and the line girls are effectively used. Ostensibly the big finale, it rates the major kudoes for the show. Irene Ryan brings her special brand of humor to co-star with the chorus.

The 14 male singers in the Winged Victory entourage, in colorful cowboy attire, a spectacular display of stage maneuvers while belting out a well-rounded repertoire of classics, military, pop songs and ballads.

Miss Ryan, as always, pleases in her songs and chatter anent the old, old days when "falsies were teeth." Pathos and whimsy are her greatest weapons as she does a lusty "Don't Change Your Old Wife For A New One," and a laugh-compelling recitative in "My Heart Cries For You."

The Jaye Bros. are a song-and-dance duo, newcomers to the local scene who make a neat impression with carbons of the top singers of the day. A Liberace piano bit is a better-than-average takeoff of the much-copied star. Their topper is twin impressions of Jimmy Durante sans the rubber nose and gravel throat, the very novelty of which makes the act differently pleasing.

Al Jahns Orch does a commendable job. Bob.

Hotel Statler, Wash.

Washington, March 24.

Betty Madigan, Bill Finch, Steve Kisley Orch with Dee Drummond, Ted Alexander Quartet; cover, Fridays, Saturdays $1.50, holidays $2.

It's the old success story—local gal makes good. Betty Madigan, the kid from up near Chevy Chase Circle, who learned her trade as an apprentice singer at D. C. bistros and then went out of town to ring the bell with recordings and supper club appearances, is back home headlining at the Statler's plush Embassy Room. And showing the hometown folks she's learned a lot and come a long way in the song-selling business.

Miss Madigan, still a youngster in years, has a nice way with a song and an audience. She shows plenty of ease and confidence, whether working before a fixed mike, strolling around the ringside with the mike on a cable, or kidding with those at the tables. And when she finds a child at a front table, as she did at show caught, she's smart enough to play to him in a pleasant manner.

Essentially a swingey singer with an animated personality, she also shows considerable adeptness as a shouter, belting out the tunes. Her repertoire is smartly chosen to put her best foot forward in a change of pace which ranges from the oldie, "You Made Me Love You" and her record hit, "Joey," to the modified hillbilly of her newest recording, "The Wheel of Love Keeps Turning." Her least successful effort is a calypso.

This girl seems to have considerable to offer for a Broadway revue or even a filmusical.

Opening half of the bill is Bill Finch, a very clever and graceful baton twirler who livens his work with a series of dance steps. This is a flashy opening act whose finale has Finch twirling two electrically-lighted batons in the otherwise darkened Embassy Room. He draws a nice hand.

Steve Kisley orch, with thrush Dee Drummond as soloist, plays for the dansapation and show. The Ted Alexander Quartet, a very smooth little unit, spells it for dancing. Lowe.

Flamingo, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 17.

Keefe Brasselle, DeMarco Sisters (5), Slate Bros. (3), Ron Fletcher Dancers (12), Teddy Phillips Orch (12); no cover and no minimum.

The Keefe Brasselle show, a bright, swift-paced revue albeit not a large one, offers good entertainment before running out its 85-minute span. The Five DeMarco Sisters and the Three Slate Bros. complete the tight package.

The promise shown by young Brasselle his first time around is becoming fulfilled. An exciting personality, he has acquired sureness and poise with experience. Brasselle's claim to fame was his star role in "The Cantor Story" but he's come along enough since then that he can assuredly rely on himself. He's a definite throwback to entertainers and singers of the old Tin Pan Alley days. There's always room in boites for the bouncing, raucous personalities of those early days. "Show Business—That's It For Me," provides a fast opener for the young dynamo who bounces off "Hello My Baby" in breezy fashion and segues to "I'm Sorry I Made You Cry." His hits with "You Don't Need A Voice You Need A Gimmick," as he does tongue-in-cheek carbons of Frankie Laine, Billy Daniels, Billy Eckstine and Johnnie Ray, "I've Got A Crush On You," is a nice change-of-pace ballad before the star bleats his topper "Up Stage, Down Stage, On Stage." As usual, he winds with "Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor And Me," for a solid bowoff.

The DeMarco Sisters have a flare at harmony that's strictly superior. They give the show class, cheesecake and tone-blends that are strictly okay. "I'm Late" is a bouncy prelude to "Teach Me Tonight" and "Sisters," which gives the members of the young quintet a chance to solo. It's the best of a clicko repertoire.

Back to the nitery fray have come the Slate Bros. The vet trio do waltz clogs and softshoe terps that score and also bring back their fave baseball skit that's also good for laughs. Foil Fay Carroll (Mrs. Henry Slate) is cute in comic byplays and on a vocal.

The Ron. Fletcher Dancers execute a pair of nice routines with the able backing of the Teddy Phillips orch. Jack Elton is Brasselle's pianist-conductor who performs in standout manner. The show plays here three weeks. Bob.

Hotel Muehlebach, K. C.

Kansas City, March 25.

Dr. John-Giovannia, Voca-Lovlies (6), Tommy Reed Orch (8); $1 cover.

The Terrace Grill of the Muhleback has a somewhat offbeat lineup this season, and one sure to build as word of the pickpocket gets around. This is Dr. John Giovanni, long a standard turn and one of the tops, has never played a K.C. night spot. With songs and dancing by the girl sixsome, Voca-Lovlies, a pleasant 35 minutes is rounded out.

Six femmes concentrate on vocalling to get things under way, reeling off a trio of song montages in amiable fashion. They make a production of their fourth sequence, a round of Parisian songs, and toss in some line work and bit of the cancan to wind with a lively response.

Giovanni is a veteran of pickpocket work and in easy fashion demonstrates his handiness on a quintet of audience male "volunteers." Work is particularly effective in a intimate room of this type, where he works in the audience. He mixes in some sleight-of-hand work, a few card tricks, and generally keeps up interest. He also circulates in the room between shows. Quin.

Sans Souci, Miami B'ch

Miami Beach, March 26.

Denise Darcel, Paco Michele, Sacasas Orch; $3.50 minimum.

The French chantoosey is back for her annual date at an ocean-front hotel and doing right well draw-wise. The Blue Sails Room in this swankery is made to order for Denise Darcel, who takes full advantage of the intime layout to sell her sometimes vocally obscure, but always sexily projected lyrics, to the nightly assemblage.

The Gallic exuberance Miss Darcel possesses in such abundance overcomes the lack of tonal equipment, the gowning accenting her figure via a sheathlike white gown. Working at stand mike, or with stroller for engagements with ringsiders, she sells her fetching, albeit at times rambling, compote of tunes that stress the Parisian. Despite the fact that the auditors aren't familiar with the lingo, the songstress overcomes that problem with her ingratiating manner and tongue-in-cheek approach. What aids in the overall impact is the enthusiasm with which she attacks her work. Highlight is, per usual, the badinage with an oldster lured onto the floor. The night caught she picked a yock-maker who deadpanned a hilarious series of lines to her "flirtation" biz.

Paco Michele is a young Latin songster who, with more experience, should start hitting. As currently set up, his act contains too much talk. Tightening is indicated, with concentration on those full vocalistics in the south-of-the-border idiom he handles adeptly. He's a personable lad who sells strongly with the stage deportment on the plus side. Lary.

Gatineau, Ottawa

Ottawa, March 25.

Gaylords (3), Mia & Matti, Margee McGlory, Frederick & Tanya, Harry Pozy Orch (8); $1 admission.

The venerable Gatineau Country Club preemed its spring season (24) to top business in spite of the season's worst blizzard. With minor redecoration, Gatineau's proprietor Joe Saxe has added even more warmth to the already cozy room, and of course the presence of almost capacity mob helped with the comfort. Saxe has a clicko show on the floor for the club's initial week. Topped by the Gaylords, the unit works and balances smoothly.

Gaylords chant to begoffs every show in a fast-paced, quality stanza. Disclicks are balanced neatly by a comic session midway in the act using parodies and brief gabbing between Burt Bonaldi, the lead man, bassist Billy Crist and 88er Don Rea. Trio collects heavy, consistent mitting with nice arrangements of tunes like "Ramona," "Strings of My Heart," "No More" (with a hillbilly tinge) and "Shoemaker," all given expert handling.

Okay adagio terping of Frederick & Tanya includes samples of effective lifts and twirls but needs more variety in routines. Pair clicks with a class job on "Anniversary Waltz." Canary Margee McGlory is a crowd-pleaser with a brassy approach to w.k. pop tunes, plus a series of impressions of Kay Starr, Lena Horne, Pearl Bailey, even Satchmo. Mia & Matti have an impressive session of unusually graceful acro work. Stanza shows thoughtful preparation and routining and muscled male and femme get across a lot of difficult bends, lifts and balances without looking as though they were working at it.

Harry Pozy band seems to have improved from last season, providing boffo music for shows and dancing. Al Costi is again in the lounge on the chant-88 chores. Gorm.

Last Frontier, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 21.

Jack Carson (with Connie Towers), Gypsy Rose Lee (with Royal American Beauties (4), Deep River Boys (4), Frontier Girls (10), Garwood Van Orch (11); no cover or minimum.

The curtain drops in the Ramona Room, with its final layout a bright revue that leans sparklingly on the girls. Henceforth the shows will be viewed in the new Venus Room. Jack Carson and Gypsy Rose Lee divide marquee honors in this three-weeker, and solid biz has been scored since it opened.

Carson, for the most part, brings back the material he displayed on the Strip his last time at the post. He's a big, lovable guy who's standup, physical manner of tossing off jokes in typical of old vaude days. Carson as a film thesp overshadows the comedian as a nitery performer, although his personality is indisputably a ruggedly pleasing one. Each time he's on stage, the star overstays in the overlong (95 min.) show, as he keeps tossing off joke after joke. Lopping off the older material would be a big help in sharpening the amiable guy's act.

Connie Towers, back as his foil, is a singing hit with "Perfectly Wonderful" and her capsule score from "Porgy And Bess." She makes a nice impression in her work with Carson and serves him well, too, as the star teams with her for his best work, especially in his burlesque translation of her French lyrics in "Cherie."

Gypsy Rose Lee is a vibrant personality in a teasing, satirical strip routine. She cuts a handsome figure as she presents her four femme aides, billed as the Royal American Beauties, who admittedly can't sing or dance or cook. But they mete out plenty of pleasures in being just looked at, and they serve as enticing mannequins in Gypsy's big drape scene. Miss Lee's biggest yocks come behind a shadow screen onstage when she dresses, the intimate touches she applies carrying the laughs over as a greeting as she steps out in full gaze to begin instantly doffing again.

The Deep River Boys offer a nice repertoire of ditties including "When Your Smiling," "Count Your Blessings" and "Mr. Sandman," and rate a big hand for their close harmonies.

The Last Frontier Girls are eye-pleasing in a pair of production numbers backed by the able Garwood Van orch. Bob.

Seven Seas, Omaha

Omaha, March 19.

Wilder Bros., Al Lamm Trio; no cover or minimum.

If hard work, good musicianship and excellent vocalistics count, the Wilder Bros. have it. Warner Wilder is the leader with lookalikes George and Walt handling the end assignments. At show caught, boys started slow with straightaway "Old Man River" and "High and Mighty" before showing their versatility.

On a Texas medley, boys brought out guitars, which have dummy faces on the backs with movable mouths for a clever ventro bit. Then trio changes to sax version of "Holiday for Strings" in which each winds up playing a brother's instrument.

"Little Bit of Monkey in Us" is a clever novelty, followed by a "Melody of Love" sax turn and a "Nobody Knows" spiritual. For first encore, they do "Bottom of the Well" and on second callback the boys do a takeoff on the Rhythm Boys singing "Mississippi Mud," complete with dance shuffle. Trump.

Lake Club, Springf'd, Ill.

Springfield, Ill., March 26

Mills Bros. with Norman Brown, guitar; Jimmy Palmer Orch (11); $1.50 cover.

Three Mills Bros. with two strikes against them—blizzard weather and the absence of its fourth member—are scoring the biggest hit of the capital city season in their eight-day Lake Club engagement.

Despite an icebound opening weekend, the melodic freres drew capacity crowds and appear on their way to topping their own house record of two years ago. On the strength of their first two nights, (total five shows), the current boxoffice week should surpass recent winter smash engagements of the Nelson Eddy-Gale Sherwood duo and Frances Langford-Fellas ensemble.

Minus the venerable and talented "Skipper," father of the Mills freres, who is seriously ill, the vocal trio, assisted by guitarist Norman Brown, competently fill the melodic gap. Encore demands stretched their half-hour layout to 52 minutes and they exited to comeback cheers.

Opening with one of their recording smashes—"Glowworm," "Jones Boy," or "Paper Doll,"—it's memory time from there on out. Impromptu requests from attentive fans are fulfilled.

Midway the boys, backed by Jimmy Palmer's Dancing Shoes band, sans Jimmy, get equally favorable reception from their instrumental interpretations of jazz classics, "Basin Street Blues" and "Caravan." With this bit, mustachioed Donald takes the spotlight with vocal trombone simulations. Heretofore, happy Harry, lead baritone, is front and center. Rotund Herb, a carbon of Harry, has no solo mike stint, but he's in there with the harmony.

Following the vocal impressions, the brothers swing back to their sock repertoire, winning added ovations with everything from their initial 1929 recording, "Tiger Rag," to their newest Decca offering "Paper Valentine." Opening night ringsiders included Gov. and Mrs. William G. Stratton.

Show openers on the Mills bill are violinist Franz Bentler and pianist Carl Zimmerman, both brought into the nitery's main room from their "Little Room" podium. Introing with their own arrangement of "Gypsy Airs," the duo winds to heavy applause with "Jazz Pizzicato." Alex.

Kramer Thesis

may avail themselves of a guarantee of 10% of the gross as a profit if they show bona fide house expenses, Kramer revealed.

Concerning any hypothetical film distributed by UA, Kramer emphasized: "No longer must the statement be made that it had a wonderful gross but wouldn't Metro or 20th-Fox have done a few million dollars more?"

The filmmaker stated that UA has the domestic and foreign sales power and "we're going after this one ('Stranger') for top drawer." He underlined that the original book has had 28,000,000 to 30,000,000 readers, according to estimates by Scribner's, the publishers. The film "sell" will be unusually heavy, with an ad-pub budget of $1,200,000. "It has an all star cast and, I think, it's a good picture," commented Kramer.

UA's top grosser of all time is "Moulin Rouge," 1953 release which brought in $5,000,000 from the domestic market. Thus the company and Kramer have their sights on double the present record.

The producer stressed the long-term buildup for "Stranger." He did a country-wide tour ballying the book at first and is following this with similar work in advance of the film's opening, including more road work, a couple of appearances on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" tv'er, slotting of specially made pix for tv and early ad insertions, including a full pager in the N. Y. Times in April. "Stranger" is to preem in July.

All of this, opines Kramer, is giving the pic a "base," from which the big exhib and public money is to build, according to the blueprints.

Kramer both produced and directed "Stranger," as he will his next, "Pride and Passion." Latter, which rolls in Spain next December or January, likely will be done in the Paramount-fostered VistaVision process, which Kramer believes to be the best technique of them all because of its versatility.

"Stranger" was brought in at a negative cost of "a little under $2,000,000," UA provided the capital and no one is in on a participation, Kramer reported.

Omaha Junket

Steinberg, Bob Montgomery, Burt Champion and Gabe Sumner.

Also in from Gotham was Lt. Col. Hugh Day, who was "project officer," that is, in charge of arrangements and execution for the SAC, and who's staying in close tie with Par to facilitate promotional coordination with the distributor during subsequent handling of "SAC." Coincidentally, Day, shortly after World War II, when he was making like a civilian, had a job with George Weltner's Par International Dep't., operating in Singapore, India and other global points. Remittances got tough so he rejoined the service.

Planes from both Coasts hit SAC's Offutt base here Friday (25). The journalists (meaning those who tote typewriters) and less impressive newspapermen thereupon launched a full-programmed weekend, including receptions, pic preem, inspection of planes and "briefings" by general officers at Offutt.

Asides to the junket included a tour of a couple of Omaha spots for a party of H'wood and Gotham tourists, conducted by VARIETY and World-Herald rep Glenn Trump, and some local newspaper stories which a few callers from the two Coasts thought worth a conversational play. On the day of arrival, the Omaha headlines concerned closing of local houses of flowers, and on day of departure the news concerned a prison riot in nearby Lincoln.

Treating Or Tricking Hitler

Difference in the American and German attitudes vis-a-vis Hitler and the Nazis is pointed up in the question of whether or not the Germans should go through with making a film on the July 20, 1944, attempt on Hitler's life.

To the average American, the assassination try, ill-fated as it was, nevertheless represented a heroic attempt to do away with a mad dictator.

To the average German, the issue isn't quite as clear. Many Germans apparently feel that the military men involved in the "putsch" were actually traitors violating their oath of allegiance and plotting against their own country.

New German Pix Heavies

be hard for Americans to follow or swallow.

Started With '08/15'

The cycle of films, the majority of them firmly anti-war and some quite anti-Nazi in tone, started with "08/15," described as a farce on German army barracks life. Based on the H. H. Kirst novel, it was an impressive grosser in Germany. Since its release, subsequent features have skipped the light touch, there being a tendency to concentrate on the struggle between the military and the S.S., the latter being the musclemen for Hitler and the party.

Among the titles forthcoming here are "Der Letzte Akt," (The Last Chapter), an Austrian production on the final days of Hitler; "Rittmeister Wronski"; "Kinder, Muetter Und Ein General" (Children, Mother and a General), which Erich Pommer made and Laslo Benedek directed and which is strongly anti-war.

"Verraht an Deutschland" (Treason Against Germany) and "Unternehmen Edelweiss" (Project Edelweiss). Upcoming, too, is a film on the July 20, 1944, attempt against Hitler's life.

Travelers returning to the U. S. from Germany, including Americans who worked in films there, see the current German preoccupation with the final chapter of the Hitler period as a healthy symptom but admit that the films are highly colored and, to an extent, represent an apologia for the mass of Germans who played Hitler's game with no visible absence of enthusiasm although eschewing the excesses of the S.S. guard.

Ideas and Consequences

"Naziism is no longer a real issue in Germany today," one American observer commented. "They now have other problems, so they can afford to look back at themselves. In many of their films the message seems to be: There was nothing wrong with the Nazi ideology, just the methods that went along with it. It's difficult for an American to take this divorce of idea from their consequences but it's quite easy for the German's."

There is wide agreement that the one topic the German producers cannot and will not touch, other than in passing, is the persecution of the Jews. It's given space in "The Devil's General," for instance, but touched on only lightly.

Explanation for this lack of interest in Germany's anti-semitic excesses up to the end of the war is that German audiences won't stand for it, and the topic is b.o. poison. "A psychiatrist probably could explain it quite easily," said one industryite just back from Berlin.

Still Like Uniforms

It's felt, on the other hand, that the popularity of war films, even if they don't show the Germans in a good light, may in part be due to the pleasure the German public takes in seeing the uniforms and the hustle-bustle of militaristic wartime Germany recreated and come to the life on the screen.

Point made is that these semi-documentary anti-World War II films come at a time when the Bonn government has approved the re-militarization of Germany in the face of pronounced public apathy vs. such a policy. A film like "canaris," for instance-strongly anti-war—is cleaning up.

In most of the German war films, the regular "Wehrmacht" officers are portrayed as hard-headed traditionalists, fighting the black-uniformed S.S. elite guard for control. This struggle is graphically outlined in "Canaris," which tells the story of Germany's counter-intelligence chief who eventually was executed in one of Hitler's concentration camps, hours before the Americans arrived. It's also the backbone of the "Devil's General" film. Latter is probably more out-and-out anti-Nazi than any of the rest.

At the same time, while this may be accepted by the German public, observers feel that Americans may be more forcefully struck by the fact that the heroes in either one of these films give their professional best to the Hitler cause and seemingly close their eyes and ears to anything excepting the pros and cons involving their military interests.

While the tenor of some of these new German imports is certainly new, indie importers recall a number of German productions that followed in the immediate postwar period. Several of these, such as "Marriage in the Shadows" and "Murderers Among Us," did deal in stark fashion with Nazi brutality and expounded on Germany's guilt in the murder of Jews and others opposing the Nazi regime.

Hearst Favors

some kind of control setup might be worked through the U. S. Embassy in Moscow if the industry should decide to sell films to the Soviets. He said such American films as are playing in Russia appear very popular with local audiences.

(Editorial addendum: Hollywood isn't selling its pix to the Reds at this moment and no change in this policy is immediately in sight. The U. S. State Dept. appears to have withdrawn any official objections it might have had to American films going to Russia, but at the same time it hasn't prodded the industry to make a deal. Apart from several practical considerations, the Motion Picture Export Assn. fears the p.r. aspects of doing business with the Russians. It is precisely the Hearst press which, execs feel, may twist any pic deal with Moscow to distort its real purposes in the public's mind.)

portion going back to 1951. In 1953 deal was made for remittance covering accruals up to August, 1952. Present deal covers period since that date to Dec. 31, 1954. Total frozen up to that time was 268,000,000 Chilean pesos. Although the official rate for the Chilean currency is 200 per dollar, the free market rate has reached over 375.

Film companies' efforts to extract dollars from dollar-hungry Exchange Control Board (CONDECOR — National Council for Foreign Trade) saw daylight when CONDECOR authorized Anglo-Lautaro Nitrate Co. to sell $1,000,000 at free market rate. It was unofficially reported that this authorization was granted in order to permit the nitrate enterprise to cover salary increases to personnel. Final deal of distribs calls for them to pick up $500,000 at a rate of 368 per dollar, representing a total remittance of 184,000,000 pesos. That means that 84,000,000 pesos remain frozen for the time being.

Half million-dollar remittance was divided up among the companies percentagewise.

George Weltner

initiative on the part of the overseas theatre operator, U.S. films enjoy a boffo impact which has created merchandising values almost equal to the domestic (U.S. and Canadian) grosses. Weltner feels, also, that with the world growing ever smaller, what with plane travel and a greater awareness of the foreign attitudes, "perhaps the picture business has awakened to what has long been true in other industries—petrol, textiles, heavy machinery, automobiles, and the like."

Universal was the first to segue its foreign sales chief, Alfred E. Daff, into the key position of worldwide sales manager (although in Daff's instance, as executive veepee of the company, he now divides his time between New York and the Hollywood production line almost 50-50). Arthur Loew's impact on the Culver City setup at Metro is another instance where the overseas market and its sensitivities to certain standards will get increased attention on the production front. For a time, when the Relph Stolkin regime was in RKO, there was a move also for Arnold Picker to handle both the domestic as well as the foreign sales supervision. Richard W. Altschuler, Republics worldwide sales chief, is another instance and so's Walter Branson at RKO.

Australia

ernment's action is figured to save some £75,000,000 (around $168,500,000) on the nation's import bill for the next fiscal year.

The angle is to slow down the fast-dropping level of Australia's funds in London. Cuts will be hardest on Britain and European countries. As far as pix are concerned, that means mostly British imports.

The new restrictions go further than cuts imposed last September. The group goods in several categories, with pix coming within the "administrative" class. That means that while the aim is to reduce expenditures by about 20%, particular commodities are not subject to arbitrary percentage reductions. Thanks to this type of treatment, British films got by without ill effects during a restrictive program eight years ago.

British film reps here say it's too early to know, but they feel this time it's more serious, and they expect to feel the pinch. Since it's unlikely that Australia will limit imports, the government probably will limit remittances of earnings.

property rights without due process of law, and the said statute is void, being in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States" and also of the N. Y. Constitution.

Referring to license fees collected by the N. Y. board, London argued that such fees impose "a tax on the right of commupication by means of motion picture films" and therefore violate the 1st and 14th Amendments of the Constitution. In its "Miracle" ruling, the Supreme Court established the equality of films and the press in their rights to claim protection of these Amendments.

London's point, which he brought up some years back in Ohio, and in which he was upheld by a lower court, is that no one can (by tax) be compelled to purchase the right of communication. This reasoning does not, of course, extend to the right to tax proceeds from the sale of newspapers or of films.

Analogy quoted is the one used by the Supreme Court: "It is one thing to impose a tax on the income or property of a preacher. It is quite another to exact a tax from him for the privilege of delivering a sermon."

C'Scope Impact

also lagging behind the comparable period in 1954 with expectations for the second quarter much better.

Worldwide film rentals of 20th went up from $105,662,266 in 1953 to $106,355,068 last year. Other operating income also rose by $1,500,000 to $8,525,607 in 1954. Amortization of film costs, taken on the same basis as in prior years, dropped to 59,737,016 in 1954 from $67,932,758 in 1953. Film distribution and administrative expenses were up in 1954 by over $3,000,000, from $28,223,295 in '53 to $31,593,279 last year.

The net of $8,044,524 was after $7,500,000 in Federal income taxes compared to 3,650,000 in taxes on a $4,560,887 net in 1953.

Networks Facing

there was nothing they could do about it. They couldn't put up strong opposition to the plan, for to be represented as "the network vs. the people" would only make for unpopularity.

Major rap will come from the fact that the through-October two-hour differential between the east and the midwest (which bypasses daylight saving completely) will have the effect of throwing major shows that are in Class A time into Class B and even Class C segments by the time they hit the western sections of the country, throwing the whole cost-of-show rate structure out of kilter. And since all the major clients will be back for the October ride it adds up to more coin than the networks care to contemplate.

A Spade Is a Spade Is a Spade

- Out-of-town reports that the language of Tennessee Williams' "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" wasn't for the kiddies was confirmed by five of the seven N. Y. daily newspaper critics following the play's Broadway opening last Thursday night (24). Only two reviewers who didn't mention the gab as being racy were Brooks Atkinson (Times) and Walter F. Kerr (Herald Tribune).

- Lightest of the references to the play's language was William Hawkins' (World-Telegram & Sun) comment, ". . . it writhes and yowls and bares the souls of its participants with a shameless tongue." John Chapman (News) was more severe, stating, "I felt also that the considerable amount of dirty talk in it was mere boyish bravado and rather pointless."

- The other three crix, Robert Coleman (Mirror) John McClain (Journal American) and Richard Watts Jr. (Post), all played up the spade-is-a-spade angle. Comments were: "The language is the strongest heard hereabout in quite a spell. Williams doesn't call a spade a spade, but rather a steam shovel" (Coleman). "Along the way it seemed to me there was unnecessary vulgarity and embarrassing expletive. We know a spade is a spade, but it doesn't have to be a dirty, fetid, miserable, filthy garden implement. Mr. Williams shouldn't have to resort to that." (McClain). Watts tagged the language "both lyric and lewd" and then went on to note that the play ". . . takes a naturalistic relish in calling spades by their real names."

New Snag in Equity-Chorus Tie Over Retention of CE Attorney

The proposed Actors Equity and Chorus Equity merger has hit a new snag. Latest block to consolidation of the two unions is the Chorus membership's demand that their attorney, Rebecca Brownstein, represent Chorus in the merged organization. Majority of Equity Council members are understood to be against such a move and it was expected that the proposal would be vetoed at yesterday's (Tues.) Council meet.

At last Friday's (26) Chorus Equity membership meet a resolution that Miss Brownstein's retention be an absolute condition of the merger received an almost unanimous affirmative vote. However, such top echelon Chorus members as May Muth, who's on the Equity Council, and Ralph Strain and Douglas Rideout are understood to be against the stipulation. Both Rideout and Strain are on the Chorus exec committee and are also members of the merger negotiating committee.

One of the negating factors against retaining Miss Brownstein is understood to be financial. It's understood salary payment to her would far exceed the coin presently being shelled out by Actors Equity to its legal staff. Miss Brownstein had formerly been attorney for both Equity and Chorus Equity,

Shift in Lineup of Equity Nominating Committee But Conservatives Rule

Makeup of the recently-elected Actors Equity nominating committee has been changed slightly, with the conservatives still retaining their five-four margin. Two of the members of the committee were unable to attend the initial meet last Monday (28), necessitating permanent replacements.

Of the three council representatives, John Emery has been succeeded by George Ives. Former is currently on the Coast and was therefore unable to show up for the meet. Ives is regarded as a liberal, while the other council members on the committee, Lois Wilson, chairman, and John Drew Devereaux, are considered middle-the-roaders, as is Emery.

Of the six membership reps elected, William Tabbert has been replaced by Patsy O'Shea. Former got tied up in traffic and failed to get to the meet by starting time. Both Tabbert and Miss O'Shea are regarded as conservatives, as are the other membership reps except John Kerr, who's considered liberal. The four other members are Leif Erickson, Peggy Wood, Alexander Clark and David Orrick.

'Colony' to Open 15th Roanoke Season July 1

Greensboro, N.C., March 29.

Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," will open its 15th season in Waterside Theatre at Fort Raleigh, on Roanoke Island, July 1. The show was launched here in 1937.

General Manager Dick Jordan has set island tryouts for parts in the show. The tryouts are held under the supervision of Samuel Selden, supervisory director of "The Lost Colony."

Kiepuras Wind Vienna Run; Sked Brit. Stay

Jan Kiepura and his wife, Marta Eggerth, returned to New York last week after a 106-performance holdover run in Vienna in Franz Lehar's "Zarewitsch." Couple had originally been slated for a 22-performance stand in the operetta.

Duo return to Europe next month for a scheduled three-month run at the Palace Theatre, London, in "Merry Widow."

Road 'Men' Winds To 85G Profit

"Oh Men, On Women" wound up its road tour at the Harris, Chicago, last Saturday (26), at an approximate $85,000 profit on a $70,000 investment. As of a March 12 accounting, the net profit on the Cheryl Crawford-Anderson Lawler production was $85,736. Show broke about even on its final two weeks since then, with closing costs and other expenses bringing the windup profit figure to around $85,000.

Profit for the two weeks prior to the March 12 accounting was $85 for the week ending March 5. The Edward Chodorov comedy broke even the ensuing week, with the author waiving $291 and the Harris Theatre, where show was in its 14th frame, reimbursing the production $797 to eliminate a loss. As of the accounting, distributed profit totalled $59,000, with $833 available for distribution.

Show made a $69,561 profit on its 390-performance Broadway run, which ended last Nov. 13. Profit on the road tour, which began Nov. 15, was $16,175 as of the accounting. Ralph Bellamy starred in the touring production in the role originated on Broadway by Franchot Tone and later played by Lloyd Bridges.

NEW MUSICAL TENT IS SET FOR PHILLY AREA

Philadelphia, March 29.

Latest addition to the summer theatre sweepstakes is the Valley Forge Music Fair, 1,500-seat tent show which will present Broadway musicals and operettas for an 11-week season starting June 23 and continuing through Sept. 10.

Located in the picturesque Schuylkill Valley and easily accessible to Philly by the Expressway, the Valley Forge venture will be produced by Lee Guber, local hotelman and nitery owner; Frank Ford, WPEN radio announcer, and Shelly Gross, WFIL-TV announcer and personality.

Herman E. Krawitz, of the Met Opera administrative stage department, has been signed as managing director. A permanent company of dancers and singers will be engaged, with new principals selected for each week's production.

Margo Jones Bows 'Ghost' In Dallas Three-Weeker

Dallas, March 29.

Margo Jones will try out Stephen Grey's mystery-comedy, "Ghost of a Chance," Monday (4) at Theatre '55 for three weeks. Season's windup will be "La Belle Luiu," April 25-May 14. Preeming musical is by co-authors Frederick Jackson and Irving Phillips, with music by Offenbach and Charles Previn.

A summer season of five new scripts has been skedded by Miss Jones at her arena theatre, June 13-Aug. 21.

'King' Return Visit to Chi Finds Crix Friendlier; Upgrade 1st Reactions

Chicago, March 29.

Return visit to "King and I" by the four firststring Chicago critics last week to appraise Leonard Graves as the replacement for Yul Brynner resulted in some interesting re-evaluations of other components of the Rodgers & Hammerstein tourer.

Opening notices when the show arrived here last November were characterized by VARIETY as two pans (Cassidy, Tribune; Dettmer, American); and two affirmatives (Kogan, Sun-Times; Harris, Daily News). Last week's followups by the same quartet fairly rate as unanimously favorable for both Graves and the play itself.

Claudia (Trib) Cassidy's first review described the production as a "thin shadow of its once sumptuous self" with the comedy broadened, "sometimes to slapstick." She stated, however, it was not a "rundown version of the original." After the second look she commented only that the road version "is a vastly different show from the (Broadway) original," and that Patricia Morison, the star, and Graves make an amusing couple, with the emphasis on comedy. As for the "Uncle Tom" ballet sequence which drew the earlier comment that it had "degenerated into archness, fallen archness," the followup noted that it had "recovered much of its oblique charm."

Roger Dettmer of the American, who tabbed the opening night as "astonishing unmagical," with particular barbs for Miss Morison as the "weak link," noted that Graves handled his promotion most ably and that the star "sometimes" projects a "warmth and authority new to her work since November."

Although his first report was generally favorable, Herman Kogan of the Sun-Times upgraded his opinion of Miss Morison's work. He said he found her "unappealing" on opening night, but she "entranced me completely on this second visit."

The News' Sydney Harris' unqualified opening rave was echoed in his followup which called it "an engrossing musical play."

Miss Cassidy, incidentally, finaled her return piece with the report that the show had piled up a net gross of $800,000 during its 17 weeks at the Shubert and that there's still nearly $100,000 in advance sales.

'Plain' for Coast

Los Angeles, March 29.

"Plain and Fancy," current Broadway musical, will be presented here in duplicate this Summer as the fourth show of the L.A. Civic Opera Assn. season. Deal was set by Edwin Lester and the producers of the musical, Richard Kollmar, James W. Gardiner and Yvette Shumer.

The arrangement follows a pattern established in previous seasons for concurrent local runs of "Kiss Me Kate" and "Guys and Dolls."

Playwrights, Feuer & Martin 'Divide' B'way With 3 Hits Each Current

The Playwrights Co. and Feuer & Martin are "monopolizing" Broadway. Each management has three shows currently on the boards, all either sellouts or proven hits.

For the Playwrights, it's a continuation of last season's win parlay of "Sabrina Fair," "Tea and Sympathy" and "Ondine." Production firm's only miss that semester was "The Winner." This season, outfit has already scored with "Bad Seed" and is almost sure to ditto with "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Besides these two productions, "Tea" is still playing to a profit, although grosses have dipped substantially in recent months. However, the road company of "Tea," with Deborah Kerr starring, is racking up sizable returns for the Playwrights. Org also had two clinkers this season, "All Summer Long" and "Traveling Lady."

With "Seed" and "Cat" added to the hit list, that gives the Playwrights 18 winners out of 38 productions in its 16 years of operation. Unlike last season when, for the first time, none of the original member dramatists was represented by clicks, this semester has Maxwell Anderson on tap as adaptor of "Seed," based on a novel by William Marsh. "Cat" was written

Drury Lane Out for Brit. 'Pajama'; R&H Link Holds

London, March 29.

Jerome Whyte, who returned to London last week for an extended stay, told VARIETY that "Pajama Game" was definitely committed to open in London this year, but it would not be staged at the Drury Lane. Decision in regard to theatre is likely within a few weeks.

At Drury Lane it's intended to maintain the Rodgers & Hammerstein link, and "The King and I," which has been running since October, 1953, will be succeeded by "Pipe Dream." London production will be planned after the Broadway opening.

'Tops' Into Black In 18th Road Week

"Pajama Tops" is operating at a profit, having recouped its $25,000 investment during its 18th week on the road, ending last March 12. Other than "Moon Is Blue," which closed at a profit several weeks ago, the H. Clay Blaney-Rex Carlton production is the only one of a rash of twofer tourers this season that has paid off.

As of March 19, profit on the Mawby Green-Ed Feilbert adaptation was $3,038. As of a Feb. 26 accounting, production had $5,145 to recoup. Operating profit for the following two weeks, ending March 12, was $6,992, leaving a net profit of $1,847. Profit for the following frame, ending March 19, was $1,191, bringing the total profit as of that date to $3,038.

Capitalization on the show was raised to $25,250 when two cast members took a $250 interest in the production in lieu of salary Christmas week, when biz dropped off considerably. Production is at the Shubert, Washington, this week.

TALLU, 'CHARLES' PRODS. SETTLE SALARY TIFF

Chicago, March 29.

Tallulah Bankhead, starring in the touring "Dear Charles," has made her peace with producers Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers over a salary adjustment during the comedy's Chicago run. Miss Bankhead agreed to a cut from $5,000 to $3,000 weekly during the last two weeks of the four-week Windy City stand, but the stipend goes back to $5,000 during the balance of the tour.

Show leaves the Erlanger here Saturday (2), lays off next week and opens in St. Louis April 11 for two weeks, and then moves to the Coast.

McAvoy to Run Somerset Strawhat Next Summer

Somerset, Mass., March 29.

The Somerset Playhouse will be operated by John J. McAvoy next summer. Barn, which was taken over by Fred and Martha Miller last year, had previously been operated by Sara Stamm. McAvoy, who's been manager of the Empire Theatre here for the past six years, acted as manager of the Playhouse for three seasons from 1951-54.

Season is slated to run from June 27 through Sept. 3, with theatre employing a star policy. Silo will also switch from the routine Wednesday and Saturday matinees to Wednesday and Friday afternoon showings.

Add 'Kate' for L. A. Opera

Los Angeles, March 29.

Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate," with Met Opera star Jean Fenn in the title role, will launch the L.A. Civic Light Opera Assn.'s 18th annual season May 2 at the Philharmonic Aud.

Schedule also includes "Pajama Game," "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy."

Chi Off-Broadway Group Halted Till Court Rules On Bldg., Fire Law Status

Chicago, March 29.

Playwrights Theatre Club, town's sole permanent rep group operating under an off-Broadway type Equity agreement, is currently homeless because its Near North quarters have been ruled out of bounds for use as a theatre under existing fire and building laws. Issue hinges on whether the group operates as a club or as a regular theatre under the more stringent fire ordinances, with a court ruling on its status expected this week.

Meanwhile, Playwrights is going ahead with a production of "Oedipis Rex," with William Marshall starred, which will be staged at the Eleventh St. Theatre this Saturday and Sunday (2-3). If the court finds the group can operate as a club, it'll return to its Dearborn St. location, continuing with "Rex."

'AWEIGH' ANKLES OUT OF N. HAVEN IN TRIM STYLE

New Haven, March 29.

A week of surgery sent "Ankles Aweigh" out of this harbor Saturday (26) an improved product as it headed for two weeks in Boston. Local run picked up several knots in speed as the nine-performance stand wore on, and final show shaped up promisingly.

Mark Dawson, replacement for Sonny Tufts in the male lead, was skedded to take over at the Saturday matinee but a mild virus held him under wraps. Tufts finished out the week.

Unusual demonstration of personal regard in which Tufts was held by all concerned came when producers presented him with a wrist watch and the company followed suit with cuff links and an engraved cigaret case.

Six Musicals Lined Up For Cleve. Barn's 2d Year

Cleveland, March 29.

Johnny Price's Musicarnival tent theatre, which has six musicals definitely lined up for its second season, turns on its lights June 10 with "Kiss Me Kate." With exception of "Kate," set for 17 days, and "South Pacific," starting a three-week date June 27, most of the shows will run two weeks.

Bob Hope, who grew up in Cleveland, still owns a substantial hunk of stock in the 1,500-seat strawhatter built next to Thistle Down Race Track in nearby Warrensville Heights. Following first two shows, Price will stage "Die Fledermaus," July 18-31; "Brigadoon," Aug 1-14; "Wish You Were Here," Aug. 15-28, and "Guys and Dolls," Aug. 29 through Sept. 11.

Enough Monkey Biz

Legit publicist Arthur Cantor apparently doesn't want to get typed as a monkey's p.a. Last year the drumbeater was approached by Julian Clayman to handle publicity on his proposed presentation of N. Richard Nash's "Monkey Trial." The play, based on the Scopes trial, however, never went into production. This season Cantor got the ballyhoo assignment for the upcoming Herman Shumlin-Margo Jones Broadway production of "Inherit the Wind," also based on the Scopes affair.

Shortly after going to work on "Wind," he received a bid to promote J. Fred Muggs, the chimpanzee. He nixed the offer.

Brit. Equity Maps Showdown About Foreign Artists

London, March 29.

British Actors Equity is making plans for a showdown with the Minister of Labor if differences on the question of employing foreign artists aren't settled. If an upcoming session being arranged between the union and the Minister is ineffective, a work ban may be introdueed.

The union's main beef is that it is not always consulted by the government department before a work permit is granted. And even in cases where there have been consultations, they have at times been overruled.

Encouraged by the fact that a threat of industrial action last year secured the withdrawal of an application, the Equity Council now declares it will not hesitate to instruct members to refuse to work with foreign artists whose permits have been issued either without consultation or against their advice.

Total number of foreign artists permitted to perform in Britain last year was 806, against 940 in 1953 and 753 in 1952. Equities is "reasonably even," and that rather more British artists performed under the American union's jurisdiction than U.S. artists performed here in spheres covered by the American organization.

The situation in films, however, is completely different, with a ratio of eight Yank actors in British pix to every British actor joining the Screen Artists Guild. In the previous year the proportion was four to one.

The Equity annual report suggests that the SAG derives no satisfaction from the situation, taking the view that productions abroad employ only one or more American stars, while the work which should be secured by their feature and supporting artists goes to British performers.

Revived Marker Musicals Getting Big Play O'Seas

Two musicals, with tunes by Leonard Marker, are getting strong revival play in Europe. They're "Why Do You Lie, Cherie?" and "The Ministry Is Insulted." Former, which was originally produced in Vienna in 1936 and ran for about 10 years, is currently being presented in Hamburg and Regensburg, Germany, while the latter, which opened in Vienna during the '37-'38 season, is currently at the Raimund Theatre, Vienna. "Ministry" was also produced last year in Munich. Hans Lengsfelder and S. Tisch did the book for both tuners, with B. Engler joining in on "Ministry."

Marker recently wrote the piano arrangements and vocal and instrumental passages for "Ten Operatic Masterpieces," published by BMI, Ricordi and Scribners. New York Times music critic Olin Downes did the text for the book.

Inside Stuff—Legit

"Desperate Hours" and "Pajama Game" copped the American Theatre Wing "Tony" awards as the outstanding dramatic play and musical, respectively, for the period March 1, 1954—March 1, 1955. Other Antoinette ("Tony") Perry awards, presented last Sunday (27) at the Hotel Plaza, N. Y., by Wing prexy Helen Hayes, went to Alfred Lunt ("Quadrille"), Nancy Kelly ("Bad Seed"), Walter Slezak ("Fanny") and Mary Martin ("Peter Pan") for distinguished star performances. Occasion marked the ninth annual "Tony" presentations.

Also nabbing "Tony" medallions for outstanding featured performances were Francis L. Sullivan ("Witness for the Prosecution"), Patricia Jessel (also "Witness"), Cyril Ritchard ("Pan") and Carol Haney ("Game"). Additional "Tony" awards went to scene designer Oliver Messel ("House of Flowers"), costume designer Cecil Beaton ("Quadrille"), director Robert Montgomery ("Hours"), choreographer Robert Fosse ("Game"), stage technician Richard Rodda ("Pan") and conductor Thomas Schippers (notably for "Saint of Bleeker Street").

Off-Broadway also got into the act this year with a "Tony" going to Proscenium Productions (Sybil Trubin, Robert Merriman, Warren Enters) for "Way of the World" and "Thieves' Carnival." Scrolls were issued to Joseph Hayes and Howard Erskine, producers of "Hours," and Frederick Brisson, Robert E. Griffith and Harold S. Prince, "Pajama" producers. Hayes, incidentally, adapted "Hours" from his own novel.

Dick Adler and Jerry Ross also received a Tony for their "Pajama" score, while Mrs. Louise Beck and Esther Hawley were surprised with plaques at the Sunday distribution. Mrs. Beck, who's owner of the Martin Beck Theatre, N. Y., and one of the founders of the Wing, is org's secretary and board chairman. Miss Hawley is the Wing's exec secretary.

Prince Littler, British theatre tycoon, whose interests include the chairmanship of Stoll Theatres Corp., Associated Theatre Properties and Moss Empires, as well as the managing directorship of the Drury Lane, was profiled by the London Evening Standard last week in their series 'The Bosses of London." Piece was penned by Milton Shulman, the paper's drama scribe.

Shulman quoted Littler as saying: "I am not in this business for fun. I don't feel we have to put on artistic things that lose money. I am only in my position so long as the shareholders are happy." Describing Littler as a man who always exudes the same down-to-earth approach to a notoriously head-in-the-clouds industry, Shulman observed: "Considering the power he wields in his West End Empire, his parents seem to have been unduly reticent in christening him 'Prince' when they might, with some justice, have made it 'Tsar'."

Polan Banks, who was identified in last week's account having to do with his forthcoming musical. "If I Were Queen," states that Thomas Kilpartick is not only general manager but also co-producer of the play; and (2), that is not only a "former screenwriter and novelist" but also a film producer. His last pic for RKO, "My Forbidden Past," costarred Ava Gardner and Robert Mitchum. Musical book is by Banks and William Gaxton; lyrics by Ogden Nash; score by J. Fred Coots. Banks' letterhead has Gaxton also billed as of the production team.

Playbill for the Elaine Perry production of "Anastasia," currently at the Lyceum Theatre, N. Y. credits John P. Matthews with "valuable suggestions" in connection with the preparation of the American versions of the Marcelle Maurette play. According to a management rep, Matthews, who's a drama professor at Brandeis U., Waltham, Mass., was called in to o.o. Guy Bolton's English adaptation and to offer advice. He gets a royalty for his services. Besides teaching, Matthews is also a playwright. His play, "Michael and Lavinia," was tried out last summer at the Theatre-by-the-Sea, Matunuck, R. I.

A special program of excerpts from Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" will be read by Arnold Moss, now in "The Dark Is Light Enough," as one of the highlights of WNYC, N. Y.'s, third annual Book Festival, week of April 1. It will be followed by comments by Gay Wilson Allen, author of Whitman's latest biography, "The Solitary Singer." A solo concert program of the same was recently given by Moss at the Library of Congress in Washington, which will shortly release a long-playing record of the readings.

Equity Review

Joan of Lorraine

Equity Library Theatre revival of drama in two acts by Maxwell Anderson. Direction, Norman Hall; scenery, Zvi Geyra; lighting, Philip Hymes. At Lenox Hill Playhouse, N.Y., March 16, '55.

Cast: Stan Challis, Ailsa Dawson, Charles Williamson, David Warren, Brad Olson, Gene Gross, William L. Myers, Philip S. Goodman, Zola Long, Jay Barney, Paul Shyre, Elizabeth Lawrence, Walter Massey, James Vickery.

As an actor's showcase, "Joan of Lorraine" serves ELT well. One of the most proficient casts of the current Lenox Hill season has been rounded up and, under Norman Hall's smoothly-paced direction, the performances are uniformly good.

Maxwell Anderson's version of the Joan legend, however, does not make consistently exciting theatre. The dramatic action frequently rests by the wayside while the author philosophizes, with a resultant slowing down of the play's emotional drive.

The play-within-a-play technique demands versatility of the cast. As handled by the ELT-ers, there is clarity, drama, humor and spasmodic tension. The company is paced by Elizabeth Lawrence's vitality as the Maid. Miss Lawrence plays with good emotion and physical grace and if her Joan is predominantly intellectual, this seems to be largely due to Anderson's concept.

Jay Barney does the director-inquisitor stint with sharpness and crisp aplomb. Paul Shyre's Dauphin is a petulantly witty portrait and James Vickery has quiet intensity as the Bastard. Gene Gross plays the skeptic poet with much skill and later is compassionate as Joan's confessor. Among the balance of the company, Brad O'son and William L. Myers are particularly able.

Everybody Asks Into Credits Act

The old chestnut about a play having everything in it but the kitchen sink has taken on a new wrinkle. Now it's the production program credits that include practically everyone connected with the show except the producer's wife.

The "everybody wants to get into the act" routine has spread to attorneys, accountants, advertising reps, secretaries and production assistants. Billings on these classifications are augmenting such credits as general manager, company manager, pressagent and stage manager.

Two recent shows to open on Broadway this season are indicative of this credit splurge. Productions are Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin's "Silk Stockings" and Robert Whitehead and Roger L. Stevens' "Bus Stop." Credits on the musical include office manager, secretary and hair stylist, while billings on the William Inge play include accountant, staff secretary and advertising rep.

So far this season, legalites have been listed on nine Broadway productions, while auditors have racked up six mentions and ad reps have nabbed space on 11 presentations. Secretaries have been given credit on 17 productions, while 10 offerings have listed production sides.

A new listing on two shows this season, "Anastasia" and "Fanny," is speech consultant.

Bad Weather Fouls Chi Loop Biz; 'King' $36,300, 'Tea' $29,900, Tallu 17G

Chicago, March 29.

Loop biz skidded last week under the impact of bad weather and Lenten doldrums. First-of-the-week and matinee trade was especially hard hit.

New entries next month are "The Rainmaker," Erlanger, April 11, for four weeks on subscription, and "The Tender Trap," Harris, April 12, for a run.

Estimates for Last Week

Dear Charles, Erlanger (3d wk) ($5; 1,300) (Tallulah Bankhead). Over $17,000 (previous week, $19,100); lays off next week but resumes tour April 11.

King and I, Shubert (18th wk) $5; 2,100) (Patricia Morison). Over $36,300 (previous week, $48,200).

Oh Men, Oh Women, Harris (16th wk) ($5; 1,000) (Ralph Bellamy). Nearly $14,400 (previous week, $14,400); closed Saturday (26).

Tea and Sympathy, Blackstone (3d wk) ($4.50; 1,500) (Deborah Kerr). Topped $29,900 (previous week, $29,000).

'Honeys' $23,100, 'Complex' 14G, Hub

Boston, March 29.

Legit biz was sturdy here last week, with both entries faring okay at the b.o. "The Honeys" wound its two-week stand at the Plymouth with the final week slightly topping the initialer, despite the fact that Dorothy Stickney has been out of the cast since March 17 due to a virus attack. "Champagne Complex" wound its first week at the Wilbur with a satisfactory gross, the current (final) week shaping stronger.

"Ankles Aweigh," which bows into the Shubert tonight (Tues.) for two weeks, is the lone newcomer this stanza. "The fifth Season," braving the Holy Week bugaboo, moves into the Plymouth next Monday (4) for three weeks.

Estimates For Last Week

Champagne Complex, Wilbur (1st wk) ($3.85; 1,200) (Donald Cook, Polly Bergen, John Dall). Nice $14,000. Final week is current.

The Honeys, Plymouth (2d wk) ($3.85; 1,200) (Jessica Tandy, Hume Cronyn). Topped previous week with slick $23,100. House is dark.

'ANKLES' HEFTY $50,100 FOR NINE IN N. HAVEN

New Haven, March 29.

Solid response to preem of "Angles Aweigh" at the Shubert last week (19-26) pulled a hefty gross into the coffers. Nine performances (including several SRO) at $5.50 top garnered at fat $50,100.

String of musical breakins continues with "Damn Yankees," opening Saturday (2), and following with a full week (4-9). "Seventh Heaven" tees off April 16-23, and "Kismet" opens road tour April 25-30.

'Pajama' Hot $47,200 In 1st Toronto Frame

Toronto, March 29.

With only a few unsold singles for Wednesday matinee (23), "The Pajama Game" chalked up a hefty $47,200 for turnaway biz at all other performances on the first week of a fortnight's engagement at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, with the 1,525-seater scaled at $6 top.

Second (current) week is entirely sold out at $47,600; or a total of $94,800 for the Toronto date. (Matinees are $4 top).

'Season' Okay $14,200 For Cleveland Stand

Cleveland, March 29.

"Fifth Season," with Joseph Buloff and Chester Morris, brought a good $14,200 into the Hanna last week at a $4.55 top, although two performances were blitzed by blizzards and cancellations. Considering it came on heels of "Pajama Game," which did sock biz for three weeks, comedy held its own satisfactorily in the 1,515-seater.

"Rainmaker," with Geraldine Page, is in for eight performances.

HARVARD'S NEW MUSICAL

The Harvard Dramatic Club will present an original musical revue next month for the first time since 1929. Presentation, tagged "Great to be Back," which has music by Charles Gross, lyrics by Sam Weller and sketches by Stephen Charnas and Andre Gregory, will be put on at Peabody Playhouse, Boston, April 14-16, 21-23 and 28-30. Neil Blackhall is producing and Edward Golden is staging.

'Teahouse' SRO $43,400 In Fifth Frisco Week

San Francisco, March 29.

"Teahouse of the August Moon" continued to play to capacity houses at the Curran in its fifth week with an estimated take of nearly $43,400. Show runs until May 28, with "Kiss Me Kate" opening May 30.

Other bookings include "Oh Men, Oh Women," Alcazar, April 11, for four weeks.

Estimate for Last Week

Teahouse of the August Moon (Curran) ($4.40; 1,758) (Burgess Meredith, Scott McKay) (5th wk). Almost $43,400, for capacity business.

'Caine' $25,000, Piaf 16G, L.A.

Los Angeles, March 29.

Socko biz racked up by "Caine Mutiny Court Martial" in second stanza at the Huntington Hartford Theatre, continued to highlight local legit last week, with balance of engagements spotty. "Caine" added a ninth week to its original eight weeks.

Edith Piaf showed poorly in the first of two frames at the Biltmore, while both "This Is Your Life, Mendel" at Civic Playhouse, and "Finian's Rainbow," Hollywood Repertory, continued the pace they've maintained steadily.

Estimates for Last Week

Caine Mutiny Court Martial, Huntington Hartford Theatre (2d wk) ($4.95-4.40; 1,032) (Lloyd Nolan, Barry Sullivan, John Hodiak). $25,000.

Edith Piaf, Biltmore (1st wk) ($4.95; 1,636). $16,000.

This Is Your Life, Mendel, Civic Playhouse (8th wk) ($3.30; 400) (Leo Fuchs). $4,000.

Finian's Rainbow, Hollywood Repertory (13th wk) ($3.30; 276) (Charles Davis). $1,700.

'RAINMAKER' SLIM 10½G FOR PITTSBURGH WEEK

Pittsburgh, March 29.

Despite extraordinarily warm notices and continued press support right through the engagement, "The Rainmaker" couldn't get off the ground last week at Nixon and wound up with a slim $10,500. Even the scale was right, too, orch seats going for $3.60 ($3 plus city and Federal taxes). Crix liked everything about it, the play, star Geraldine Fitzgerald, and the entire supporting cast headed by Darren McGavin, and all but wrote advertising lines for the attraction.

None of this helped, however, and then when "Rainmaker" figured to get a dividend down the stretch from the accumulation of plugs, snow and freezing weather on final day, Saturday (26), killed its chances of getting out of the hole a little. Nixon is currently dark, reopening Monday (4) with "Pajama Game" for two weeks.

Broadway was mostly up last week, with a sprinkling of shows registering dips. Musicals, which were generally off the previous stanza, picked up considerably during the past frame.

Opening of "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" last Thursday (24) gave the Stem another sellout show. Others in that category last week were "Bus Stop," "Fanny," "Pajama Game," "Silk Stockings," "Teahouse of the August Moon" and "Witness for the Prosecution."

There were no closings last week. However, "Saint of Bleecker Street" throws in the towel Saturday (2), after failing to click with weekend performances only.

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), MC (Musical-Comedy), MD (Musical-Drama), O (Opera), OP (Operetta).

National 'Itch' 31½G in 4 Stops

The national company of "Seven Year Itch" moved into the Fulton, N. Y., last Monday (28) after pulling in around $31,500 in its windup week on the road, ending Saturday (26). The Eddie Bracken starrer played four dates last week, split between the KRNT, Des Moines, Monday-Tuesday (21-22); Paramount, Omaha, Wednesday-Thursday (23-24); Orpheum, Sioux City, Friday (25) and Auditorium, Sioux Falls, S. D., Saturday (26).

Company planed to N. Y. following the Sioux Falls engagement replacing the original Broadway production, starring Tom Ewell, which moved to the road, with an initial booking at the National, Washington, beginning yesterday (Tues.).

'Cadillac' Click $20,300 In Eight at Columbus

Columbus, March 29.

"Solid Gold Cadillac" clicked with $20,300 gross in eight shows at the Hartman last week. Top was $4. Friday and Saturday nights were sellouts.

Theatre is dark until "Pajama Game" week of April 18, for which mail orders have reached deluge proportions.

'Pajama Tops' $10,500 With Two-Way Split

Cincinnati, March 29.

"Pajama Tops" grossed around $10,500 in a two-way split last week. The twofer production got about $7,000 at the Auditorium, Louisville, in four performances Monday-Wednesday (21-23), and approximately $3,500 in four performances at the Cox here Friday-Saturday (25-26).

The Diana Barrymore starrer is current at the Shubert, Washington.

"You're certainly on a talkin' jag tonight,' remarks the drunken son during his exasperated father's interminable monolog in the second act of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." The comment could also be applied to the author.

But although the new Tennessee Williams drama is uncomfortably gabby and a bit obscure, it is an arresting, absorbing play that's likely to provoke discussion and draw attendance. It stacks up as another success for the author of "Glass Menagerie" and "Streetcar Named Desire," perhaps with best-of-the-season honors. It's also a credit to stager Elia Kazan and a boxoffice hit for the rejuvenated Playwrights Co.

As usual, Williams is writing of neurotics, with possibly even more than his customary emphasis on sex. But if "Cat" lacks the drive or clarity of "Streetcar," it again reveals the author as a dramatist of extraordinary sensitivity and theatrical power, a writer with something compelling to say, morbid and troubled though the ideas may be. It also seems to suggest increasing interest in character and less in mere decadence.

Locale of the show is a bed-sitting room of a plantation home in the Mississippi Delta, more or less the scene of several previous Williams plays. The title refers to the situation of a young wife trying to recapture a passionate relationship with her husband, who now sleeps on a sofa in disgust because he believes her responsible for the death of his inseparable chum.

The youth hobbles about (his crutch presumably symbolizes his self-imposed illusions) with a broken ankle sustained in a boozy attempt to leap a high hurdle. He keeps trying to drink himself into a stupor, explaining that at a certain point a "click in his head" will bring him a sense of peace. But mostly he just stares, occasionally repeating the questions his wife and father keep asking him.

Maggie the Cat, as she calls herself, rants on and on at him through the first act, revealing her own brand of self-torment at having told him the "truth" about his friend. She castigates his brother and sister-in-law as hard, shallow and cruel, and their children as "no-neck monsters." Admitting that she "never could keep my fingers off a sore," she bedevils her husband until he finally tries to brain her with his crutch.

Most of the second act is another talkathon as the father, infuriated by the hypocrisy of his avaricious prospective heirs, rages at his son to find out why he's an alcoholic quitter set on destroying himself. Occasionally a bird cry is heard beyond the balcony, while snoopy members of the household wander in and out, several screaming children stampede in to celebrate the old man's 65th birthday, and he takes time off to express his loathing of his wife.

The third act is an intermittant and attenuated yelling match as the patriarch's wife learns he is dying of cancer, his expectant heirs calously quarrel over the estate instead of offering sympathy. Finally, the young wife cajoles her husband back to the marital bed, at least temporarily, after deceiving her father-in-law that she is at last pregnant. It is a cryptic but vivid finale.

Much of the garrulous dialog is explicitly devoted to sex and is frequently repetitious. The author and director have also left in an extraneous and very old smoking car story, perhaps as a gesture toward authenticity or color. However, "Cat" throbs with life and compulsion. Despite its vulgarity, prolixity and opaqueness, it is undeniably engrossing.

Kazan's staging has his familiar intensity, with expressive feeling for mood and pace, and characteristic use of sound effects and varying light shadings. In the latter, he has been immeasurably aided by Jo Mielziner, whose raked stage with a bed, sofa and bar, with rear areas for supplementary action, plus streaked lighting effect to suggest latticed doors and windows, are a vivid creation.

As the needling, long-winded wife (do southerners really talk so much?), Barbara Bel Geddes is glowing, forthright and irresistibly moving, although it's not hard to understand why the husband tries to conk her with his crutch. Burl Ives, in his first non-singing part on Broadway, is convincing as the enraged plantation owner, though he and director Kazan have not entirely avoided monotony in the endless second-act harangue.

Mildred Dunnock is effective as always, despite miscasting as the slatternly Big Mama, and Ben Gazzara is acceptable in the virtually unplayable role of the inarticulately bitter souse. There are good supporting performances by Madeline Sherwood as a greedy daughter-in-law, Pat Hingle as her spiteful husband and Fred Stewart as a sanctimonious parson.

Although "Cat" hardly seems likely screen material, there's been some Hollywood interest and the drama could conceivably be adapted for pictures, if substantially revised. In any case, it's a potent grosser for legit. Hobe.

'Kismet' to Open Dallas' 14th State Fair Season; $500,000 Budget Okayed

Dallas, March 29.

With an approved record budget of $500,000 for its 14th annual State Fair Musicals season, June 6-Aug. 23, managing director-producer Charles R. Meeker Jr. will open the 12-week run with "Kismet." New York cast will have a fortnight's run at State Fair Auditorium. Other five shows tentatively set are "The Vagabond King," "South Pacific," "The Teahouse of the August Moon," "Carousel" and "One Touch of Venus." Gordon MacRae would head "Carousel" and Dennis Day is set for "Venus." A second revival here of "Texas, Li'l Darlin'" will replace one of the six shows if Jack Carson is available to repeat his 1952 role here.

Meeker is in New York to finalize shows and casts. Last season's staff will return, including musical director Franz Allers; stage director George Schaefer, and art director Peter Wolf.

Off-B'way Show

The Story of a Soldier

T. Edward Hambleton & Norris Houghton's "Side Show" presentation of "L'Histoire du Soldat," music drama by Igor Stravinsky, as suggested by Ramuz. Spoken text, N. Richard Nash; choreography, Edward Caton; musical director, Erich Leinsdorf; costumes, Stanley Simmons. At Phoenix, N.Y., March 28, '55; $3.45 top.

Cast: Franchot Tone, Paul Draper, Edward Caton, Janice Rule, Nancy Milton, Mavis Walters. Orchestral ensemble: Alexander Schneider, Julius Levine, David Oppenheim, Loren Glickman, Robert Nagel, Erwin Price, Alfred Howard.

Fusing together a number of talents from diverse branches of the entertainment industry, the Phoenix entrepreneurs have made "The Story of a Soldier" another engaging Monday evening in their "Side Show" series. Igor Stravinsky's music drama of a devil-tempted soldier is embellished by performers Paul Draper, Franchot Tone, Janice Rule and Edward Caton; Erich Leinsdorf has been engaged to conduct the seven-man orchestral ensemble, and N. Richard Nash has provided the spoken text. It is a pleasant collaboration.

Informality is the keynote. Tone, as narrator, comes to the apron and calls class (the audience) to order. The ensemble, in hepcat togs, wander down the aisles and force their way across customer-filled Row B to the pit. Somebody shouts for Leinsdorf, who soon ambles down an aisle in sport-jacket and beret and festivities begin.

It's largely Draper's show. His dancing takes priority over music and narration as he pantomimes the Myopian soldier whose joy in a simple violin strain yields to lust for gold, power and a princess. This probably disappoints avid Stravinskyites who may have hoped for a heavier accent musicwise, but nonetheless the score is given a refreshingly delicate reading by Leinsdorf.

Playwright Nash's text is satirical and imaginative. Apart from a slight coyness toward his "pupils," Tone's narration admirably reflects the soldier's changing moods, whether of joy, nostalgia or despair. Janice Rule's voluptuous and slyly humorous dancing of the devilish princess lends vitality to the final episodes. Edward Caton's choreography is not always fresh but he has flashes of wit as the devil.

This is a minor tour de force for the artists involved and reflects favorably on the Hambleton-Houghton combine for offering the offbeat piece. It's strictly special, however, and would run serious risks if attempted commercially.

For obscure reasons, an unprogrammed trio called The Wayfarers is allowed to preface the bill. Geor.

Misery Me!

London, March 18.

E. P. Clift & Daniel M. Angel production of comedy in three acts by Dennis Cannan. Stars Yvonne Mitchell, George Cole, Clive Morton. Directed by Alastair Sim; décor, Hutchinson Scott. At Duchess, London, March 16, '55; $2.20 top.

Adam	George Cole
Romilda	Eileen Moore
Prosper	Philip Stainton
Dr. Vince	Leonard Sachs
Cornelia	Yvonne Mitchell
Carlo Bombas	Clive Morton
Julius Ring	Colin Gordon

Daniel M. Angel, independent film producer, takes a flyer into legit management by staging Dennis Cannan's new comedy in partnership with E. P. Clift. But even with their combined talents, they have failed to pick a winner. Even with its modest operating nut it can't hope to do well at the intimate Duchess Theatre.

Although officially tagged by the author as a comedy, "Misery Me!" is a curious blend of farce and tragedy, thoughtfully written and constructed, but with little point or purpose. The direction wavers between the conflicting moods, and an over-fussy set doesn't add to the appeal.

Curiously enough, the author succeeds at times in making suicide a laughing matter, and makes a big joke of George Cole's failure to take his own life. He's just a simple fellow, despairing of the future; Yvonne Mitchell, who also sees no hope, talks him into a suicide pact. Then along come the two men in her life, Clive Morton, the armaments king with a minklined overcoat, and Colin Gordon, the left-wing agitator dressed, natch, in a red shirt. The two rival lovers almost succeed in their separate efforts to involve Cole in assassination plots in which he can have a martyr's death, but are finally left standing while he walks off with the girl.

The principal characters are as exaggerated as the plot, and the author has packed a great deal of incident, mainly of a farcical nature, into the three acts. Performances are of a varied standard. Miss Mitchell makes like she's appearing in a great tragedy, Cole underplays his role, while Gordon and Morton act with commendable vigor and authority. Eileen Moore provides an appealing touch as the waitress of the Arcadian inn in which the action is centered. Philip Stainton as the innkeeper and Leonard Sachs as the village doctor are more than adequate. Myro.

Fruehling
(Springtime)

Zurich, March 20.

Stadttheatre production of operetta in five scenes by Rudolf Eger. Music by Franz Lehar. Directed by Otto Daue; musical direction, Eduard Hartogs; sets and costumes, Rene Rougemont; choreography, Jaroslav Berger. At Stadttheatre, Zurich, March 19, '55.

Cast: Ingeborg Fanger, Erna-Maria Duske, Reinhold Guether, Heinz Rhoeden, Ellen Schwannecke, Kurl Pistorius, Wolfgang, Hess, Gertrud Fiecker, Paula Smeikal, Margrit Oexle, Hildegard Ellmann, Gottlieb Zeithammer, Gretl Henar.

World-preem of a posthumuous Franz Lehar operetta has raised considerable interest here and abroad. Musical is based on one of the late composer's early one-acters, written in 1922, which he sought to extend into a full-length operetta during the last years of his life. When his death prevented termination of the project, librettist Rudolf Eger assumed the task of finishing it, all by keeping closely to Lehar's intentions.

The result, unfortunately, is not very impressive. Although belonging more to the comedy-with-music than the traditional operetta category, it is about as far from an American musical comedy as "Lohengrin" from "The Merry Widow." Originality, zest, witty lines and catchy tunes are almost completely missing. The book, built along formula lines, is thin and shows definite signs of its original destination as a one-acter.

The music makes it hard to believe that it was penned by the same man who created such masterpieces in the light vein as "Merry Widow" and "Land of Smiles." Although it makes for pleasant listening, there are no potential hits in the score. Most of the waltzes, duets and ensembles somehow sound like old acquaintances. "Springtime" looms as a doubtful bet for the U.S., despite the familiar Lehar name.

The story takes place in Vienna, beginning of this century. It presents the story-within-a-story frame, so that most of the players have twin assignments. A girl working in a typing bureau is wooed by three men—a shy composer, a wolf-type writer and a middleaged man "with honorable intentions." As she is about to type a manuscript with a situation similar to hers, the characters come to life, thus enacting the story forming the central part of the plot. The latter doesn't amount to much more than the girl finally making her choice: the composer.

The Stadttheatre performance made whatever possible out of this trite material. There are some lively moments, thanks to a handful of competent players, notably Ingeborg Fanger as the girl, Karl Pistorius and Heinz Rhoeden as the men she finally rejects, whereas leading man Reinhold Guether in the part of the composer is not exactly an ideal choice, neither vocally nor acting-wise.

Highlight of the show is an excellent ballet number in the third scene taking place in a big fashion store, whereby a number of dummies come to life. This emerges as a delightful spoof of the Roaring 20s. Another dance intermezzo in the same scene, lampooning the typical female bargain madness in a big store, also registers strongly. Dance director Jaroslav Berger rates kudoes for this.

Direction, sets and costumes are adequate, though rather conventional. Conductor Eduard Hartogs, who also did the orchestration of the Lehar numbers, does an able job. Meno.

Meeting at Night

Toronto, March 22.

Murray and Donald Davis production of comedy in two acts (three scenes) by James Bridie. Directed by Michael Langham; settings, John Wilson; lighting, Brian Gaffikin; costumes, Jane Ashford. At Crest Theatre, Toronto, March 17, '55; $3 top.

Connie Triple ..... Barbara Chilcott
Hector Maclachlan ..... Eric House
George Triple ..... Max Helpmann
Inspector Platt ..... Donald Davis
Mrs. Maclachlan ..... Betty Leighton
Sandy ..... George McCowan

"Meeting at Night," a light comedy, was the last play written by the late James Bridie, Scottish doctor-playwright. This is its North American preem; it has only been produced once before, at The Citizens Theatre, Glasgow. On both occasions, it has been directed by Michael Langham. The author obviously had fun writing it and the audience enjoys most of it throughout, in situations and dialog. But the comedy, because of its fluffiness, has no commercial theatre value.

But the meaty role of a suave swindler, dickering in everything from a mail-order cure for arthritis to the mannered acquisition of property-owning widows, plus a little loving on the side, is admirably done by Max Helpmann, who charmingly outwits his victims as well as Scotland Yard. For a time, he meets his match in Mrs. MacLachlan, the owner of an inn in the Highlands he covets, but wins over the lady in the final scene, though he has to marry her to escape the law.

Betty Leighton, as the Scotfish widow, plays the part too stridently to evoke any sympathy; and the sub-plot of the two young lovers (Eric House and Barbara Chilcott) is innocuous and uninteresting. But the lines and bland deportment of Helpmann are a delight and the mainstay of a play that Bridie might have whipped into better shape had he not died. Piece has minor pic possibilities.

The Sky Moved

Hollywood, March 14.

Academy Playhouse presentation of drama in two acts (four scenes) by Benjamin Forrest. Features Onslow Stevens, Shimen Ruskin, Elizabeth Lynn, Carol Thurston. Direction, Benjamin Zemach; stage designs, Jan Kovatch; music selected by Alex North. At Academy Playhouse, Hollywood, March 13, '55.

Cast: Onslow Stevens, Shimen Ruskin, Elizabeth Lynn, Carol Thurston, Richard Gilden, William Amador, Doris Karnes, Shimen Traibush, David Saxon.

This little theatre presentation will remain just that. It's a passable vehicle for the weekend playacter, or the more experienced thesp who likes to keep his hand in between regular assignments. Otherwise, Benjamin Forrest's play doesn't figure commercially, and even with extensive reworking would still be of dubious value.

It's difficult to grasp the dramatic point underlying the movement of the eight characters Forrest has on stage, and the direction by Benjamin Zemach is no help, being rather slow and failing to build the kind of emotional sock needed. Plot is concerned with a middleclass family, all unhappy and feeling whipped by life. The father wants a farm. His brother does, too, figuring a farmer is a cut above a sidewalk peddler of razor blades. The wife doesn't seem to know what she wants, but a son, daughter and an aunt do. It seems sex and money are their prime interests. A miserly, rich uncle and a self-styled Messiah complete the odd gathering.

Family bickerings are mixed with obvious lines spotted for chuckles, and others that are vulgar and spotted to shock, as the play wends its rather unpleasant course of more than two hours. Finale curtain doesn't find much that is satisfactorily resolved, either for the characters or the entertainment of the playgoer.

Onslow Stevens, the father; Shimen Ruskin, the uncle, and Elizabeth Lynn, the wife, have their individual moments, but would have benefitted from better direction. So would have Carol Thurston, the daughter; Richard Gilden, the son (played alternately by William Amador); Doris Karnes, the aunt; Shimen Traibush, the miserly uncle, and David Saxon, the Messiah. Play is in two acts, four scenes and two settings. Program note states music was selected by Alex North. It consists of records heard intermittently during the unfoldment. Brog.

King and I

(SHUBERT, CHI)

Chicago, March 21.

There should be no loss of momentum for Rodgers & Hammerstein's touring "King and I" with its new king. Leonard Graves has taken over the crown from Yul Brynner, who has played the role since the bonana musical's inception almost exactly four years ago. (Brynner bowed out for a film assignment). While Graves mutes to a degree the undertone of violence with which Brynner vested the headstrong Siamese monarch, his portrayal is sharp, crisp and thoroughly satisfying.

No stranger to the part, having played it some 150 times as Brynner's understudy, Graves clicks especially well with the "A Puzzlement" song.

As per custom with an R&H property, "King" shows little signs of road fatigue. The production remains neatly trimmed in all facets of the playing, direction and physical accoutrements. Patricia Morison continues deft and sure as the English schoolmarm and has taken on added focus now that she's the singleton star, with Graves getting featured "co-star" billings under the title. Terry Saunders remains a standout as the head wife and Suzanne Lake is a bright light as the fleeing concubine. The covey of moppets are charming in toto and young Patrick Adiarte, the crown prince, is a real delight.

Minor parts are all competently staffed. Alfred Cibelli Jr. replaced Graves as the prime minister and Fairfax Burgher now has the English diplomat role. Dave.

Playwrights

by Tennessee Williams, a nonmember, while the holdover "Tea" is by Robert Anderson, a new member.

Feuer & Martin brought in two musicals this season, "Boy Friend" and "Silk Stockings." Former, a British import, moved into the payoff category several weeks ago, while the latter, a sellout since its Broadway opening last Feb. 24, is heading for paydirt. Also runing under the F&M banner is "Can-Can," a sock holdover from the '52-'53 season.

This gives the F&M producing team a 100% batting average, with five hits on five productions. Their other offerings were "Where's Charley?" and "Guys and Dolls."

Gross take for all six shows on Broadway last week was $201,500, of which $136,200 was nabbed by the F&M productions and $65,300 by the Playwrights presentations. Playwrights' coin was cut by about $10,000 as "Cat," in its first week, only gave four regular performances and two previews. Playwrights also pulled in an additional $30,000 on "Tea" in Chicago, bringing company's total take for the week to $95,300.

Equity

but exited the former spot after refusing to accept a reduced fee. Herman E. Cooper, present Actors Equity attorney, replaced her.

A similar situation arose during last year's contract negotiations with the League of N. Y. Theatres. Miss Brownstein had been excluded from the Equity negotiating committee, with her supporters petitioning the Equity Council to have her reinstated. Council declined to reconsider Miss Brownstein's removal from the committee when presented with the petition. At that time, Actors Equity prexy, Ralph Bellamy, in commenting on her elimination as a bargainer, took the stand that results of the negotiations would have been nil if the League felt it was dealing with two orgs, two committees and two counsellors.

Besides voting on the retention of Miss Brownstein, Chorus Equity membership also passed resolutions at the Friday meet requiring amplification of certain merger proposals regarding such facets as employee rights, the submission of financial reports of both unions to the membership and that the terms of the merger be made available to all members prior to any vote on the matter.

Hose Who

April issue of Equity, official Actors Equity publication, includes the following in its listing of stock rule revisions for 1955: "There has been some confusion in the definition of the word 'stockings' which the manager is required to furnish Chorus members in rule No. 5 in the Chorus contract. In some cases the manager has arbitrarily defined 'stockings' in an arbitrary manner. It is, therefore, ruled that the word 'hose' shall be added to this rule."

An arbitrary definition of hose is a flexible tube for conveying water.

Canadian Rep Theatre Ends 21-Week Season, Winding Up in 4G Red

Ottawa, March 29.

Canadian Repertory Theatre, the capital's winter stock company, lost around $4,000 on its 21-week sixth season which ended March 19. After dropping an average $400 a week for the first 11 weeks and almost folding, its next 10 showed an average weekly profit of $40.

Yet, owing to theatre-party rates, average take per seat since New Year's was only 85c, compared to $1.15 in the first stretch; while production costs rose $100 a week, from $1,700 to $1,800, because of more costume and two-set plays. CRT, as a non-profit organization, is exempt from 12½% provincial amusement tax. (So, now, are profit-making legit outfits when using all-Canadian casts.)

Concluding four weeks—two of them in Lent—did the season's best business, and Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan" lured 3,000-odd paying patrons into the 672-seat LaSalle Academy for the best (six-performance) week in two years.

CRT will reopen in mid-September, with Ian Fellows and Peter Sturgess, in since New Year's as resident producer and business manager respectively, again in those posts. Rosemary Palin, who came out from props to score personal hits as "Mary Rose" and "Peg o' My Heart," is expected back.

Met Opera choreographer Zachary Solov, who staged his first ballet for the Met this season in "Vittorio," will do another next season. Libretto and score haven't been decided on yet.

London Set for Minor B'way Invasion; 3 Plays in 3 Nights; More to Follow

London, March 29.

A minor Broadway invasion is due here next month, when three American importations will open on successive nights.

First of the trio will be "The Desperate Hours," due at the London Hippodrome April 19 with Diana Churchill, Bernard Lee and Richard Carlyle in the leads. Latter has been brought from New York to fill the role of the neurotic gangster. Production marks the debut of a new management, Toby Rowland, who will present, by arrangement with Williamson Music and Prince Littler, in association with Howard Erskine and Joseph Hayes. Play is being staged by Erskine and supervised by Robert Montgomery.

On the following night Jack Hylton launches "Kismet" at the Stoll, with three American stars from the original Broadway production, Alfred Drake, Doretta Morrow and Joan Diener. Musical began a short out-of-town tryout at Oxford last night (Mon.).

Completing the trio will be the Tennent presentation of "The Bad Seed," due to open April 21. Diana Wynyard has the starring role in the London edition of the Maxwell Anderson opus.

In addition to this direct invasion, Robert L. Joseph has joined forces with Stephen Mitchell to present Christopher Fry's adaptation of Giraudoux's "The Trojan War Will Not Take Place," under the title of "Tiger at the Gates." Michael Redgrave, Diane Cilento and Leueen MacGrath have the top roles and Harold Clurman crossed from New York to direct. Production opens at the Manchester Opera House April 25 and comes to town a few weeks later.

Another American play due soon is "Into Thin Air" by Chester Erskine, which is now being directed by Garson Kanin. Play will be presented under the Tennent banner and opens in Cambridge on Easter Monday. It is due in Shaftesbury Ave. a few weeks later.

After a short provincial tour, "The Tender Trap," by Max Shulman and Robert Paul Smith, goes into the Saville Theatre the first week of May. The comedy is being presented by George and Alfred Black, with Brian Reece, Daphne Anderson, Geraldine McEwan and Phil Brown in the main roles. Charles Hickman is directing.

Off-Broadway Production's New Big-Coin Status; 10G to 184G in Stakes

Off-Broadway production has spread into the big business league this season. Broadway practice of financing shows via limited partnerships has been adopted by several off-the-Stem managers. Coin involved ranges from $10,000 to $184,375.

Latter figure refers to the capitalization of the Phoenix Theatre. The T. Edward Hambleton-Norris Houghton stock operation, currently in its second season, was originally financed as a limited partnership last year, with a $125,000 investment. Stake was raised an additional $59,375 this season, bringing the total figure to $184,375.

Operation wound up its first season at an approximate $50,000 loss, leaving around $75,000 to start the '54-'55 frame. Most of the original backers jacked up their original investments 50%, while a few new backers contributed coin to supply the additional $59,375. New financing is to be repaid in full prior to any return of the original contributions.

Productions at the Downtown National Theatre, which switched from Yiddish to English language presentations this season, have also been financed as limited partnerships. "A Stone for Danny Fisher," the initial English offering at the 2d Avenue theatre, was capitalized at $35,000, while a followup Maurice Schwartz series represented a $40,000 stake.

"Fisher" was produced by Henrietta Jacobson and Julius Adler, Yiddish theatre vets, while the Schwartz series, which recently folded at an approximate loss of its full investment, was put on by Russell-Farrow Productions, in association with Cy Metrick.

Proscenium Productions, in its initial season at the Cherry Lane Theatre in Greenwich Village, is capitalized at $10,000. Outfit, which bowed with "Way of the World" and is currently presenting "Thieves' Carnival," was awarded a "Tony" by the American Theatre Wing last Sunday (27) for the "generally high quality" of their production.

Opera Can Never Pay Its Way, Sez Bing; TV Gives It 'Only Cursory Glance'

Washington, March 29.

"With rare and almost freakish exceptions, opera has never paid its way and, as far as I can see, never will," Rudolph Bing, Met Opera general manager, said here last week.

Addressing a luncheon of the National Press Club, Bing added: "It always amuses me when people ask whether, by any chance, I am for subsidy." He continued that there has never been any opera anywhere able to exist for a length of time without subsidy. He said that while subsidy here is in the form of admissions tax exemption and contributions by wealthy friends, Governmental subsidies keep such operations as Italy's La Scala, the Vienna Staatsoper, Covent Garden in London, etc., going. He pointed out that La Scala and the West Berlin Opera receive the equivalent of $1,000,000 annually in Government subsidies.

The difficulty in developing American operatic talent, said Bing, is that "only a regrettably small number of them can make a living as professional performers in opera." TV, he added, has opened up some opportunities, "yet really not too many."

"Since as the mass medium par excellence," he continued, "television must at all times address itself to the greatest number, it has not as yet given to opera more than a cursory glance, for obviously opera is not as yet an attraction like 'Peter Pan' that can deliver 60,000,000 viewers in front of the television sets. . . . You can easily see that an occasional appearance in television opera and a few infrequent engagements to sing in a concert performance of opera are not enough for a young singer to get along."

'Stubborn Conservatism'

Commenting on the criticism that the Met brings only "unimaginative, old-fashioned programs" to cities on its annual tour route, Bing explained:

"What these critics do not know or conveniently chose to overlook is that very often the local program is not chosen by the Metropolitan Opera management but rather by local committees, that there is often staggering lack of stage facilities, and — the most important point—the stubborn conservatism of opera-going publics everywhere. It is only natural that any local committee or manager, faced with the inevitable enormous cost of importing the Metropolitan, must be eager to sell out the house. This can be done with the standard works only, and let no one tell you differently.

"Our books are there to prove my case. We play certain cities where we can sell out such works as 'Carmen' or 'Boheme' to 10,000 people in one evening. Yet, when in some of these cities we played great but less known works, such as Mussorgsky's 'Boris Godunov' or Verdi's 'La Forza del Destino,' tickets went begging by the hundreds, not to say thousands."

NEW HISPANO DANCE CO. WITH U.S. IMPRESARIOS

Paris, March 29.

Tom Van Dycke, roving VARIETY mugg, and Ben Carlin, ex-manager of the Marquis de Cuevas Ballet, have formed a Hispano dance group called Danzas Ibericas. Composed of seven people, troupe is headed by Jose and Dolores Fernandez. Fernandez is choreographer and has previously worked with the New York City Ballet. Outfit opens in Lille in April and then takes a three-month break-in tour of France before heading for Paris for a stint at the Theatre Des Champs Elysees. A U.S. tour is also in the offing.

Others are dancer Lutyo De Luz, an ex-Cuevas member, pianist Miguel De Velasco and guitarists Pablo Gonzalez and Gitanas, with flamenco singer Manola Leiva. Rep will be composed of both classical and popular Hispano dances.

ESCUDERO 5½G, DETROIT

Detroit, March 29.

Escudero grossed a poor $5,500 at the 2,050-seat Shubert last week. Top was $3.30.

Current is "Guys and Dolls."

Gigli Set for 3 N.Y. Dates In 'Farewell' Return

Two N. Y. recitals of Beniamino Gigli, skedded for Carnegie Hall April 17 and 24, were sold out by last week, as result of one ad, and a third has been set for April 20. The onetime Met Opera tenor, who celebrated his 65th birthday last week by closing a "farewell" concert tour of England in Manchester, is due in N. Y. April 12.

Handled by Columbia Artists Mgt., Gigli is being presented in N. Y. by Joseph H. Conlin Jr. Latter went abroad last week to hear Gigli in concert, and then headed for Paris and Rome to scout more talent. He's due back in N. Y. April 4.

Gigli is making his first N. Y. concert appearance since 1939, also announcing the three dates as his American "farewell."

Tallchief Won't Rejoin Ballet Russe Company On Its 2d Tour Season

Maria Tallchief, who joined the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo as its star when the touring troupe was reactivated this season, won't return to the company next season. She's going back to the N.Y. City Ballet, with which she's been connected since its inception in 1948, until this year's leave of absence. Difficulties involved in traveling, as well as disagreement with Ballet Russe general director Serge Denham on distribution of roles, are believed reasons for the ballerina's decision.

One of the highest-paid dancers in the toe-and-tutu field at $1,000 a week (not $2,000, as widely reputed), and admittedly Ballet Russe's biggest draw, Miss Tallchief will return to the NYCB at a probable $300 a week. At the moment, she's out of terping, for two weeks, with a hurt ankle. She finishes with Ballet Russe April 19 and will fly immediately to Europe, to join the NYCB (which will already be there). N.Y. troupe, doing a three-month overseas tour, returns July 8, to go to the Coast for a summer of engagements.

U.S. Talent Skedded For First Genoa Dance Fest

Genoa, March 22.

Genoa's first International Dance Festival has been set for the City Park at Nervi, seven miles from here, from June 22 to Aug. 5. Directors are Ugo dell' Ara and Mario Porcile. New Yorkers Dale Wasserman and Trudy Goth will be in charge of production and special lighting, and public relations, respectively, with Armando Aliberti as conductor.

Alicia Markova and partner will inaugurate the fest. John Butler & Co., from N. Y., will appear July 22-25. Others participating include Harald Kreutzberg, Royal Danish Ballet, Yugoslav National Ballet, Grand Ballet du Marquis de Cuevas and Azuma Kabuki Co. Last-named will close the fest July 30-Aug. 5.

Mpls. Orch's 269G Drive To Offset '55-'56 Red

Minneapolis, March 29.

Annual drive for Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra funds started last week, with goal set at $269,000, to offset expected deficits. Budget estimates for the 1955-56 season include $148,300 in boxoffice receipts from local concerts, an additional $110,000 in tour receipts, and some $40,500 from miscellaneous sources, including recordings.

Cost of producing the home concerts is expected to be $341,000 next season. Tour expenses are estimated at $75,000, with $43,000 projected for administrative expenses and $109,000 for operating expenses.

Tucker Deal Snarls Toscy 'Aida' Release On 1949 Broadcast

RCA Victor has been having great success with its recordings of the concert versions of operas originally broadcast by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony. Latest, issued this month, is Verdi's "Masked Ball." Several of the releases have been held up for some time by Toscy, for technical or artistic reasons. In some cases he did minor re-recording or touching up, then okayed them.

Broadcast of Verdi's "Aida," aired in March, 1949, with Herva Nelli in the title role, and Richard Tucker, Norman Scott, Giuseppe Valdengo and Eva Gustafson as the other leads, has never been released. Two weeks ago, Victor finally got Toscy's okay. But the disk company slipped up in not signing all the artists involved, and can't release the recording. Tucker won't agree.

The Met tenor has signed to do a recording of "Aida" next summer at La Scala for Angel Records, and won't okay the Toscy release. Incidentally, it's the only opera in the Toscy series that he's appeared in.

Concert Bits

Marks Levine, prez of National Concert & Artists Corp., back at his desk after a nine-week lapse, due to illness.

Ronald Wise, ex-RCA Victor and Decca, and for the last three years with Mercury Records in sales and sales promotion, resigned from Merc last week.

Elmer Wiener off to Cleveland to handle press for Met Opera week's engagement, opening April 11. It's the 12th such chore for Wiener, who is on leave of absence from road-booking chores for the indie concert bureaus, Friedberg Mgt. and Herbert Barrett Mgt.

Wanda Landowska, famed 76-year-old harpsichordist, who's been busy doing recordings, will make her only concert appearance this season at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, N. Y., tomorrow (Thurs.).

Pianist Vladimir Horowitz, who did no concertizing this year because of illness, is huddling with his manager, David Libidins, on bookings for next season. He did some recordings over the past few months.

Martial Singher and Bohuslav Martinu have joined the faculty of the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, to begin teaching in October.

Inside Stuff—Concerts

The Paganini Quartet will wind up a tour on April 4 that's considered unprecedented for highbrow four-player music. Group, in its third year with Columbia Artists Mgt., will have filled 78 dates (a mark only equaled by the Budapest Quartet, which includes its many New York area concerts). Of the 78 dates, 61 were with Col's Community Concerts division, a surprisingly large number of "culture" bookings for that mass-audience circuit.

Tradesters point to certain marks of showmanship in the Paganini Quartet programs, unfamiliar to orthodox quartet-playing, to account for the bookings and draw. The first violin, Henri Temianka, also acts as an emcee, explaining the music to be played, the rare Stradivari the men use which were once owned by Paganini, etc. Also, RCA Victor has issued an album, "Heart of the String Quartet," recorded by the Paganini group, and containing eight popular movements from eight different quartets. The Quartet plays these selections as the second part of its program, the short numbers sometimes taking on the form of a recital for solo violin and strings.

The Met Opera has about set the cast for its opener next season—"Tales of Hoffmann" on Nov. 14—with Roberta Peters as Olympia, Rise Stevens the Giulietta, Mildred Miller as Niclaus, Richard Tucker the Hoffman, and Martial Singher doing four roles (magician, etc.). Cyril Ritchard, legit actor-director, who staged the Met's "Barber of Seville," will put this one on, with Pierre Monteux conducting. It's rather unusual for a mezzo (Miss Stevens) to sing Giulietta.

An Object Lesson?

Recent VARIETY story about a Spanish dance company which got rave notices in N. Y. and on the road, but wound up a 20-week U. S. tour close to $125,000 in the red, has excited an unusual amount of attention in the trade. The head of one concert bureau, seeing in it an object lesson, pasted up the story, wrote a lengthy commentary beside it, and sent it around as a confidential memo to all the bureau's execs, to be read and initialed. Memo read, in part, as follows:

"TO ALL EXECUTIVES. It's been confirmed to me that the loss on the attraction referred to herein was in excess of $100,000. So it behooves us to examine why an attraction which got such wonderful notices in New York could sustain such a loss so that we do not make a similar mistake.

"It is very clear, that we have to use our own judgment and not that of critics when we put up the company's money. Basic reasons for the loss of $100,000 on this show are:

1. Pretense that it was a New York attraction. Half the money lost was lost by playing four weeks in New York when one week was enough; in fact, three days was enough. Similar mistakes were made in other places where the company was booked for a week, notably Botson and Chicago. In one of these cities it actually had the nerve to play against Jose Greco, with disastrous results.
2. The cost of the orchestra raised the price of the attraction to more than it was worth in entertainment value.
3. Finally, the attraction played 21 weeks when the maximum it should have played was 14.

"Had the company played 14 weeks with two pianos, instead of 21 weeks with an orchestra, the loss would have been trifling, if any."

Other managers feel differently. One, agreeing that no Spanish ballet needs an orchestra, gave as his reasons for the flop: (a) the troupe's N. Y. chances were killed off by another troupe rushed in hurriedly ahead of them, scaring away people who didn't know this was a different company; (b) troupe should have taken out huge ads the day after the opening to run excerpts from the rave reviews, as the legiters do; (c) troupe was too big, and over-produced—a Spanish dance company is not a ballet company, and (d) no Spanish ballet needs an orch.

Shaw Chorale Winding Sock Season With 240G Take for 16-Week Tour

The Robert Shaw Chorale is winding up its first year for Columbia Artists Mgt. Sunday (3), completing what's regarded as the biggest money tour of the current season for a strictly concert attraction (as against ballet, symph, etc.). In 16 weeks (10 in the fall, six in winter), the company of 42 will have racked up a gross of $240,000.

Troupe is 92% booked already for the '55-'56 season by Col's Coppicus, Schang & Brown division. In addition, next year's trek won't be a transcontinental one, like this year's, but limited to the east as far as Texas, making the virtual booking sellout that much more unusual. Unit sells for around $3,000, with Col claiming it's as popular with schools and colleges as it is with concert courses and series.

Next season's tour will conclude in mid-March to enable the group to go overseas. It will play abroad for 10 weeks, in Europe and the Near East.

Backhaus, at 72, Set For 20 U.S. Dates in 1956

Wilhelm Backhaus will be back in the U.S. next season for a tour, appearing with eight symphony orchs, as well as doing from 10 to 12 recitals.

The German pianist, who will be 72, will open his tour with the Buffalo Symphony Feb. 5-7, winding his visit with a Carnegie Hall, N. Y., recital April 11. Herbert Barrett is managing.

Longhair Disk Reviews

Puccini: Manon Lescaut (London). Another operatic hit in London's growing repertoire, with its surefire stars, Renata Tebaldi and Mario del Monaco, gracing an artistic, smooth-flowing version of the lovely, melodious opus. Fernando Corena also stands out (as Geronte), while maestro Francesco Molinari-Pradelli reins Santa Cecelia orch and chorus forcefully.

Rachmaninoff: Concerto No. 2 (Capitol). Vigorous, fresh performance of the w.k. work, full of romantic spirit. Leonard Pennario is a gifted young pianist, and the St. Louis Symph under Vladimir Golschmann backs up sensitively.

Charpentier: Impressions of Italy & Aubert: La Habanera (Angel). Youthful Charpentier suite is fragrant, evocative and very colorful. Aubert symphonic poem is alternately pleasant or disturbed, but appealing. Good interpretations by the Paris Opera Orch under Fourestier.

Mendelssohn: Symphonies No. 4 & 5 (RCA Victor). The gay "Italian" (No. 4) and serious "Reformation" in vivid, spirited readings by the NBC Symph under Arturo Toscanini. Definitive disk.

Mozart: Serenades No. 11, E Flat & No. 12, C Minor for Winds (MGM). Simple, melodic, attractive serenades for winds, played in proper spirit by an ensemble under Arthur Winograd.

Strauss: Symphony For Wind Instruments (Decca). A late work by the late master, this is a pleasant, ornamental, baroque piece quite properly (and skillfully) played by the London Baroque Ensemble under Karl Haas.

Liszt: Hungarian Fantasy & Rhapsody No. 2 (Decca). Clean, somewhat refined performance of the Fantasy by a skilled pianist, Julian von Karolyi, with the Munich Philharmonic. Rhapsody also satisfies.

Handel: Water Music (London). Complete version of the 18 movements here, the formal, classical work getting a graceful, pleasing, energetic performance by the Boyd Neel Orch, under Neel.

Antioch Sued for $13,800; Claim Festival Runout

Yellow Springs, O., March 29.

Antioch College has been named defendant in a lawsuit over an allegedly cancelled music festival by Jeunesses Musicales USA, New York, which seeks $13,800 in damages for expensed incurred in planning a festival at Antioch in June 1954, 1955 and 1956.

In its petition in Common Pleas Court at Xenia, O., the group claims the college withdrew from the festival and conferences after a considerable amount in expenses had been spent, and in violation of the contract.

Only comment from the college was by W. B. Alexander, vice-president, who said "the college knows of no basis for a just claim against it by this organization."

Bliz Blitzes Tor. Orch

Flint, Mich., March 29.

A 24-year tradition of the Toronto Symphony was broken last week when a blizzard forced cancellation of a concert at Bay City. Orch got off the train here, but was unable to bus to Bay City because of impassable roads.

Sir Ernest MacMillan said it was first time a concert was cancelled since he became conductor in 1931.

GRECO 18G, FRISCO

San Francisco, March 29.

Jose Greco and his Spanish dance company did $18,000 in their first week at the Geary Theatre.

Show is scaled at $3.85 top and is in for 11 days.

The Minsky Story

Morton Minsky, one of the four freres whose name was synonymous with a certain brand of burlesque, is working with Rowland Barber on "The Minsky Story." Bill, Abe, Herbert and Morton Minsky ran the West 42d St. burleycues. Harold Minsky, who operates burlesque in Newark, is a nephew.

Barber did the Rocky Graziano story, "Somebody Up There Likes Me (My Life So Far)," and Simon & Schuster, which published this book, has first call on the Minsky opus. Author Morton Minsky is in the industrial merchandising business.

Kingsbury Smith Back to Paris

Joe Kingsbury Smith, European general manager of International News Service, who accompanied William Hearst Jr. and Frank Conniff to Moscow for interviews with the new Russian leaders, and who has been traveling with them throughout the U.S. since the returns, sails for his post in Paris March.

He has been stationed there since 1941.

Neil Vanderbilt's New Book

Besides his regular newsletter, "Vagabonding With Vanderbilt," which is published out of Reno, Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. has been working all winter on his new book, "The Living Past In America." It will detail some 2,000 historic and patriotic spots in the U. S. A. and will have some 700 photographs.

Nat Wartels, head of Crown, which is publishing, plans it as a $5 book some time in June. Vanderbilt meantime is winding up his 1954-55 lecture season on the Pacific Coast and into the northwest.

He is forfended from visiting New York state because of his divorcing wife Pat's attachment on his funds within N. Y. and a warrant for his arrest if he crosses the state line.

Nation's 90th Anni

On July 9, The Nation, oldest political weekly, will round out 90 years of uninterrupted publication. The anniversary will be celebrated on June 19 in N. Y. with a dinner forum on "Atoms for Peace."

Co-chairmen are Albert Einstein, Eleanor Roosevelt, Van Wyck Brooks, Grenville Clark, Frank P. Graham, Ernest Gruning.

George Ford's Show Biz Book

George Ford, who produced the first musical comedy by Rodgers & Hart, and for the past 12 years has managed American ballet companies, has authored "These Were Actors (The History of the Chapmans and the Drakes)."

Ford is a great grandson of William Chapman and Samuel Drake. The Chapmans were 100 years on the stage of London's Covent Garden; the Drakes were a famous theatrical family at Bath and Devonshire. The Chapmans brought the theatre to America via showboats and the Drakes traveled across the wilds of the United States in a covered wagon, bringing their shows west to San Francisco to make the Jenny Lind Theatre there one of the art centers of the world.

The author's uncle established the first circuit of theatres in the southeast. It was at the Ford's Theatre in Washington in which Lincoln was assassinated. Library Publishers is bringing it out.

Rocky's Socko Biog

Metro made "The Blackboard Jungle" and may have touched off a juvenile delinquency (in the classrooms) cycle, but as and when that studio films "Somebody Up There Likes Me (My Life So Far)," it may prove a much more affrmative celluloid undertaking. For Rocky Graziano, whom tv audiences know as Martha Raye's affectionately goofy "goombah," was admittedly a young hoodlum of deepest dye in his adolescence on the lower east side of New York. His memoirs, capably coauthored by Rowland Barber, snagged a reported $240,000 from Metro. It will make a terrific picture and perhaps point the way more positively for other young punks, for certainly Graziano was a violently bullheaded ruffian of the stuff that really pointed him for the electric chair.

In the well organized book (Simon & Schuster; $3.95) Rocky has pulled no literary punches, least of all on himself, but just as revealing are closeups on the jails and so-called "correction" schools, their corrupted wardens and turnkeys, not to mention the depraved and degenerate prisoners consigned to their dubious care.

Graziano is in his 30s, so age and time haven't dimmed his memories of poverty and crime, in contrast to his rehabilitation and his domestic properties of today as a video personality. Whether he knows it, or even cares to be accused thereof, he is now a model of another sort in today's juvenile delinquency problems. Maybe not one of all the young punks of this 1955 calendar period will ever attain a middleweight championship crown as a means to respectability, but if ever there was a young thief and a tough gutter fighter and gangster it was Rocky Graziano. His saga will become a goal for all who deplore the hope of salvation for today's brand of reefer-happy punks. If Graziano could go legit there's hope for all. Rocky and his Boswell, Barber, have turned out a socko saga. Abel.

More Show Biz Bios

Anthony Glyn, grandson of the author of "Three Weeks," etc., has written a biography of "Elinor Glyn," for Doubleday publication in June. Her novel, "His Hour," catapulted John Gilbert into stardom; "Three Weeks" sold over 5,000,000 copies; but most noteworthy was her story, "It," which made Clara Bow and the word itself a synonym of the Jazz Age.

The posthumous biography of the first film czar will be brought out in July by Doubleday titled "The Memoirs of Will H. Hays." The former U.S. Postmaster General completed his autobiog just before his death in 1954.

Another show biz biog is the story of Douglas Fairbanks Jr., by British writer Brian Connell. Doubleday is making much of Fairbanks' "women in his life—Joan Crawford, Marlene Dietrich and Gertrude Lawrence who are among them—but not so well known are his many services to his Government" in the cause of Anglo-American unity, ambassador-without-portfolio, and intimate of Roosevelt, Hopkins and Cordell Hull.

Pete Martin has switched away from Simon & Schuster, which published his Bob Hope and Bing Crosby biogs, and Doubleday will publish "Who Could Ask for Anything More?", by Ethel Merman, "as sung to Pete Martin." Publisher is ballyhooing it as a "musical memoir."

Vet war correspondent, Lionel Shapiro, has utilized his real-life background of London in the blitz as the locale of his first novel, "The Sixth of June", which Doubleday is publishing in July.

Another personal newspaperman narrative is Marguerite (N.Y. Herald Tribune) Higgins' "News Is a Singular Thing," in May.

James Street Jr. has edited the travel and memoir writings of his father, which Doubleday will publish in May, under the title of "James Street's South."

Cecil B. DeMille did the introduction to Mary Pickford's autobiog, "Sunshine and Shadow," which Doubleday is bringing out in May. It was serialized last year in McCalls.

Josephy's Discovery

Alvin M. Josephy, Time ed and former screen writer, is turning historian. April issue of American Heritage carries his "Was America Discovered Before Columbus?", based on his analysis of a recently discovered nautical chart of the Atlantic Ocean made in 1424 by a Venetian cartographer and the summer issue of the Montana Magazine of History, published in Helena, will include an article on the Nez Perce Indians, which is a chapter from Josephy's forthcoming history of the tribe.

N.Y. Times' S. A. Setup

Growing circulation in South America is cueing a new printing and circulation approach by the NY Times' International Edition to the Latino area. As of next Tuesday (5), the Times will fly page mats to Lima, Peru, where the edition will be printed for South America, instead of the present practice of printing S. A. copies in New York and flying the complete papers down.

New South American operation will be similar to that employed in Amsterdam for European circulation, under which the paper is set and mats taken from the page froms in New York, with the mats then flown daily to Amsterdam, where stereotypes are made and the papers printed from the stereos. Circulation is handled from Amsterdam. In the case of Lima, the newspapers will be printed on the presses of La Prensa, the daily there, and flown by Panagra and Fawcett Airlines to distribution points thruoghout South America.

Aside from the Times' daily International Edition, the newspaper prints a weekly publication based on the Review of the Week, the Sunday Magazine and other features for Tokyo and Manila.

British TV Trade Paper

Britain now has its first trade weekly covering the commercial tv field exclusively. Commercial Television News, published by Business Publications, has started off as an eight-pager, but is expected to expand as soon as the new network gets under way. Initial commercial transmitter is expected to start in London in September, with Birmingham and Manchester to follow later in the year.

CHATTER

Sportsmen's Guide Inc. chartered to conduct a printing and publishing business in Flushing, N. Y.

Joseph Mason, former editor of Architectural Record, has been appointed building editor of Family Circle.

West Coast staff of Look mag tossed a farewell party for Jack Sayers, resigning as promotion manager.

Colin Milne, drama critic of the Glasgow Herald, who has been theatre-going for over 50 years, retiring in April.

Cameron Shipp's article on Judy Garland, titled "The Star Who Thinks Nobody Loves Her," in the April 2 Satevepost.

Alan Riddell, Australian-born drama critic and feature writer, leaving Evening Dispatch, Edinburgh, to return to Australia.

Molly Weir, radio actress, and member of "Life With the Lyons" radio team, penning reminiscences of her early days in Weekly Scotsman, Edinburgh.

Mildred and Gordon Gordon left for Europe where they will drumbeat for their novel, "The Talking Bug," in seven countries during the next three months.

Irving S. Manheimer, prez of Macfadden Publications, sailed Saturday (26) on the Mauretania for a two-week Caribbean cruise, accompanied by his wife and two sons.

Don Cornell, who bowed to British audiences at a Glasgow vaudeer, penned "Hello, Britain!" in New Musical Express, London weekly for light music and dance-band fans.

Derek Traversi's "Shakespeare: The Last Phase," dealing with the Bard's "Pericles," "Cymbeline," "Winter's Tale" and "The Tempest," scheduled for Harcourt, Brace publication April 22.

Mary Davis Gillies, home editor of McCall's, vacationing in Ensenada, Mexico. Her husband, Dr. Joseph Johnston, is writing a history of the Christian Science Church. Simon & Schuster may publish.

Sam S. Baker, radio-tv writer as well as v.p. of Kiesewetter, Baker, Hagedorn & Smith ad agency, authored his first mystery novel which Graphic Publishing Co. is bringing out as a 25c book. Tome's background is the ad business.

Harvey Pollack, former editor of the Philadelphia edition of Curtis Publications' defunct TV Program Week, named general manager for TV Publications, which publishes tv-listings mags for supermarkets, restaurants, gas station chains, etc. in the Philly area.

Panel of five judges will select winners of the annual Edgar Allan Poe awards for mystery novels published in 1954. They include Mrs. Dale Carnegie; Francis R. St. John, chief librarian, Brooklyn Public Library; Bill Leonard, CBS; Carlos Davila, sec.-general of the Pan-American Union, and John Barkham, of Coronet. "Edgars" will be distributed in N. Y. April 21.

GOLDEN JUBILEE YEAR
VARIETY
1905 - 1955

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Palm Springs.

As even Airwick cannot make comparisons fragrant, VARIETY must come off very badly when people tote up its letters-to-the-editor with, say, the New York Times. Even fan mags do better in their first issue, which always struck me as the Miracle of the Mails.

Now and then a letter to VARIETY seems of sufficient news-interest or a beef is registered with sufficient force to get space, but in the main letters are answered as letters, and usually with a Varietous brevity that would confound the inventor of the Morse code.

Even this column has followed the practice of answering letters rather than publishing them. It leads inevitably to people believing we don't get letters and if we did, wouldn't know what to do with them. This is by no means true. We pile them into baskets until it's time to move, when they get lost.

Letter-writing, except in houses like Sears Roebuck, where they are reduced to standard forms, is close to a dead art anyway. I have old friends who once wrote great letters but now confess they feel tonguetied in the presence of secretaries when dealing with any correspondence above trade levels. They admit, further, that they have long since forgotten how to type or write a letter in longhand.

Once I worked out an idea for Jimmy Walker under the generic title of "Letters I Forgot To Mail." But before it could reach the magic of print, he had gone back to the telephone.

I gave the title to J. P. McEvoy, who changed it to "Letters I Would Like To Mail" and sold a series to McNaught Syndicate. In his "A Child Of The Century" Ben Hecht describes Mac as "the first literary man I knew who wasn't a financial idiot." This is not of course the same as saying he was a financial wizard, but it indicates a trend in that direction.

In fact, shortly before Mac parlayed my letters-title into a modest financial return, he had invested his own coin in a show and lost $100,000. Nevertheless, he carried on with the air of a duPont and in due time had liquidated the debt without recourse to 77-B, which was a device used even by financial wizards during the Great Dip in the '30s.

Menck's Urbane Brushoff

But letters, which kept many famous writers on publisher lists years after they had written themselves out, are no longer considered as sound commercial properties. H. L. Mencken began hoarding his diminishing energies years ago by answering long letters with a "You may be right." Obviously no publisher could make a fortune out of reprinting replies like that for 300 pages.

The most astonishing fan letter I've ever got was from the public relation echelon of the Merchants & Manufacturers Assn. That one really rocked me. One of us, I felt, was slipping, and I refused to look in the mirror for days, arguing at any rate it wasn't the old Scullywag. But who can be sure these days?

For a while it was considered a loss of face for anyone who had gained a measure of notoriety to thank a writer who had written well of him. But of late I have found a change for the better. Even Hollywood bigshots will write a warm note of thanks and the fact that we do not publish these billets doux does not mean they are not grand things to get.

Herbert Bayard Swope wrote in recently asking us where we got a story involving him, Ralph Pulitzer, Walter Lippmann and Houdini. Its accuracy drew his amazed admiration. Did we get it from files of the old World? Actually, the late Joe Rinn was the informer.

Sometimes a notable will write in praise of a piece totally unrelated to him. Grouch did that one time about a piece needling the picture biz to show as much courage when rousted as the press does, and Grouch certainly hasn't got time on his hands because, to hear him tell it, he always has some one in his arms.

The late Ashton Stevens used to be a complete letter-writer and for years published at least one column a week of the answers.

Heywood Broun, too, used to paste up columns of letters and, when more industrious, copy them out for publication. He had the rep of knocking out a column in under an hour. That must have been at such times as he pasted letters together.

My devoted letter-writing public runs from the heads of literary societies to newsboys. One pitchman writes the longest letters of all. They are written in excellent English but are scrawled in pencil on all sorts of paper, even wrapping paper, In fact, some come perilously close to offsets of the holographs of Horace Greeley, who once threw up his hands and said to his typesetter when asked to clarify a certain passage, "If you can't make it out, how do you expect me to do it?"

My particular Greeley is Memphis Harry Lee Ward, who peddles the diminishing list of rags that pass for newspapers in L.A. He has the corner of Hollywood Blvd. and Las Palmas. He's a great hand at trying to goad me into fighting for causes. His latest concerned a character called Thunder Parker who landed in psycho for trespassing on Vampira's routine. I advanced the idea that a sixmonth rest at Camarillo state hospital would be a blessing in disguise.

Memph doesn't like blessings that have to wear masques. He thinks they violate personal liberty. He was a pet of Jean Harlow's and of late the most beautiful of modern blondes has taken him under her wing. (This is not Marilyn Monroe, who has her moments, though this wasn't one of them.)

Memph's 7,000 Books—Rent Free

The interest of Memph and the Beautiful Blonde seems to be chiefly literary. Memph owns a library of 7,000 books. "I got a $20 a month deal on a little hut," he writes, "and piled in 3,000 of the books. That left enough room for a cot for myself, which was all I needed. Then I got a garage for $5 and stored the remaining 4,000 books in it."

One day the B.B. took him to luncheon at the Gotham and when they left he found the storage rent secreted in a book he was carrying.

He wrote her protesting the kindness, but she assured him it was only money and the books, some of them rare items, needed protection.

"I've lived here and sold papers on Hollywood Blvd. for 30 years in rain and shine," Memph confessed. "I've seen Hollywood glamor and have even shared in some of it. But nobody till now thought of playing Miss Carnegie to a vagabond lover of books."

He keeps track of them, too. He loaned me a book on Jolson once. I passed it on to somebody else. It took six months to get the book back to Memph. He didn't fine me 2c a day, however. Seems that something about the First Amendment and the privileges of a free press held him back.

Caskie Stinnett is another one of my adept attention-callers. He writes a commentary for Holiday and he writes cute letters too. One recently told about how security-conscious the Defense Dept. has become. An Army chaplain whose job it is apparently to Christianize the Pentagonians has two filing cabinets. One is marked "Sacred" and the other "Top Sacred."

Then there's Dan H. Lawrence, editor of the eminent Shaw Bulletin. "Your recent satires on film scenarios in VARIETY have me in stitches," he writes. "The only trouble is, I've seen too many similar plots presented in dead seriousness on local screens. And I'm wondering when Abel Green is going to modernize your column. This being the age of CinemaScope, he ought to allow at least one of your columns to take the shape of the new curved screen. Surely the corn did not stop with the flat screen. I recently saw 'Prince Valiant.' Mea maxima culpa!"

Say, how about that? A curved column. Which would go over better—an out-drop or an inshoot? Or one that was 36 at the top, 22 in the middle and 34 over the hips?

Andre Mertens, Columbia Artists Mgt. veepee, off to Florida Saturday (2) for a week's rest, following windup of the Berlin Philharmonic, Walter Gieseking and Renata Tebaldi U.S. tours.

Mrs. Irving (Ellin) Berlin has taken a house in Bermuda for a month or more and the songsmith joins her and their daughter, Linda, after he disposes of some legal matters this week. Berlin says he "wants to take things easier for a while; no particular plans," etc.

Easter Sunday celebrity brunches have started their "casting" activities with an eye to cuffo space and/or some charity tieup. The Waldorf, for example, is keyed to the Heart Fund; Col. Serge Obolensky, having shifted his base from the Sherry-Netherland to the Ambassador, is trying to segue them from 5th Ave., to Park Ave.; and the Vanderbilt Hotel is keyed to the Runyon Fund.

John Frederics Inc. and affiliated Tedisco Hat Co. Inc., both giving 1769 Boone Ave. as the business addresses, filed petitions for arrangements under Chapter XI of the Chandler Act. The fashionable show biz and society milliner, lists $233,000 tentative liabilities and estimated assets of $180,000. Tedisco's liabilities are $54,500 and $5,000 in assets. A settlement of 20%, payable in monthly installments of 1%, is proposed. Mr. John Inc., the splinter outfit since the original John & Fred split, has been separate and apart for a number of years.

Cats Dig the Cool Stuff Again at Carnegie Hall As Brubeck Sends Them

The pulling power of modern jazz was demonstrated in a big way at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., last Saturday night (12) when the large auditorium was packed to capacity with cats digging stuff that was the coolest. Grossing $18,000 at two performances, at 8:30 p.m. and at midnight, were the Dave Brubeck Quartet, Gerry Mulligan, Chet Baker's combo and songstress Carmen McRae.
